It is scarcely necessary to remind enthusiastic followers of Henley that this year's meeting is already looming on the horizon. The time has, in fact, arrived for putting forward applications, if positions are required for house-boats or launches. And here again it is necessary to remember that the bigger the cheque contributed, the better will be the berth allotted, only—as was announced last year—the licence when granted cannot be transferred, and the position will be forfeited if any attempt be made to re-let the boat after allotment. In the matter of sport, there is every promise of the usual excellence, and this year will see a German crew from the Mayence Rowing Club competing for the Stewards' Challenge Cup, and a Berlin pair for the Silver Goblets.

With regard to the May races at Cambridge there seems to be little doubt that Hall will retain their headship pretty easily. This result will be due not so much to any marked superiority of style, but to the fact that the crews behind this college are not really good. Just recently Mr. McKenna has been taking them in hand. Emmanuel are well together and neat but lack power. Third have only one decent oar, Goldie. The rest have been described as crocks, but for all that they are rowing together and get pace on their boat. The assumption that they would go down each night is not at all likely to be verified. First Trinity were quite the best boat on the river until ten days ago when they went off suddenly. This result has been due in all probability to too much hard work. At all events the annual shuffle has taken place. Lady Margaret are decidedly poor, although they have a fair stroke and seven. They are pretty sure to go down. Pembroke have a strong crew, and would be good if they did not bucket. Jesus have the same fault, which in their case is due to the fact that they tried to row too fast when first in training. Both crews have improved recently. Caius are neat but lack power. Of the second division crews, Peterhouse are the most promising. Taking the rowing all round there is a general improvement. There is no really good crew, and good individual college oars are almost in the same category as the Dodo. Photographs of this prehistoric race of undergraduates may be seen at Stearnes and elsewhere.

Mr. C. M. Steele, it will be remembered, was stroking the Cambridge crew last term. When at Bourne End, he was taken ill and forbidden to row. He was a Hall man, and he had, all through the civil war between a certain section of the Hall and the C.U.B.C., remained faithful to the University. The Cambridge correspondent of the Field a fortnight ago astonished the rowing world by stating that Steele had been getting rid of the faults that he displayed during the October and Lent terms. It was during these terms that he was under the tuition of Mr. Fletcher, the old Oxford President. This term the Hall boat, of which he is stroke, has been coached by that eminent oarsman, Mr. Trevor-Jones. The inference to be drawn from the remarks in the Field is that Mr. Trevor-Jones has eradicated faults either inculcated by Mr. Fletcher or else too deeply rooted to be effectually dealt with by that gentleman. Referring to these remarks in the Field, the Granta says:—"If, however, Steele is losing the style that he learnt in the October and Lent terms, we are afraid the Hall will not make a good impression if they appear at Henley. It is a pity that such misleading statements should appear in such a universally read paper as the Field." According to the Granta, Steele has not lost his form. This is highly gratifying. In rowing communication with the most moral men, if they be not really first-class coaches, has a tendency to spoil a good style. The Granta might also have added that it is a pity that the Field has lent itself to such a despicable and ill-concealed attempt to arouse again the ill-feeling that recently existed at Cambridge University. By no one should this wretched effort on the part of the rowing correspondent of the Field be more earnestly deprecated than by Mr. Trevor-Jones, whose efforts in the interest of peace are well known to all rowing men.

At a recent meeting of the C.U.B.C., the starting distance between the boats in the May races was reduced. Another suggestion that fifth year men should not row in the Mays was deferred. It would not seem to be wise to adopt any such rule so long as fifth year men can row in the University Boat Race.

It may be remembered that some weeks ago reference was made to the practice of entertaining players at lawn tennis tournaments. I pointed out that these competitors were foisted on unwilling hosts, and that the practice reflected as little credit upon the players as it did on the organisers of tournaments. I suggested that the Lawn Tennis Association should take the matter in hand. At a council meeting the subject was referred to, and, with a view of dealing thoroughly with the matter, notice of new rules has been given. The effect of these rules, if passed, would be not only to give the Council absolute power to prohibit any act or practice which, in the opinion of the Council, is contrary to the interests of the game, but it would also empower the Council to deal as it might think fit with any affiliated club, association, committee, or player, disregarding any such prohibition. Whether or not the members or affiliated clubs are prepared to give the Council such absolute discretion is a matter that rests with them. Provided they are willing to do so, the rules seem admirably fitted to effect this object. The Council would then be able to evolve a decalogue dealing with this question of players, as to which, I should have thought, the Amateur Athletic Association's rules might have afforded some useful precedents. Lawn tennis is more analogous to running than any other sport. If I might venture to make a few suggestions, these rules should contain provisions to the following effect. In club matches a club may pay its own players' travelling and hotel expenses. Any affiliated club may enter one or more players for the Championship at Wimbledon, and may pay the expenses of such players. A similar rule might apply to entries for closed county championships. In this way a poor player as the representative of his club would have an opportunity of showing what he was worth. Rules as to the amount of such expenses, and the way in which accounts should be kept would have to be added. Then with regard to tournaments and all meetings, very stringent rules would have to be drawn forbidding committees or individuals from offering players their expenses (such offers have been made), or from offering them board and lodging by disguising the invitation under the specious phrase of hospitality. If the Council has the powers vested in it which the proposed rules will confer, there can be no difficulty in working out an effective scheme of legislation on these lines. The Council could not in common fairness act arbitrarily if such powers were conferred on it. It would have to indicate the lines on which it was prepared to proceed. Some such rules as those I have suggested would be sufficient for the purpose.

In spite of the wretched weather last week the western counties can look with some satisfaction on their tour in the east. Thanks to a regular stone-wall innings by Grace, and to some excellent bowling by Townsend, Gloucester gained an easy victory over Middlesex, for whom Stoddart played in quite his best form. His success was universally popular. A brilliant century by S. M. J. Woods enabled Somerset to beat Sussex. The match between Yorkshire and Essex showed the strength of the northern team, who, however, had all their work cut out to make the runs. Mead's bowling seemed scarcely to be used enough. But, then, it is very easy to captain a team from the pavilion, and the brilliant successes of the Essex team are the best answer to captious critics. Warwick are to be congratulated on the excellent draw they made with Yorkshire. Kent suffered a severe defeat from Derbyshire, for whom Storer and Chatterton batted splendidly. It looks as though there were some chance of decent weather and good cricket. The draws on account of the rain look like making the County Championship a farce

There was a very successful open amateur golf competition, organised by the Beckenham Golf Club. There were eighty-five competitors, and Messrs. Michie, Foster, and Jockel came out top of the list. Foster did a very fine round of 78. The prizes were very handsome. But whether such valuable prizes are desirable in the best interests of the game is doubtful. There is quite enough pot-hunting in golf already. It needs no encouragement. In a home and home match between Park and Fernie, the former finished seven up on his own links, at Musselburgh. On going to Troon he played superbly, and never gave his opponent a chance, winning in the end by thirteen up.

Mr. Mahoney and Miss C. Cooper are to be congratulated on the splendid form they are showing at lawn tennis. They were as successful at Chiswick Park as they had been at Dublin. In both instances they secured the championships. At Dublin, Eaves and Miss Martin were beaten, and at Chiswick Park, Greville and Miss Austin.

MAMMON.

From MOSES MOSS to BENJAMIN BOSS.

Sunday.

MY DEAR BEN,—While optimism, induced by the rapid fall in the value of money and by the absence of any further political rumours, has been the order of the day, the volume of business has not increased during the past week, and there are great complaints on the part of members of the Stock Exchange that the public are not yet entering the markets. It is true that there has been some nibbling, and there are indications that public support will shortly be extended to certain stocks; but the birds are still shy, and cannot quite forget the ominous warnings to which they were treated by the Marquis of Salisbury and Mr. Chamberlain.

Will the Public Enter the Markets?

Jobbers and brokers are pretty well tired of skinning small profits out of each other, and the game of pig upon-pork is never a lasting one. What the public require generally to tempt them to operate is a lead, and this has been given in a small way by some of the jobbers, but in order to induce more extensive public purchases, it will be necessary for the big houses to take a hand in the game, and the absence of any such support is chiefly responsible for the dulness of the South African department. I daresay that sooner or later this section will wake up suddenly, especially if the output continues to improve. What should predispose investors to buy securities is the very low rate now obtainable on deposit. When a man can only get 1½ per cent. for his money, he naturally casts about for a way of increasing his income with comparative safety, and thus we have already an increased demand for gilt-edged securities. Home Rails, too, have hardened steadily, although there have been no sensational advances, to which the position, moreover, hardly lends itself. The American market has become more active, and at times when peace looked within measurable distance there has been some moderate "Bull" buying and a good deal of "Bear" closing. Every brief reaction is followed by a fresh recovery, and any important success of the American fleet at Santiago would bring about a further sharp improvement. Grand Trunks and Canadian Pacifics have moved with Yankee Rails, but the rise in Trunks has now been so persistent, that most of the good things of the future have been discounted. The Foreign department has taken quite a start since the Paris settlement has come to a successful close, and Spanish have received a fillip from the official announcement that the July coupon will be paid in full in gold. South Americans have been steady, and a feature has been the strength of Mexican Sixes on the growing prosperity of that country, and more especially a demand for Inter-Oceanic of Mexico stocks, which deserve every attention in view of the largely increasing returns. Westralian mining shares have been strong and active, the demand turning chiefly on the dividend-paying shares. In the Industrial department quite a revival of speculation has to be recorded, and important advances are marked, more especially in Welsbach and Russian Oil shares. The former are still a good purchase; the latter must be described as a dangerous gambling counter. A fresh rush of industrial prospectuses is impending, and I reiterate my warning to scan these most carefully before investing.

Money and Gilt-Edged Investments—Money Cheap, Consols Higher.

The past week has seen a further shrinkage in the value of money, and rates of discount for three and six months' Bank bills have dropped to 1¾ per cent., while short money is almost unlendable, rates ranging from ½ to 1½ per cent. Deposit rates have been lowered by the banking establishments to 1½ per cent., a movement which will doubtless cause the investment in the stock markets of considerable sums. Any further rushing-down of rates is, however, to be deprecated, for already the Continental exchanges have turned against London, and a demand has arisen for gold for Russian and Japanese account, which will probably absorb any further arrivals of the precious metal. The golden current to the Bank of England has naturally slackened, and there is just the possibility that the United States may require further gold shipments. At present the New York exchange is too high, partly owing to the important sales of real stock of American Rails, which have been effected by European holders, thus offsetting to some extent the large shipments of produce from the States to this side. But whenever the Spanish-American war comes to an end, there will be a rush of purchases of American Rails for English account, which might easily initiate fresh gold shipments to the States. Consols have been a strong market, "Bears" having been buying back, and the quotation at one time advanced to 111 7/16 x.d. for the account, from which there has been a reaction to 111 5/16 x.d., and as the settlement is over, it is not likely that there will be any immediate further upward movement. A rise in silver to 27½d. has been caused chiefly by a strong Spanish demand for coining purposes, and Rupee Paper has improved to 62¾, while India Three and a Half per Cent. stock stands at 114 x.d. British Corporation stocks and Colonial Government bonds have hardened in many instances, and amongst the Chinese loans the last 4½ per cent. issue is slightly easier at 88, while the Seven per Cent. Silver Loan has risen to 97½. Japanese Five per Cent. bonds are firm at 102 x.d.

Home Rails.—A Steady Tone, but Little Business.

Business has been unusually quiet in the Home Railway department during the past week, although values have been well maintained. The Whitsun traffics did not prove particularly favourable, and showed, as far as can be calculated, a decrease of from four to five thousand pounds over the corresponding holiday week of last year. This result may be clearly set down to the unfavourable weather, and it has not prevented a further large addition to the traffic returns for the first twenty-one weeks of the half-year, which now show a gain of £729,679 over 1897. The stocks of the Heavy division have remained at about the same level, but Brighton "A" have not altogether maintained their recent improvement, being now quoted at 176¾. Dover "A" were at one time banged down to 111¼ by an enterprising jobber, but have since recovered to 112, and Great Eastern have remained in the neighbourhood of 120. Metropolitan have reacted to 131½ on rumours that the Great Central would by no means show a preference to the Metropolitan, but also run over the Great Western; but this is far-fetched, and it would certainly be premature to put Great Western up on this point. Great Centrals are hardening steadily in anticipation of the early opening of the extension to London, and the 1894 Ordinary have now improved to 42, the Preferred to 67. Both are worthy of attention. Metropolitan Districts at one time moved up to 29½, and my readers who bought this stock considerably below this price have therefore had an opportunity of securing a quick profit. Just now, whenever the quotation rises above 29, a tap seems to be turned on preventing any further advance. In the Scotch section there has been no further improvement, Caledonian Deferred Ordinary being quoted 57, North British Deferred, 43⅞. "Coras," however, still look cheap at their present level.

Yankee Rails.—Wall-street Gives Strong Support. London Nearly Sold Out.

The war news continues to govern the Wall-street market, and London operators merely follow New York movements. On balance, New York has again bought a good deal of stock, and London must nearly have sold out. The view taken on the other side of the Atlantic is that while a small percentage represented the sale of real holdings, the greater part was for the account of professional speculators, and consisted of "Bear" sales. The settlement is therefore expected to disclose a considerable shortage, more especially of Milwaukee. In Wall-street people are not at all disposed to commit themselves on the short side to any large extent, as the conditions generally are looked upon as favourable. Now and then, when the war news favours such action, a "Bear" raid is indulged in, such as took place on Friday last. But a recovery soon follows, and the latest advices from Santiago de Cuba suggests a battle within the next week, which may possibly lead to the conclusion of peace, especially as the Spanish newspapers very generally are beginning to advocate the ending of the struggle "with honour." Traffics of the American Railroads continue most satisfactory, and, instead of interfering with business, the war seems to stimulate it, as, according to the Financial Chronicle, eighty-two roads in the third week of May earned 7,755,665 dols., an increase of 1,011,236 dols. These increases have prevailed ever since the war broke out, and came on the top of excellent figures for the first quarter of the year, when, according to the Wall-street Daily News, net earnings based on the reports of 173 roads were as follows:—

January 1 to March 31.

	1898. dols.		1897. dols.		Changes. dols.
Gr. earn...	232,794,842	.....	207,023,623	.....	Inc. 25,771,219
Oper. ex...	163,918,891	.....	148,087,271	.....	Inc. 15,831,620
Net earn...	68,875,951		58,936,352		Inc. 9,939,599

The feature of last week's dealings has been the increasing favour shown to the stocks of the Pacific roads, notably Northern Pacifics and Union Pacifics, while there has also been a disposition to pick up all the stocks of the reconstructed roads, such as Reading, Atchison, Norfolk and Western, and Southern Railway. Thus Milwaukee and Louisville, in which the chief business on this side has hitherto centred, have been comparatively neglected, although both are hardening again, Milwaukee being quoted 104, Louisville 58¼. Recent statements that the directors of the Louisville were not yet inclined to resume dividends, notwithstanding the fact that a considerable surplus is available, have caused considerable surprise here. The Louisville has hitherto been considered as practically an English-managed road, and the English conception of a railway is that profits which are earned should be paid to the shareholders in dividends. It is to be hoped that it will not be necessary to teach the Board of the Louisville this lesson by a combination of the shareholders, and it would be a thousand pities if the action of these directors were to result in permanently forfeiting the good position which the Company had obtained on the London market. With reference to Union Pacifics the comparative dulness of these securities has at last made room for an improvement. All manner of rumours were cabled over from New York at one time, one of which was that one of the biggest houses connected with the reorganisation had been selling large blocks. With reference to this tale the Wall-street Daily News has the following interesting paragraph:—

> An effort is being made to have it appear that the heaviness of Union Pacific Preferred during the past week or two has been due to selling by parties who have been prominent in the Company's reorganisation, so as to prepare for the reorganisation of the Baltimore and Ohio, in which they will be interested with Messrs. Speyer & Co. This is intended to refer to Messrs. Kuhn, Loeb, & Co. We are in a position to say, as far as the last named firm is concerned, this has no basis in fact. The great financial strength of Messrs. Kuhn, Loeb, & Co. makes it entirely unnecessary for them to sacrifice one enterprise in order to obtain means to undertake another, and, therefore, the effort to make it appear that Union Pacific Preferred is heavy because of their alleged selling is decidedly weak. We believe the position of London on this market explains the lack of resiliency of not alone Union Pacific Preferred, but all the international shares.

Union Pacific Prefs. have now risen to 64½, and the Common stock at 26¼ is comparatively cheap, and offers a good opportunity for a turn. Northern Pacific Prefs. are now quoted at 71¼, a price at which the regular payment of dividends is not yet, perhaps, altogether discounted. Norfolk and Western Prefs at 55⅜, however, look cheaper, and more especially the Common stock at 16 is a good purchase. It should be remembered that the latter stock really took the place of the old Preferred, on which an assessment of $12½ was exacted, so that the present price works out to only about $3. Fixed charges, moreover, and the interest on the new Prefs. are something like $600,000 less than the annual charges which ranked before the Preferred stock of the old Company. Yet that preferred stock stood at over 50 at one time. The road is now doing well, and a rough calculation shows that the new Preference interest, which amounts to $920,000, is not only fully earned, but a balance is being obtained which should go towards a dividend on the common stock. I do not wish to say that a dividend will be paid this year, but it appears to be in sight, and in view of this position the present value is remarkably low. Reading First Prefs. have of late hardened to 24¾, and seem also a fair purchase. There is nothing new with regard to the rate war, but the general opinion appears to be that it is about to be settled. It certainly is advisable that an agreement should be come to, and this would also appear to be in the interest of the Canadian Pacific, which is the chief stumbling-block.

London and Paris Exchange, Ltd., 24, Throgmorton-street, London, E.C. This Corporation is prepared to make Advances on Mining Shares, at 6 per cent. per annum, subject to a deposit of 20 per cent. Clients by this system save the heavy contangoes usually charged.

At all events, the working statement for April, just published, shows that in view of the rate war a great deal more work has to be done to earn the same money, as a gross increase of $340,000, worked out to a net increase of only $90,000, and was therefore considerably worse than the preceding returns. The last weekly traffic, on the other hand, has been a favourable one, the increase being $102,000. Canadian Pacifics are now quoted 87⅝, but they would doubtless take a jump if the rate war were settled. Grand Trunk stockholders have had a mixed experience this week. First, the April working statement must have put them into excellent humour, as the net increase on the combined system was shown to amount to £23,038. Then came the weekly traffic return, showing a gain of only £710, which caused a moderate decline from the previous highest points; but quotations have since rallied on all manner of sanguine prophecies, the First Prefs. being quoted 76, the Guaranteed 79⅛. This does not now leave a great deal of margin for a further rise, and it must not be forgotten that a big "Bull" account has been piled up in these stocks, which might give trouble if any untoward event were to take place.

FOREIGNERS AND SOUTH AMERICANS—A RISE IN SPANISH—PARIS OPTIMISTIC.

The Paris Bourse is getting quite optimistic since it passed through its settlement. The Coulisse, it is true, will probably have to go, but this is no longer so much of a weakening factor, as large sales have been made by all the Coulissiers, who have thus reduced their liabilities to vanishing point. On the other hand, it has no doubt greatly pleased French holders of Spanish Fours that the official announcement is now made of the payment in full in gold of the coupon on July 1. I suppose that the French financiers still stand behind Spain in her efforts to keep faith with her foreign creditors. It may also be intended to catch some of the "Bears," of whom there are a good many on the London Stock Exchange, and it would not be surprising to find Spanish—which are now quoted 36⅜—rather scarce at Wednesday's carry-over. The Spanish Press, moreover, seems to be in favour of peace, whenever that can be concluded without too much sacrifice, but an American success would doubtless stimulate the negotiations. Paris has also put up Italians to 92⅛, and Rio Tinto have again come into favour with our French neighbours, while Greeks have risen all round, and Turks are again being gambled in. Argentine Government stocks have been creeping up of late, the 1886 Loan being quoted 91, the Funding Loan 89¾, notwithstanding the fact which has now oozed out that the Argentine Government has had to borrow £400,000 on Treasury Bills. A good many of my readers have at various times desired to know whether their Ottoman Railway bonds of 1870-1872 have yet been drawn. Under these circumstances, the following list of unclaimed premiums, communicated to me by Messrs. N. Keizer & Co., foreign bankers, 29, Threadneedle-street, London, E.C., will be of interest:—6 of 600,000 fr., 9 of 300,000 fr., 9 of 60,000 fr., 6 of 25,000 fr., 13 of 20,000 fr., 11 of 10,000 fr., 46 of 6,000 fr., 95 of 3,000 fr., 46 of 2,000 fr., 95 of 1,250 fr., 440 of 1,000 fr., and 9,990 of 400 fr. I may mention that payment will be forfeited if not presented within thirty years from the date of the drawings. Argentine railway stocks have been steady, Buenos Ayres Great Southern being quoted 141, Buenos Ayres and Rosario 73½, Central Argentine 82. Cordoba Central (Central Northern Section) Income Debenture stock has now recovered to 54, and it will doubtless be benefited by the arrangement which has been made by the Argentine Government for serving the guarantee. But the traffics are still so wretched and show such large decreases, that I am afraid that the recovery will not last just yet. Buenos Ayres and Pacific Four and a Half per Cent. Second Debenture stock has improved to 93, and Western Railway of Santa Fé Seven per Cent. bonds have risen to 42 on the improved traffics. Brazilians have been firmer, the 1889 Loan being quoted 54, but the tendency is not strong, as the Rio exchange is not rising much—notwithstanding all the coaxing. The funding of the coupons, moreover, is not exactly a "Bull" point in every respect, and people are asking whether after the period of the funding of the coupons has expired cash payments will really be resumed. Uruguay bonds have been firm, although reacting at the last, the Old Loan falling to 45, and Peruvian Corporation stocks have been well maintained, the Debentures at 39½, the Prefs. at 9. The receipts of the railways worked by the Corporation for May were $272,400, against $260,725 for the same period of last year.

INTER-OCEANIC OF MEXICO—A CHEAP DEBENTURE.

Readers of TRUTH, to whom I gave the advice in December last to buy Inter-Oceanic of Mexico "A" and "B" Debentures, which were then quoted at 51 and 23 respectively, will, if they have acted upon this tip, be grateful to me, as the present quotations are 71 and 31 respectively. Since I gave this advice the position of the Company has greatly improved, as, in fact, everything connected with Mexico is progressing most favourably. Under the wise government of President Diaz, the great resources of the country are being developed in a masterly manner, while the prudent management of the finances is establishing the Republic's credit in a high position. Mexican Sixes are quoted close to par, viz., at 98, and sooner or later a conversion scheme will no doubt be carried out. But this will probably have to wait until the conclusion of the Spanish-American War. In the meantime, the railways are doing well, and the First Preference stock of the Mexican Railway (Vera Cruz Line), for instance, has advanced to 74½. Yet this stock is only in receipt of a dividend of 1⅞ per cent., while the "A" Debenture stock of the Inter-Oceanic Railway received in November last 2⅛ per cent., and is now in sight of much larger dividends, while being quoted lower than Mexican Railway First Prefs. A simple and rough calculation will show the position. The net profit for the financial year 1896-7 was $581,725. The gross increase to date for 1897-8 is $435,420. If we add to this an estimated increase of $40,000 for June, and deduct working expenses—viz., about $237,000—we obtain a net gain of $238,000, and a total net profit of $820,000, or at 23d., about £78,500. As it requires £44,000 to pay the 5 per cent. on the prior lien bonds (£400,000), and the interest on the Four per Cent. debentures (£600,000), there would be available for dividend on the "A" Debentures £34,500, which works out to upwards of 4⅝ per cent. on the £736,000 of this stock. When it is considered, moreover, that in about three months' time the schedule of freights will be raised, it is easy to see—especially in view of the progress being made in Mexico—that in the near future the "A" Debentures will receive their full 7 per cent. dividend. Investors who like to pick up a progressive debenture have therefore an opportunity to buy a security which must very considerably increase in capital value, while also yielding at once a decent dividend. A good many of these debentures have of late been mopped up, and the market is so bare of stock that a considerable rise may come about any day. The Financial News and Financial Times have done good service in drawing attention to the mysteries surrounding the proposed issue of bonds in connection with the Great Western Railway of Tasmania. The British public are scarcely likely to look favourably upon the issue, if it ever should be made.

THE KAFFIR CIRCUS—PRESIDENT KRUGER'S NEW ADVISER—WHY ARE THE BIG HOUSES INACTIVE?

The feature in the South African department has been the announcement that Mr. F. Reitz, formerly President of the Free State, has been appointed State Secretary of the Transvaal, he having been elected to this post by a large majority of the Volksraad. He is considered to be a man of education and of a broad mind, with mature experience and not given to quarrelling. It remains, of course, to be seen how far President Kruger may be influenced by association with Mr. Reitz, but one would think that just as Dr. Leyds has undoubtedly contributed towards making Oom Paul more cantankerous, so the new State Secretary will be able to tone down the President's obstinacy to a more judicious exercise of statesmanship. At all events, several South Africans have expressed to me their sense of the importance of this choice. Not that I anticipate any immediate change of front on the part of the Transvaal Government. I dare say that President Kruger will await the result of Dr. Leyds' mission to Europe, but there is no prospect of the Transvaal doctor obtaining any big loan for the Boers, either in France or in Germany, unless due concessions are granted to the mining industry, and when that conviction has dawned upon the Transvaal Government Mr. Reitz's sound advice may possibly be listened to. In the meantime the May crushings, as far as they have come to hand, appear to be satisfactory, and the mining industry is evidently going ahead, producing increasing quantities of gold, and yielding in the case of the substantial undertakings good profits. Everything, in fact appears to be ready for a general improvement, but the public are still keeping out of the market, although they are at present able to obtain high-class shares at prices yielding an excellent return on the investment. It will apparently require the intervention of the big South African houses to bring fresh life into the Kaffir Circus, for without a strong lead the public never enter upon a "Bull" campaign. It is curious, therefore, that, for instance, the firm controlling the Rand Mines, Limited—in view of the excellent position and progress made—should not give the shares some support, especially as the ursine party have taken considerable liberties with them. It would merely have to show itself a buyer in the market to put the price—now 29$\frac{9}{16}$—up three or four points, and as Rand mines are now the leaders of the speculative shares, an improvement in the rest of the market would follow. East Rands have been strong, and in this case good support is being given, the quotation being firm at 4$\frac{3}{4}$, while the return of Mr. Sidney Farrar from South Africa will certainly tend rather to strengthen them. Consolidated Goldfields are not so well maintained, being quoted at 4$\frac{1}{16}$. Modderfontein, on the other hand, have been firm at 3$\frac{13}{16}$, and Simmer and Jack have been steady at 3$\frac{7}{16}$. Deep Level shares ought to stand higher than they do, especially Goldfields Deep, now quoted 8$\frac{1}{16}$. Other Deep Levels stand as follows:—Crown Deep 11$\frac{1}{2}$, Robinson Deep 9$\frac{1}{8}$, Geldenhuis Deep 7$\frac{3}{8}$, Rose Deep 6$\frac{1}{8}$, Henry Nourse Deep 5, Durban Roodepoort Deep 3$\frac{7}{16}$, Knight's Deep 1$\frac{7}{8}$, Roodepoort Central Deep 1$\frac{5}{16}$, Nigel Deep 1. According to a cablegram received by the Johannesburg Consolidated Investment Company from the Barnato Consolidated, the reef in shaft No. 2 on the Ferreira Deep is 8 in. wide, assaying by fire assay 9 oz. 5 dwt. per ton. A better demand has arisen for Paris account, and it looks as if our French neighbours were again likely to take a hand in the Kaffir Circus, and in that case the much-needed support might come from there. One thing is quite certain, viz., that French capitalists would this time enter it upon more favourable conditions than in the time of the boom, when they paid very high prices, and acquired a great deal of rubbish, instead of confining themselves to the better-class stocks. The falsification of the estimates concerning the yield of the ore in the Molyneux Mines is a disagreeable feature, which must react unfavourably upon the Heidelberg district generally. Instead of yielding 18 dwt. per ton, it is found from the trial crushings that the ore does not pay. I should like to know why the experts did not discover this long ago! The Klerksdorp Company is in the throes of reconstruction. I have always taken the view that it would be exceedingly difficult to make this concern a success, and my warnings will have been useful in keeping people out of an unremunerative enterprise. It is extremely doubtful whether further expenditure of capital on the property is advisable. The Graskop Company has resumed crushing, and the shares have hardened to 2s. 1$\frac{1}{2}$d. Amongst the batteries which have recently been erected is one of ten new stamps on the Princess Estate. De Beers have been strong, chiefly on Paris purchases, and have improved to 27$\frac{1}{4}$, but the firmer tone has not extended to New Jagersfontein, which are quoted only 7$\frac{1}{4}$. Another issue of "Skinner's Mining Manual" is to hand. It shows a further increase, containing 1,456 pages of information, and is in fact in every way more complete than its predecessors. The following is Mr. Skinner's table of the world's gold production:—

	1897 Oz.	1896 Oz.	1895 Oz.
Australasia ...	2,924,153	2,376,132	2,365,165
South Africa ...	3,034,675	2,286,084	2,287,773
United States ...	2,946,300	2,283,445	2,273,580
Russia	1,200,000	1,150,000	1,250,000
India	389,790	321,523	250,640
Other countries ...	1,860,000	1,747,000	1,798,000
	12,354,918	10,164,184	10,225,158
Value ...	£43,859,958	£36,082,653	£36,299,310

Although South Africa still ranks first, it is probable that in the course of the next few years Australasia will oust it from that position, owing to the progress which is being made more particularly in West Australian gold mining. The list of mining directors and secretaries, given in addition, is also very useful.

GOLDEN WEST AUSTRALIA—A LARGE OUTPUT—RISE IN HANNAN'S BROWNHILL AND GOLDEN HORSESHOE.

In contrast with the dulness of the Kaffir Circus there has been a good deal of animation in the West Australian department, and record prices have been established in several high-class shares, while the tendency generally has been favourable. This is not surprising, considering that every assistance is given to the mining industry by the Colonial Government, whereas in the Transvaal a great deal is done, apparently, on purpose to hamper the mines. I quite expect, moreover, that when the new Agent-General, the Hon. E. H. Wittenoom, late Minister of Mines, assumes his post at the end of the present month, he will be able and willing, by the ample information in his possession, to further popularise the West Australian goldfields, while he may also be able to warn the public against certain duffer properties. The May exports of gold from Western Australia are very encouraging, as they fully maintain the figures of the last two months, which were in themselves very gratifying. The March exports amounted to 83,776 oz. of gold, the April exports to 84,083 oz., and those for May to 83,346 oz. This is at the rate of 600,000 oz. per year, which would represent a value of nearly £4,000,000 sterling. There are, moreover, a number of batteries in course of erection, which should bring up the output to a much higher figure, and there is no doubt that in due time, and at the present rate of progress Western Australia will rival the South African gold production. The list of crushings for the week is a long one, and shows many favourable results:—

—	Tons of Ore.	Ounces of Gold.	Assay of Tailings per Ton.
Mount Malcolm Prop. ...	475	351	5 dwt.
Sherlaw's	215	195	10$\frac{1}{2}$ dwt.
Menzies' Mining and Exploration	284	193	—
Do.	100	169	—
Do. (Cyanide)	180	50	—
Londonderry	450	675	—
Premier	770	337	—
Do.	438	403	—
Britannia (Mt. Malcolm).	580	734	8 dwt.
Cuddingwarra	182	187	—
Burbank's Birthday Gift	445	605	—
Lady Shenton	600	1,650	17 dwt.
Princess Royal (Cue)	200	141	—
Central Boulder	320	487	—
North Boulder	433	383	—
Menzies Consolidated.....	554	725	—
Australia United.....	345	715	10 dwt.
Mount Yagahong	670	470	—
Norseman	715	1,015	—
Hannan's Oroya	891	544	—
Ivanhoe	1,751	2,823	13 dwt.
Menzies Gold Reefs.....	51	61	7 dwt.
Do. (Cyanide)	1,100	730	—
Sons of Gwalia	940	958	—
Menzies Golden Age (Tailings)	173	£520	—
Wealth of Nations	640	396	—
Paddington Consols	1,290	780	7 dwt.
Burbank's Birthday Gift	910	1,238	—

The Londonderry crushing is very satisfactory, and if it could only be followed regularly by similar results, it might make the mine a success after all. I wonder how the matter now stands concerning the claims of the Company upon the estate of the late Colonel North? The Directors might with advantage inform the shareholders on this point. The Lady Shenton crushing is exactly on all fours with the previous excellent return, 600 tons of ore having yielded 1,650 oz., which was precisely the return for April and March, 17 dwt. are, moreover, left in the tailings, so that the ore goes over 3 oz. to the ton. Rich discoveries are also being made in the mine, and according to a cablegram just received, the manager has struck a lode in level No. 4 south, looking very favourable, and showing coarse gold and galena. This property is evidently being developed in miner-like fashion, and steps should shortly be taken to put up a further battery. It is, therefore, surprising that the shares should stand at only 2¼d., but I suppose that one of these days not far off they will take a jump. From the Florence Mine very encouraging news has been received of late, and under these circumstances the shares should be worth much more than the present price of ½. An important advance has taken place in Golden Horseshoes to 10, which is a record figure. I do not know who is chiefly responsible for this movement. At various times both Mr. Whitaker Wright and Mr. Horatio Bottomley have had their flirtations with this mine; but, as far as I know, neither of them are interested in it now. Personally, I consider the Hannan's Brownhill Company's property a much more valuable mine, and it is, moreover, on the eve of a very large output, owing to the completion of the machinery by the London and Hamburg Gold Recovery Company. According to a cablegram dated Perth (W.A.), May 27, the new machinery with the old plant will treat 200 tons of ore daily, and according to statements made at the meeting in December last an average of 3 oz. per ton was looked for, and the working expenses were estimated not to exceed £2 per ton. It is easy to calculate on this basis that the annual yield would be about 180,000 oz., of an approximate value of £700,000. Deducting working expenses of £120,000, there would be a net profit of £600,000. But reckoning only half this amount, it would be a splendid return upon the very moderate capital of £110,000, and would warrant a much higher price than the present one of 8½. By the way, my correspondent, whose calculations I gave a fortnight ago, returns to the charge as follows:—

> I see that I have under-estimated the profits, for by wire we are told that with the old and new plant the Company will be able to treat 200 tons per day, which upon my former calculations means a gross profit of £14,400 per week, or £56,700 per month. This on a capital of £110,000 is equal to a dividend of 10s. per share per month and £6 per annum, equal to 600 per cent. Taking the mining shares as a 20 per cent. investment (and many people are content with 10 per cent.) this return should make these shares worth at least £30 each, and I quite expect to see them at this or higher before long. Rand Mines, which pay no dividend at all, have long stood at £30. The puzzle to me is that Hannan's Brownhill, Lake Views, and some other of the leading Westralian mines, are now to be picked up at such low prices. The public will no doubt wake up when too late.

There is undoubtedly a considerable margin for a rise in Hannan's Brownhill, and the same certainly applies also to Lake View Consols and Ivanhoe, which now stand at 9⅛ and 6 5/16 respectively. London and Globe shares have moved somewhat irregularly, and are now quoted 1 5/16. An official announcement has been made refuting all the rumours which have been put about by interested parties concerning an alleged intention of the Marquess of Dufferin to retire from the Chairmanship of the London and Globe Finance Corporation and of the British America Corporation. The letter from the solicitors is as follows:—

> We have been instructed, as the solicitors to the Marquess of Dufferin and Ava, to ask permission to state through your columns that the reports which from time to time have been so persistently circulated to the effect that his lordship either had resigned or intended to resign the chairmanship of the above Companies have been entirely unfounded.
>
> We are further authorised to state that Lord Dufferin, as long as he is able to discharge his present duties with satisfaction to the shareholders, has not the slightest intention of severing his official connection as Chairman with either of these Companies.—We are, sir, yours faithfully, LEMAN & Co.,
>
> 51, Lincoln's Inn-fields, W.C.

I suppose that one of these days people will wake up to the value of these shares, and in the meantime I give the strong advice to my readers not to be frightened out of their holdings in both Companies. At Wednesday's meeting of shareholders of the West Australian Market Trust the reconstruction scheme was unanimously carried, and Mr. Horatio Bottomley evidently still has the confidence of the shareholders, as a hearty vote of thanks was passed with equal unanimity. It is to be hoped that he will now succeed in retrieving the fortunes of the Company, and that in his future encounters with the Stock Exchange he will exercise due care, for it is well known that a duel with the jobbers is an exceedingly risky proceeding, especially if there is bad faith somewhere. Great Boulder Proprietary have eased off to 18s. 6d., chiefly owing to criticisms of the contract with the Boulder Milling Company, which is attacked in no measured terms in some quarters. At the same time the discovery that the reef has been cut rich at the 400 ft. level is a very satisfactory circumstance, and points to the permanence of that mine and of the Hannan's district generally. The encroachments of the alluvial diggers on the Peak Hill property bring into strong relief the measures which were taken by the Hon. E. H. Wittenoom, in the absence of Sir John Forrest, in limiting the search for alluvial to 10 ft. The law has, unfortunately, since been repealed, and the alluvial diggers are again on the war path, so that all protection for the property of the Peak Hill has practically disappeared. It is imperative, therefore, that measures should at once be taken to amend the laws. Fortunately, none of the leading Hannan's or Menzies' mines are subject to the alluvial trouble. Hainault have been bought for Adelaide account, and are firmer at 3. Sons of Gwalia have eased off to 1 15/16 on a less favourable crushing, but this is probably only a temporary occurrence. West Australian Goldfields remain in the dumps at 1¼, while Hampton Plains are fairly steady at 11/16.

Indian, Australasian, and British Columbian Mines.

Indian mines have moved irregularly, the great feature having been the announcement for May by the Mysore Gold Company of the enormous yield of 17,892 oz. Of course, there is a reason for this jump in the output, as 5,270 oz. was obtained from the plates on the dismantling of the old mills and tailings machinery. Mysore Gold shares have thereupon risen to 5⅜; but the other shares in this department have been weak, and declines are marked in all the lower-priced descriptions, such as Mysore West, Mysore Wynaad, Mysore Reefs, Goldfields of Mysore, and Balaghat. In Australian shares, other than West Australian, Mount Lyell have recovered to 10¼, and there has been an improvement in New Australian Broken Hill and in Aladdin's Lamp; but British Broken Hill have given way. Why is not Mr. Warren's report to the Victory board published? It seems to be bad enough, but nothing is gained by keeping it back. In New Zealand mines hardly any business has been transacted, and changes are slight. Waihi, almost alone, have hardened. Utah shares have improved to 2⅝, as a leading firm has taken over a large block of shares which had been hanging over the market. It is probable that we shall see higher prices in the near future. British Columbian mines have moved irregularly. Slight improvements have taken place in Waverley, Klondike Bonanza, and War Eagle; but Klondike and Columbian Goldfields Deferred and Dawson City (Klondike) Dominion Trading are lower. British America Corporation shares have moved within narrow limits, and are quoted about 19s. This is, undoubtedly, below their real merits, especially as important developments are occurring on the Rossland properties belonging to this Company. Thus a cablegram states that a strike unprecedented in Rossland has been made on a mine belonging to this Company known as No. 1. The time is coming when we shall hear a good deal about the gold production of the Klondike district, and there is already a report from Victoria, B.C., according to which the Government Inspector of Mines reports that the yield from the winter's work in the Yukon district will exceed $20,000,000, but that a much greater amount is expected to be recovered by river dredging this summer. Mexican mining shares have been firm, more especially Grand Central, which have risen to $1\frac{13}{16}$ on a very satisfactory discovery on the mine. There are rumours about that the Almada and Tirito Company is to be liquidated, and, as yet, it is doubtful whether reconstruction will be proposed. On the other hand, the Dickens Custer reconstruction has been approved of by the shareholders. Reconstructions are, unfortunately, far too numerous nowadays, and in many cases they merely mean throwing good money after bad.

Lérina.—Finest Liqueur. Made by the monks at the Abbey of St. Lérins, Isle St. Honorat, nr. Cannes, and well known to all visitors to the Riviera. From all Stores and Wine Merchants.

The Australian Mines Agency, Limited.

The shareholders of the Australian Mines Agency, Limited, are being circularised by the agent of the Company in London and by some of the shareholders. In the circular issued by the Company's London agent, Mr. H. Watkins, it is stated that the litigation which has been going on for some considerable time between the Company, the English underwriters, and the late advisory board has now been brought to a termination, and it furnishes information which might be considered encouraging. The circularising shareholders, however—viz., Mr. William Smith, J.P. (a holder of 3,100 shares), and Mr. Alfred Backhouse (a holder of 1,200 shares), both of 16 and 17, King-street, Leeds—are of a very different opinion. They state that it is now two years since the last meeting of the English shareholders in this Company was held in London to meet Mr. D. G. Macfie, the Managing Director, at which time it was promised that all the necessary steps would be taken to transfer the entire assets of the Company to a London-registered Company. They point out that a sum of no less than £120,000 in cash has been furnished by the shareholders of the Company, whilst the only additional assets which that money has provided are the Gympie Freehold, which did not cost more than £20,000, and the money received by the shareholders in dividends since that date does not amount to £30,000. I have no means of judging with regard to the other irregularities mentioned by these gentlemen, but under the circumstances I am not surprised that the shareholders should desire the Company to be transferred to England with an English board of Directors. The Company undoubtedly possesses very valuable properties, which under efficient management should provide good results.

The British and Foreign Investment Association.

When writing on May 5 under the heading "Syndicate-Touts on the War-path" I made reference amongst others to the British and Foreign Investment Association, stock and share dealers, 4, Featherstone-buildings, Holborn, London, W.C., and I stated at the time that the income of £5 per week promised, or rather guaranteed, on each £100, being at the rate of 260 per cent., obviously at once constituted a danger-signal. I have since received a number of communications from correspondents who do not apparently read their TRUTH carefully enough, and as it appears that the British and Foreign Investment Association, in circulars signed J. J. Bevington, secretary, continues to scatter these effusions broadcast over the country, I herewith wish again to put my readers on their guard against what is merely a syndicate-touting business carried on under the high-sounding name of the British and Foreign Association. The last circular is dated May 26, and announces to "customers generally" that the Association "have successfully closed three more amalgamations, namely, in Spanish-Louisvilles, Canadas, and Spanish-Illinois, with net profits of 100 per cent., $33\frac{1}{3}$ per cent., and 25 per cent. respectively, with an average duration of thirty days." Mr. Bevington adds that "taking into consideration the very erratic course of prices lately, the Association feel sure their customers will agree with them that these profits are very satisfactory." Then follows an invitation to join an "amalgamation" in Berthas (Brighton "A"), which was to be opened on Saturday, May 28, and for which a large profit was anticipated. Saturday, May 28, was a Stock Exchange holiday, but Friday night's closing quotation was $177\frac{1}{4}$, and to-day the price is $176\frac{3}{4}$. So much for the speedy rise predicted by the Association! But what I have more particularly to find fault with in the case of this Association with the high-sounding name is that they offer "discretionary investments" to depositors at fixed and guaranteed deposits, viz., the £5 per week on each £100 deposited with them, as above referred to. I am sure that the syndicate-touts who hide their identity behind the name of this Association are not philanthropists, and how any concern can for any length of time guarantee profits at the rate of 260 per cent. per annum passes comprehension. The British and Foreign Investment Association attribute their alleged success to the close touch in which they say they are with the London and provincial Exchanges. I should think that a jobber on the Stock Exchange, who is always in the market, would stand a very much better chance than a concern located at Holborn; but every jobber will tell you that they cannot achieve anything like these results, and I would therefore suggest that the £5 per week on every £100 deposited will probably be paid only until the inevitable collapse comes. At all events, I should like to hear from some of the people who have been receiving this return for any length of time, and I should also like to hear from some of the persons who have actually received the profits alleged to have been made by the British and Foreign Investment Association of 100 per cent. in Spanish Louisvilles, $33\frac{1}{3}$ in Canadas, and 25 per cent. in Spanish-Illinois!

New Enterprises and Issues.

The prospectuses of the following new enterprises and issues have been placed before the public during the week:—

The Goldsmiths' and Silversmiths' Company, Limited.—With a capital of £600,000 divided into 60,000 Five per Cent. Cumulative Preference shares of £5 each and 300,000 Ordinary shares of £1 each. This Company has been formed to acquire and carry on the business of goldsmiths and silversmiths, diamond and gem merchants, watch and clock makers, founded in 1880, and carried on under the title of the Manufacturing Goldsmiths' and Silversmiths' Company, 112 and 110, Regent-street; 48 and 49, Warwick-street, and 48, Glasshouse-street, W.

This business is a progressive one. In 1893 the Company acquired the business of the Goldsmiths' Alliance, Limited (A. B. Savory & Sons), late of Cornhill. The profits in 1894 amounted to over £31,000, and had increased to over £50,000 in 1898. A good feature in this venture is that the whole of the Ordinary shares are taken by the vendors.

The New Brighton Tower and Recreation Company, Limited.—This is an issue of £125,000 Ordinary shares of £1 each at a premium of 5s. per share. The capital of the Company consists of 175,000 Six per Cent. Preference shares at £1 each (issued in 1896), 125,000 Ordinary shares (the present issue) of £1 each, and an issue of Four per Cent. First Mortgage Debentures of £100,000.

New Brighton is an improving town; but the capital of this Company appears to be far too large to permit of its ultimate success.

Great Northern and City Railway Company.—This Company is incorporated with a share capital of £1,560,000 in Ordinary and Deferred shares of £10 each for the purpose of constructing an electric railway of about three miles in length between Finsbury Park Station, G.N.R., and Moorgate-street Station in the City of London.

George Gale & Co., Limited.—This is an issue of £60,000 Four per Cent First Mortgage Debentures of £100 each. The Company was formed in 1888 to take over the brewery and wine and spirit business by Mr. G. A. Gale, at Horndean, Southsea, and Newport, Isle of Wight. The capital is £75,000 in Preference and Ordinary shares of £10 each.

These Debentures are not over well secured. The property may, moreover, depreciate, and a bad season or two would soon alter the returns.

The Klondike Twenty-Mills Concession, Limited.—With a capital of £100,000 in shares of £1 each, this Company has been formed to acquire four leases on the gold-bearing river beds of the Yukon, Lewes, Big Salmon, and Pelly Rivers, each of five miles in extent and all situated in the Klondike-Yukon gold zone. The leases are granted by the Dominion Government for a term of twenty years renewable on terms.

There have been so many issues for the purpose of exploiting properties in the Klondike and Yukon districts that it would be as well to wait for the result of some of these before subscribing to any more.

MY LETTER BOX.

The following are replies to inquiries from various correspondents:—

GOVERNMENT, &C., BONDS.

Ali Bux.—1. Neither bond has been drawn yet. 2. There is no particular reason for selling these bonds, but I am afraid you have paid a good deal too much for them. 3. I cannot answer this question. Northern Faris.—I should consider the British Corporation stock No. 1 the most advisable to invest in. F. R.—Yes; Uruguay bonds should be held, and I do not advise you to sell Brazilians now, as the financial scheme will doubtless tend to improve their value.

BANKS, TRUSTS, AND FINANCIAL.

Duke.—1. No; I advise you to leave these money-lending concerns alone. Alpa.—The Scottish Widows' Fund and the Sun are both excellent life offices. Mona.—These Eastern banks are comparatively safe, but, of course, there is always the possibility of some trouble arising in the Far East, and, personally, I should not advise the deposits in question. St. Chad.—A good second-class life office.

HOME RAILS.

E. N. O.—I am glad you bought Metropolitan Districts at 27¼ on my advice, and you have also done well in clearing your profit at 29. Eventually, no doubt, this stock will further improve. Curriculum.—As a lock-up, Great Central 1894 Ordinary, at about 41½ to 42, are an excellent purchase.

AMERICAN AND FOREIGN RAILS.

C. B. H. H.—If you read my last week's letter you will have gathered from it that traffics of the Western Railway of Santa Fé are at last improving. In fact, the aggregate receipts for nineteen weeks to May 14, 1898, were $789,707 (£59,724), while for the nineteen weeks to May 15, 1897, they amounted to $479,650 (£31,930), an increase of no less than £27,786. Under these circumstances, I think there is every prospect of the bonds coming round again. Sigma, Torquay.—1. Impossible to say. The reorganisation scheme is now being elaborated, and eventually no doubt these Terminal Bonds will again get their dividend. 2. Yes, I consider Alabama Midland Five per Cent. Gold bonds a good investment of the kind. Sigma.—Hold your Baltimore and South Western bonds. Whenever the reorganisation plan has been arranged the price will improve. Veritas.—There is nothing against the various stocks A to E mentioned by you, over which you might usefully spread the investment in question.

MINING SHARES.

Alpha, Dorchester.—(I strongly advise my readers not to adopt the nom-de-plume "Alpha" too frequently, as already this week I have had to reply to three under this cognomen.) No option but to hold Buffelsdoorn, and there seems to be no objection to averaging at the present low quotations. A. S. G.—No option but to hold these South African shares; sooner or later they will improve again. Perplexed.—The Jameson raid and other unexpected troubles have caused the fall in these shares, which should, however, be held now for a recovery, as the various valuable assets of the Company are improving in value. Terrors.—I think you might fairly hold for a further rise. H. A.—You should hold London and Globe Finance and British America Corporation shares for a substantial rise, which is sure to come in time. R. C. S.—Yes, you might with advantage make the exchange into Hannan's Brownhill, which appear to be bound for much higher prices. G. T., Handsworth.—East Murchison United (1) are a promising purchase, and No. 2 should eventually go ahead, although not, perhaps, immediately; but Hannan's Brownhill and Sons of Gwalia are the best of this group. E. R. T.—1. Yes, the exchange into British America Corporation would be promising. 2. I am afraid there is no prospect of a dividend, but many of the Company's properties are developing well, and eventually, on the flotation of some of these, there should be good distributions. T. W. G.—1. This is a question very difficult to answer, and you had better consult your solicitor. 2. Yes. 3. Very prospect of a slow recovery. 4. Not exactly. Infelix.—You are correctly informed; it is a good mine, but the manager was grossly incompetent. The matter is waiting for some financial arrangement. When that is completed it will be safe to buy these shares for an important recovery. Medicus, South Norwood.—It seems to me highly desirable that the shareholders in the Australian Mines Agency, Limited, who are moving for the transfer to a London registered Company should be supported. See remarks in my letter. J. E. G.—There is no market for the shares, but it is reported that the Company is doing a good deal of profitable business. T. S. E. M.—1. A fair mining risk. Hold. 2. No. 3. Nothing is known against the mine. 4. Probably temporary want of water. Medicus, Laurencekirk.—1. I do not like to advise you, as the past history has been so disappointing. 2. Only if you can prove misrepresentation or get the other shareholders to join you.

INDUSTRIAL SHARES.

Alpha, Cheltenham.—I really should not like to advise you with regard to the Russian Petroleum Company. It is quite possible that sooner or later some trouble will arise on account of the title, and anyone buying these shares must bear this contingency in view. B. E. L.—1. I cannot advise you with regard to this photographic company. 2. The British Hydraulic Jointing Company has gone to allotment. Lancashire Inquirer.—1. I have repeatedly warned my readers not to invest their money in the London Co-operative Cab Company, and I devoted a special paragraph to the matter in TRUTH of May 26. 2. Have nothing to do with the British and Foreign Investment Association. If you were a regular reader of TRUTH, you would not have needed to send these inquiries. E. L. B., Wimbledon.—The newspaper Prefs. are a fair investment of the kind, but, of course, very speculative. For the investment of your £800 you might select Welsbach Prefs., Yardley Brewery Prefs., and Brighton "A," or you could make a selection from Home Brewery Debentures. S. E.—1. No, English Sewing Cotton shares are quite high enough and very speculative. 2. Yes, this new issue is promising. E. J. E., Aldershot.—Welsbach Incandescent Gas Prefs. at 98 should suit you, as they are well secured and have no debentures before them. J. C. S.—The time for buying in is ten days, and, unless there is some special difficulty or misunderstanding about the matter, you ought now to have your transfer. L. A. B.—Sell if you can. Dog Otter.—The issue seems to be promising, and I have already referred to it. Holder of Stock.—Full particulars ought to be furnished every year. The Debenture stock seems all right. Bridge.—The nitrate industry is in a bad way, and I should not advise the investment just now. A further falling off in the dividend is probable. Llong.—I. Bovril Deferred are a fair investment of the kind. II. Speculative, but a fair investment. Albion.—This appears to be some sort of private limited Company, and as the clauses in question are contained in the Articles of Association, you cannot object to them. But I suppose that any Liverpool friend of yours, to whom you were to give your proxy, would obtain the necessary information for you. These restrictions are most unusual and unfair.

MIXED INVESTMENTS.

Rusticus.—I see no objection to your putting your money into North-Western (1) or North-Eastern (2), but the first might be preferable. Welsbach Ordinary (3) are an excellent purchase, and certainly preferable as regards progressiveness to Nos. 4, 5, and 6. B. W.—Yes, Barnato Consols should be held for an improvement. Certainly keep Norfolk and Western Prefs., and see remarks under "The Yankee Market." The Lake View Consols mine should pay another dividend shortly, and the shares are fully worth present price. The answer to the last question is "no." Care.—1. You cannot get 5 per cent. in English Rails. Brighton "A" will pay you 4 per cent. Central London should eventually yield good returns. 2. I have already referred to the issue of the Goldsmiths' and Silversmiths' Company last week. 3. Uruguay and Mexican Bonds. 4. No, you had better make no change. Roker.—1. Amongst the copper mines mentioned, No. 1 should be the most progressive; also Utah. 2. The brokerage depends upon the class of stocks bought. Carnation.—No reason to sell the shares mentioned now, as a recovery is probable. Lilbourne.—You should hold London and Globe for a further improvement. 1. No. 2. Certainly not. Jersey.—There is no objection to the investments A, C, D, E, and F, but Cable property (B) is not nowadays progressive, and you had better substitute some Industrial stock, such as Welsbach Prefs., which have no debentures before them, and are therefore well secured.

MY CHAPTER ON INDUSTRIAL STOCKS.

As I anticipated, a much better tendency has set in for Industrial stocks, and although transactions are still restricted, there are indications that the public is entering this market again. Amongst the stocks which have received most favour were Welsbach Incandescent Gas, the Ordinary rising at one time to 114, the Preferred to 98, the Deferred to 19s. The fall in the value of money will doubtless reduce the contango on these shares, and, in view of the excellent profits which are being made, much higher values will probably rule before long. The Ordinary stood at 125 a little time ago, the Prefs. at 105, and the Deferred at 25s., and there is absolutely no reason why they should not again touch that figure. The profits will doubtless be largely increased by the sale of the new burners which are about to be supplied to the trade, and for which a very large demand is expected. The Ordinary stock is an excellent speculative investment, and the Preferred—which has no debenture stock before it—can almost be called gilt-edged, and is certainly as good as many debentures. The temporary reaction of the Ordinary to 112 should therefore be taken advantage of by far-seeing investors, and they will do well to buy at once, as after the settlement a fresh rise is expected. By the way, in America the Welsbach Gaslight is also carrying all before it. I gather from one of my New York contemporaries that the April profits had considerably increased, and that for May still larger returns were expected. The Company is as successful in litigation in the States as is the English Company here, and I find that Judge Dallas of the United States Circuit Court has granted injunctions in the cases of the Welsbach Light Company against the Smith Mercantile Company, against the Crowell Incandescent Gas Lamp Company, and against the Columbia Gas Illuminating Company, all of Philadelphia, restraining and enjoining them, and each of them, from further infringement of the Welsbach Light Company's Rawson patent. The most active share has been Russian Oil, the Ordinary rising to 24, while the Preferred are quoted 10¼. The question of titles, however, must always be a doubtful point about such ventures. With reference to this subject, Mr. M. Landau, of 6, Drapers' Gardens, Throgmorton-street, London, E.C., sends me a letter which want of space prevents me from publishing in extenso. He states that many shareholders have invested their capital believing that the promoters and directors, whose names appeared on the prospectuses, might at least be trusted to secure for them as a Company the legal right to hold and work the properties which had been purchased with their money; but that the contrary is the case, as foreigners cannot do so legally in the Caucasus without first obtaining permission from the Russian Government. Mr. Landau states that Mr. James Coke, who has recently returned from Baku, and who is an expert on Russian petroleum properties, was so concerned for English investors that he recently gave an extract of the Russian law, and pointed out that no English Company can legally hold petroleum lands without the consent of the Russian Government. Mr. Landau appears to have placed himself in communication with Mr. Coke with a view of obtaining the best means of protecting the interests of investors in English Companies, and personally I should advise my readers to be extremely careful with regard to these Russian petroleum concerns. The Lipton meeting went off satisfactorily, and the Ordinary shares are firm at 2 3/16, the Prefs. at 1⅛, I suppose that the new wine and spirits branch will bring grist to the mill of this Company. Apollinaris-Johannis are firmer at 11¾, and Coats Ordinary are being worked up by orders from the north, the Ordinary advancing to 60½. Threads are also firmer at 1 7/16, while the preminm on Fine Spinners is quite nominal at 1/16 to ⅛. Jays are easier at 1½, and Harrods remain dull, while Lyons are firmer at 4¼, Salmon and Gluckstein at 32s. Amongst the Australian timber Companies Millars are steady at 2¾ to 3. The Goldsmiths and Silversmiths Company met with a favourable reception on the part of the public, and the Ordinary shares are quoted ⅛ to ⅜ premium. But little business has been transacted in Hudson's Bay shares, which are quoted 21½. There seems to be no longer any doubt that Whiteley's will shortly be converted into a Company, and it is estimated that the capital will be about £1,500,000; but it is proposed to await the end of the financial year, viz., October, before bringing out the Company. In the Cycle section so far no revival has come about, this being no doubt chiefly due to the numerous cases of litigation which are at present going on. Dunlop Ordinary have advanced to 16s., the Deferred to 9s. 6d., the debentures to 68. I hear on good authority that the Dunlop report will be out in about a fortnight's time, and that, contrary to market expectation, it will show a profit large enough to pay a dividend on the Deferred shares. It is under the consideration of the Directors whether they will carry forward the balance or pay a dividend on the Deferred capital. Humber Ordinary are better at 10s. 3d., while the Extensions are quoted 4s. 6d. Cycle Components are dull at 1 1/16, and Swifts are easier at 9s. 6d., while Singers have improved to 9s. 6d. Amalgamated Tyres are the turn firmer at 3s. 6d. Trent Cycles at 4s. 6d. deserve attention, owing to the very considerable assets of the Company, and the profitable business which it is carrying on. Schweppes have been dull at 1 for the Ordinary and at ⅜ for the Deferred, while Bovril are a steady market at 1 for the Ordinary and ⅝ for the Deferred. Allsopps Ordinary have been a firm market at 149, while in other home brewery shares a steady business has been transacted. Yardley Prefs. are now officially quoted at 4¾ to 5¼ xd., and it is reported that some transactions are being carried out which should impart an additional value to these shares. As the English Sewing Cotton Company had been issued seven and a half months ago, the special settlement which was completed last week was a heavy one, the transactions amounting to many thousands of shares, especially as the Committee had fixed the same day for the Lipton settlement, in which the dealings were on even a larger scale than in "Threads." I am told that the Clearing House of the Stock Exchange settlement department cleared between seven and eight millions of shares in special settlements last week, and it is undoubtedly to the credit of the managers of this department that all went through smoothly. The work was increased by the large number of small transactions. I have heard that one purchaser of 250 Liptons had his shares delivered in forty transfers of five each and five transfers of ten each, entailing a loss to the dealers of between £5 and £6 for extra fees and stamps. Anglo "A" have been a good market, and, as there seems to be very little floating stock about, they look like touching higher prices before long. The "B" stock is always very difficult to procure in any quantity, and may, therefore, also improve. A.B.C. shares have been steady at 12½. The Sweetmeat Automatic Company's shares maintain themselves at 3⅞ x.d., at which they pay just over 5½ per cent. I hear favourable accounts of the Natal Steam Coal Company. The output is steadily increasing, and the excellent quality of its product secures it a ready sale. The £1 shares stand at 1¼, and as the capital (£105,000) issued is small, an advance is probable. The Dundee Coal Company is also a Natal concern, which is, however, situated some fifteen miles further inland from the port of Durban. These two Companies meet a long-felt want in supplying a good steam coal in that quarter of the globe. Pahangs have been inquired for of late, and the £1 shares have risen from 6s. 9d. to 12s.; but I should advise great caution as the climate is troublesome and the property can only be worked during certain months of the year. British Tea Tables at 2½ seem to be quite high enough. Fish Oil shares have been somewhat depressed on forced sales, and at one time fell to nearly 3½, but they are now firmer at about 4 to 4¼. The Company holds 25,000 Volenite shares, which now stand at £4 each. Volenites, by the way, fell in sympathy with Fish Oils, but a sharp rally is looked for shortly. It is stated that the issue of the balance of the Ordinary and Preference share capital of Septimus Parsonage & Co., Limited, has met with a favourable reception, and the shares are now quoted at a moderate premium, at which a steady business is being transacted. The market for theatre and music-hall shares is reviving, and Palace Theatres are being picked up again at 1 3/16 in anticipation of a satisfactory dividend. Drury Lane are dealt in at 1 1/16 to 1 3/16, and Empire 10s. paid are quoted 3¼, ditto 15s. paid at 5. Gaiety at 1⅜ seem to be quite high enough, but Grand Theatre, Islington, at "par" look cheap. Tivoli are firm at 12 and difficult to procure, while Pavilions at 6¼ seem to be as high as they ought to stand. A good deal of discussion has been caused by the issue of the report and balance-sheet of the Reservoir Hub and Components Company, Limited, which for the period from March 10, 1896, to March 31, 1898, shows an adverse balance on the profit-and-loss account of £3,255. When this is compared with the glowing statements made in the prospectus, in which a gross profit of £30,115 on 104,750 pairs of hubs was held out as an inducement.

CHINA AND GLASS. — Messrs. GOODE, Artists and Designers, solicit an inspection of their collection in their recently-extended South Audley-street premises, now by far the largest and most important in Europe. Messrs. Goode guarantee the excellence of all their productions, and invite a comparison of their prices with those of any co-operative stores.

and concerning which an increase of 33⅓ per cent. was estimated by the directors through the Company manufacturing the article themselves—it will be seen how great the disappointment of the shareholders must be, and how grossly exaggerated the estimates were. I should like to add that I warned my readers at the outset against this concern, and that in TRUTH of October 1, 1896, I threw very considerable doubt on the estimates of the experts, and described the hub as an untried invention. I wonder how many subscriptions were obtained by the private circulation of the prospectus of the Flower and Plant Preservation Company, Limited? This concern was started with a capital of £80,000 for the purpose of acquiring and working the inventions of certain German persons for the permanent preservation of plants, flowers, &c.; but I cannot conceive how any one in his right senses could possibly put money into such a concern.—Your affectionate Uncle, MOSES.

All Rights Reserved.]

QUEER STORY.

A COSTLY GIFT.

PART II.

FRANKLYN VAVASOUR did not sleep very soundly that night, notwithstanding his relief at the satisfactory termination of his interview with the police inspector. He was much troubled in his mind, by the idea of having incurred the penalty of "six months' hard." He broke into a cold perspiration at the prospect, and registered a vow that he would never be such a fool as to give another wedding present. But it was obviously useless to worry himself, and he endeavoured to dismiss the subject from his mind. One day, however, he had an unpleasant reminder in the shape of a question from Tom Pyecroft. The old gentleman came up to him in the "House," and said with some excitement:—

"Frank, my boy, do you mind telling me how much you gave for my daughter's wedding present?"

"Do you mean the—the brooch?" said Franklyn, uneasily.

"Yes: I don't ask from curiosity."

"Why do you wish to know, then?" Franklyn naturally inquired.

"Well, the fact is, it is lost, and I want to declare its value."

"Lost!" repeated Franklyn.

"Yes, or stolen. It was in my daughter's handbag with other things."

"Did this happen abroad?" inquired Franklyn.

"No. On the railway coming from Dover to London."

"When?"

"Yesterday."

"Good gracious! Then has your daughter come back to England?" exclaimed Franklyn, aghast.

"Yes. Didn't I tell you my son-in-law got a chance of exchanging into a home battalion that is stationed at Hounslow. Lucky chap, isn't he?"

"Very," murmured Franklyn, with his heart in his boots. "Then your daughter will live at Hounslow?"

"Not yet. The young beggar has managed to get six months' leave of absence, so they have taken a furnished house in town, near us."

"The deuce!" ejaculated Franklyn, blankly.

"Hallo! What is the matter?" inquired Tom Pyecroft, staring at him.

"Nothing! nothing!" said Franklyn, hastily recovering himself. "You say the brooch is lost," he added, with a gleam of hope.

"I hope not. However, the valise has gone astray. You didn't answer my question, old chap."

"About the——"

"The value of the brooch. What did it cost?" said Tom Pyecroft, impatiently.

"Oh! 'Pon my word, I don't remember," returned Franklyn; having, in fact, not the slightest idea of the cost price of such an article.

"Bosh! You don't buy a present like that every day of your life, Frank. Came from the United Stores, didn't it?"

"Yes," said Franklyn, hurriedly.

"Well, what did you give for it?"

"I think about fifty pounds," said Franklyn, at a venture.

"What!" ejaculated Tom Pyecroft, incredulously.

"Eh? No, no! I mean twenty-five," said Franklyn, with desperation.

"Frank, don't be an ass. You never got that brooch for a farthing under a hundred, I know," said Tom Pyecroft, with conviction.

"A hundred! Well, perhaps you are right. It was a hundred now I come to think of it. A hundred guineas," added Franklyn, in order to appear precise.

Old Tom Pyecroft stared at him for a moment, puzzled as well he might be, at Franklyn's evident embarrassment. But the old gentleman apparently concluded that his young friend's demeanour was due to diffidence, for he gave him a hearty dig in the ribs and went his way laughing.

As for Franklyn, he was fairly startled out of his wits by the unexpected news he had heard. It seemed to bring the "six months' hard" within the region of practical contingencies, not to mention other disagreeable consequences. He was so upset that he gave a wrong price, which landed him with a cart-load of heavily "flopping" stock, and he went home at the end of the day with a whirling brain and a suicidal tendency.

He endeavoured to console himself with the possibility that the thief had fled with his booty abroad, but it did not avail him long, for the next morning Tom Pyecroft greeted him with the unwelcome intelligence that the brooch had been found.

"What! Has the valise turned up?" inquired Franklyn, quickly.

"No, but my daughter, to her great delight, has discovered that she packed the brooch in her trunk. It wasn't in the valise at all. Devilish lucky, wasn't it?" laughed Tom Pyecroft.

"Oh, very," replied Franklyn, with a sickly smile.

"We've got a few people dining to-night, and my daughter is coming. You must join us, my boy," cried Tom Pyecroft, heartily.

Franklyn eagerly accepted the invitation; not that he felt sociably inclined, but because he was seized with a frantic desire to get the brooch once more into his possession. He had a vague idea of borrowing it on some pretence or other, and of omitting to return it. How he should manage this he did not know, but he resolved at all hazards to prevent the bride from flaunting it before the eyes of the public. His morbid apprehensions had reached such a pitch that he was tortured by a presentiment, amounting almost to absolute conviction, that sooner or later the brooch would be recognised by its real owner.

The bride wore the ornament at her father's dinner table that evening out of compliment to the generous donor. The young lady's intentions were excellent, but she little imagined the anguish and consternation she caused Franklyn, especially as she pointedly drew attention to it. It was conspicuous enough without this, for with its sparkling scintillation, it seemed to Franklyn to resemble the evil eye of some mocking fiend. He gazed at it all the evening with a sort of terrified fascination, until he almost fancied he could discern upon its glittering surface the horrible legend "six months' hard." He hoped, though with misgivings, that his conduct escaped observation, but towards the end of dinner Tom Pyecroft shouted out in his most strident tones,

"Hallo! Frank. What is the matter? You are not drinking anything. You keep staring at Bella's brooch as though you wanted it back again!"

"Nothing of the kind," cried Franklyn, almost fiercely, turning as red as fire.

"Well, he won't get it; will he, Bella?" laughed Tom Pyecroft.

"No, indeed, papa," replied the bride. "I would not part with it on any account. I was mad with grief when I thought I had lost it."

"You must take care, my dear young lady," said a grave clergyman from the end of the table, in a horribly clear, grating voice, "a friend and parishioner of mine, poor Miss Bigg, has recently had a terrible misfortune."

"What was that? Fill your glass, Frank," cried Tom Pyecroft, cheerfully.

"She had a diamond brooch as valuable as yours, Mrs. Rosslyn," said the clergyman, solemnly, "but she was returning home a week or so back from a dinner party, and she lost it."

There was a slight pause after this announcement, which seemed to Franklyn to last for an hour. Probably the audience thought the anecdote a little dull and pointless, and were disappointed that there was no sequel. To Franklyn, however, this "plain, unvarnished tale" had the deepest and most thrilling interest; for he never doubted that the missing brooch was the one he had found. It seemed to foreshadow the fulfilment of his dreadful presentiment, and he sat rigidly in his chair, petrified with horror and alarm. But it had the effect, after a time, of stimulating his imagination, for when the men joined the ladies in the drawing-room after dinner he had formed a definite plan for obtaining the fateful ornament.

"Mrs. Rosslyn," he said to the bride, as soon as he could get an opportunity of speaking to her alone, "I want you to do me a favour."

"I can't refuse you anything, of course, Mr. Vavasour," was the reply.

"Will you be good enough to lend me your brooch for a little while?" inquired Franklyn, with suppressed agitation.

"My brooch!" exclaimed the bride.

"Yes. You see I have a cousin who is about to be married, and I want to give her for a present a brooch like yours," said Franklyn, lying glibly. "I—I—find I must get it made, and the jeweller requires to see yours for a pattern."

"Oh, Mr. Vavasour, how kind and good you are," exclaimed the bride, rapturously. "Why, of course I'll lend it to you with the greatest pleasure."

In fact little Mrs. Rosslyn was eager to oblige him, and at the end of the evening Franklyn took his departure, with the brooch snugly tucked away in his pocket.

He did not hesitate an instant as to what he should do with it. He was absolutely panic-stricken by the coincidence revealed by the clergyman's story, and he had at once decided that the owner of the brooch must have it back again without delay. This was the only sure way of averting the danger of detection, and he felt that he could not rest until restitution had been made.

He therefore hurried home, and carefully wrapping the brooch in paper, enclosed it in an envelope addressed in a disguised hand to the Manager of the lost Property Department of Scotland Yard, and finally posted his letter in a distant quarter of the town from that in which he resided.

Though his action was due to nothing higher than the instinct of self-preservation, Franklyn felt quite virtuous as he turned his steps homeward, and the delicious sense of freedom from responsibility, now that he had dispatched the accursed thing into the hands of the police, made him entirely oblivious for the moment of the awkward fact that he had to reckon with little Mrs. Rosslyn about her wedding present.

Franklyn's first step in this direction was to go, in a half-hearted manner to the United Stores, to inquire the cost of a brooch similar to the eventful one which he had now parted with for ever. The price asked completely took his breath away, and Franklyn honestly considered that it would be quite wicked to spend such a sum on a mere gew-gaw. Still he could hardly expect Mrs. Rosslyn to be satisfied with this excuse; indeed, it was not a question of excuses at all, what he had to do was simply to return the brooch which he had borrowed. But how was he to do this when he had sent away the ornament and could not bring himself to replace it?

At length he was driven—for want of an alternative plan—to the lame expedient of pretending he had lost the brooch. One thing he was firmly and heroically determined about, and that was that he would not be weak enough to offer to replace the brooch. He counted, moreover, on Tom Pyecroft's magnanimous sympathy, and hoped he might so work upon Tom's feelings—especially after lunch—as to induce him to pay for a new brooch for his daughter himself!

Franklyn felt that this would be a masterpiece of diplomacy if he could only accomplish it, and he anxiously watched for an opportunity. Unfortunately, he was a little hurried by a letter from Mrs. Rosslyn, who wrote one day to ask him to let her have her brooch back that evening, as she wished to wear it at a ball. He, therefore, had to seek out Tom Pyecroft at once, which he did after the luncheon hour, but, though the old gentleman's face looked like a rising sun in splendour, he was rather disappointingly sober.

"Tom, I've had a great misfortune," said Franklyn, drawing him aside, speaking with due solemnity.

"Have you, my boy? So have I," said Tom Pyecroft rather testily. "The Château Larose was off colour, bouquet quite gone."

"H'm! Mine is a more serious mishap," said Franklyn, looking very depressed. "Your daughter has written for her brooch."

"Ah! I think it is about time she had it back," returned Tom Pyecroft, who, to Franklyn's dismay, seemed unusually snappish.

"Yes. I borrowed it to—for a purpose. But I've had a sad accident, old friend. I—I've lost it," said Franklyn with a gulp.

"Lost it, eh?" exclaimed Tom Pyecroft, glancing up at Franklyn with a slightly wandering gaze. "Well, that is rum, too!"

"What is rum? I—I was bringing it home from the jeweller, in my coat-tail pocket, when I was robbed—or lost it; I don't, of course, know which. Anyhow, it had disappeared when I reached home," said Franklyn eagerly.

"You remember the story the parson was telling at my table," said Tom Pyecroft abruptly, "about the party who lost a brooch?"

"Yes," said Franklyn, with a start.

"My daughter met her the other day; she was wearing it," replied Tom Pyecroft.

"What—the—the," began Franklyn, frightened out of his wits, and wondering what Tom was driving at.

"The brooch that was lost. Parson introduced my daughter to the old girl. The lost brooch had turned up mysteriously and unexpectedly; sent by an unknown hand to Scotland Yard, after a long interval. Odd, wasn't it?" said Tom Pyecroft, with a glance and a grin which made Franklyn shiver.

"It was lucky," replied Franklyn, as composedly as he could, though he turned uncomfortably red. "What am I to do?"

"You don't mean to say, honour bright, that you've lost Bella's brooch," said Tom Pyecroft incredulously.

"Honour bright," exclaimed Franklyn, unable to decide whether the old gentleman's apparent dulness of comprehension was real or assumed.

"Oh, rot!" ejaculated Tom Pyecroft, with sudden energy.

"It's quite true," answered Franklyn. "I've been to the police and done everything I can, but without result. It was evidently stolen," he added, not very convincingly, for every moment he became more nervous and flustered.

"It's devilish queer," said Tom Pyecroft at length, speaking with strange deliberation. "I'm very sorry, Frank."

"Of course, I shall have to buy your daughter another brooch," replied Franklyn, quickly, impelled by a dreadful fear that the old gentleman suspected the truth.

"There is no time like the present," rejoined Tom Pyecroft, with a coarse laugh. "I'll come with you. The United Stores, wasn't it?"

To Franklyn's guilty conscience it seemed evident that he was found out, or, at least, that the old gentleman was bent upon investigating the matter. The mention of the United Stores completed his discomfiture, and he said tremulously:

"It is no good going to the Stores, I've been there. They have nothing of the same pattern."

"Oh," said Tom Pyecroft, shortly.

"No, but we will go to Lazarus's in Bond-street," said Franklyn, driven to desperation by his companion's imperturbable aspect. "We'll take a cab at once."

"All right. Don't forget your cheque book, Frank," laughed Tom Pyecroft.

Franklyn had no time to consider what he was doing. Impelled by a frenzied dread of detection, he blindly sallied forth in a desperate frame of mind and accompanied Tom Pyecroft to the jewellers. Lazarus's was not a cheap shop; indeed, if Franklyn had had his wits about him he would never have suggested going there, and it happened that the jeweller had not, among his stock, a diamond brooch of the same size as Franklyn was seeking, but only larger and handsomer ones. But with Tom Pyecroft standing by, chuckling over his discomfiture as he undoubtedly was, Franklyn could not pluck up spirit to leave the shop, or even to attempt to haggle about the price. His only desire was to get through with the wretched business, so as to be free to rush away and drown himself; and he therefore bought and paid for a new diamond brooch like a person in a nightmare.

"Better give it to me to take charge of, Frank," said Tom Pyecroft, as they quitted the shop; "you might lose it, you know. Ha! ha! ha!"

Franklyn was too utterly crushed and dispirited to resent even this brutal allusion. He handed over the brooch meekly, and retired to his chambers to brood in secret tribulation over what had occurred. The sensations of a patient while undergoing torture at the hands of a dentist were hardly more piteous than those of Franklyn Vavasour, as he thought of this awful expenditure. It was the worst catastrophe that had ever happened to him, and it touched him on his tenderest point. He literally lay awake all that night, writhing with vexation and rage; and it may safely be averred that the death of his nearest relative would have affected him considerably less. The one solitary gleam of consolation which penetrated the gloom of his misery was the thought that he had rehabilitated himself in the eyes of Tom Pyecroft. His exaggerated notions of the sacrifice he had made rendered it impossible, to his mind, that the old gentleman could still suspect him. It only needed the prospect of losing Tom Pyecroft's business patronage to fill his cup of bitterness to overflowing.

On this point, however, he had no misgivings, and he did not doubt that Tom Pyecroft must feel that he had behaved handsomely. When, therefore, he was boisterously greeted by the old gentleman in the "House" the next day he unconsciously assumed an air of deprecating modesty.

"Hallo, Frank! you look precious yellow about the gills," was Tom Pyecroft's breezy salutation.

"I hope Mrs. Rosslyn liked her brooch," said Franklyn, gravely.

"Of course she did. I told her what it cost," replied Tom Pyecroft, with a peculiar grin. "By Jove, Frank, you've been going it lately. That makes the third diamond brooch you've bought in a month."

"The third?" repeated Franklyn, rather bewildered.

"Why, yes. The one that was lost, the one we got yesterday, and the one you had made for your cousin," said Tom Pyecroft.

"Oh, yes! I forgot my cousin," said Franklyn, regarding his companion with vague uneasiness.

"But you gave her the present you intended, I suppose?" said Tom Pyecroft.

"Oh, certainly," said Franklyn, suddenly remembering the excuse he had made for borrowing the brooch from Mrs. Rosslyn.

"Well, that makes three, doesn't it?" persisted Tom Pyecroft.

"Three, yes," said Franklyn.

Tom Pyecroft burst into a loud, vulgar, coarse laugh, which made Franklyn's blood curdle.

"By Jove, Frank," he said, with abrupt indignation, "you're a real first-class liar."

"Mr. Pyecroft!"

"Don't 'Mr.' me. You're a liar, Frank, and you know it, and a good many other fellows shall know it, too, before the day is out. You never bought but one brooch, and that I made you get yesterday. I wasn't going to have my daughter done out of her present by a mean, dirty trick," said Tom Pyecroft, scornfully.

"I really don't understand you," returned Franklyn, with all the spirit he could muster, though his knees trembled.

"Oh, yes, you do. You found the first brooch you gave my daughter. It belonged to Miss Biggs, of Portman-street, who lost it in a cab. Then you got in a funk and made a pretence of borrowing it from Bella in order to restore it to the owner. You sent it to the police with a note in a disguised hand."

"Really, Mr. Pyecroft," began Franklyn, with a poor attempt at bluster, "I wonder——"

"You wonder how I found you out, eh?" cried Tom Pyecroft, catching him up. "You told me yourself."

"I never——"

"Oh, no; not in words. But I could see by your manner yesterday that you had been up to some dirty trick or other," roared Tom Pyecroft, who was working himself into a white heat of indignation, to Franklyn's great alarm. "Putting two and two together, it occurred to me to call on Miss Biggs and ask to see the note which accompanied her brooch when it was sent to Scotland Yard. I recognised your writing in spite of the disguised hand, and I recognised the brooch."

"Suppose I deny it," murmured Franklyn, though he felt it would be quite useless.

"If you do, I'll knock your head off," exclaimed the old gentleman with sudden fierceness and looking uncommonly like suiting his actions to his words.

"I—I was only joking," returned Franklyn, considerably startled by this demonstration, which Tom Pyecroft—a noted bruiser in his day—was quite capable of carrying into practical effect. "Indeed, the whole affair was a joke."

"A joke!" echoed the old gentleman indignantly. "A nice kind of joke it would have been for my daughter if Miss Biggs had recognised the brooch when she was wearing it! It was stolen property, you—you thief!"

"Mr. Pyecroft, I can't stand any more of this," began Franklyn wincing.

"That is unfortunate for you, because you'll hear a good deal more about it. You were right, perhaps, in saying it was a joke. The 'House' will appreciate it, I can tell you," said Tom Pyecroft, turning away with a mischievous grin.

"Stay!" cried Franklyn with a start.

"Well?"

"You—you surely are not going to tell?" exclaimed Franklyn anxiously.

"Every one," said Tom Pyecroft with unmistakable emphasis.

Franklyn realised only too well the ominous significance of this threat. Not many men would care to encounter the boisterous badinage of the Stock Exchange, especially when guilty of some equivocal act. Franklyn was at heart a terrible coward, both physically and morally, and he trembled at the thought of the opprobrious treatment he would receive. Already he beheld himself in imagination surrounded by a howling mob of his colleagues, who would join hands in a circle, and dance and jibe and sing ribald songs at him. Tom Pyecroft was a prime inciter and organiser of such Stock Exchange amenities, and could render his life a burden to him. Above all, Franklyn was really ashamed, now that he had been found out, of what he had done, and he dreaded publicity, both on general and on business grounds. He therefore hastily decided that Tom Pyecroft must be induced to keep his secret at any cost.

For Mosquito Bites nothing allays the irritation so quickly as Scrubb's Cloudy Fluid Ammonia, and it is an immediate remedy for Wasp or Bee Stings.

Major Howe & Co., Ltd.—Fashionable Boots and Shoes.—16, Coventry-st., W.; 60, Strand, W.C.; 81, Gracechurch-st.; and 13, Queen Victoria-st., London. "Note Addresses." (Repairs)

"Look here, Tom," he said, very white and tremulous, "I've made a fool of myself, but don't be too hard on me, old man. If you'll hold your tongue I'll—I'll give you a subscription to the Benevolent Fund."

"H'm!" grunted Tom Pyecroft. "I'm a steward at the dinner to-night."

"I know; that is why I thought if I put my name down on your list, we might come to an arrangement," said Franklyn eagerly.

"I tell you what, Frank," said Tom Pyecroft, who was honestly enthusiastic in the cause of charity, and was evidently mollified by the suggestion, "If you'll give something handsome, something that will remind you not to make such a fool of yourself again," he added significantly, "we may do business. You've never given anything to the Fund yet—suppose we say five hundred——"

"Oh, oh, oh!" gasped Franklyn.

"Guineas," said Tom Pyecroft sharply, with a warning glance. "You'll find it cheaper in the end."

"Five hundred guineas," murmured Franklyn, nearly fainting.

"Is it a bargain—Yes or No?" inquired Tom Pyecroft, making a move.

"Yes," said Franklyn, in a low tone, looking very white about the lips.

Nobody ever knew the reason of Franklyn Vavasour's unexpected munificence; but whenever he was commended or congratulated upon it, he was observed to wince; perhaps because, in spite of it, Tom Pyecroft never did business with him afterwards.

ART NOTES.

IT has given me particular pleasure to see that Mr. F. Carruthers Gould is about to have an exhibition, at the Continental Gallery in New Bond-street, of his original Parliamentary and political cartoons. Readers of this journal will need no introduction to Mr. Gould, for his illustrations were to be found for many years in TRUTH'S Christmas Numbers. It was TRUTH, in fact, which served to make known to the public a talent for caricature that had previously been given up to Stock Exchange subjects, though so evidently "meant for mankind." No "black and white" artist has more thoroughly earned the honour of a "One-man Show," which in this case is certain to be entertaining and, if merit obtains its deserts, should assuredly be successful as well. Mr. Gould's Exhibition opens on Saturday next.

To the jaded and bewildered critic, surfeited with the ill-advised profusion of the big picture shows, such an Exhibition as that now to be seen at the French Gallery in Pall Mall comes as a blessed relief. To visit it is like steering into the clear, smooth water of a safe haven after buffeting and beating about in the seething breakers beyond the bar. There are only three score and ten pictures hung upon the walls, in itself a matter for felicitation. And so well selected have they been that there is scarcely one which does not repay examination. There is absolutely no padding. The Gallery is so far true to its name as to give a special prominence to artists of the French school. There are three luminous Corots, full of that silvery light and atmosphere in which this artist was able to steep his pictures. Never, perhaps, has the essential poetry of the close of day been more subtilely expressed than in Daubigny's "Evening" (No. 11), a poem in paint, if ever there was one. A place of honour is deservedly given to Rousseau's "Fisherman" (No. 8). Frère's "Picture Book" (No. 12) has all the most striking qualities of the master. Looking at it, one recalls what Ruskin once wrote of Frère's pictures, that he could find no words tender enough or reverent enough in which to speak of them. They, indeed, as the Sage of Coniston so admirably expresses it "are all beauty without consciousness; dignity without pride; lowliness without sorrow; and religion without fear." Two examples of L'Hermitte serve to remind one how much our Mr. Clausen and Mr. La Thangue owe to this great Frenchman. I said just now there was absolutely no padding in the Exhibition, but I am inclined to qualify this statement when I recall Professor Heffner's "Early Morning on the Chiem See" (No. 39). This seemed to me to repeat the chocolate-box-cover sort of landscape which this suave Professor is too fond of giving us. On the east wall of the Gallery is a large landscape by a deceased A.R.A. which will serve to revive pleasant memories of an artist whose very name is probably unknown to the present generation of visitors to the Academy. "The Fallow Field," by the late J. W. Oakes, A.R.A., was the very picture, I am told, which gained this artist his Associateship in the early seventies. It is certainly a very fine landscape, and will bear comparison with those which our Associates of to-day are exhibiting this season at Burlington House. Pictures by artists of such varied nationalities and styles as Mesdag and Leighton, Millet and Creswick, Mauve and Bonnington, Israels and Goodall serve to complete an exhibition of exceptional interest and charm.

Captain Adrian Jones fills a large room at Messrs. Graves's Galleries in Pall Mall with his pictures and statuettes illustrative of sporting, polo, hunting, and military life. The exhibition is a striking proof of his industry, facility, and versatility, and cannot fail to meet with the approval of those thorough sportsmen who enjoy looking at a portrait in oils of Persimmon, or a plaster effigy of Forager, a once famous hound, I am told, of the Pytchley pack. But it would be unfair to Captain Jones to suggest that his work appeals to sportsmen only. He makes a laudable and by no means unsuccessful effort to invest pictures of sporting subjects with artistic interest. As a sculptor, I think, he shows even more skill than as a painter. Visitors to the Academy will not have forgotten the spirited equestrian group—four horses abreast drawing a chariot—which he exhibited there some years since. It has been suggested that this "Quadriga" would look well on the Arch at the top of Constitution Hill. Would it not be possible, I wonder, to try the effect of it in this position? Mr. Akers-Douglas is an enterprising First Commissioner of Works: what does he say to making this interesting experiment?

MUSIC.

COVENT GARDEN PLAYING AT BAYREUTH.

THE present popularity of Wagner's music was largely won by the vituperation to which the composer and his operas were for some years subjected. In musical, as in religious, or any other propaganda, there is nothing like persecution to assure a healthy vitality. Wagnerism, however, now bids fair to be injured, if not definitely killed, by ridicule due to the absurdities of some of its professors. Music which its champions pretend can only properly be heard in the dark—Tolstoi says it is hypnotism or craziness, although the sweetheart or the pickpocket may have other views—and amid other uncomfortable surroundings, is not the sort of deliriously enjoyable entertainment destined for a long and healthy life, so far, at any rate, as this country is concerned. No doubt some of the early champions of Bayreuth had a bee in their bonnet, although I am bound to confess that in catering for the gold of Great Britain and the United States they have shown a remarkable degree of method in their madness. But to insist that British audiences shall be dragooned like those of Vienna is nonsense, and however much the extreme Wagnerites may not have liked it, Mr. Maurice Grau on Monday was wise to refuse to follow them in some of their follies.

Bayreuth may still be a force in the Wagnerian world, but at any rate, there is now no need to imitate its absurdities here. Twenty years ago it was necessary to found an artistic colony of this sort if only because opera on the "star" system was triumphant elsewhere. Londoners paid a guinea to hear a robust (not to say obese) tenor sing an upper C from the chest, and the doctrine of Catalani's husband, that an opera company should consist of "ma femme et cinq ou six poupées" was in full swing. On the other hand, Bayreuth insisted upon proper preparation and rehearsal, and engaged a school of vocalists specially trained for their work. As Wagner's operas are unconscionably long, and Bayreuth itself boasted insufficient hotels and lodgings to accommodate the whole of the visitors, it was necessary to commence the performances early in the afternoon. Also, as a matter of course, it was essential to darken the theatre in order to keep out the Bavarian sunshine, while it was found desirable and, indeed, wise to make a break of an hour between each act, in order that the audience might refresh themselves with the air of the hills and quaff the beverage of the country.

At Covent Garden all these conditions are different, and the "playing at Bayreuth" which was demanded by the Elect, though it was only partially conceded by Mr. Grau, was a vast absurdity. There is no earthly reason why the performances should not commence at half-past six instead of at four or five in the afternoon, while the extreme care with which the theatre was to have been darkened, and the nonsensical regulations, which, it is true, were at the last hour abandoned, of closing the doors and preventing people from going in or out during a performance which lasted two and a half hours without a break, were unnecessary and absurd. At present, of course, I am able to write only of the performance of the first opera of the tetralogy, namely, "Das Rheingold," which was given on Monday. Hitherto this work has been performed in two or three acts, but because for some reason Bayreuth thought it best to play the whole opera without a break, this nonsense has been imitated in the building which was once the fashionable opera house of Europe. Consequently, on Monday we started at half-past eight in a gloomy though, thanks to Mr. Grau, not an absolutely dark theatre, and, without any sort of interval, Wagner's mellifluous music went on till about eleven at night. To-night (Wednesday) "Die Walküre" is announced under somewhat similar conditions, except that the opera starts at five, and the audience—many of them ladies in the gallery, who are compelled by the new operatic militarism to come without hats or bonnets, and are provided with no proper cloakroom for their headgear—are, rain or shine, ruthlessly to be turned out of the theatre between 6.15 and 7.15. This, of course, is to air the house, which, with closed ventilators, would otherwise be stifling. On Thursday again "Siegfried" is announced, and the audience are to be turned out between 6.25 and 7.15, while on Saturday we start at 4 o'clock and proceed with this "dashed tomfoolery" until some little time before the vendors of lager beer close for the night.

Now, at Bayreuth people necessarily would leave the playhouse in order to enjoy the sunshine, the fresh air, and the view. But to turn hatless ladies out of the Covent Garden gallery, perhaps in the pelting rain, for an hour and more to wander about the purlieus of Bow-street, Long Acre, or the Market, is about as stupendous a piece of absurdity as has ever been committed in operatic matters. It may, of course, be that the genuine Wagnerite (most of them are Germans) prefers this dragooning. But by the average Britisher it will, I fear, be considered a piece of impertinence. Moreover, not the slightest arrangements had been made to feed the masses. Whether the management laboured under the impression that the salesmen of comestibles in the classic regions of Drury-lane would rise to the occasion and repeat the miracle of the few small loaves eked out by fried fish is not quite clear. At any rate, except under the penalty of a walk along Drury-lane and Long-acre, the 2,500 people who are to be "fired" out of the doors will, according to the official circular, have to choose between 5s. 6d. at the Cecil or 7s. 6d. at the Savoy for a dinner without wine or attendance. These charges matter, of course, nothing to the wealthy members of the Syndicate; but to the average man (or woman) in the gallery, who pays four shillings a night for a ticket, and carries the economical flask and sandwiches, in the hope that he will be permitted to consume this modest meal in the seat for which he has paid, but who is to be bundled into the street in order that the opera house may be ventilated for the greater folks, it means a very great deal. I understand that some of the suburban Wagnerites laboured under the impression that the management would provide dinners in the theatre, and that Mr. Forsyth was bombarded with letters and telegrams requesting him to reserve tables, after the plan adopted at the fancy dress balls in the same building. It would, of course, be unreasonable to expect the opera management to provide meals, but the decision to turn the people out of the building will, if it be wet to-night, raise, I should imagine, something more than a protest, while in any case it must considerably add to the discomfort of the audience.

In regard to the musical portion of the "Nibelungen" cycle scheme certainly nothing could be better. Whether we are as anxious as some people suppose us all to be, to listen to the long-winded utterances of that champion bore, Wotan the Wanderer, unabridged, may perhaps be a question. But it will, at any rate, be interesting for once to see Wagner's greatest, not to say longest, operas in all their relentless proportions, and to hear them under a conductor and with artists trained in the Wagnerian School. Moreover, almost for the first time in the history of Wagner's tetralogy in London, some intelligent attempt has been made to mount these works in a proper and artistic manner. In "Das Rheingold" on Monday, thanks to new machinery or, at any rate, to some novel mechanical devices, the young ladies who are supposed to disport themselves under the Rhine no longer moved with the jerkiness of automata, nor leaped the absurd heights of Fantoccini in the mechanical doll shows. We may still, perhaps, smile at the eccentricities of Loki (with his "Loki motive") and at the antics of three small boys in the sandbag with electric eyes which did duty for the terrible dragon in the Nibelung's cave. But, at any rate, the cast is stronger than even Bayreuth can command, and the performance under Mottl on Monday was, as a whole, infinitely better than could by any possibility be secured under the more economical conditions in force at the mountain theatre in Bavaria. Herr Van Rooy, who last year achieved such great success as Wotan at Bayreuth, now assumed the same part here. M. Van Dyck as Loge might not perhaps cause old operagoers to forget Herr Vogl, the original representative of the rôle both at Bayreuth in 1876 and in London in 1882. But Mme. Brema was fortunately available to play the part of Fricka, while Herr Breuer was a capital Mime. Best of all was the orchestra which played with the attention to detail and the delicacy which we expect at a Mottl concert, but usually expect in vain at the opera. The ridiculous steam squirt, however, should be forthwith abolished. The Teutons like these childish things, but they are out of place at Covent Garden, especially when they are so poorly done.

A gentleman in Stanhope-street, Regent's Park, has kindly sent me the Articles of Association of the College of Violinists, which, he says, will show me that it "is a genuine College, and worked in a straightforward manner." The Articles of Association of this College are, of course, filed at Somerset House, and there is no secret whatever about them. I have already stated that the affair is a company limited by shares, with the stupendously extravagant cash paid-up capital of £17 10s., while there is nothing in the Articles of Association to contradict the statement which I have more than once made, that it was founded by a violin dealer and his family, together with a newspaper manager and printer, a teacher of music, and a commercial clerk. Whether this aggregation of trades and professions is of sufficient authority to warrant the sale and dissemination of musical certificates and diplomas, with initials and other titles, I think can be left to the judgment of any man of sense.

The Articles of Association of this "College of Violinists, Limited," are, however, I find in some respects of a very unusual character. For example, Mr. George Charles Foucher, of Westbury Villas, Green-lanes, Wood Green, violin manufacturer, who practically is the founder of the affair, is appointed managing director for life, or until the company is wound up, and he is the chairman of the Board of Directors and also chairman of any extraordinary meetings of shareholders. He has the power to make all necessary contracts, and his remuneration is embodied in an (undisclosed) agreement with the company. All other directors hold their offices for three years only, or until a resolution of the company removes them. Also there is a peculiar clause that no dividend shall be declared or paid of an amount greater than that which shall be recommended by the managing director, a stipulation which I should imagine in company law is almost unique. I also find in these Articles of Association that there is an addition, which had escaped my notice, to the Board of Directors. This is in the person of Mr. Edward Hazelwood, who also resides at Westbury Villas, Green-lanes, and is described as a "Decorator." This gentleman, of course, may be an excellent judge of the whitewashing of ceilings or the painting of park railings, but whether he is an authority on the granting of diplomas in music is altogether another matter. The company, as I have already stated, had at the time I last searched the register at Somerset House, a total paid-up capital of £17 10s.

A correspondent writes me from Camden Town as follows:—

> You have done such service in musical matters that I invite your perusal of the enclosed list of successful candidates of the Musical International College, London, examinations, a list extracted from The Cambrian, the chief Swansea paper, of the 20th inst. You will observe that the principal states that he is a "Mus. Doc.," but with a modesty which becomes a great man he forgets to state his university. He may possibly have one of the same type that you so successfully showed up in the case of Messrs. F. J. Karn and Churchill Sibley.

The gentleman in question, "Mr. E. M. Lott, Mus. Doc.," holds no degree of Doctor of Music from any university in this country. Some years ago, I believe, he had the more or less valuable diploma of "Mus. Doc." (but without any sort of examination) from an affair called Trinity College, Toronto, an institution which was then disseminating degrees throughout the country. This traffic was put a stop to when the genuine heads of the universities of Great Britain protested to the Privy Council. Mr. Lott, however, is a well known and distinguished church organist, and certainly does not need these adventitious aids to distinction in his profession.

On Thursday we shall have to congratulate a charming lady, Miss Alba Fricker, of Beckenham, who, I believe, weds on her twenty-first birthday, and who has already won a reputation in the world of art, on her marriage to a wild Irishman known to his intimates as "Micky," to journalism as "Gauntlett," to Drury Lane audiences as J. M. Glover, and to those whom he has adversely criticised as—never mind what. Mr. Glover is a busy man, and his honeymoon must be short. But it has been so cleverly chosen that he will miss both "Siegfried" to-night, and the five dark hours with "Die Götterdämmerung" on Saturday.

Mr. Glover tells a good tale at his own expense. In Ireland some little time ago, as he happened to be a member of the congregation, he was asked by the priest to play a voluntary. He did so. Almost immediately afterwards the guileless priest mounted the pulpit and made an impassioned appeal for funds to repair the organ.

The Queen's-Birthday knighthood accepted by Sir Charles Hubert Parry has been noted with mixed feelings by the musical public, and, I should imagine, by the recipient himself. Indeed, it is rumoured that he more than once refused the honour, which is certainly better suited to a City Sheriff or to an organist of St. Paul's than to the son of Gambier Parry, the brother-in-law of the Lord High Steward and one of the foremost composers of England. But I assume that as chief of the Royal College of Music, pressure was put upon him, as it was upon Sir George Macfarren at the Royal Academy. Sir George (I trust I may be forgiven by the worthy man who, whenever I mention that august name, writes to me that I am wicked enough to sell my grandmother for a pat of butter) at first obstinately refused to accept the knighthood as chief of the Royal Academy of Music, on the very sensible ground that it cost £100 in fees, and the honour was not worth it. And Sir George himself never did pay that fee.

I have been shown an amusing letter addressed by the editor of a certain weekly paper to a well-known concert manager, as follows:—

> I have received the tickets for Mr. Vladimir de Pachmann's recitals, but I should prefer to have tickets for better class concerts: for those of Wagner. We have not sufficient space to notice inferior entertainments.

Unless the disposition of the "Great Chopinzee" has greatly modified of late years, that editor need not be surprised if he finds himself pursued by an infuriated pianist armed with something heavier than a tuning fork.

I recently referred in TRUTH to the Musicians' Prayer Union. I have since received a note from Mr. Livesey Carrott, hon. secretary of the affair, to say that the Union is not a development of the Incorporated Society of Musicians. The whole subject is a delicate one, and I do not care to further discuss it. If any musician, or number of musicians, labour under the impression that they are not at liberty to pray unless they pay somebody an annual subscription for the privilege, they are perfectly welcome to think so.

Mme. Calvé has recognised the mistake she made in choosing Boito's "Mefistofele" for her rentrée, and she has since appeared in her two famous parts of Carmen and Santuzza in "Cavalleria Rusticana." In these two characters she necessarily shines to infinitely greater advantage than in the colourless rôles of Margaret and Helen of Troy. As Carmen she was as uncompromising as ever; while as Santuzza she beyond question displayed a higher degree of dramatic force and finish than any other prima donna now upon the operatic stage. On Tuesday this week she was announced to play the so-called vaudeville version of Marguerite in "Faust," in which in America she astonished her audiences by enacting it quite in bourgeois fashion, dancing round the jewels in the Garden Scene just like a young and enthusiastic Gretchen of mediæval Leipsic would do. M. Jean de Reszke has still confined himself to Wagner's operas. We have also had revivals of "Tannhäuser," with Mme. Saville, one of last year's prime donne, as Elizabeth, Mme. Pacary exchanging that part for Venus, while on Friday Frau Ternina, who has already sung here at concerts and is reputed to be a great operatic prima donna, made her début as Isolde. Whether from modesty on the lady's part or economy on that of the management, the Press were not invited.

In some accounts which have been published of the visit of the Covent Garden vocalists to the Zoo, one detail has been missed. The Russian bears betrayed great excitement on the approach of M. Gillebert. That excellent artist, as everybody knows, is of healthy proportions, and it seems to have been imagined, by his operatic friends, that the Russian bears had visions of a good square meal. It was nothing of the sort. M. Gillebert is a patriotic Frenchman, and this was merely the entente cordiale. But M. Renand feeding the Polar bear with cherries must have been a sight for the gods.

The concerts of the week must again be dismissed with comparative brevity. Indeed, the concert season is pretty well over, and except as to a few desultory performances concerts will practically come to an end with the present month, the season, however, being resumed towards the end of September. The principal concert of the present week was the Jubilee performance of Mr. Ganz, at which Madame Patti promised to appear. This was on Tuesday, rather too late for notice in the present issue. Dr. Richter on Saturday tried an afternoon concert, with such encouraging results that we shall probably have more than one next season. An overture by Robert Fuchs based on the classic story of "Hero and Leander," proved to be rather uninteresting stuff, but a splendid performance was given of Tschaikowsky's "Nutcraker" Suite, in some respects the finest rendering of this popular work we have yet heard. Signor Busoni played Liszt's orchestral version of the "Wanderer" Fantasia and other pieces. M. de Pachmann at his recital at St. James's Hall was chiefly successful in Weber's Sonata in A flat, romantic music which exactly suits him, and in the inevitable selection from the pianoforte works of his countryman, Chopin. Mlle. Pancera was obliged to cut short her pianoforte recital on Friday, owing to an accident to her finger; but Miss Olitzka of the opera volunteered to sing some songs to compensate for the disappointment. Among numerous other concerts, I may mention those of Miss Macdougall, who is about to leave us for a sojourn on the Continent; Miss Ethel Sharpe, who introduced a romance for viola by Mr. Ernest Walker (played by herself and Mr. Hobday); Mlle. Colla, an Italian, who needs a little further study; Mr. Hirwen Jones; Mr. Jack Robertson; Miss Stanley Lucas, a young lady who is rapidly rising in her profession; and Mr. Aramis, who sings Greek folk-songs so well.

LETTERS ON BOOKS.

MY DEAR MR. WYNDHAM,—Sir Martin Conway supplies in "With Ski and Sledge Over Arctic Glaciers" (1) an interesting sequel to his "First Crossing of Spitsbergen." Please note the "s" in the spelling, as Sir Martin inveighs with righteous wrath against the crass ignorance of the infamous spelling Spitzbergen. "May God confound you," screamed the German grammarian against a sin of this kind. "May God confound you for your theory of irregular verbs!" Among the services Sir Martin has done to science let not his banishment for ever of this pestilent "z" "from the official publications of the Royal Geographical Society" be forgotten. Seriously, Sir Martin has rendered science a great service at much cost and risk, and with much courage and fortitude, by this exploration of the interior of Spitsbergen. Only exceptional pluck and zeal could have carried him through all the dangers and difficulties he encountered, and only exceptional scientific enthusiasm could have found exciting and made interesting to you so dismal an expedition. Even in Mr. Garwood's excellent photographs the country looks Dantesquely dreary. At the same time, I must say that Sir Martin has done me an ill service in upsetting a theory which I was required in my youth to believe on pain of scientific damnation. Glaciers, so far from excavating their beds, preserve them.

The old theory that glaciers not only polish but systematically excavate their beds is practically abandoned. Its supporters naturally considered that the larger the mass of ice the more vigorous would be its excavating action. A great arctic ice-sheet was regarded as an extraordinarily powerful excavator. We now know that moving land ice does not so operate upon its bed, but, beyond polishing the surface of the rock it covers, has mainly a conservative effect upon it.

Sir Martin lays also immense, but, no doubt, not undue scientific stress upon the distinction between the conservative effect of the forces of an ice-sheet acting on a land surface and the formative effect of the forces of ice in a glacial region. You will be more than pleased by Admiral Montagu's "A Middy's Recollections" (2), written in an ideally sailor-like style and spirit—modest, breezy, frank, and free. The Admiral, indeed, shows the highest courage of all, that of confessing a lack of courage. Having served both on land and water, he notes a noteworthy distinction between the degrees of courage needed in a sailor and in a soldier. On ship-board where you are comparatively inert and stationary you need more nerve than on land, where you are constantly on the move, and in action. When, however, I read of the Admiral's confession of being on one occasion "in abject terror," I recalled the Spanish proverb, "He can afford to go on foot who leads his horse by the hand"—so long as men know you have a horse they will not respect you the less for walking. Admiral Montagu showed sufficient courage on countless occasions in the Crimean War, in the Mutiny, in the war with China, and in above all in the chase of Chinese pirates, to afford a confession of "abject terror." Anything more madly reckless than his attempt to overhaul and board in a little boat with ten men a great junk armed with 32-pounders, and manned by a desperate crew of sixty, I have seldom read. By the way, the Admiral has the courage even to pour a whole broadside into the Admiralty—more power to him! as they say in Ireland.

To enable me to refresh my memory with more correctness of detail, I applied to the blessed Board of Admiralty to allow me the use of the official report of our proceedings in the Pearl's Naval Brigade; but this was refused—on what grounds it is difficult to imagine. Either it is the cursed system of red tape that pervades the length and breadth of that building at Whitehall, or possibly some librarian and his associates find the book-ladder too heavy to trouble with; but there live the records of the doings of the Pearl's Naval Brigade in India, possibly rotting on some musty shelf, and one who served his country—to whom reference to these books would have been the greatest service—has been denied the privilege of referring to them.

As for novels I cannot say that I have been fortunate in my fiction this week. Having read through the horrors of the first story in the collection "The Ape, the Idiot, and Other People" (3) I glanced here and there into its successors in the vain hope of finding something less gruesome and morbid. It was hardly a relief to turn to the prologue of "The Looms of Time" (4), which records the devilish ingenuity of Indians in the invention of deaths of torture. The connection, however, between the prologue and the tale is so slight as to suggest that they were not intended originally to be welded together. As for the tale, only the unquestioning credulity of boyhood could accept its improbabilities, and even a boy must doubt the successful impersonation by Carlos of the man he murdered. The prologue of "A Woman's Privilege" (5) is sufficiently relative to the story, since it records a conditional engagement made by the heroine which she uses her "woman's privilege" to break. Between her making and breaking it intervene many stirring incidents and ingenious complications, and a secret—the key of the plot—which is well kept to the last. It is enough to say that the "impersonation" in "A Woman's Privilege" is incomparably more probable and ingenious than that in "The Looms of Time." The characters, incidents, and conversations of "Sowing the Sand" (6) are life-like but hardly interesting. The young gentleman who sows the sand is so pitifully poor a creature that he did not need such a Lamia as Mrs. Eden for his destruction. As for the too fascinating cicisbeo, the Major, he is but little more of a man than Charley himself, while the rest of the personages for the most part are negligible quantities. — Believe me, my dear Mr. Wyndham, ever yours very sincerely,

DESMOND B. O'BRIEN.

(1) "With Ski and Sledge Over Arctic Glaciers." By Sir Martin Conway. Illustrated from photographs taken by E. J. Garwood. (London: J. M. Dent.)
(2) "A Middy's Recollections." 1853-1860. By Rear-Admiral the Honourable Victor Alexander Montagu. (London: Adam & Charles Black.)
(3) "The Ape, The Idiot and Other People. By W. C. Morrow. (London: Grant Richards. Price 6s.)
(4) "The Looms of Time." By Mrs. Hugh Fraser. Illustrated by Lancelot Speed. (London: Isbister & Co. Price 6s.)
(5) "A Woman's Privilege." By Marguerite Bryant. (London: A. D. Innes & Co. Price 6s.)
(6) "Sowing the Sand." By Florence Henniker. (London: Harper Brothers. Price 3s. 6d.)

GIRLS' GOSSIP.

DEAREST AMY,—Here we are in our country cottage enjoying the delights of nature—the sweet air, the larks' songs by day and the nightingales' by night, the golden glory of the buttercups in the meadows, and the snowy whiteness of the may blossom, which now covers the trees, leaving scarcely a green leaf to be seen. It is quite delightful to saunter down a country lane, with real hedgerows at either side, and reflect that we might be in the heat and dust of Regent-street, with the roar of the traffic in our ears! It is contrast that makes things enjoyable, is it not?

Beautiful Gowns, both Day and Evening; Tea Gowns, Mantles, Lingerie, and Millinery, are to be seen at Madame OLIVER HOLMES', Court Dressmaker, 61, New Bond-street, London, W.

We never had so much nightingale as we have had since we came down here. On warm nights they sing up to two o'clock in the morning, but when the weather is cold, they tuck themselves up for the night much earlier. At about eight they begin, and that is the moment chosen for the piano next door to commence. Everywhere there is a piano! In this out-of-the-world spot we had hoped to escape that awful instrument; but, alas, where can one go to be safe from the desecration of Saint Cecilia? A young man next door sings Sims Reeves' songs. All his high notes are flat and his low one's sharp. His accompaniments are played by some one with but little skill, and the false notes are tragic—for us! They do not seem to mind them next door. It is too cruel of them to begin just as the nightingales enter upon "the first fine, careless rapture," and we are all ear to listen. Last evening a girl began practising her scales, stumbling through them with a wild racket, just as the sweet "jug-jug" began. Our groans were sad to hear.

We went to Bray Church on Sunday. It was our first visit to that prettiest of villages. It is almost entirely composed of cottages, and we entered the churchyard through the quaintest and most picturesque old gateway I have ever seen. Small wonder that the Vicar of old was determined to remain vicar of so sweet a place, regardless of King and Parliament, and their politics. We had to come home by a newly-made road, all bristling with the most dreadful gravel I have ever seen, consisting chiefly of miniature boulders, in fact. There is a delightful path across the fields, which has been a right of way for a long, long time for the villagers, but a lady who has newly acquired the property has closed it against the public. There is great indignation about it, for the tired work-people have to walk about a mile and a half round when their long day's work is done. I am going to find out all about it, as I know you are interested about all such questions.

I see that in a case of right-of-way Mr. Justice Day has decided in favour of the ancient right. It was a ferry in this instance, and the case was brought to the notice of the Commons' Preservation Society by Mr. Kearley, M.P. for Devonport. The ferry is between Medmenham and Hurley.

We Londoners are making our usual arrangements for enjoying the summer season, with the assistance of the river. I see that the Argonauts' Club has devised a delightful programme for their summer dinner. It is fixed for Saturday, the 25th of this month, and the scene is to be the garden, if fine weather prevail, of an old Jacobean house belonging to one of the members at Hampton-on-Thames, the very house that was built by Nell Gwynne for her son, the first Duke of St. Albans. Should the day be wet, dinner will be served inside the house. Boating dress is to be the order of the day. It sounds lovely, does it not?

By the way, some one has at last written a book about Nelson which has attractions for readers other than old naval men. Mr. Douglas Sladen's "The Admiral" reads like a romance. The character of the great hero is delineated from his own letters and journals, till now unpublished, and the story of Lady Hamilton is told very fully. Do you know that August 1 will be the first Nelson Centenary? Englishwomen who admire valour should think out some appropriate badge for the occasion. Perhaps little lockets with miniatures, or small Victory flags.

Patriotism is not expensive in these matters. And I could point out some in which it is an actual saving, if people would only get out of the old grooves and see things as they are. We went one day last week to look at the English silks and brocades at Messrs. Warner & Sons' wholesale warehouse in Newgate-street, and were quite astonished at the great beauty of the various designs and the loveliness of the colouring. A great number of the brocades are made for upholstery purposes and they are all woven of pure silk without the smallest admixture of dress or weighting in them. This makes them extremely durable, in strong contrast with the heavily weighted silks that come to our markets from abroad. I fear that we are not very discriminating, as a nation, for many of these silks, rejected by America, are sent to the English market and sweetly accepted by us. Touching humility, is it not? But not very business-like.

I am going to try to describe to you a few of the beautiful furniture brocades we saw, all of which were manufactured either in Essex or at Spitalfields. The silk from which they are woven comes from Italy, France, and China, our climate being unfavourable to the silkworm and its mulberry trees. What a triumph of science it would be to establish in one corner of England a suitable climate for sericulture by means of electric light and high wall wherewith to ward off our enemy, the east wind.

The first thing we took to our hearts was a brocatelle in mauve, pale green, and gold. A boudoir hung with this would be good enough for the most beautiful woman in the world. This fabric has to have a little cotton in it, in order to give it the requisite stiffness. We were also much taken with a brocade in a design of pots of roses in white on a primrose ground, and the "Garvagh," also yellow and white, was lovely too, the yellow shining like gold, owing to the purity of the silk. Many of the designs were of the picturesque Louis XV. and XVI. periods, and with the waving lines and delicious curves of these the Empire patterns contrasted with much severity. Some of the prettiest designs were English, many of them copied from windows and traceries in old churches. We saw a bit of the lovely green brocade with which the House of Commons is upholstered; and we admired extremely the revived material, damasquette, like the old silk damask, the designs being large and bold. One had the pattern in gold on red of a deep, rich tone; another, gold on black, and so on. It is impossible to exaggerate the decorative effect of these damasquettes, especially for large rooms.

A great number of colours are used in some of the elaborate brocades, and we noticed that chenille is introduced into a few of them. It gives a curious softness, the more so as it is in relief. For the King of Siam an order had been executed in brocade, with a design consisting of trophies of music and gardening in at least a dozen colours on a deep, rich, red ground. We approved the King's grand taste. The fancy ground called armure in some of the brocades struck us as an agreeable variation upon the plain gros-grain. One of these was wrought in a Venetian design, with gros-grain introduced into some of the leaves. Every one of these beautiful silks is made upon the Jacquard hand-loom. It was interesting to hear that before this was invented by the Frenchman whose name it bears, the shuttles had to be thrown by boys, who stood round the weaver, each of them holding a shuttle on which was wound silk in one of the colours wanted for the brocade. How bored those boys must have been. But what a splendid technical training it was for them!

We speculated about the pretty thoughts woven into some of the designs with birds and flowers and smiling, chubby Cupids, Watteau figures in others, and, in fact, the whole material of the seventeenth century poets spread out before our eyes. There were few geometrical designs in those days, when sentiment was in full fashion, and a kind of poetry, not always of the highest sort, made a thin veneer for the commonplaces of daily life.

We were shown a piece of the wonderful blue and green and gold brocade woven for the Gaiety Theatre, the design shoaling and shifting in these tints upon a ground of the brightest pink. I am told that it is extremely effective in the theatre.

Lovely brocades for Court trains and dinner gowns were shown us. Try to fancy a meandering pattern in white on palest mauve, and resist coveting a dress-length of it if you can. Still prettier was a blue of a nemophila tone, with a little bright biscuit colour introduced. And you should have handled, as we did, a black brocade without the smallest atom of dress or weighting in it. How splendidly it will wear! Silks for waistcoats, both the masculine and feminine variety of that article, we also saw. The deep sapphire blue was the nicest, but we also admired a silver-grey and a sweet pale mauve.

GOWNS FOR ASCOT.—Messrs. REDFERN are now making a Special Show of Ascot Gowns in their new Conduit-street Salon. The Exhibition contains a number of exquisite Toilettes, to which a visit of inspection is cordially invited.—REDFERN, 26, Conduit-street, W.

FRANCES MOORE has now on view the latest Models from Paris in Hats, Bonnets, &c. Special and exclusive designs in Toques.—8, Maddox-street, Regent-street, W.

I noticed that in one of Marshall & Snelgrove's windows there were silks labelled "British Manufacture," "English Production," "Dorsetshire Production," and "English Striped Taffetas." This is a step in the right direction, is it not?

According to the Ladies' Kennel Journal the Princess of Wales is going to exhibit a white collie from the Sandringham kennels at the forthcoming Summer Show at the Botanic. Her Royal Highness has expressed her intention of being present on the first day of it, June 23. The National Cat Club Show is to be held at the same place and time.

"Clubland" is again to the fore this year with plans for the comfort and convenience of its patrons at Ascot and Henley, providing a lawn with luncheon tents, ladies' drawing-room, and every necessary accommodation on all the days of the two meetings. The management recommends the route to Ascot by Paddington and Slough, where brakes will be in readiness for "Clubland" visitors. The charges seem very moderate, some of them including railway fare and all expenses, and one great advantage about the tickets is that they are undated and can be used on any day. The same arrangement holds good for Henley. Clubland Lawn will be on the Berks side of the river this year, as last, immediately opposite the Isthmian Enclosure. Members of the leading Clubs, and officers of the Army, Navy, and Reserve Forces can avail themselves of the Clubland arrangements. It is in contemplation to extend them this season to include Goodwood and Doncaster, but that will, of course, depend on the support the management receives. Goodwood Meeting is on July 26 to 29; and Doncaster is on September 6 to 9. Should you know any one who would like to benefit by the temporary home that Clubland offers, the address is 175, New Bond-street.

The Albany Club grounds were looking lovely when we had tea there on Sunday. A good band was playing, and the breezes blowing from the river were perfumed with may blossom. Next Saturday there are to be tennis, croquet, archery, and quoits handicaps; and on the following Saturday there will be a rose fête and floral cycle parade, prizes to be given for the best decorated machine and rider. On July 2, when the Kingston, Surbiton, and Teddington Lifeboat Carnival comes off, there is to be a café chantant in the grounds of the Albany Club, and an illuminated evening fête.

Linda has become a member, as she loves the river so much, and finds that she can live en pension at the Albany, enjoying the use of skiffs, punts and dinghies, and keep her bicycle in the stables without charge. And all for three guineas a week. Sounds idyllic, does it not?

Christabel, in her last from Paris, gossips about some gowns worn by duchesses and other great ladies at a big bazaar:—

The Duchesse de Mouchy wore an olive-green foulard with a kind of white ring pattern; the bodice had a small tabbed basque at the back, the front simulating a pointed bolero over a fulling of white chiffon. Three rows of narrow white satin ribbon went round a flounce at the foot of the skirt and edged the bolero front. The capote had a white pleated chiffon crown, rather raised, and black spangled tulle all round it. Her daughter-in-law, the young Princesse de Poix wore a very pretty blouse bodice of white washing silk, beautifully embroidered with sprays of cornflowers seemingly scattered here and here. The basque, collar and cuffs were embroidered in straw colour, or rather the shade of ripe corn; the effect was charming, and the beauty of the work is that the embroidery is hand-worked in a certain make of cotton, that stands washing or cleaning. With this bodice she wore a white striped silk and satin skirt and black hat with long white feather.

Comtesse Ayméry de La Rochefoucauld, presiding at the refreshment stall, looked very well in a dark mauve or violet gauze over silk in the same shade; the bodice was tight fitting, and ornamented with a little white guipure laid on flat. The bonnet was of spangled tulle, of the same shade as the dress. Two daughters of the Marquis d'Harcourt assisted her, both very pretty girls, who were dressed alike in bluish-grey and white narrow striped gowns, the bodices trimmed square in yoke shape with a falling berthe of white lace all round; their hats were coarse white straw with black velvet bows and outspreading grey wings. I remarked also Mlle. Pauline Murat, daughter of Comte Murat, and her sister, Mme. Paul Lebaudy; the latter was in red foulard with white spots, made quite plain, except a little white fulling in the front of the bodice. She wore a black rice-straw hat and black feathers; the former was in brick-red gauze over silk of the same colour; the trimming on the front of skirt and bodice was of narrow red satin ribbon gathered on each side. A long gauze sash fell at the back, edged with this ribbon trimming. The black straw hat with feathers had the under part of the brim entirely of coarse white straw. Princesse Lucien Murat, daughter of the Duc de Rohan, was also there, in a pea-green ribbed silk with Watteau pleat at the back; her pink straw hat, rather raised in front, was lined with white straw, and had a black feather outside.

I observed here, as at several weddings and other réunions, that all the ladies, young and old, still wore the becoming frizzed or curled fringe, in front, and the hair well drawn up to the top of the head at the back, notwithstanding several English papers announcing that these styles are out of date. I assure you the owl-in-ivy-bush style, and other vagaries, are only patronised by shop girls and servants here, and not seen in the best society. Englishwomen are more individual in their style, I admit; here, they all follow the same track, and seem to have their hair done by the same hair dresser, and have the same stereotyped smile, showing teeth that have been apparently arranged by the same dentist.

The Fête des Fleurs took place on Saturday. For a wonder the weather was fine. As to dresses I can tell you nothing, they were so hidden with flowers. One four-in-hand had the spokes of the wheels bound with variegated flowers and garlands hanging in festoons.

To-day begins the "Grande Semaine," as they call it, and there will be lots to mention in my next.

Richard was attracted to the Aquarium the other day to see the Art Metal Exhibition, which has been organised by a Council with the Duke of Westminster as President and Mr. J. Starkie Gardner as Honorary Secretary. It has the unusual charm of novelty, for, strange to say, in these days, when there are exhibitions for everybody and everything, this is actually the first that has been held in London in connection with the ancient craft of metal working. There is a large and representative industrial section which must make certain metal workers—chiefly at Birmingham—regret that they stood aloof from the exhibition. But more interesting, of course, than the modern exhibits for ecclesiastical, domestic, and other purposes, is the unique loan collection of ancient metal work, armour, and weapons, to which the Queen has liberally contributed. A chalice of Thomas à Becket, swords of Edward III., Sir Philip Sydney, and John Hampden, a flint-lock musket that belonged to James I., a helmet of Henry VII., and the richly-gilt and damascened suits of armour of Henry Prince of Wales and the Earl of Essex are only a few among a multitude of objects of historic interest and importance. Some of the pieces of ancient armour and weapons are exquisite specimens of handicraft, elaborately inlaid with precious metals. There were, you see, dandyish warriors in those days, as in these.

You may like to know of a good way of dressing trout for a cold collation. The pink forcemeat is effective:—

Procure two pink trout, and some sole bones to make stock to stew the trout in. These can easily be got from the fishmonger. Bone the two trout, keeping the skin and the head of one of them entire. Put the bones as well as the sole bones on to stew for three hours with sufficient water to cover them, adding a blade of mace, 6 peppercorns, a bouquet of herbs, a carrot, and an onion. Pound half a gill of lobster spawn with a piece of butter and rub Stooping.—A remedy should be immediately sought for a young lady inclined to round shoulders and a contracted chest. Consult Mesdames Sykes, Josephine, & Co., The Celebrated Anatomical Corsetières, 280, Regent-street, Oxford-circus, London.

"Madge's advice—The "most up-to-date shop" for original Specialities in Shirts, Veils, Gloves, &c., is Lee, 100, Wigmore-st.

it through a hair sieve. Scrape the flesh of the smaller of the two trout, pound it to a pulp, add 2 oz. of butter and 2 oz. of panada, which is made by boiling some bread crumbs in good stock until it is a stiff paste, add 1 egg and 3 yolks. Rub the forcemeat through the hair sieve that was used for the spawn, and work it in a basin, adding the spawn. Now season the inside of the trout and cover it with part of the forcemeat, sprinkle it with chopped parsley, capers, and truffles. Fold the fish over and sew it together. Tie the trout in a wetted and buttered cloth, fasten the side securely with pins, braise it very slowly for two hours in the strained fish broth, then remove it to cool in the liquor. Drain the fish, wipe it in a clean, soft cloth to absorb the moisture, draw out the string and take off the skin. Now spread the remainder of the forcemeat on the side of the fish, smooth it with a palette knife dipped in hot water, and decorate the surface in a nice design with diamond, crescent, or star-shaped pieces of truffle. Cover the fish with thin slices of fat bacon, then with a piece of buttered paper. Put the fish on a baking tin with a little of the fish stock and bake it in a cool oven long enough to set the forcemeat. When the trout is cold, pour a little dissolved aspic jelly over it, and arrange it on a dish on a thick croûte of fried bread that is spread with green butter. Garnish the dish with a border of croûtons of aspic and an outer border of chopped aspic jelly.

"Guss Torte" hails from Germany. You will find it an attractive luncheon sweet:—

Pick a punnet of ripe strawberries into a stewpan, sprinkle them with 6 oz. of pounded sugar, and stand the stewpan on the side of the stove, giving it an occasional shake, until the fruit is quite hot, but not broken, then turn it into a basin to cool. Line a French-tart tin with good short paste, pinch up the edges, and put the prepared strawberries in the bottom. Break 2 eggs into a basin, add 2 oz. of blanched and pounded almonds, 2 oz. of castor sugar, a pinch of cinnamon and half a teacupful of sour cream. Whisk the mixture until it is quite light, pour it upon the fruit, and bake the tart for an hour in a moderate oven, when it should be a delicate brown colour.

Ever, dear, your loving cousin, MADGE.

CIGARES DE JOY
(JOY'S CIGARETTES)
Immediately Relieve
ASTHMA, WHEEZING, CHRONIC BRONCHITIS
Chemists & Stores, box of 35, 2/6, or Post Free from WILCOX & Co., 83, Mortimer Street, London, W.
TRIAL SAMPLE FREE.

WHY DRINK INFERIOR TEA?
UNITED KINGDOM TEA COMPANY'S TEAS
DIRECT FROM THE GROWERS.
1/-, 1/3, 1/4, 1/6, 1/7, 1/9, & 2/- per lb., DELIVERED CARRIAGE PAID.
Write for Samples, sent free, taste them, and judge for yourselves. Amazing superiority in Quality! Great Economy in prices.
Offices: 21, MINCING LANE, LONDON, E.C.

WORKMEN'S COMPENSATION ACT.
Liability under this Act is underwritten by the
RAILWAY PASSENGERS ASSURANCE CO.,
Established 1849. Capital £1,000,000.
ACCIDENT ASSURANCE. FIDELITY GUARANTEE.
64, CORNHILL, LONDON. A. VIAN, Secretary.

"TRUTH"
CAN BE OBTAINED AT THE GALIGNANI LIBRARY,
224, RUE DE RIVOLI, PARIS.

GIVEN AWAY with every 6d. & 1/- Bottle of
John Bond's Crystal Palace Marking Ink
Awarded. Forty-four Gold Medals, Diplomas and Royal Appointments.
GOLD MEDAL
A voucher entitling purchasers to their Name or Monogram Rubber Stamp for marking linen or stamping paper. The name is elegantly mounted on a Nickel Silver Pen and Pencil Case, with enlarged 1s. size.
Works: 75, Southgate-road, London, N.

HAMPTON & SONS, Ltd., pay Carriage to any Railway Station in the United Kingdom on Purchases over 20s.
HAMPTON & SONS (LTD) GALLERIES
For the Best Values for furnishing Houses throughout for £250, £500, £750, £1,000, £1,500, and £2,000 respectively, see the Illustrated Estimates in Hampton & Sons' Catalogue, sent free.
NOW exhibit a Unique Display of all the Latest and Most Tasteful Productions in Decorations, Furniture, Upholstery, Carpets, Furnishing Fabrics, Blinds, Linens, Lace Curtains, China & Glass, Ironmongery, &c.
Together with the most extensive range of Genuine Antique Furniture
To be seen in London. All marked in plain figures at the MOST COMPETITIVE LONDON PRICES. A Visit of Inspection always appreciated.
Hampton & Sons will prepare, free of charge, Suggestive Schemes and Competitive Estimates for the Decorating and Furnishing of an entire house or a single room in any of the Traditional Styles or in the most tasteful modern manner. See Illustrated Catalogue, sent free.

PALL MALL EAST, TRAFALGAR-SQ., S.W.
CABINET FACTORIES AND GENERAL WORKS: BELVEDERE RD., S.E.
Queen Anne Easy Chair, Upholstered in best manner, all Horse Hair and covered in Moroccо Leather, £7 15s.; in Tapestry, from 70s

A Feature of the Metropolis. SPIERS & POND'S
CRITERION RESTAURANT, Piccadilly Circus, London, W.
EAST ROOM. Finest Cuisine, unsurpassed by the most renowned Parisian Restaurants. Luncheons, Dinners, and Suppers, à la carte and prix fixe. Viennese Band.
GRAND HALL. Musical Dinner 3/6 per head. Accompanied by the Imperial Austrian Band.
WEST ROOM. Academy Luncheon 2/6 Diner Parisien 5/-, during both of which the renowned Mandolin Quartette performs.
BUFFET & GRILL ROOM. Quick service à la carte and moderate prices. Joints in each room fresh from the Spit every half-hour.
AMERICAN BAR. Service of special American Dishes, Grills, &c.
Splendid Suites of Rooms for Military and other Dinners.

THE CELEBRATED

GR WHISKEY

Distillers' Guarantee of Purity and Age.

SEVEN YEARS OLD

Price 3/6 per Bottle.

In Cases of 2 Galls. (carriage paid), 42/-

WHOLESALE ONLY:

The Dublin Distillers' Co., Ltd.

Geo. Roe & Co. (Dublin).

Established 1757.

If any difficulty is experienced in obtaining this Whiskey from your WINE MERCHANT or GROCER, please write direct to the Distillery for the name and address of the nearest Trader selling same. On receipt of application, with 3d. in stamps to cover cost of postage, a free sample will be forwarded.

FOR INFANTS AND INVALIDS

MELLIN'S FOOD

When prepared is similar to Breast Milk.

SAMPLES POST FREE FROM

MELLIN'S FOOD WORKS, PECKHAM, S.E.

To

LADY CYCLISTS.

A

"PIRLE" COSTUME

Always Looks Fresh.

AS IT IS

unharmed by dirt or rain,
it does not mark or shrink,
and when dried and brushed
LOOKS AS GOOD AS NEW.

FROM LEADING DRAPERS.
particulars from—
. RIPLEY & SON'S
LONDON OFFICE:
00c, QUEEN VICTORIA STREET.

INDISPENSABLE
For Outdoor Wear.

J.W. BENSON, LTD.

25, Old Bond Street, W.

LATEST NOVELTY,
TURQUOISE, PAVÉ JEWELLERY.
initiated by
J. W. BENSON, Ltd.

Pearls and Turquoise, £2 11s.

"It is quaint, pretty, and extremely inexpensive."—Queen, May 7th, 1898.

Turquoise and Pearls, £2 18s.

Turquoise and Pearls, £1 11s.

Catalogues Free.
Selections on Approval.

Steam Factory, 62 & 64, LUDGATE HILL, & 28, ROYAL EXCHANGE, E.C.

MADE BY POPE
MANUFACTURING Co
HARTFORD,
Conn., U.S.A.
IN BOTH
CHAIN
AND CHAINLESS
MODELS.

MARKT & CO.,
25 & 26, Shoe-lane, E.C.
West End Depot:
21, Baker-street.

CHATTO & WINDUS'S NEW BOOKS.

THE JACOBITE, the New Novel by HARRY LINDSAY, Author of "Methodist Idylls," is now ready. Crown 8vo, cloth, 6s.

Bret Harte's New Book, SOME LATER VERSES, is now ready. Crown 8vo, cloth gilt, 5s.

"In this delightful volume the author shows no falling off from his first self. He is still master of the two moods of humour, the pure comedy and the bouffe, in which he first showed his extraordinary range."—Daily News.

MERIEL: A Love Story. By AMELIE RIVES, Author of "Barbara Dering." Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d.

"A remarkably clever book."—Glasgow Herald.

"Rarely, indeed, in English fiction do we come across a novel in this genre marked by the tenderness, the delicacy, and the passion that distinguish Amelie Rives's new work. 'Meriel' has something of the glowing warmth and passionate abandon of Mrs. Browning's love-poems."—Echo.

THE HERITAGE OF EVE. By H. H. SPETTIGUE. Crown 8vo, cloth, 6s.

"As a novel the idea is splendidly wrought out by the author. The author has a good grip of his subject and can write in a fine cultured strain."—Perthshire Advertiser.

ON THE BRINK OF A CHASM. By L. T. MEADE, Author of "The Voice of the Charmer." Crown 8vo, cloth, 6s.

SIX-SHILLING NOVELS.

A WOMAN TEMPTED HIM. By WILLIAM WESTALL, Author of "With the Red Eagle," &c. SECOND EDITION.

"The book is in every respect a delightful one."—Daily Telegraph.

WAS SHE JUSTIFIED? By FRANK BARRETT, Author of "Folly Morrison," &c.

"The story is a capital one from beginning to end."—World.

MISS BALMAINE'S PAST. By B. M. CROKER, Author of "Beyond the Pale," &c.

"A very enchanting story. . . . a very delightful novel."—Vanity Fair.

FORTUNE'S GATE. By ALAN ST. AUBYN, Author of "A Fellow of Trinity."

"One of the wholesomest and most delightful excursions into fiction."—Morning Leader.

A WOMAN WORTH WINNING. By G. MANVILLE FENN, Author of "The White Virgin."

"The book should not fail to prove enjoyable to every one who takes it up."—Scotsman.

COLONEL THORNDYKE'S SECRET. By G. A. HENTY, Author of "Rujub the Juggler."

"A rattling good story."—Daily Mail.

THREE-AND-SIXPENNY NOVELS

A RACE FOR MILLIONS. By D. CHRISTIE MURRAY.

A MODERN DICK WHITTINGTON. By JAMES PAYN.

A FOUNTAIN SEALED. By WALTER BESANT.

NULMA. By Mrs. CAMPBELL PRAED.

LOVICE. By Mrs. HUNGERFORD.

EVERY INCH A SOLDIER. By M. J. COLQUHOUN.

BY PROXY. By JAMES PAYN. Cheap Edition. Medium 8vo, 6d.; cloth, 1s.

THE WOMAN IN THE DARK. By F. W. ROBINSON. Post 8vo, picture boards, 2s.

FOR MR. GLADSTONE'S POLITICAL LIFE, SEE

A HISTORY OF OUR OWN TIMES, from the Accession of Queen Victoria to the General Election of 1880. By JUSTIN MCCARTHY, M.P. Library Edition, Four Vols., demy 8vo, cloth, 12s. each. Popular Edition, Four Vols., crown 8vo, cloth, 6s. each. Jubilee Edition, Two Vols., crown 8vo, 7s. 6d. each.

A HISTORY OF OUR OWN TIMES, from 1880 to the Diamond Jubilee. By JUSTIN MCCARTHY, M.P. Demy 8vo, cloth extra, 12s.

A SHORT HISTORY OF OUR OWN TIMES. Crown 8vo, cloth, 6s. Popular Edition, post 8vo, cloth, 2s. 6d.

London: CHATTO & WINDUS, 111, St. Martin's-lane, W.C.

MESSRS. METHUEN'S LIST.

A HISTORY OF THE ART OF WAR. The Middle Ages, from the Fourth to the Fourteenth Century. By C. W. OMAN, M.A., Fellow of All Souls, Oxford. Demy 8vo, Illustrated, 21s.

Mr. Oman is engaged on a History of the Art of War, of which the above, though covering the middle period from the Fall of the Roman Empire to the general use of gunpowder in Western Europe, is the first instalment. The first battle dealt with will be Adrianople (378) and the last Navaretta (1367).

The book deals mainly with tactics and strategy, fortifications, and siegecraft, but subsidiary chapters will give some account of the development of arms and armour, and of the forms of military organisation known to the Middle Ages.

THE EASTERN QUESTION IN THE EIGHTEENTH CENTURY. By ALBERT SOREL, of the French Academy. Translated by F. C. BRAMWELL, M.A., with an Introduction by R. C. L. FLETCHER, Fellow of Magdalen College, Oxford. With a Map. Crown 8vo, 3s. 6d.

This book is a study of the political conditions which led up to and governed the first partition of Poland, and the Russo-Turkish war of 1768-1774. It is probably the best existing examination of Eastern European politics in the eighteenth century, and is by one of the ablest of living historians.

WITH THE MOUNTED INFANTRY AND MASHONALAND FIELD FORCE, 1896. By Lieut.-Colonel ALDERSON. With Illustrations and Plans. Demy 8vo, 10s. 6d.

"A clear, vigorous, and soldier-like narrative."—Scotsman.

"One of the most readable bits of military chronicling."—Globe.

THE GOLFING PILGRIM. By HORACE G. HUTCHINSON. Crown 8vo, 6s.

"Always racy and readable."—Scotsman.

"An entertaining volume."—Daily News.

"Full of useful information, with plenty of good stories."—Truth.

"Without 'The Golfing Pilgrim' the golfer's library will be incomplete."—Pall Mall Gazette.

"We can recommend few books as better company."—St. James's Gazette.

THE LIBRARY OF DEVOTION.
Pott 8vo, 2s.; leather, 3s.

THE IMITATION OF CHRIST. A Revised Translation with an introduction by C. BIGG, D.D., late Student of Christ Church.

Dr. Bigg has made a practically new translation of this book, which the reader will have, almost for the first time, exactly in the shape in which it left the hands of the author.

NEW NOVELS.

THE STANDARD BEARER. By S. R. CROCKETT Author "Lochinvar," "The Raiders," &c. Crown 8vo, 6s.

"A delightful tale."—Speaker.

"Mr. Crockett at his best."—Literature.

THE CROOK OF THE BOUGH. By MENIE MURIEL DOWIE. Crown 8vo, 6s.

"We have not recently read any novel which yields such complete literary pleasure. Miss Dowie knows the Near East and writes of it with sympathy and imagination. . . One of the best stories that the present publishing season has produced."—Westminster Gazette.

ACROSS THE SALT SEAS. By J. BLOUNDELLE-BURTON. Crown 8vo, 6s.

"A thoroughly excellent story."—Daily Mail.

"The very essence of the true romantic spirit."—Truth.

"An ingenious and exciting story."—Manchester Guardian.

"Will have a long life as a book of romantic adventure."—Westminster Gazette.

"Once you begin, you read every page."—Pall Mall Gazette.

"A fine, exciting, and admirably told story."—St. James's Budget.

BETWEEN SUN AND SAND. By W. C. SCULLY, Author of "The White Hecatomb." Crown 8vo, 6s.

"A really interesting and romantic book."—Scotsman.

"The reader will find the interest of absolute novelty."—Graphic.

"Strong, simple, direct."—Daily Chronicle.

"One of the most enthralling tales we have read in recent times."—World.

SONS OF ADVERSITY. By L. COPE CORNFORD, Author of "Captain Jacobus." Crown 8vo, 6s.

"Teems with interesting incidents."—Glasgow Herald.

"A very stirring and spirited sketch of the spacious times of Queen Elizabeth."—Pall Mall Gazette.

MISS ERIN. By M. E. FRANCIS. Crown 8vo, 6s.

"A clever and charming story."—Scotsman.

"Told with much force and sympathy."—Westminster Gazette.

"Perfectly delightful in its mingled humour, pathos, and human sympathy."—Daily Mail.

VAUSSORE. By FRANCIS BRUNE. Crown 8vo, 6s.

"A subtle, complete achievement."—Pall Mall Gazette.

"A book of curious interest."—Sussex Daily Mail.

THE PHILANTHROPIST. By LUCY MAYNARD. Crown 8vo, 6s.

"It contains many graphic sketches of the private life of a charitable institution."—Glasgow Herald.

"A powerful idea, ably worked out."—Pall Mall Gazette.

CROSS TRAILS. By VICTOR WAITE. Crown 8vo, 6s.

"Every page is enthralling."—Academy.

"Full of strength and reality."—Athenæum.

"There is real power in this book, as well as an abundance of exciting incident."—Speaker.

BIJLI THE DANCER. By JAMES BLYTHE PATTON. Illustrated. Crown 8vo, 6s.

"The story is powerful and fascinating."—Pall Mall Gazette.

"A true and entrancing book."—Country Life Illustrated.

"A clever study of life in India."—Yorkshire Post.

Messrs. Methuen's Catalogue and New Book Gazette sent to any address.

METHUEN & CO., 36, Essex-street, Strand, W.C.

SMITH, ELDER, & CO.'S LIST.

MRS. HUMPHRY WARD'S NEW NOVEL.

ON JUNE 10TH WILL BE PUBLISHED, CROWN 8VO, 6S.

HELBECK OF BANNISDALE.

By MRS. HUMPHRY WARD.

Author of "Robert Elsmere," "Marcella," "Sir George Tressady," &c.

PUBLISHED TO-DAY. With Frontispiece. Demy 8vo, 16s.

COLLECTIONS AND RECOLLECTIONS.

By "ONE WHO HAS KEPT A DIARY."

PUBLISHED TO-DAY. Small crown 8vo, 5s.

SONGS OF ACTION.

By CONAN DOYLE.

London: SMITH, ELDER, & CO., 15, Waterloo-place.

NINE NEW SIX-SHILLING NOVELS.

THE LAKE OF WINE. By BERNARD CAPES.

THE DULL MISS ARCHINARD. By ANNE DOUGLAS SEDGWICK.

EZEKIEL'S SIN. By J. H. PEARCE.

THE LONDONERS. By ROBERT HICHENS.

DREAMERS OF THE GHETTO. By I. ZANGWILL.

A CHAMPION IN THE SEVENTIES. By EDITH BARNETT.

THE MINISTER OF STATE. By J. A. STEUART.

THE OPEN BOAT. By STEPHEN CRANE.

THE SCOURGE-STICK. By Mrs. CAMPBELL PRAED.

TWO NEW THREE-AND-SIXPENNY NOVELS.

HER LADYSHIP'S ELEPHANT. By D. D. WELLS.

THE OLD ADAM AND THE NEW EVE. By RUDOLF GOLM.

London: WM. HEINEMANN, 21, Bedford-street, W.C.

MR. T. FISHER UNWIN'S LIST.

THE FIRST CROSSING OF NORTHERN TIBET.

THROUGH UNKNOWN TIBET.

By Captain M. S. WELLBY, 18th Hussars.

With Photogravure Frontispiece Portrait, and over 60 Full-page and smaller Illustrations from Photographs, and including 12 Drawings by A. D. McCormick. With Maps and Appendices of the Flora, &c. Demy 8vo, cloth gilt, 21s.

The Times says: "Captain Wellby has written a modest and an entertaining account of a very remarkable journey."

The Daily News says it is "one of the most striking feats in modern exploration."

The Pall Mall Gazette: "For indomitable perseverance, bull-dog pluck, and resolute endurance, is very bad to beat. . . . It remains to be said that the maps are well produced, and that the illustrations, most of them from unique photographs, are excellent."

NOW READY.

MEMORIALS OF AN EIGHTEENTH CENTURY PAINTER (JAMES NORTHCOTE). By STEPHEN GWYNN. Fully Illustrated with Photogravures, &c. Demy 8vo, cloth gilt, 12s. (Uniform with "The Courtships of Queen Elizabeth.")

NEW VOLUME OF "THE BUILDERS OF GREATER BRITAIN."

JOHN AND SEBASTIAN CABOT: The Discovery of North America. By C. RAYMOND BEAZLEY. Edited by H. F. WILSON. Frontispiece Portrait and Map. Cloth, 5s.

"Is of special value as furnishing, in brief, the results of all the previous literature on the subject."—Globe.

NEW VOLUME OF "THE MASTERS OF MEDICINE" SERIES.

SIR WILLIAM STOKES: His Life and Work (1804-1878). By his Son, WILLIAM STOKES, Surgeon-in-Ordinary to the Queen in Ireland. With 2 Photogravures. Cloth, 3s. 6d.

"The book before us is excellent. . Will be read far beyond the bounds of the profession. . . This fascinating book."—Daily Chronicle.

NEW NOVELS.

BY LOUIS BECKE AND WALTER JEFFERY.

THE MUTINEER: A Romance of Pitcairn Island. By LOUIS BECKE and WALTER JEFFERY, Joint Authors of "A First Fleet Family," &c. Unwin's Green Cloth Library, 6s.

BY THE AUTHOR OF "THE PEOPLE OF CLOPTON."

THE WHITE-HEADED BOY: A Novel. By GEORGE BARTRAM. Unwin's Green Cloth Library, 6s.

BY LOUIS BECKE.

BY REEF AND PALM AND HIS NATIVE LIFE. By LOUIS BECKE, Author of "Wild Life in Southern Seas," &c. New Edition. Cloth, 2s. 6d.

Mr. Unwin has just published a New Novel by Mr. George Moore, entitled "EVELYN INNES," price 6s.

London: T. FISHER UNWIN, Paternoster-square, E.C.

NEW BOOKS.

Square crown 8vo, cloth, Illustrated, price 6s.

A MIDDY'S RECOLLECTIONS,

1853 to 1860. By Rear-Admiral the Hon. VICTOR A. MONTAGU.

"A most readable volume."—Daily Telegraph.

"A lively and interesting picture of the Navy as it impressed itself on the memory of a clever youngster during a time of great excitement. As such the book ought to be read and, we may confidently say, will be read."—Athenæum.

"The book is full of good things from beginning to end."—The Army and Navy Gazette.

"They are written in a fine, racy, unconventional style, and the author in places, especially when he writes of the fights he has gone through, shows considerable descriptive power."—Aberdeen Free Press.

"A most delightful volume. . . . Many delightful records of experience in the Naval Service have recently appeared, and for genuine interest and frank and easy style, I am disposed to reckon Admiral Montagu's volume among the best."—Navy and Army Illustrated.

"It has all the breezy qualities of a sailor's yarn. . . . It will interest all who are fond of exciting incident, quite apart from its personal interest."—The Outlook.

Demy 8vo, cloth, price 12s. 6d.

ARISTOCRACY AND EVOLUTION.

By W. H. MALLOCK.

"With the main idea of this work, which is quite the most important that Mr. Mallock has yet produced, we do not think there can be any dispute, though most of the active sociologists in England either ignore that idea or are openly hostile to it."—Spectator.

Crown 8vo, cloth, price 5s.

HIS GRACE O' THE GUNNE.

By I. HOOPER.

"It is a very good story, with some striking episodes admirably presented." The Chronicle.

In 1 vol., extra crown 8vo, cloth, gilt top, price 7s. 6d.

THE STORY OF GLADSTONE'S LIFE.

By JUSTIN MCCARTHY, M.P. Containing 45 Illustrations, representing Mr. Gladstone at different periods.

NEW EDITION, with several new Chapters. [Ready on Friday.

In crown 8vo, 864 pages, price 3s. 6d. net.

WHO'S WHO, 1898.

"This is undoubtedly the handiest biographical dictionary and compendium of information, referring to prominent persons and their doings, in existence."—Nature.

A. & C. BLACK, Soho-square, London.

MESSRS. HUTCHINSON & CO.'S NEW BOOKS.

THIS DAY.
By DOUGLAS SLADEN.

THE ADMIRAL. A Romance of Nelson in the Year of the Nile. In handsome cover, 6s.

The first large Edition being exhausted, a SECOND EDITION is NOW READY.

AN IMPORTANT WORK. By the Late SIR RICHARD BURTON.

THE JEW, THE GYPSY, and EL-ISLAM. Edited with an Introduction and Brief Notes by W. H. WILKINS. In large demy 8vo, buckram gilt, and gilt top, with Photogravure Portrait of the Author from the picture by the late Lord Leighton, 21s. net.

"Readers will warmly welcome this fresh Burton; instinct with that vigour and vehemence of personality that marked this strong, self-reliant, unmanageable man. El-Islam is a brilliant and most striking version of the evolution of religion."—Pall Mall Gazette.

NEW NOVEL BY RITA.

ADRIENNE. A Romance of French Life. In cloth gilt, 6s.

FIRST REVIEW.

"The book is written with an accomplished art. The work is happy in combining instruction with amusement, and it deserves to be widely read."—Scotsman.

NEW NOVEL BY FRANKFORT MOORE.

THE MILLIONAIRES. With Illustrations by Maurice Grieffenhagen. In cloth gilt, 6s.

"Unbrokenly brilliant. Lord Ballyseedy is delightful."—Punch.

"Mr. Frankfort Moore has drawn another clever and convincing picture of Society with all his accustomed wit. 'The Millionaires' is a powerful and brilliant novel. The author has the distinction of never having drawn a dull character; the dialogue is as sparkling as ever; and the theme is original and thoughtful enough to place the book in the same category as 'I Forbid the Banns' and 'One Fair Daughter.'"—Daily Telegraph.

NEW NOVEL by FLORENCE MARRYAT.

AN ANGEL OF PITY. In cloth gilt, 6s.

"Extremely interesting throughout. There can be no hesitation in proclaiming 'An Angel of Pity' to be an attractive book."—Manchester Courier.

NEW NOVEL BY LEADER SCOTT.

THE RENUNCIATION OF HELEN. In cloth gilt, 6s.

"Mr. Scott has written a most interesting, and at the same time a thoroughly healthy novel. He has insight, and the treatment betrays a vein of originality. For these merits we bespeak an audience for his book."—Daily Free Press.

NEW NOVEL BY S. DARLING BARKER.

MARS. In cloth gilt, 6s.

"The opening chapters of this well-written story convey no idea of the intensely interesting tale that is unfolded as the skilful author proceeds with her tale. We have no doubt the book will become one of the most popular of the season."—Western Morning News.

"There is no doubt as to its merit. 'Mars' is a fascinating study from first to last."—Dundee Advertiser.

"The tale is undeniably most diverting, with its wealth of action and its abundance of crisp, telling dialogue."—N. B. Daily Mail.

London: HUTCHINSON & CO., Paternoster-row.

ON THE STŒCHIOLOGICAL CURE OF

CONSUMPTION,

ASTHMA, BRONCHITIS, INFLUENZA, AND ALL THROAT AND LUNG COMPLAINTS.

By JOHN FRANCIS CHURCHILL, M.D.

One Shilling, Post Free.

T. BURLEIGH, LATE DAVID STOTT, 370, OXFORD STREET.

HURST & BLACKETT'S NEW BOOKS.

NEW WORK BY MR. W. A. PICKERING, C.M.G.

Now Ready, in 1 vol., demy 8vo, extra cloth, with 25 Illustrations from Photographs and Sketches by the Author, price 16s.

PIONEERING IN FORMOSA:

Recollections of Adventures among Mandarins, Wreckers, and Head-Hunting Savages.

By W. A. PICKERING, C.M.G.,
Late Protector of Chinese in the Straits Settlements.

With an Appendix on British Policy and Interests in China and the Far East.

NEW WORK BY J. H. E. SECRETAN.

Now Ready, in 1 vol., large crown 8vo, with 24 Illustrations, price 6s.

TO KLONDYKE AND BACK:

A Journey down the Yukon from its Source to its Mouth.

By J. H. E. SECRETAN, C.E., of Ottawa. With Hints to Intending Prospectors.

"Mr. Secretan has produced the most entertaining of the books devoted to a description of the Yukon District."—Globe.

"Mr. Secretan's photographic illustrations help one to realise the nature of the inhospitable region he so amusingly describes."—Daily Mail.

NEW WORK BY DR. PARKER.

Now Ready, at all Booksellers and Libraries, in 1 vol., crown 8vo, price 3s. 6d.

CHRISTIAN PROFILES

IN A PAGAN MIRROR.

By JOSEPH PARKER, D.D., Minister of the City Temple, London.

An enlightened Pagan lady comes to England to acquaint herself with the beliefs, the habits, and the customs of Christians. She has long been asking herself such questions as "Who are the Christians? What do they believe? What life do they lead? How do they conduct themselves towards each other?" Having made enquiry and received impressions she reports to a friend in India.

HURST & BLACKETT, Ltd., 13, Great Marlborough-street.

BERNARD CAPES'S NEW BOOK.

NOW READY.

THE ADVENTURES OF THE COMTE DE LA MUETTE DURING THE REIGN OF TERROR.

BY

BERNARD CAPES,

Author of "The Mill of Silence," "The Lake of Wine," &c. Crown 8vo, 6s.

WILLIAM BLACKWOOD & SONS, Edinburgh and London.

MUDIE'S SELECT LIBRARY.

For the CIRCULATION and SALE of all the BEST

ENGLISH, FRENCH, GERMAN, ITALIAN, RUSSIAN, & SPANISH BOOKS.

TOWN SUBSCRIPTIONS from ONE GUINEA per annum.

LONDON BOOK SOCIETY (for weekly exchange of Books at the Houses of Subscribers) from TWO GUINEAS per annum.

COUNTRY SUBSCRIPTIONS from TWO GUINEAS per annum.

N.B.—Two or Three Friends may UNITE IN ONE SUBSCRIPTION, and thus lessen the Cost of Carriage.

SURPLUS LIBRARY BOOKS NOW OFFERED AT GREATLY REDUCED PRICES.

A NEW CLEARANCE LIST (100 PAGES) SENT GRATIS AND POST FREE TO ANY ADDRESS.

The List contains Popular Works in Travel, Sport, History, Biography, Science, and Fiction. Also New and Surplus Copies of French, German, Italian, and Spanish Books.

MUDIE'S SELECT LIBRARY, LIMITED,

30—34, NEW OXFORD ST.; 241, BROMPTON ROAD, S.W.; 48, QUEEN VICTORIA ST., E.C. LONDON; AND AT BARTON ARCADE, MANCHESTER.

NEW NOVEL BY CHAS. J. H. HALCOMBE.

THE LOVE OF A FORMER LIFE

By the Author of "The Mystic Flowery Land," &c.
Cloth, 6s.

A TALE OF SPANISH AMERICA.

WITH BOUGHT SWORDS.

By HARRY FOWLER.
Cloth, 3s. 6d.

"The tale is one of thrilling adventure with never a dull page."—Court Circular.

"Told in the best manner of 'thrilling' fiction."—Morning Leader.

"A rousing story. It is crowded with incident, and the author displays considerable ingenuity in the construction of the situations."—Star.

London: JOHN LONG, 6, Chandos-street, Strand.

Ready To-day at all Libraries and Booksellers'.

TALKS WITH MR. GLADSTONE.

By the Hon. L. A. TOLLEMACHE,
Author of "Benjamin Jowett," "Safe Studies," &c.
WITH PORTRAIT OF MR. GLADSTONE.
Large Crown 8vo, 6s.

Daily Chronicle.—"Reams have been written about Mr. Gladstone within the last few weeks, but no sketch of him can approach in vividness and veracity such records as Mr. Tollemache preserves to us of his casual conversations upon everything under the sun."

A MINGLED YARN.

The Autobiography of Edward Spencer Mott (Nathaniel Gubbins), formerly Lieutenant in the 19th Regiment, and sometime Actor, Sportsman, and Journalist. Large Crown 8vo, 12s. 6d.

Truth.—"It is most interesting reading, and gives you glimpses of many strange by-ways of life, and of all sorts and conditions of men."
St. James Gazette.—"Uncommonly good reading."

London: EDWARD ARNOLD, 37, Bedford-street.

THE FORTNIGHTLY REVIEW.

Edited by W. L. COURTNEY.
JUNE.

CUBA AND HER STRUGGLE FOR FREEDOM. By Major-Gen. Fitzhugh Lee (late Consul-Gen. of the U.S. to Havana).
WAGNER'S "RING" AND ITS PHILOSOPHY. By Ernest Newman.
FRIEDRICH NIETZSCHE AND RICHARD WAGNER. By Beatrice Marshall.
OUR NAVY AGAINST A COALITION. By H. W. WILSON.
LORD ROSEBERY AND HIS FOLLOWERS:—
1. The Present State of the Liberal Party.
2. The Leaderless Liberals and Lord Rosebery. By W. L. Stobart.
3. Politics in Scotland. By Academicus.
ALPHONSE DAUDET. By Hannah Lynch.
THE MISGOVERNMENT OF ITALY. By Ouida.
CONTRADICTIONS OF MODERN FRANCE. By Baron Pierre de Coubertin.
THE PARIS SALONS. By H. Heathcote Statham.
MR. GLADSTONE:—
1. By Canon Malcolm MacColl.
2. By Sir Walter G. F. Phillimore, Bart., D.C.L.
LORD SALISBURY AND THE FAR EAST.

CHAPMAN & HALL, Limited, London.

JUST ISSUED.

THE TEMPLE (London), containing Twelve Artist's Proof Etchings by PERCY THOMAS, R.P.E., and Introductory Notes, &c., by the Master of the Temple (Rev. CANON AINGER).—FROST & REED, 47, Queen's-road, and 8, Clare-street, Bristol; or all Booksellers and Fine Art Dealers.

Post free, 1s. 1d.

EXHAUSTION AND PREMATURE DECLINE IN MAN. A treatise on the restorative effects of Electrolysis.
HENRY RENSHAW, 356, Strand, London.

STERILITY IN WOMEN: Its Causes and Curative Treatment. An Illustrated Treatise based on the special practice and observation of the last 15 years. Price 3s. 6d.; post free, 3s. 8d.
London: HENRY RENSHAW, 356, Strand.

BATH. The Queen of Spas.

FAMOUS HOT MINERAL WATERS.

NEW CONCERT HALL AND PUMP ROOM.

Most complete Bathing Establishment in Europe

LATEST SCIENTIFIC APPLIANCES, including the Nauheim (Thermalsoolbad).
BATH is only two hours from London.
GOOD HOTELS. CHARMING SCENERY. BAND DAILY.

PITLOCHRY.

THE ATHOLL HYDROPATHIC (Macdonald's).
The ORIGINAL and very much the LARGEST.
500 feet above sea level. Pure, dry, bracing air. Extensive pleasure grounds (36 acres). Tennis—Croquet—Cycling—Golf—Archery—Fishing.
Inclusive Terms from 2½ Guineas each per week. To prevent disappointment, address all communications "THE ATHOLL, PITLOCHRY."
Telegraphic Address "ATHOLL." SEASON COMMENCES 26th MAY.

HOLIDAYS ABROAD.

DIEPPE.

AN IDEAL SEASIDE RESORT FOR ENGLISH VISITORS,
ONLY FIVE HOURS FROM LONDON.
Two English Churches. Superb cycling roads. Excellent Golf Links (Sunday play). Best Casino in Europe (June to October). Dancing, &c.
Information free from L. BRAU, 140, Grand Rue, Dieppe, France.

ALPINE HEALTH RESORT.

MALOJA, Upper Engadine, Switzerland.

The largest and most beautiful glacier mills in the World. Nature's wonders. Open from June to end of September. The splendid Palace Hotel, Maloja, offers to its patrons all home comforts, combined with the charm of a climatic Alpine station; first-class highland tours as well as easy walks. 6,000 feet above sea level. 350 beds, spacious reception rooms, concert and theatre halls, Milanese Scala Orchestral Concerts daily. Lift. Golf, cricket, lawn-tennis. riding and driving opportunities. Large cycle track. Sea sport, fishing. Oil motor boat on the delightful Maloja Lake as well as rowing and sailing boats. Dark room for photographs. Baths and excellent sanitary arrangements. English and Roman Catholic Church services. Post and Telegraph Offices. Resident English Physician. Highly recommended as a quiet resort early in the season, especially for families. Average temperature, 16 degrees C. Building heated throughout on cold days.

Further particulars may be obtained from the Director, J. F. WALTHER-DENZ, MALOJA PALACE, ENGADINE, SWITZERLAND.

GAZE'S UNIVERSAL TOURS.

DIRECT TRAVEL and Circular Tours. Tickets issued in advance throughout Great Britain, the Continent, and America.
HOTEL COUPONS for 1,000 Hotels.
CONDUCTED TOURS, Paris, Belgium, The Rhine, Switzerland, &c.
PLEASURE CRUISES: Scotland, Norway, &c.
BAGGAGE, Forwarding and Insurance.

GAZE'S TOURIST GAZETTE, Monthly, gives Summary of all Arrangements and facilities.

HENRY GAZE & SONS, Ltd.,
142, STRAND; 18, WESTBOURNE GROVE; and PICCADILLY CIRCUS,
London.

ORIENT COMPANY'S PLEASURE CRUISE

by their
Steamship "LUSITANIA," 3,912 tons register.
From London 15th June, Leith 17th June.
To the finest FIORDS in NORWAY and the NORTH CAPE (for Midnight Sun), arriving back in London 11th July.
Other Cruises to follow.
High-class Cuisine, String Band, Electric Light, &c.
Managers { F. GREEN & CO. / ANDERSON, ANDERSON, & CO. } Head Offices: Fenchurch-avenue.
For passage apply to the latter firm at 5, Fenchurch-avenue, London, E.C.; or to the West End Branch Office, 16, Cockspur-street, S.W.

JAPAN, CHINA, AUSTRALIA, HONOLULU, FIJI, NEW ZEALAND, and ROUND THE WORLD.
CANADIAN PACIFIC ROUTE,
For berths or descriptive pamphlets, apply CANADIAN PACIFIC RAILWAY, 67 and 68, King William-street, London Bridge, or 30, Cockspur-street, Trafalgar-square, S.W.

Tenth Edition. 22nd Thousand. Cloth, 1s. 6d. Paper, 1s.

THE DIETETIC CURE OF OBESITY. (Foods for the Fat.)

By N. E. YORKE DAVIES, L.R.C.P., Lond., &c.
Revised and Enlarged, with Chapters on the DIETETIC TREATMENT OF GOUT.
CONTENTS. Part I.—Evils and dangerous conditions due to corpulency. Weak heart and congestive diseases of the Corpulent. Arteral degeneration. Apoplexy and Syncope in the obese. The dangers of the use of purgatives, drugs, and quack medicines for the reduction of weight, &c. Evils of over-eating. Part II.—Gout and its dietetic cure. Part III.—Stimulants in obesity and gout, &c. Part IV.—Exercise. Part V.—Dietetics of obesity and gout, &c
OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.—"This work deserves careful study."—Queen. "The only practical treatise on this subject."—St. Stephen's Review. "It may be commended to every one who wants to reduce weight."—Scotsman. "Should be carefully read, not only by those who are stout, but by those in whom incipient corpulency has manifested itself."—Morning Advertiser.
CHATTO & WINDUS, 111, St. Martin's-lane, London, W.C.

LONDON & NORTH WESTERN RAILWAY.

COLLECTION, CONVEYANCE, AND DELIVERY
OF
PASSENGERS' LUGGAGE IN ADVANCE.

The Personal Luggage of Passengers will, on application, be COLLECTED, FORWARDED IN ADVANCE, AND DELIVERED at residence or hotel in North Wales, the English Lake District, Blackpool, Morecambe, and other Tourist Resorts at the

NOMINAL CHARGE OF 6d. PER PACKAGE, which must be paid when the luggage is collected. No package must exceed 112 lbs. in weight.

Tickets dated beforehand to suit the convenience of passengers can be obtained at any of the Company's Stations and at the Receiving Offices, where also orders can be given for Collection of Luggage.

By availing themselves of this arrangement, passengers will be relieved of the trouble and inconvenience of looking after their luggage when travelling. In cases where apartments at destination have not been secured beforehand, the luggage can be addressed, "To be called for," at the Cloak Room of the arrival station.

FRED. HARRISON, General Manager.

CHEAPEST CONTINENTAL HOLIDAY.
THE ARDENNES, 35s. 5d.
BRUSSELS (for Waterloo) and Back, 30s. 11d.,
&c., viâ Harwich and Antwerp, by G.E.R. Co.'s large twin-screw passenger steamers every week-day.
ROYAL MAIL ROUTE TO HOLLAND.

HARWICH-HOOK Route to the CONTINENT daily (Sundays included). Quickest route to Holland (to Amsterdam, 11 hours) and cheapest to Germany. Combination tickets and tours to all parts of the Continent.

Passengers leave London (Liverpool Street Station) at 8.30 p.m. for the Hook of Holland, and at 8.40 p.m. for Antwerp. Direct service to Harwich from Scotland, the North, and the Midlands. Restaurant car from York. HAMBURG by G.S.N. Co.'s fast passenger steamers, Peregrine and Seamew, Wednesdays and Saturdays. Read "Walks in Belgium," illustrated, price 6d., at all Bookstalls. Particulars at the American Rendezvous, 2, Cockspur-street, S.W.; or of the Continental Manager, Liverpool Street Station, E.C.

NORWAY AND BALTIC CRUISES.

The S.Y. VICTORIA sails JULY 2nd, for 25 days, to NORTH CAPE and NORWEGIAN FIORDS.
To be followed by other cruises on July 30th, and August 18th.
The only modern pleasure cruiser with large airy cabins.

For particulars, apply Manager, 4, Regent-street; GRINDLAY & CO., 55, Parliament-street; or any of THOS. COOK & SONS' Offices.

12 GUINEA NORWAY CRUISES from NEWCASTLE-ON-TYNE—FORTNIGHTLY.

"MIDNIGHT SUN," 3,178 Tons, 3,500 H.P.

Finest YACHTING STEAMER afloat. NO UPPER BERTHS.
Sailings:—May 28; June 11, 25; July 9, 23; and August 6, 20.
Special Cruises, September 3rd and 17th.
Fares from 12 Guineas, including first-class table.

For itinerary, &c., apply to the PASSENGER AGENT, ALBION S.S. Co., Ltd., Mercantile Chambers, Newcastle-on-Tyne.

SIX GUINEAS.—GENEVA TOUR, nine days, extensions to Chamounix (Mont Blanc), Zermatt (Matterhorn), St. Gothard, Oberland, &c. Lecturers, Sir Robert Ball, Mr. Edward Whymper, Dr. Lunn. Departures weekly from May 10.—Details from Secretary, 5, Endsleigh-gardens, Euston, N.W.; 32, Piccadilly, W.; 47, St. Paul's-churchyard, E.C.; 3, Charing-cross, S.W.

HOSPITALS & APPEALS.

GREAT NORTHERN CENTRAL HOSPITAL, Holloway.
VERY POOR and DEPENDENT ENTIRELY UPON VOLUNTARY SUPPORT.

PATIENTS ADMITTED FREE, sickness and poverty the only qualifications for relief.

£10,000 needed annually to support the work of relieving 1,500 in-patients and 25,000 out-patients.

LEWIS H. GLENTON KERR, Secretary.

METROPOLITAN HOSPITAL SUNDAY FUND.
Patron—Her Majesty the QUEEN.
Vice-Patron—H.R.H. the PRINCE of WALES.
HOSPITAL SUNDAY, 12th JUNE, 1898.

Any person unable to attend Divine Worship on that day is requested to send his or her Contribution to the Lord Mayor. Cheques and Postal Orders should be crossed "Bank of England," and sent to the Mansion House.

METROPOLITAN HOSPITAL SUNDAY FUND.
Patron—Her Majesty the QUEEN.
Vice-Patron—H.R.H. the PRINCE of WALES.
HOSPITAL SUNDAY of 1898 is 12th JUNE.

The Council invite all persons who may be temporarily out of London, or on Holiday Excursions, to send their Contributions to the Lord Mayor or to Mr. H. N. CUSTANCE, the Secretary, at the Mansion House, E.C.

"The Old Favourite."

MAX GREGER'S

CARLOWITZ

SAFEST,
SOUNDEST
Dinner Wine.

PURE
HUNGARIAN BURGUNDY.

From 15/- per doz.

Of all Wine Merchants and Grocers.

See that every cork bears the brand 'Max Greger.' Without it the wine is not genuine.

AMUSEMENTS.

IMPERIAL INSTITUTE.

THE QUEEN'S DIAMOND JUBILEE PRESENTS,
On VIEW from 1 p.m. to 11 p.m.
CONCERTS DAILY, at 4 p.m. and 8.45 p.m.

IMPERIAL INSTITUTE.
EXHIBITION of ACETYLENE GAS,
APPARATUS and PRODUCTION.
ILLUMINATION of GALLERY by ACETYLENE.

IMPERIAL INSTITUTE.
THE CONCERT ORCHESTRA,
FROM THE THEATRE LA SCALA, MILAN,
Director, LEANDRO CAMPANARI.

Covered way communication with the South Kensington Subway.
Admission 1s., from 1 p.m. to 11 p.m., except Wednesdays (Fellows' Day), when admission is by ticket only, to be obtained from Fellows.

IMPERIAL INSTITUTE.
COLLECTIONS of PRODUCTS
FROM ALL PARTS of the EMPIRE.
Open free to the public from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m.

IMPERIAL INSTITUTE.
DINNERS from 6.30 p.m. Luncheons, &c. Orders addressed to Superintendent, Catering Syndicate. Telephone No. 623 Kensington.

International Universal Exhibition.

EARL'S COURT, S.W., 1898.
IMRE KIRALFY, Director-General.
Season Tickets, 10s. 6d.,
Can be obtained at the Exhibition and Libraries.
Admission Daily, 1s.
Open 11 a.m. to 11 p.m.
BAND of the 1st GRENADIER GUARDS.
BAND of the HONOURABLE ARTILLERY COMPANY.
The LONDON EXHIBITIONS ORCHESTRAL BAND.
THE EMPRESS THEATRE.
GRAND PATRIOTIC NAVAL SPECTACLE.
Peace and War. Naval Manœuvres. The Fleet at Night.
Attack on the Enemy's Forts.
TWICE DAILY, at 3.30 and 9 p.m.
Thousands of Reserved Seats at 6d., 1s., 2s., and 3s.
THE FLORAL LOUNGE.
The Most Delightful Entertainment Hall in the World.
The Chamounix Minstrels and other Novel Attractions Daily, Free.
The Hungarian Minstrels. American Liliputian Troupe.
Grand Hungarian Feszty Panorama. Royal Javanese Troupe.
Hagenbeck's Zoological Kindergarten. Moorish Camp.
Bella Napoli Troupe. Electric Theatre. Captive Balloon.
THE GREAT WHEEL, 300 ft. HIGH.
South Sea Islanders, "Astarte." Belvedere Tower. Electrophone.
Switchback.

THE GREAT FASHIONABLE
SUMMER SHOW OF LADIES' DOGS
OF THE
LADIES' KENNEL ASSOCIATION
(Patron: H.R.H. the PRINCESS OF WALES)
WILL BE HELD IN THE ROYAL BOTANIC SOCIETY'S GARDENS,
On JUNE 23rd and 24th, in part aid of the R.S.P.C.A.

NOTICE.—Ladies wishing to exhibit Dogs or Cats should send for Prize Lists and Particulars to the HON. SECRETARY, 5, Great James-street, Bedford-row, W.C.
OVER £3,000 IN PRIZES. ENTRIES CLOSE JUNE 11th.
Exhibits will be benched and fed by Spratts Patent, Ltd.

THE ELECTRORAMA
at NIAGARA HALL,
Now showing a magnificent Series of Cycloramas each 400 ft. by 40 ft.
Daily, 10 to 10, 1s.
ST. JAMES'S PARK STATION.

ROYAL HORSE SHOW, RICHMOND, SURREY.
ROYAL HORSE SHOW, RICHMOND, SURREY.
ROYAL HORSE SHOW, RICHMOND, SURREY.
FRIDAY & SATURDAY, JUNE 10th & 11th.
ADMISSION ONE SHILLING.

OPERA and THEATRE TICKETS.—Boxes, Stalls, Dress Circle, and Upper Circle in good positions for "The Opera," and every Theatre in London, can be had at any office of the DISTRICT MESSENGER AND THEATRE TICKET COMPANY. Branches City and West-end. Letters and telegrams to 193, Piccadilly, next to Prince's Hall.

THREE GOLD MEDALS.

Exquisite Models. Perfect Fit. Guaranteed Wear.

THE Y & N PATENT DIAGONAL SEAM CORSET

Will not split in the Seams nor tear in the Fabric. Made in all the fashionable colours and Shades in Italian Cloth, Satin, and Coutil, 4/11, 5/11, 6/11, 7/11 per pair and upwards.

CAUTION.—Every genuine Y & N Corset is stamped.

Sold by Drapers and Ladies' Outfitters in the United Kingdom and Colonies

AMUSEMENTS.

HAYMARKET THEATRE.
Sole Lessee, Mr. Frederick Harrison.
Managers, Mr. Frederick Harrison and Mr. Cyril Maude.
EVERY EVENING (except on Saturdays), at 8.30,
THE LITTLE MINISTER, by J. M. Barrie.
Miss WINIFRED EMERY and Mr. CYRIL MAUDE.
MATINEES EVERY WEDNESDAY and SATURDAY, at 2.30.

ST. JAMES'S HALL.
RICHTER CONCERT.
MONDAY EVENING NEXT, at 8.30.
(Under the Direction of Mr. N. Vert).
Conductor—Dr. HANS RICHTER.
Symphony No. 6, in B Minor, Pathétique ..... Tschaikowsky.
Carneval in Paris ..... J. S. Svendsen.
(First time at these Concerts.)
Symphony (K No. 385) ..... Mozart.
Overture "Tannhauser" ..... Wagner.
Tickets, 15s., 10s. 6d., 5s., and 2s. 6d.; of usual Agents; Newman, Queen's Hall; Tree, St. James's Hall, and 304, Regent-street.—N. Vert, 6, Cork-street, W.

MR. SCHULZ-CURTIUS.
WAGNER CONCERTS.—FELIX MOTTL.
LAST CONCERT of the SEASON.
Conductor, Herr FELIX MOTTL (of Bayreuth).
At QUEEN'S HALL, on THURSDAY, JUNE 16th, at Eight (for 8.15).
Tickets, 10s. 6d., 7s. 6d., 5s., 2s. 6d.—Apply to Box Office, Queen's Hall, Tree's, Chappell's, usual Agents, or to Mr. A. Schulz-Curtius, 16, Shaftesbury-avenue Piccadilly, W.

ST. JAMES'S HALL.
EUGEN D'ALBERT
Will give a
SONATA RECITAL
(Under the direction of Mr. Schulz-Curtius).
On MONDAY NEXT, June 13, at Three o'clock.
(His only Recital this year.)
Steinway Pianoforte.
Sonata in A flat, Op. 110 ..... Beethoven.
Sonata in B minor, Op. 58 ..... Chopin.
Sonata in A flat, Op. 39 ..... Weber.
Sonata in B minor ..... Liszt.
Sonata in G major, Op. 37 ..... Tschaikowsky.
Tickets, 10s. 6d., 5s., 3s., 1s. at Tree's, St. James's Hall, and Regent-street, Chappell's, Newman's, usual Agent's, and of A. Schulz-Curtius, 16, Shaftesbury-avenue, Piccadilly, W.

QUEEN'S HALL.
SUNDAY AFTERNOON CONCERTS.
EVERY SUNDAY, at 3.30.
Conductor, Mr. Henry J. Wood.
The Queen's Hall Grand Orchestra.
Admission free. Reserved seats, 2s., 3s., 1s., and 6d.

MADAME PATTI.—Her first appearance at the Crystal Palace these 18 years on SATURDAY AFTERNOON, June 25th, at 3 o'clock.

CRYSTAL PALACE.
Saturday, June 25th, at 3 o'clock.
GRAND FESTIVAL CONCERT.
Solo-Vocalists:—
MADAME ADELINA PATTI
(Her first appearance at the Crystal Palace since the Handel Festival of 1880).
Miss Clara Butt.
Mr. Edward Lloyd.
Mr. Santley.
The London Contingent of the Handel Festival Choir.
Three Thousand Voices.
Grand Orchestra. Five Hundred Performers.
Organist, Mr. Walter W. Hedgcock.
Conductor, Mr. August Manns.

In honour of the 60th Anniversary of the Coronation of Her Majesty the Queen-Empress, the concert will commence with the singing of The National Anthem
by the full Choir followed by Rule Britannia.
In which the solo will be undertaken by Mr. Edward Lloyd.
The programme will include vocal selections from "Messiah," "Judas Maccabæus," "Israel in Egypt," "The Ruins of Athens," "Elijah," "Messe des Morts" (Berlioz), "Le Nozze di Figaro," "Sapho," "The Bohemian Girl," and "The Golden Legend," and instrumental items by Wagner and Sullivan.
Master F. H. Pedgrift will sing the part of "The Youth" in the selection from "Elijah."

Stalls numbered and reserved, £1 1s. and 10s. 6d., unnumbered seats, 7s. 6d., all admitting to the Crystal Palace.
Tickets may be obtained at the Crystal Palace or from Novello, Ewer & Co., Berners-street, W., and 80 and 81, Queen-street, Cheapside, E.C., daily from 10 a.m. until 6 p.m.
Applications for tickets addressed to the Palace must be accompanied by cheques, postal or Post Office orders, made payable to "Crystal Palace Company," or, if addressed to the London Offices, to "Novello, Ewer & Co."

CRYSTAL PALACE. — FIREWORKS. — Magnificent display every THURSDAY, at 9, by C. T. Brock & Co. Wonderful novelties in living fireworks, mechanical moving devices and aerial displays. Stupendous set piece an eighth of a mile long, depicting the Battle of Manila Bay. The largest set piece ever fired.

PALACE, Shaftesbury-avenue. — The HANDSOMEST THEATRE in EUROPE. The finest Variety Entertainment in London. Full Licence. Prices from 6d. Doors open 8.—Manager, Mr. CHARLES MORTON.

TIVOLI, Strand, London.—The Greatest Combination of Talent in London.—Open EVERY EVENING, at 7.30, and SATURDAY MATINEE, at 2.30, with a STAR PROGRAMME, embracing every Artiste of note.—Manager, Mr. VERNON DOWSETT.

MADAME TUSSAUD'S EXHIBITION, Baker-street Station.—Gordon's Last Stand at Khartoum. New Portrait Models of the late Mr. W. E. Gladstone, Emile Zola, &c.

AMUSEMENTS.

DRURY LANE THEATRE ROYAL.—Managing Director, ARTHUR COLLINS.
THE WHITE HEATHER, EVERY EVENING, at 7.45, for a short season.
Mrs. JOHN WOOD, Miss KATE RORKE, and powerful Company.

ROYAL OPERA, COVENT GARDEN.
Lessees, THE GRAND OPERA SYNDICATE, LTD.
GRAND OPERA EVERY EVENING.
For full particulars see daily papers. Box-office now open.

LYCEUM.—THE LYONS MAIL.
MATINEE To-day (Wednesday) at 2, and Friday Night next, and June 23
HENRY IRVING.
THE MEDICINE MAN. To-night (Wednesday) and June 16 and 20, at 8.
Matinée, Saturday, June 25.
HENRY IRVING. | Miss ELLEN TERRY.
THE MERCHANT of VENICE. To-morrow (Thursday), next Saturday Night, and June 21.
WATERLOO and THE BELLS. Matinée next Saturday and Evening June 18.
LOUIS XI. Monday next and June 14, 17 and 25. Matinée, June 18.
MADAME SANS GENE. Wednesday, June 22.
NANCE OLDFIELD and THE BELLS. Friday, June 24.
Box-office (Mr. J. Hurst) open 10 to 5, and 7.30 to 10. Seats also booked by letter or telegram.

HER MAJESTY'S THEATRE.
Proprietor and Manager, Mr. HERBERT BEERBOHM TREE.
TO-NIGHT and EVERY EVENING, at 8 (doors open 7.30), LAST WEEKS,
JULIUS CÆSAR.
MATINEES EVERY WEDNESDAY and SATURDAY, at 2.
Box-office open 10 to 10. Seats booked from 2s. HER MAJESTY'S.

ADELPHI. A. & S. GATTI,
Sole Proprietors and Managers.
Business Manager, Mr. FRED. G. LATHAM.
EVERY EVENING at 8 o'clock.
A Drama in Four Acts, by David Belasco, entitled:
THE HEART OF MARYLAND,
Interpreted by Mr. Charles Frohman's entire New York Company.
Box Office open from 10 till 10.

SAVOY THEATRE.—Every Evening at 8, and Every Saturday Afternoon at 2.0, will be produced the New Romantic Musical Drama, THE BEAUTY STONE, by A. W. Pinero, J. Comyns Carr, and Arthur Sullivan. Box-office 9 a.m. to 11 p.m.—R. D'OYLY CARTE, Manager.

DALY'S THEATRE.—Sole Lessee and Manager, Mr. AUGUSTIN DALY.—EVERY EVENING a New Musical Comedy, A GREEK SLAVE. The book by Owen Hall. Music by Sidney Jones. Box-office now open, 10 till 6.

GARRICK.—Lessee and Manager, H. T. BRICKWELL.
EVERY EVENING, at 9,
WILLIAM GILLETTE | TOO MUCH JOHNSON.
At 8.15, DANGERFIELD 95.

ST. JAMES'S.—Mr. GEORGE ALEXANDER,
Sole Lessee and Manager.
EVERY EVENING, at 8.30,
THE AMBASSADOR,
A Comedy, in Four Acts,
by John Oliver Hobbes.
Messrs. George Alexander, H. B. Irving, H. V. Esmond, A. Royston, B. Wallis, Fred Terry; Mesdames Fay Davis, Granville, Hilda Rivers, Winifred Dolan, C. Nillson, Violet Vanbrugh.
MATINEE EVERY WEDNESDAY and SATURDAY, at 2.
Box-office open 10 to 10. ST. JAMES'S THEATRE.

COMEDY THEATRE, Panton-street, Haymarket.
Sole Manager, Mr. CHARLES HAWTREY.
TO-NIGHT, and EVERY EVENING, at 8.30,
LORD AND LADY ALGY,
an Original Light Comedy, in Three Acts, by R. C. Carton.
Mr. CHARLES HAWTREY and Company.
At 8, a Duologue, entitled CONSTANCY, by Cyril Hallward.
MATINEES, SATURDAY, June 18, and WEDNESDAYS, June 22 and 29, at 3.
Box-office open 10 to 10.

VAUDEVILLE.
Sole Lessees and Managers, A. & S. GATTI.
EVERY EVENING, at 8.20,
MATINEE EVERY WEDNESDAY, at 2.30,
THE FRENCH MAID,
With New Songs, Dances, and Dresses.
The very successful Musical Comedy by Basil Hood and Walter Slaughter.
Box-office open 10 to 10.

SHAFTESBURY THEATRE.
Directors, WILLIAMSON and MUSGROVE, Limited.
EVERY EVENING, at 8, Casino Theatre Company, of New York, in
THE BELLE OF NEW YORK.
"The subject of all the town talk."
Box-office now open at the Theatre from 10 till 10.
MATINEE WEDNESDAY and SATURDAY at 2.

CRITERION THEATRE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. CHARLES WYNDHAM.—EVERY EVENING at 8.15, THE LIARS, by Henry Arthur Jones. Mr. CHARLES WYNDHAM, Miss MARY MOORE, and Company. MATINEE EVERY SATURDAY, at 2.30.

EMPIRE THEATRE. — EVERY EVENING, New Ballet, THE PRESS, and Sporting Sketch, THE RACE. Grand VARIETIES. Doors open at 7.45.

LONDON PAVILION.—Dan Leno, Vesta Tilley, Eugene Stratton, Bertoldi, Chirgwin, Brothers Griffiths, Geo. Robey, Rachael Walker, T. E. Dunville, Pat Rafferty, and many others. Prices from 1s. to £3 3s. Manager, Mr. FRANK GLENISTER.

"TRUTH" HOTEL LIST.

ABERYSTWITH.—The QUEEN'S HOTEL faces the sea, and is lighted by electricity. The late Sir Jas. Clarke, M.D., says: "A fortnight at Aberystwith is equal to a month at most watering-places." For tariffs, &c., apply to W. H. PALMER, Proprietor. Soft Atlantic breezes. Pure water from Plinlimmon, and excellent drainage.

BONCHURCH HOTEL, Bonchurch, Isle of Wight, one mile from Ventnor Station
A comfortable, quiet, and most beautifully-situated Hotel. Pretty garden. Good sea view.
H. RIBBANDS, Proprietor.

BOURNEMOUTH.—HIGHCLIFFE HOTEL. Unrivalled position, West Cliff, full south. Splendid sea view. Table d'hôte (separate tables). Supplies from Alderney Dairy Farm. Telephone 27.—J. KILNER, Proprietor.

BOURNEMOUTH.—HOTEL MONT DORE.—South aspect. 150 rooms, electric light throughout, passenger lift, first-class cuisine, winter garden and lounge, covered tennis court. Turkish, sea-water, and medicated Baths. The Hotel is within two minutes' walk of the Golf Links.—For tariff, address W. KNEESE, Manager.

BRIGHTON.—GRAND HOTEL.—Centre of sea front. Electric Light throughout. Lift to all floors. Bicycle room. Inclusive terms if desired from 10s. 6d. to 15s. per day.—For particulars apply to A. D. HOOK, Manager.

BRIGHTON.—BEDFORD HOTEL.—Old-established. Unequalled in situation; opposite West Pier. Spacious coffee and reading rooms; sea-water service; unequalled cuisine; great variety of excellent wines. Moderate tariff. Electric light in all rooms. Passenger lift to all the floors.
GEO. HECKFORD, Manager.

CARBIS BAY HOTEL, Cornwall. The very spot to obtain rest and quietude. Overlooking the finest bay in England. Mild yet bracing climate. Within easy distance of London by G. W. R. Splendid Golf Links. "A more beautiful spot for residence could hardly be imagined."—Truth.

FOLKESTONE.—The LEAS HOTEL.—Situated in private grounds. Adjoining fashionable promenade. Sea views. Refurnished throughout. Passenger lift. Certified sanitation. Excellent cuisine. Moderate tariff. Good golf links and tennis court.

FOLKESTONE.—BATES' HOTEL, West Cliff Gardens, and LONGFORD PRIVATE HOTEL, The Lees. Oldest established and most select Family Hotels in Folkestone. Reduced terms during Winter and Spring months. Pension (new Coffee-room) at Bates' Hotel.—G. L. HART, Proprietor. Sanitation Certified.

GRAND CANARY.—The Newest and Best Hotel is The METROPOLE. Facing the sea. Delightful position. Terms most moderate.
Agents, ELDER, DEMPSTER & CO., 14, Castle-street, Liverpool, and 4, St. Mary Axe, London, E.C.

JERSEY.—GRAND HOTEL.—The only first-class modern Hotel facing the sea, and full south, the largest, the best appointed, and the up-to-date Hotel in the Channel Islands. Liberal Management.
D. DE LEIDI, Manager.

MALVERN—The IMPERIAL HOTEL occupies the best position, and receives visitors en pension. The golf-links (18 holes) are one of the best in England. Capital stabling for hunters. Droitwich Brine, Turkish and large Swimming Bath in separate buildings.—For tariff, apply to the Proprietor, F. MOERSCHELL.

SANDGATE.—ROYAL KENT HOTEL, a favourite resort of Ruskin. An ideal summer and winter residence, delightfully situated in its own grounds, facing the sea. Redecorated and refurnished. New Coffee-room, Smoking-room, and Conservatory have recently been added. Fifteen minutes from Folkestone. Omnibus meets all trains Sandgate Station.—J. E. TANARE, Prop.

SOUTHSEA.—ROYAL BEACH MANSIONS HOTEL.—Largest in Southsea, splendidly situated on the beach; 300 yards nearer the sea than any other public hotel on the line of marine terraces. Passenger lift. Inclusive terms from £3. 13s. 6d. per week. Entirely under new management.—M. ECCLES, Manageress.

TORQUAY.—IMPERIAL HOTEL.—Under entirely New Management. New sanitary arrangements throughout. It is the largest and best-situated Hotel in Torquay, and the best winter residence on the South Coast. Visitors received en pension or à la carte. Terms moderate.
F. FISCHER, Manager.

All applications for spaces in this List should be made to the ADVERTISEMENT MANAGER,
"TRUTH" BUILDINGS, CARTERET STREET,
QUEEN ANNE'S GATE, S.W.

BURLINGTON HOTELS COMPANY, Limited.

BURLINGTON HOTEL, Cork-street, W., near Burlington Arcade. Central, quiet, and most comfortable.
BUCKINGHAM PALACE HOTEL, S.W., close to Victoria Station. Specialty, Wedding Receptions. Suites of rooms facing Buckingham Palace Gardens from 12s. per day.
} London.

BURLINGTON.—The HOTEL BURLINGTON, Boscombe, Bournemouth. 200 rooms, facing sea, and protected from north and east. Acres of beautifully laid-out pleasure grounds, with abundance of winter foliage. A Winter Garden, 300 feet long, facing south, containing dining-room, and kept at a uniform temperature. Nearest approach in England to a Riviera Hotel. 135 minutes from Waterloo. Pullman Car service. East Bournemouth Station. Special Boarding terms. Excellent cuisine for above three Hotels. Tariffs on application to the Managers.

AVONDALE HOTEL & RESTAURANT

(Corner of Dover-street and Piccadilly).
MAGNIFICENT SUITES of ROOMS, including Ladies' Reception-room.
KANDT'S ROYAL ORCHESTRA
plays nightly during Dinner and Supper.
LUNCHEON, 4s.; DINNER, 10s. 6d.; SUPPER, 4s.
A SPECIAL ROYAL ACADEMY LUNCHEON at 2s. 6d. served daily.
The Wines have been most carefully selected by connoisseurs.
Manager: Mons. GARIN. Chef de Cuisine: Mons. DUTRU. } late of the Savoy Hotel.
AND

HATCHETT'S RESTAURANT.

UNDER AVONDALE HOTEL.

Under entirely new management. First-class Cuisine and Unrivalled Cellar of Wines. Moderate Prices. Luncheons, Dinners, and Suppers, Table d'Hôte, Grill-room, and à la Carte. Arrangements are being made for a String Band to play nightly during Dinner and Supper.
Manager: Mons. EUGENE.

FOLKESTONE
ROYAL PAVILION HOTEL

Sheltered, yet close to the sea and the Boulogne Steamboat and Promenade Piers and beautiful Undercliffe private road. Celebrated for its home-like comforts, cuisine, and wines. Lighted throughout by electricity. Spacious winter garden, affording a delightful lounge amidst sub-tropical plants. Private dairy, farm, and gardens, insuring fresh milk, butter, eggs, vegetables. Private laundry. Hotel omnibus meets all trains at Folkestone Central. The New and Handsome additional buildings will be opened in July.

FOLKESTONE
ROYAL PAVILION HOTEL

BUXTON, DERBYSHIRE.
THE PALACE HOTEL.

200 rooms. Finest position. Own grounds. American elevator. Tariff, with plan of rooms and sketch map of Buxton, on application.
A. CROSS, Manager.

SAVOY HOTEL
OVERLOOKING RIVER AND EMBANKMENT GARDENS.

By day the most beautiful garden and river view in Europe. By night a fairy scene. All charges for rooms include baths, lights, and attendance.

Savoy Restaurant.

Of Gastronomic Fame. Dinners à la Carte. Private Rooms for Parties.
The Savoy Dejeuner à prix fixe, 5s., served on the Balcony overlooking the Gardens and River from 12 to 3.
"The Opera Supper," 5s. The Orchestra plays during Dinner and Supper.
The Restaurant is under the direction of the famous Maître d'Hôtel, "Joseph," of the Restaurant Marivaux, Paris. Chef, Maître THOURAUD.
Prix Fixe Dinner (7s. 6d.) is served in the new Salle à Manger, on the Restaurant Floor, at Separate Tables, from 6 to 8.30.
The GRAND HOTEL, ROME, is under the same direction.

BRUNSWICK HOTEL, Jermyn-street, Piccadilly. New Sanitation and Redecoration by Warings. First-class cuisine. High-class Family Hotel. Moderate tariff. Under new management.

A FINE HOTEL] DOVER [IN DOVER BAY

Accommodates 400 guests. Is superbly appointed, with all the comforts of a well-arranged mansion at moderate cost. Perfect cuisine. The Dover Golf Links for use of Hotel Burlington visitors. The finest coast hotel in England. Brochure and Tariff free.

Facing the Pleasure Pier and in centre of Dover Bay.
HOTEL BURLINGTON

THE INTERNATIONAL PALACE HOTELS.

OSTEND ..... Hotel de la Plage.
ARDENNES..... Chateau d'Ardennes.
(Palace of Leopold II.)
LISBON ..... The Avenida Palace.
THERAPIA ..... Bosphorus Summer Palace.
London Office, 14, Cockspur-street, S.W.

FOLKESTONE.
WEST CLIFF HOTEL.

(180 Apartments)
Now opened for the reception of Visitors.
Important Structural Alterations and Additions have been made since October last.
The Hotel is under the personal superintendence of the Proprietor, to whom all communications should be addressed.
Electric Light and Passenger Lift.

HASTINGS. Due South, Facing Sea.
QUEEN'S HOTEL,

LARGEST AND BEST APPOINTED.
Sunny, and most sheltered position in Hastings and St. Leonards.
ELECTRIC LIGHT. PASSENGER ELEVATOR.
Moderate Tariff. Hotel Flys attend the trains.
WILLIAM GLADE, Manager.

HOTELS, &c.

ILFRACOMBE.
ILFRACOMBE HOTEL.

Famous for its high-class Cuisine and general comfort.
The PRINCIPAL and ONLY HOTEL on the SEASHORE.

An ideal position. 250 rooms. Grounds five acres. Tennis, Croquet. Splendid Swimming Bath. Elegant Lounge Hall. Moderate tariff. Terms "en pension."
H. R. GROVER, Manager.

RAMSGATE.
THE GRANVILLE.

CLARENDON HOTEL, Princes-street, Edinburgh.—First-class Family Hotel. Opposite Castle, and overlooking the gardens. Kitchen lately fitted up on top of Hotel. Recommended to American visitors. Under the personal management of the new Proprietor.

MARGATE.—WHITE HART HOTEL.
Sixty Bedrooms, many commanding magnificent sea views. Famous for its perfect English cooking and choice cellar. Most invigorating sea air in England. Under supervision of Proprietor—G. MARSHALL.

GRAND HOTEL, LYNDHURST (New Forest).—Charming Hotel, recently enlarged. Beautiful grounds of 4 acres adjoin golf links. Hunting, fishing, &c. Trains met at Brockenhurst.
Mrs. HART, Manageress.

£20 TOBACCONISTS COMMENCING. Illd. guide (259 pgs.), 3d., "How to open respectably £20 to £2,000." Tobacconists' Outfitting Co., Euston-rd., Ldn. Hairdressers fitted.—H. MYERS.

"Quality and price being equal it behoves all patriotic Englishmen to buy the produce of their own Colonies, rather than that of Foreign Countries."

Joshua's
PURE

Australian Brandy

The LANCET says:—"It is sound and honest, and of a fragrance, purity, and quality second to none."

	Bottle.
JOSHUA'S "ONE STAR" ...	4/-
JOSHUA'S "THREE STAR" ...	4/6
JOSHUA'S "SPECIAL" ...	5/6

OF STORES, GROCERS, AND WINE MERCHANTS.

JOSHUA'S "SPECIAL," bottled in Melbourne, bears the Stamp of H.M. Government of Victoria, guaranteeing it the PURE PRODUCT OF THE GRAPE.

Importers: JOSHUA BROTHERS.
26, MARK LANE, LONDON, E.C.

ESTATES, AUCTIONS, &c.

OLD SWAN HOUSE, CHELSEA EMBANKMENT, S.W.
Commanding beautiful Views over the River and Battersea Park.

An exceptionally choice
FREEHOLD TOWN RESIDENCE.
Designed by R. Norman Shaw, Esq., R.A.,

and constituting a unique specimen of the Early English style of Architecture

The premises, which possess the unusual frontage of nearly 50 ft., are decorated and fitted in a most artistic and complete manner, including electric light. The accommodation comprises entrance hall (32 ft. by 28 ft.), paved with mosaic, cloak-room, lavatory, butler's pantry, and footman's-room; noble dining-room (28 ft. by 18 ft.) with serving-room and lift from basement, cheerful morning room (26 ft. by 18 ft.), ante-room, elegant drawing-room (47 ft. by 17 ft.), lighted by seven recessed alcove windows, library (20 ft. by 20 ft.), 10 capital bed-rooms, bath-room, &c., ample and well-lighted domestic offices, including servants' hall, housekeeper's-room, large kitchen, scullery, &c., with spacious wine, coal, and other cellarage. There is a beautifully-proportioned and admirably lighted principal staircase of easy ascent, likewise a secondary staircase. In the rear is the excellent freehold stabling and coachhouse, which is entirely detached from the mansion, although having access thereto. It consists of two stalls, loose box, double coachhouse, with dwelling-house adjoining, containing men's living-rooms, harness-room, and three bed-rooms. Possession on completion of the purchase. TO BE SOLD by AUCTION, at the MART, Tokenhouse-yard, near the Bank of England, E.C., on THURSDAY, JULY 7th, 1898, at TWO o'clock punctually (unless an acceptable offer be previously made privately).

Particulars and conditions of Sale of Messrs. FLOWER, NUSSEY, & FELLOWES, Solicitors, 1, Great Winchester-street, E.C., and with orders to view, of Messrs. LOFTS & WARNER, Estate Agents and Surveyors, 130, Mount-street, W.; and of Messrs. TROLLOPE, Estate Agents, Surveyors, and Auctioneers, 7, Hobart-place, Eaton-square; West Halkin-street, Belgrave-square; 14, Mount-street, Grosvenor-square; and 5, Victoria-street, Westminster, London.

By direction of the Executors.

NO. 44, LENNOX-GARDENS, S.W., and STABLES. The handsome double-fronted TOWN MANSION of the late Marquis of Northampton, K.G., for whom it was specially arranged and fitted.

The Residence, which is admirably planned and of modern construction, overlooks ornamental gardens, and contains unusually good hall, three reception-rooms and serving-room on ground floor, three handsome and well-proportioned drawing-rooms (all communicating) on first floor, 13 bed and dressing rooms and bath-room on the upper floors, and very complete domestic offices in the basement; principal and secondary staircases, service and luggage lift, &c.; the excellent stabling, situate at the rear and known as No. 13, Lennox-mews, comprises five stalls and loose box, coach-house, harness, and good men's rooms, &c. The whole held for an unexpired term of over 75 years at the very moderate ground rent of £80 per annum. Possession on completion. TO BE SOLD by AUCTION, at the MART, Tokenhouse-yard, near the Bank of England, E.C., on THURSDAY, JUNE 23rd, 1898, at TWO o'clock punctually (unless an accceptable offer be previously made privately).—Particulars, plans, and conditions of sale of Messrs. FEW & CO., Solicitors, 19, Surrey-street, Strand, W.C.; and, with orders to view, of Messrs. LOFTS & WARNER, Estate Agents and Surveyors, 130, Mount-street, W.; and of Messrs. TROLLOPE, Estate Agents, Surveyors, and Auctioneers, West Halkin-street, Belgrave-square; 7, Hobart-place, Eaton-square; 14, Mount-street, Grosvenor-square; and 5, Victoria-street, Westminster, London.

A COMMANDING BUILDING, suitable for Club, Hotel, Restaurant, Theatre, Music Hall, Stores, Flats, Religious or Philanthropic Institution, or for Commercial Firms requiring large space. — OXFORD MANSION, Oxford Circus, London, W.—To be SOLD by TENDER, on 30th JUNE next, this well-known BUILDING, of striking elevation and fireproof construction, standing on nearly ¼ acre, with four frontages of 100 feet, each within a few yards of the new Oxford Circus Station of the Central London Railway. Six stories; floor space about 54,700 sup. feet; 153 rooms and large central hall and basement; artesian well. Portland lease 58 years.—For particulars and forms of Tender, apply to LEGGATT, RUBINSTEIN, & CO., Solicitors, 5, Raymond-buildings, Gray's Inn, London, W.C.

TO INVALIDS.—A LIST of MEDICAL MEN, in all parts, receiving RESIDENT PATIENTS sent gratis, with full particulars, Schools also recommended.—Medical, &c., Association, Ltd., 8, Lancaster-place, Strand, W.C. Tel. Add., "Triform, London." Telephone No. 1,854 (Gerrard).

TATTERSALL'S THURSDAYS' SALES at ALBERT GATE.
Messrs. TATTERSALL beg to give notice that their THURSDAYS' SALES have commenced, and will be continued during the season.
SALES ON MONDAYS AND THURSDAYS.

SPIERS & POND's STORES

QUEEN VICTORIA STREET, E.C.
Opposite St. Paul's Station, L.C. & D. Rly.).

CLOCK DEPT.

(Buhl Timepiece 8-day), Red Shell Case, Inlaid Brass, Gilt Ormolu mounts, Cream Enamel Dial, height 12 in. width 5½ in., 29/6

Price Book, No. 51, published 2nd May (1,000 pages), Illustrated, Free on Application.

SPIERS & POND's STORES
QUEEN VICTORIA STREET, E.C.
(Opposite St. Paul's Station. L.C. & D. Rly.).

"MADE LIKE A GUN."

ROYAL ENFIELD BICYCLES

SEND FOR CATALOGUE.

ENFIELD CYCLE CO., LTD., Redditch.

LONDON: 6C, SLOANE ST., W.; DUBLIN: 73, GRAFTON STREET; CITY AGENCY: BENETFINK'S, CHEAPSIDE.

RALEIGH CYCLES

Drop a P.C. to us for our Book on CYCLING, Fully Illustrated, Gratis.

The RALEIGH CYCLE CO. Limited

LONDON DEPOT (41 HOLBORN VIADUCT E.C.) NOTTINGHAM.

Bulmer's Cider

Guaranteed Pure Juice of the Apple.

Price Lists and Testimonials from

H. P. BULMER & CO., Hereford

or of Wine Merchants Everywhere.

18 carat Gold, £7. 7s.

H. SAMUEL'S WATCHES.

In Wear all over the World.

A large saving in price as compared with usual London charges. Stamped 18 carat gold, keyless, centre seconds chronograph, lever movement, extra jewelled, chronometer balance, ten years' warranty.

H. SAMUEL'S Price, £7. 7s.

H. SAMUEL'S NEW WATCH PAMPHLET contains illustrations and descriptions of Watches and Jewellery in Gold and Silver, also Clocks, Plate, &c., together with many letters of approval from purchasers. This pamphlet will be sent to any address, gratis and post free, on receipt of name and address

H. SAMUEL,

Central Watch Depot, Manchester.

ALLAN'S ANTI-FAT

PURELY VEGETABLE, Perfectly Harmless. Will reduce from two to five pounds per week: acts on the food in the stomach, preventing its conversion into Fat. Sold by Chemists. Send stamp for pamphlet.

Botanic Medicine Co., 3, New Oxford-street, London, W.C.

USE ONLY BLAISDELL PENCILS

SELF-POINTING.

ALL COLOURS. ALL GRADES.

NO WASTE. BEST LEADS.

Black Lead 1d. & 2d. Coloured Crayons 2d. & 3d.

SOLD EVERYWHERE.

Sample Box of 5 Pencils 1s., Free by Post in the U.K.

BLAISDELL PENCILS, Ltd., 46, Holborn Viaduct, London, E.C.

WATER ABSOLUTELY FREE FROM DISEASE GERMS, BY USING THE

BERKEFELD FILTER.

Full Illustrated Price List and Testimonials free on application.

FILTER H. AS SKETCH, 42s.

SMALLER SIZE, 30s.

Extract from the Special Report to the British Medical Journal on "The Relative Efficiency of Water Filters," by Drs. Sims Woodhead and Cartwright Wood, Jan. 22nd, 1898. "Experiments were carried out with the Filter H, an exceedingly good model which seems to subserve the functions of a Filter better than any we have yet seen described. . . . The output is so large that there is no reason why such Filters should not supply sufficient water for all household requirements. These Berkefeld Filters afford complete protection against the communication of waterborne disease."—Offices and Showrooms:—

THE BERKEFELD FILTER CO., Ltd., 121, Oxford-street, London, W.

City Depot: W. SCHACHT & CO., 26, Finsbury-pavement, London, E.C.

FOR YOUTHFUL APPEARANCE. BEAUTIFUL HAIR.

IMPERIAL HAIR DYES &c.

ONE LIQUID.

No. 1. Black.
No. 2. Dark Brown.
No. 3. Light Brown.
No. 4. Golden Brown or Auburn.
No. 5. Pure Golden.
No. 6. Imperial Hair Grower.

Harmless, Perfect, Permanent, and Odourless.

A Medical Certificate with each bottle.

2/6, 3/6, 5/-, AND 10/6

(PRIVATELY PACKED).

J. BRODIE,

41, Museum Street, London.

Established 1868. ONCE TRIED, ALWAYS USED.

21/- Post Free. The "Osoezi" Saddle 21/- Post Free

Is at once hygienic, anatomically correct, and pressure upon the perineum is avoided. No Saddle-Soreness, even after the hardest and most continuous riding.

Suitable for Ladies or Gentlemen. Easily adaptable to any Machine.

A. W. GAMAGE, LTD.,

126 to 129, Holborn E.C

VINOLIA TOILET REQUISITES.

4d PREMIER VINOLIA SOAP

(For Family Use).

For Delicate, Sensitive' Irritable Skins.

The CHEMIST AND DRUGGIST reports:

"An ideal soap, delightfully perfumed."

1/- per box of 3 Tablets.

6d FLORAL VINOLIA SOAP

(For Private Use).

Keeps the Skin as soft as Velvet.

The MEDICAL NEWS reports:

"Beautifully emollient and softening to the skin."

1/6 per box of 3 Tablets.

10d TOILET VINOLIA SOAP

(OTTO)

Scented with Choice Otto of Rose Perfume.

Beautifies the Complexion.

The GENTLEWOMAN reports:

"Strongly recommended to keep the skin smooth and free from roughness."

2/6 per Box of 3 Tablets.

6d BLONDEAU PERFUMES

Concentrated, Delicate, Pure.

*Vinolia Bouquet,	Rondeletia,
*Marequil,	Hyacinth,
*Jequilla,	Ylang Ylang
*Losaria,	Stephanotis
Wood Violet,	Opoponax,
White Heliotrope,	Patchouli,
Ess. Bouquet,	Musk,
Frangipanni,	Ambergris,
Jockey Club,	Amaryllis,
Maréchal Niel,	White Lilac,
Millefleur,	Narcissus,
White Rose,	Chypre,
Jasmin,	Violette de Parme,
Musk Rose,	Mignonette,
Honeysuckle,	Clematis,
New Mown Hay,	Wallflower,
Lily of the Valley,

Violet, | *Rhine Violets, | Peau d'Espagne.

6d., 1/-, 2/-, 3/-, and 5/- per bottle.

*These perfumes are not supplied in the 6d. quality.

1/- VINOLIA HAIR WASH

DRY. Freshens and cleanses the Hair, and preserves it free from any oily moist appearance.

MOIST. Imparts a natural gloss to the Hair

1/- per Bottle.

Each in 3 odours: Portugal, Rose, and Violet.

1/1½ VINOLIA CREAM

For Itching, Face Spots, Sunburn, &c.

The LANCET reports:

"An emollient cream for the skin in eczema, rash, eruptions, &c."

1/1½, 1/9, 3/6, and 6/- per Box.

1/- VINOLIA POWDER

For Redness, Roughness, Toilet Nursery, &c.

The LADY'S PICTORIAL reports:

"Superseding the old-fashioned toilet powders which are apt to cause acne spots on the face by blocking up the pores of the skin."

In White, Pink, and Cream Tints.
1/-, 1/9, 3/6, and 6/- per Box.

VINOLIA SHAVING SOAP.

6d

(STICKS AND FLAT CAKES.)

Causes no Blotches.

STICKS: Premier 6d., Toilet 1/-, 1/6, 2/3, Vestal 2/-.

FLAT CAKES: Premier 1/-, Toilet 2/-, Vestal 2/6.

6d LYPSYL.

A Coralline Emollient for Dry, Rough, Cracked, or Pallid Lips.

In Rose-Red and White Tints, 6d. and 1/- a Tube

6d VINOLIA LAVENDER WATER.

Natural and Very Lasting.

Contains the finest Essential Oils, Concentrated, therefore the Most Economical.

6d., 1/-, 2/-, and 3/6.

2/- VINOLIA TOILET WATER.

This is prepared with delicate, refreshing perfumes, and is a most exquisite and delightful preparation to use either clear or in water for the Toilet or in the bath.

2s. per Bottle.

6d PREMIER VINOLIA DENTIFRICE

Aromatic, Tonic, Refreshing, Preservative.

Keeps the Teeth Ivory White.

Premier in Round Box and Glass Bottle, 6d.
English—2/6.
American—1/6.

6d VINOLIA TOOTH SOAP.

An exquisite preparation for the Teeth. Delightfully perfumed and free from any injurious ingredients.

In Round Metal Box, 6d.

6d VINOLIA TOOTH PASTE.

Delicately Perfumed.

Whitens and Cleanses the Teeth, without in any way injuriously affecting the dental structures.

In Collapsable Tube, 6d.

6d BLONDEAU Inexhaustible Lavender SMELLING SALTS.

These Smelling Salts are of exceptional Strength and most Refreshing. They are agreeably scented, the pleasant odour of Lavender being very pronounced.

6d. and 9d. per Bottle.

6d VINOLIA EAU DE COLOGNE.

Fragrant. Refreshing.

As fine as can possibly be made.

The "Court Circular" reports:

"Vinolia Eau de Cologne we consider is absolutely unequalled for strength, purity, and delicacy of aroma."

6d., 1/-, 2/-, 3/3, and 5/3.

3d per 2-oz. Packet. VINOLIA VIOLET POWDER.

Sanitary. Antiseptic. Soothing.

Specially prepared for Toilet and Nursery use.

In 2-oz. and ¼-lb. Packets, 3d. & 6d.
In ¼-lb. Tins, 6d.
In ½-lb. Tins, 9d.

VINOLIA COMPANY, Ltd., MALDEN CRESCENT, LONDON, N.W.

FLORILINE

FOR THE TEETH AND BREATH

Is the BEST LIQUID DENTIFRICE in the WORLD.

PREVENTS THE DECAY OF THE TEETH.

Renders the Teeth Pearly White.

IS PERFECTLY HARMLESS AND DELICIOUS TO THE TASTE.

Is Partly Composed of Honey, and Extracts from Sweet Herbs and Plants.

Of all Chemists and Perfumers throughout the World.

2s. 6d. per Bottle.

FLORILINE TOOTH POWDER,

Only put in Glass Jars, Price 1s.

THE MEXICAN HAIR RENEWER

Prevents the Hair from Falling off.

Restores Grey or White Hair to its ORIGINAL COLOUR.

Being delicately perfumed, it leaves no Unpleasant Odour.

IS NOT A DYE.

Should be in every House where a HAIR RENEWER is needed.

ASK YOUR CHEMIST OR HAIRDRESSER FOR

THE MEXICAN HAIR RENEWER.

Price 3s. 6d. per bottle.

A HEALTHY HOME

Is obtained by using "PEGAMOID" Brand Leathers, Wall Papers, Window Blinds, Paints, &c., throughout the same.

THE PEGAMOID BRAND.

LEATHER for Furniture, Carriages, &c., is cheaper than Morocco. Durable, Dirtproof, Scratchproof. Supplied in scores of designs. Easily cleaned with a damp sponge.

WINDOW BLINDS never need be sent to the cleaners, as they can be washed with soap and water by the housemaid, without removal.

PAINTS, ENAMELS, &c., For Iron, Wood, and Stone Work, Artistic Decorations. Impervious to, and unaffected by Weather, Oils, Acids, and Gases. Germproof and Washable.

Apply to your Upholsterers and Decorators for Patterns and Prices. Applications from the trade only to

PEGAMOID LIMITED,

144, QUEEN VICTORIA ST., London, E.C.

Agencies in Manchester, Liverpool, Glasgow, Newcastle-on-Tyne, Birmingham, Bristol, and Southampton.

Solid Silver, £4 4s.

Substantially made afternoon tea set on approval. If you decide within two weeks that you do not want it, the money will be returned. Every piece is the highest strength consistent with neatness, and will last a life-time. English Hall Marked.

Delivered safe and secure on receipt of

£4 4s.

WATCHMAKERS' ALLIANCE LTD.,

227, Regent-st., & 184, Oxford-st., London.

The Purest and the Nicest.

Hovis Bread

Perfectly Self Digestive.

Hovis Bread is baked and delivered daily by all good class Bakers in the British Isles; Hovis Biscuits are sold by most Grocers and Bakers; or 6d. and 1s. Samples of Bread and Biscuits will be sent on receipt of stamps by THE HOVIS-BREAD FLOUR CO., LTD., Millers, Macclesfield.

The VICTORIA DATE CO., Ltd., Food and Condiment Specialists, beg to draw attention to the following preparations, for the purity and general excellence of which they have obtained numerous awards—Gold Medals, &c.

Victoria Date Vinegar.

The New Vinegar. This condiment is prepared exclusively from dates. It is absolutely pure. Culinary experts pronounce it far superior for Cooking and Pickling purposes to Malt or White Wine Vinegars, as, though of a similar flavour to these, it is non-injurious, and can therefore be used with impunity by the most dyspeptic. It is far and away the best for table use. The leading Pickle and Sauce Manufacturers use it exclusively, among others, POTTER'S PERFECT PICKLES are prepared in Victoria Date Vinegar.

Derby Sauce.

This new Sauce has rapidly taken the first place in popular favour. A trial is sufficient to give it a permanent place in the cruet. Prepared from a Persian recipe of wide reputation in the East, it is a delightful appetiser. It is intended for use with Cold Meats, Chops, Steaks, &c.

Worcester Sauce.

This resembles other sauces of the same name in flavour, but possesses the unique quality of absolute purity.

The VICTORIA DATE CO., Ltd., will have much pleasure in forwarding tasting samples, post free, to applicants who will write to them, mentioning this paper, to Victoria Works, 112, Belvedere Road, Lambeth, London, S.E.

For Longhand, Shorthand, Pen-and-Ink Drawing, Music-Writing, indeed, whenever a Pen is necessary, use only a "SWAN."

Adds immeasurably to Celerity and Comfort in writing. Of all Pens most famous.

Made in 3 sizes at

10s. 6d.
16s. 6d.
25s.

UP TO £18 18s.
POST FREE.

MABIE, TODD & BARD,
DEPT. C. I.
93, Cheapside, London, E.C.
95a, REGENT ST., W., and 3, EXCHANGE ST., MANCHESTER.

Learning to write with the pen is a wearisome task. . .

But nothing can be simpler or more delightful than learning to manipulate

THE . . .

YOST

. . . Typewriter,

AND THE BENEFITS TO BE DERIVED FROM ITS USE ARE TESTIFIED TO BY AN ARMY OF PEOPLE

INVALUABLE to the Clergyman, the Judge, the Lawyer, the Editor, the Physician, the Business Man, and ALL WHO HAVE MUCH WRITING TO DO.

Sent on One Month's Hire, or Free Trial for Seven Days.

The YOST Typewriter Co., Ltd.,
50, Holborn Viaduct, London, E.C.

Achille Serre
HIGH CLASS DYER AND CLEANER,
263, OXFORD STREET,
& 10, NEW BOND STREET, W.
THE MOST ELABORATE COSTUME CLEANED WHOLE.
ALL COUNTRY ORDERS TO BE SENT TO
Works: White Post Lane, Hackney Wick, London, E.
WRITE FOR PRICE LIST.
CARRIAGE PAID ONE WAY ON ALL COUNTRY ORDERS.

NOTICE. THE NEW

"CRICKLITE" LAMPS

FOR DINNER TABLES AND DRAWING ROOMS.
Can be SEEN and purchased ONLY at
75, REGENT STREET, next door to St. James's Hall, and
156, REGENT STREET, AND NOWHERE ELSE.
A Special Set of CRICKLITE LAMPS expressly made for HIS IMPERIAL MAJESTY the SULTAN of TURKEY is now on view.
N.B.—Please write for the new Book of Designs, Now Ready.

Mülhens' "Rhine Violets"

4711 TRADE MARK.

READ THIS

From the "ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS."

. . . One cannot but feel eternally indebted to Mr. Ferd. Mülhens for having invented so altogether delicious and delightful a perfume as the "Rhine Violets." . . Little wonder indeed that this king of scents should be imitated as widely and piratically as it assuredly is, for no essence of modern times has approached its well-merited fame and favour. . . . Rhine Violets perfume is one thing and Mülhens' "Rhine Violets" (as sold by all good Chemists) is another, and if all who have tested the fragrant and delicious essences which bear this inventor's name would insist on seeing it on the labels, there would be fewer ensuing disillusionments. . . . Mülhens has, in fact, discovered and perfected the following special perfume of "Rhine Violets" — "Maréchal Niel," "Rhine Gold," and "Malmaison," and without the magic prefix of his name, it may be taken that all such so-called scents are but "base-born counterfeits." . . .

3/-, 5/6, 9/-, 20/- per bottle.
"Rhine Violet" Sachets, 2/6 each.
"Rhine Violet" Soap, 2/6 per tablet, or 7/- per box of 3 tablets.
Of most dealers in first-class Perfumes, or from

4711 Depot, 62, NEW BOND STREET, W.

CARTER 6A NEW CAVENDISH ST. PORTLAND PLACE, LONDON.

ONLY ADDRESS OF ORIGINAL CARTER
LITERARY MACHINE.

For holding book, lamp, meals, &c., in any position over an easy chair, bed, or sofa.
Deliciously luxurious. A most useful gift. Prices from 17/6

Carrying Chairs from £1.
Breakfast in Bed Tables from 30/-

INVALID FURNITURE.
ADJUSTABLE COUCHES and BEDS from £1. 10/-

Bed Lift £3. 10/-
Reclining Boards, 25/-
Walking Machines
Portable W.C.'s.
Electric Bells, Urinals, &c.
Air & Water Beds.

Bed Rests 7/6
Leg Rests 10/-
Crutches 10/6
Bed Baths 12 6
Commodes, £1. 5/-

Self-Propelling Chairs from £2

BATH CHAIRS FROM £1. 5/-

ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUES POST FREE.

JOHN CARTER, 6a, NEW CAVENDISH ST. Portland-pl. London, W.

REAL GERMAN HOLLOW GROUND

KROPP RAZOR

Black Handle 5/6 | Pair, Ivory Handles, in Russia Leather Case. 21/-
Ivory Handle 7/6 | Kropp's Duplex Strop 7/6
Kropp's Strop Paste ...6d.

☞ Write for Pamphlet, "Shaver's Kit and Outfit." Post free.

Wholesale: OSBORNE, GARRETT, & CO., LONDON, W.

MASSAGE AT HOME.

The MATTO CHAIN

Used by Sandow and all the leading Athletes, Cyclists, &c.
Recommended by the Medical Profession.
For Liver Complaints, Rheumatism, and all Nervous Disorders. Prevents Obesity.

Price 7s. 6d. each. By Post, 4d. extra. From all Chemists.

MATTO LIMITED, 32 & 34, Clerkenwell-rd. London, E.C.

BEST & SAFEST DENTIFRICE
SOLD BY ALL CHEMISTS AND PERFUMERS IN ELEGANT CRYSTAL TOILET CASKET
PRICE 2/6.
ALSO IN PATENT METALLIC BOX
PRICE 1/-

PRESERVE YOUR TEETH
BY USING THE
OS TOOTH BLOCK

Established 20 years
OVER 3000 TESTIMONIALS

BEST AND SAFEST NATURAL APERIENT.

Hunyadi János

"The Prototype of all Bitter Waters."
THE LANCET.

CAUTION.
Every Bottle bears the Signature of the Proprietor, ANDREAS SAXLEHNER.

PRUDENTIAL ASSURANCE COMPANY, LIMITED.—
Holborn Bars, London.

EVERY DESCRIPTION OF LIFE ASSURANCE AND ANNUITY BUSINESS TRANSACTED.
REVERSIONS PURCHASED.

Invested Funds, £30,000,000.

The last Annual Report can be obtained on application to the Secretary.

SPECIAL ADVANTAGES TO PRIVATE INSURERS.
THE IMPERIAL INSURANCE COMPANY, LIMITED. FIRE. Est. 1803, 1, Old Broad-st., E.C., & 22, Pall Mall, S.W. Subd. Capital, £1,200,000. Paid-up, £300,000. Total funds, over £1,500,000.—E. COZENS SMITH, Gen. Man.

NEW YORK CENTRAL & HUDSON RIVER RAILROAD CO.
3½ PER CENT. GOLD MORTGAGE BONDS OF 1997.

London and New York,
1st June, 1898.

Referring to our Circular of 19th February, 1898, offering to exchange various New York Central & Hudson River Railroad Co. Bonds for the New 3½ per cent. Gold Mortgage Bonds of 1997 of the same Company, we hereby give notice that our offer to supply the New Bonds at 103½ and interest will be withdrawn on the 10th instant, after which date the rate will be 104 and interest.
New York Central 4 per cent. Debentures of 1905 will be received at 103$\frac{3}{8}$ ex coupon due 1st June.

J. S. MORGAN & Co.
J. P. MORGAN & Co.

BIRKBECK BANK (Estab. 1851), Southampton-buildings, Chancery-lane, London. Two and a-half per cent. interest allowed on deposits, repayable on demand. Two per cent. on current accounts, on the minimum monthly balances when not below £100.
The BIRKBECK ALMANACK with particulars, post free.
FRANCIS RAVENSCROFT, Manager.

H. HALFORD and COMPANY,

70 and 71,
Palmerston Buildings,
Old Broad Street,
London.

ESTABLISHED 1869.

Business in Stocks and Shares at close prices.

Dealings reported by wire if required.

Prompt Settlements.

Thousands of Testimonials from Clients.

Americans and Canadians a Speciality. Also Westralians and Kaffirs.

Lists of Closing Prices gratis.

Telegrams: "Monitor, London."

NO CONNECTION WITH ANY OTHER FIRM.

THE STOCK EXCHANGE.

NOTICE.

No Member of the Stock Exchange is allowed to advertise for business purposes, or to issue circulars to persons other than his own principals.
Persons who advertise as Brokers or Share Dealers are not Members of the Stock Exchange, or under the control of the Committee.
A List of Members of the Stock Exchange who are Stock and Share Brokers may be seen at the Bartholomew-lane Entrance to the Bank of England, or obtained on application to

EDWARD SATTERTHWAITE,
Secretary to the Committee of the Stock Exchange.
Committee Room, The Stock Exchange, London, E.C.

LIQUEURS OF THE GRANDE CHARTREUSE.

These delicious Liqueurs, which have come so much into public favour on account of their wonderful properties of aiding Digestion and preventing Dyspepsia, can now be had of all the principal Wine and Spirit Merchants, and all good Hotels and Restaurants throughout the Kingdom.
Sole Consignee: W. DOYLE, 35, Crutched Friars, London, E.C

DENTAKON

For Cleaning
ARTIFICIAL TEETH,
EITHER
Gold, Platinum, or Vulcanite,
Deodorizing, Disinfecting, removing Grease, keeping them Bright and Clean as when new.
ALL WEARERS SHOULD TRY IT.
Recommended by many eminent Dentists.
In Boxes, 1s. 6d., through any Chemist, or Post free from Maker,
C. LOWE, Chemist, Surbiton, S.W.

GOUT AND RHEUMATISM.

All Pain, Swelling, and Inflammation disappear after two to three doses of Dr. LIND'S (M.D.) Specific "LINDINE."
GUARANTEED HARMLESS. NEVER FAILS. Price 5s. per Bottle, with full directions and Advice, from the Sole Proprietor: O. E. HORN, D.Sc., Bournemouth.

The Subscription List will close on or before Wednesday, June 8th, for Town and Country.

The Goldsmiths' & Silversmiths' Co.

Incorporated under the Companies Acts, 1862 to 1893. LIMITED.

CAPITAL - - £600,000,

DIVIDED INTO

60,000 Five per cent. Cumulative Preference Shares of £5 each	£300,000
300,000 Ordinary Shares of £1 each	300,000
	£600,000

The Preference Shares will be entitled to a fixed Cumulative Preference Dividend of 5 per cent. per annum, payable half-yearly in March and September in each year, and will also be entitled to rank in respect of Capital in priority to the Ordinary Shares.

The Preference Shares will be the first Capital Charge upon the undertaking, and no Debentures or Debenture Stock can be created without the sanction of a three-fourths majority of the Preference Shareholders present at a meeting specially convened.

No part of this issue has been underwritten or guaranteed, and no promotion money has been or will be paid.

There are no Founders' or Management Shares.

The whole of the Ordinary Shares will be taken by the Vendors in part payment of the purchase-money.

ISSUE OF 60,000 FIVE PER CENT. CUMULATIVE PREFERENCE SHARES OF £5 EACH AT PAR, PAYABLE AS FOLLOWS :—	Per Share.

On Application	£0 10 0
On Allotment...	2 0 0
On July 12th	2 10 0
	£5 0 0

DIRECTORS.

WILLIAM GIBSON, 112, Regent-street, W.
JOHN L. LANGMAN, 112, Regent-street, W. } The Founders of the Business.
A. G. MAGINNIS, 112, Regent-street, W.
W. S. SALISBURY, 112, Regent-street, W.
C. E. NEWBEGIN, 112, Regent-street, W. } Managers of Departments.

Bankers.—BARCLAY & COMPANY, Limited, 1, Pall Mall East, S.W., 54, Lombard-street, E.C., and all Branches.

Brokers.—PANMURE GORDON, HILL, & CO., Hatton-court, Threadneedle-street, E.C.

Solicitors.—LUMLEY & LUMLEY, 37, Conduit-street, W., and 15, Old Jewry-chambers, E.C.

Auditors.—PRICE, WATERHOUSE, & CO., 44, Gresham-street, E.C.

Secretary (pro tem.),—J. W. RICE. Registered Office.—112, Regent-street, London, W.

PROSPECTUS.

This Company has been formed to acquire, carry on, and further develop the business of Goldsmiths and Silversmiths, Diamond and Gem Merchants, Watch and Clock Makers, &c., founded in 1880, and since carried on under the well-known title of The Manufacturing Goldsmiths' and Silversmiths' Company, at 112 & 110, Regent-street; 48 & 49, Warwick-street; and 48, Glasshouse-street, W., these premises together forming one of the best arranged Show Rooms in London.

The great progress of the business, which is attributable to the admirable system upon which it is conducted, has been steady and continuous, and the valuable connection extends throughout the United Kingdom, the Colonies, India, and all parts of the world. In 1893 the valuable business of the Goldsmiths' Alliance, Limited (A. B. Savory & Sons), late of Cornhill, was purchased, and transferred to the above-mentioned premises in Regent-street.

The Directors have every confidence that the profits of t' : business will continue to increase, the capabilities of future expansion being estimated by the growth in the volume of trade, which has more than doubled during the last eight years.

The Assets to be acquired by the Company consist of :—

(a) The entire Stock-in-Trade; Cash in Bank, on Deposit, and in hand; Book Debts and Bills Receivable, both guaranteed by the Vendors; Fixtures, Fittings, Registered Designs, Trade Marks, Blocks, Dies, &c.; the valuable Goodwill of the Business and all other Property of every kind or description connected with the business as on 31st January, 1898.

(b) The Leasehold Properties, 112 and 110, Regent-street, 48 and 49, Warwick-street, and 48, Glasshouse-street, W.

The Assets thus taken over include, in the opinion of the Directors, ample Working Capital for present requirements and the future development of the Business.

The Business will be taken over by the Company as a going concern as from the 31st January, 1898, the date of the last stock-taking, the Vendors discharging all liabilities existing at that date, the Company having the benefit of all profit from that date, subject to the payment to the Vendors of interest at the rate of 4 per cent. per annum on the purchase-money to the date of the completion of the purchase.

Since the commencement of the business, the books and accounts have been regularly audited by Messrs. Johnston & Walsh, Chartered Accountants, Belfast, and have since been examined by Messrs. Price, Waterhouse, & Co., whose certificate is as under :—

44, Gresham-street, E.C., May 9th, 1898.

To the Manufacturing Goldsmiths' and Silversmiths' Company,
GENTLEMEN, 112, Regent-street, W.

We have examined the Books and Accounts of the Manufacturing Goldsmiths' and Silversmiths' Company as audited by Messrs. Johnston & Walsh, of Belfast.

Without charging Interest on Capital and Loans or Remuneration for Partners' Management, we find that the Profits of the Business have been as follows :—

Year ending January 31st,	1894	...	£31,095 14 2
,, ,,	1895	...	£31,840 0 6
,, ,,	1896	...	£39,896 11 5
,, ,,	1897	...	£43,010 1 5
,, ,,	1898	...	£50,788 6 3

Ample Depreciation on the value of the Leases and Fixtures as standing in the Books of the Firm, and the cost of all advertising, have been charged before arriving at these results.

We are, Gentlemen,
Yours faithfully,
PRICE, WATERHOUSE & CO.

The amount required to pay the Dividend on the Preference Shares being £15,000 per annum, it will be seen that, on the basis of the average profits of the last three years, such Dividend is covered nearly three times over.

The Preference Shareholders will be entitled to attend and vote at all meetings where the propositions to be submitted directly affect their rights or privileges.

Provision has been made in the Articles of Association, that the Dividend payable in any one year upon the Ordinary Shares shall not exceed 7½ per cent. until a Reserve Fund amounting to £50,000 has been provided out of profits.

The price to be paid by the Company for the Stock-in-Trade, Leases, Fixtures, Fittings, Cash in Bank, on deposit and in hand, Book Debts, Bills Receivable, Registered Designs, Trade Marks, Blocks, Dies, Goodwill, &c., &c., and all assets of the business as on 31st January, 1898, has been fixed by the Vendors at £600,000, payable as follows :—By the allotment as fully-paid of the whole of the Ordinary Shares of the Company, and as to the balance in cash.

The Vendors will pay all the costs, charges, and expenses of, and incidental to, the formation and registration of the Company up to and inclusive of the first allotment of shares.

Mr. William Gibson and Mr. John L. Langman, the founders of the business will, in accordance with the Articles of Association, act as Directors of the Company for a period of at least five years. The Directors associated with them on the Board have for many years held important positions in the practical management of the business, so that its continuity on the same successful lines is thus practically assured.

The following Contracts have been entered into :—

(1) An Agreement dated the 26th day of May, 1898, between William Gibson and John Lawrence Langman, the Vendors, of the one part, and John G. Johnston on behalf of the Company of the other part, for the sale of the property to be acquired by the Company.

(2) A Deed of Covenant dated the 1st day of June, 1898, between Alexander Gordon Maginnis, Walter Surmon Salisbury and Charles Edwin Newbegin of the one part, and the Company of the other part, being that referred to in Clause 77 of the Company's Articles of Association.

(3) Three Agreements dated the 26th day of May, 1898, respectively made between the said Alexander Gordon Maginnis, Walter Surmon Salisbury and Charles Edwin Newbegin of the one part, and James William Rice on behalf of the Company of the other part, relating to the Management of the Business.

There may be trading contracts and arrangements in connection with the business, some of which may be contracts within the meaning of the 38th Section of the Companies Act, 1867. Applicants for Shares will be deemed to have had notice of such contracts and to have agreed with the Company as Trustee for the Directors and other persons liable to waive any claim they may have against them for not more fully complying with the requirements of the said section, and subscriptions will only be received and allotments made on that condition.

Application will be made in due course for a settlement and official quotation of the Preference Shares on the London Stock Exchange.

Applications for Preference Shares must be made on the accompanying form and forwarded to the Bankers of the Company with the amount of deposit. If no allotment be made the deposit will be returned in full, and if the number of Shares allotted be less than the number applied for, the balance will be applied towards the payment due on allotment, and any excess returned to the applicant.

Failure to pay an instalment on the due date will render all previous payments liable to forfeiture.

Copies of the Memorandum and Articles of Association, and of the above-named contracts, may be inspected at the offices of the Solicitors of the Company, No. 37, Conduit-street, London, W.

Prospectuses and Forms of Application can be obtained at the Company's Offices, and of the Bankers, Brokers, and Solicitors.

112, Regent-street, London, W.
June 2nd, 1898.

This Application Form can be used.
Separate Cheques must accompany each Application.

THE GOLDSMITHS' & SILVERSMITHS' CO., Ltd.

Issue of 60,000 Five per Cent. Cumulative Preference Shares of £5 each at Par.

FORM OF APPLICATION.

To the Directors of The Goldsmiths' & Silversmiths' Company, Limited.
GENTLEMEN,

Having paid to the Bankers of the Company the sum of £..... being a deposit of Ten Shillings per Share on.....Five per Cent. Cumulative Preference Shares of £5 each, of The Goldsmiths' and Silversmiths' Company, Limited, I request you to allot to me that number of Shares upon the terms of the Prospectus; and I agree to accept the same, or any smaller number that may be allotted to me, and to pay the further instalments upon such allotted Shares as required by the terms of such Prospectus; and I authorise you to place my name on the Register of Members in respect of the Shares so allotted; and I also agree with the Company (as Trustee for the Directors and other persons liable) to waive any claim I may have against them for not more fully complying in the said Prospectus with the requirements of Section 38 of the Companies Act, 1867.

Name (in full) .....
Address (in full) .....
.....
Occupation (if any) .....
Signature.....
Date ....., '898.

Please write these Particulars clearly.

THE "SAN REMO" BABY CAR.

Price as drawn £6 6s. nett.
Cheaper qualities from £3 3s

HITCHINGS' GOLD MEDAL BABY STORES

THIS elegant Baby Car is equally adapted for use as a Sleeping Car for a young baby, or a Mail Car for an older child.

1. Newest registered design.
2. Runs on four silent wheels.
3. Small light front wheels.
4. Very safe bed being lower than in any other Car.
5. Hitchings' "Versailles" Cee Springs. Very easy.
6. Occupies less space than any other.
7. Has deep well for legs and feet. No cramping.
8. Hitchings' Patent "Any Position Hood."
9. Half the weight of a wood body. Finest cane & rattan.
10. Cool in summer.
11. Artistically painted.
12. Beautifully upholstered in biscuit, biscuit and pale blue, mignonette green, &c.

Under Royal Patronage. The Emporium of Baby Carriages and Baby Cars par excellence:

HITCHINGS, LIMITED, have recently had the honour of building the Baby Carriage for the Baby Prince Edward of York, having previously executed orders for H.M. the Queen, H.R.H. the Duke of Edinburgh, H.R.H. the Duke of Connaught, H.R.H. Princess Henry of Battenberg, H.R.H. the Duchess of Fife, H.R.H. Princess Henry of Prussia, &c. Also the Royal and Imperial families of Russia, Germany, Denmark, Portugal, and Sweden.

Hitchings' Baby Carriages from 2 to 25 Guineas, and Baby Cars from 15/6 to 10 Guineas, are not only the Best, but also 25 per cent. cheaper than those sold by dealers and stores. A carriage should always be purchased from the actual manufacturer. Enquiries receive prompt and courteous attention. Illustrations free. Correspondence solicited.

LONDON { 198, Oxford Street, W.
19-21, Ludgate Hill, E.C.
28, St. George's Place (Hyde Park Corner).

LIVERPOOL: 74, Bold Street,

Bankers: CITY BANK. LTD., CAPITAL & COUNTIES BANK. Telegram Address: "HITCHINGS LONDON. Works: DUKE STREET, LIVERPOOL; LUDGATE SQUARE, LONDON. Boston (U.S.A.) Agency: 92, WASHINGTON STREET.

HITCHINGS' "PRINCESS MAY" BABY CARRIAGE IS MOST SUITABLE FOR A CHRISTENING PRESENT, BEING RECHERCHE & UNPROCURABLE ELSEWHERE.

Before going elsewhere send for Hitchings' Pictorial Price Book free on mentioning "TRUTH."

Enormous Demand.

There can be no surer sign of popularity than the enormous demand all over the country for

LIPTONS' DELICIOUS TEAS

They are appreciated everywhere for their delicate flavour and exquisite aroma, and undoubtedly have attained the pinnacle of fame.

LIPTONS' DELICIOUS TEAS. Millions drink them daily.

Millions of people are daily drinking and enjoying these delicious Teas, fresh from the sweet-scented island of Ceylon. Liptons own some of the most famous estates in Ceylon, which cover thousands of acres of the best tea-growing land, including such well-known gardens as Dambattenne, Laymastotte, Monerakande, Mahadambatenne, Mousakelle, Pooprassie, Hanagalla, Gigranella, Karandagalla, Daminatenne, Oakfield, and Nahakettia, in connection with which several thousand natives are constantly employed.

LIPTONS CONTROL THE TEA MARKET.

LIPTONS' TEAS HAVE THE LARGEST SALE IN THE WORLD

ROYAL APPOINTMENT
LIPTON,
Tea Merchant by Special Appointment To Her Majesty The Queen.

BUY FROM THE GROWERS.
The Finest Tea the World can produce.
PER 1/7 LB.
NO HIGHER PRICE.
RICH, PURE, AND FRAGRANT.
PER 1/- AND 1/4 LB.

LIPTON LTD.,

TEA, COFFEE, AND COCOA PLANTERS, CEYLON, THE LARGEST TEA, COFFEE, AND PROVISION DEALERS IN THE WORLD.

Chief Offices: CITY ROAD, LONDON. Branches and Agencies throughout the World.

Ceylon Offices and Tea and Coffee Shipping Warehouses: PRINCE STREET, and MADDEMA MILLS, CINNAMON GARDENS, COLOMBO. Indian Offices and Shipping Warehouses: HARE STREET, CALCUTTA.

PATENT FAST DYED KHAKI MATERIALS.

Absolutely Fast to Washing.
Stand any amount of wear.

Most useful for all kinds of wear by Ladies, Gentlemen, and Children.

Contractors to H.M. WAR OFFICE and INDIA OFFICE.

WOOL.
SERGES.
FLANNELS.
CORDS.
LEG BANDAGES.

COTTON.
DRILLS.
SERGE.
CORDS.

Price List and Patterns Free on application to

E. SPINNER & CO., MANCHESTER AND BOMBAY, Sole Agents.

OUR PUZZLES.

RULES.

1. The sum of £2. 2s. will be given every week for the best EPIGRAM, CONUNDRUM, LIPOGRAM, BOUTS-RIMÉS, or whatever the announced subject of the competition for the week may be.

2. The Puzzle Editor reserves the right, however, of dividing the above sum between two or more competitors, or of withholding the prize, should exceptional circumstances render such a course desirable.

3. The decision and award of the Puzzle Editor must be considered final and irrevocable, and, for obvious reasons, no appeal from his critical judgments can be entertained.

4. In every instance the prize will be given in money, subject to no condition whatever, except the publication of the winner's real name and address in this journal.

5. Competitors will be allowed eleven days for the composition and despatch of their efforts; but all such communications must, at the latest, be received at the TRUTH OFFICE by the first post on the morning of the second Monday succeeding the publication of the subject for competition.

6. Not more than one Prize will be given a Quarter to the same competitor.

7. ALL NEW CONTRIBUTORS ARE REQUIRED TO FORWARD WITH THEIR FIRST ANSWERS THEIR REAL NAMES AND ADDRESSES FOR REGISTRATION; such names and addresses will not be published except in the case of Prize-winners.

8. The nom-de-plume chosen by competitors should not exceed 12, and must under no circumstances consist of more than 14, letters.

9. COMPETITORS MUST ON NO ACCOUNT CHANGE THEIR NOMS-DE-PLUME THEY HAVE ONCE ASSUMED.

10. On the announcement of the Prize-winner's nom-de-plume, the successful competitor must write and make formal application for the Prize, stating the address to which the cheque must be sent. Any competitor failing to do so within three months of winning the Prize will forfeit all claim to the same.

11. No communications can be received on post-cards, by telegraph, or by hand. They must all be sent by the time named above. All post letters addressed—

PUZZLE EDITOR OF "TRUTH," CARTERET-STREET, QUEEN ANNE'S-GATE, S.W.

"TRUTH" PUZZLE, No. 1,006.

I find it necessary to delay the announcement of the name of the winner of this Puzzle Prize until next week.

"TRUTH" PUZZLE, No. 1,007.

As a further selection of Acrostics is published this week the name of the successful competitor will not be given for another week.

"TRUTH" PUZZLE, No. 1,008.

TO NAME THE AUTHORS OF TWELVE QUOTATIONS SERVING AS TITLES FOR PICTURES IN THIS YEAR'S EXHIBITION OF THE ROYAL ACADEMY.

The following are the twelve Quotations which were given:—

1. "Thou shalt not lack the flower that's like thy face, pale primrose."

2. "And here will sigh thine alder tree
And here thine aspen shiver."

3. "How can a bird that is born for joy
Sit in a cage and sing?"

4. "At sixteen years she had no care,
How should she, sweet, and pure and fair?
And there pursued her everywhere
Butterflies all white."

5. "It's colours changing when from clouds and sun
Shades after shades upon its surface run."

6. "Then blinded Death could steal about unheeded,
For in those fields the scythe is never needed."

7. "Of Truth doth here this truth appeares,
Withouten al disgyse,
How men do stryve wych are y-lyve
To shutte her from thir eyes."

8. "He to the lowly soul doth still Himself impart."

9. "Page and monarch,
Forth they went together,
Through the rude wind's wild lament
And the bitter weather."

10. "For, though encircled round by winding coils of sin,
The soul of innocence doth take no taint within."

11. "Man made me, and my will
Is to my maker still,
Whom now the currents con, the rollers steer—
Lifting forlorn to spy
Trailed smoke along the sky,
Falling afraid lest any keel come near."

12. "Motus doceri gaudet Ionicos
Matura virgo; et fingitur artubus
Jam nunc."

Let me at once admit that I am myself unable to trace the whole of the above quotations to their sources. The following are the authors and poems which I have ascertained up to the present time:—

The first quotation is from the second scene of the fourth act of Shakespeare's "Cymbeline." The second is to be found in "A Farewell," by the late Lord Tennyson. The lines in No. 3 occur in "The Schoolboy," by William Blake. The fourth quotation comes from Mr. John Davidson's "For the Crown," which was a translation, or perhaps I should say adaptation, made by him for Mr. Forbes Robertson of François Coppee's "Pour la Couronne." Quotation No. 5 is from the works of a now little-read poet, the Rev. George Crabbe. The lines are to be found in "The Borough, Letter I. Quotations Nos. 6 and 7, lines used by Mr. Herbert A. Olivier and Mr. Byam Shaw for their pictures, I cannot identify, and I should not be surprised if in each case the artist himself is responsible for the lines in question. The lines in quotation No. 8 come from the well-known "Christian Year" of Keble. The hymn of which they form part is headed "The Purification of Saint Mary the Virgin." The lines beginning "Page and Monarch, forth they went together" come from an old Christmas carol, "Good King Wenceslaus," translated from the German, I believe, by Dr. W. Neale. The quotation numbered 10 is another of those I am unable to trace. Here again it is quite possible that the couplet was composed by the exhibitor who uses it as a motto for his statue. The lines in quotation No. 11 are from Mr. Rudyard Kipling's "The Derelict," in the volume of his verses entitled "The Seven Seas." The Latin quotation used by the President of the Royal Academy for his picture is from the sixth ode in the third Book of the Odes of Horace. For the present I am unable to say who, of the competitors that have sent in lists in connection with this competition, has proved most successful. But I hope to have examined all the answers in time to announce the Prize-winner next week.

"TRUTH" PUZZLE, No. 1,011.

The usual prize of Two Guineas is offered this week for

THE MOST AMUSING ORIGINAL ANECDOTE DEALING WITH GOLF AND GOLFERS.

"Original," as applied to the anecdotes asked for, must be taken to signify such as have not yet appeared in print; and I would appeal to all competitors to observe this condition most strictly. All anecdotes must reach me by the morning of Monday, June 20, at the latest.

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

 The real name, with the address, of JEMIMA, winner of Prize No. 1,002, is Mrs. Goodwyn, Ablelands, Merston, Chichester.

 The real name, with the address, of MOS, winner of Prize No. 1,004, is W. H. J. Allin, Esq., 33, Ker-street, Devonport.

 The real name, with the address, of LEAF RULE, winner of a half of Prize No. 1,005, is Ernest A. Fuller, Esq., 10, The Circus, Greenwich Park, S.E.

 The real name, with the address, of HARPSICHORD, winner of a half of Prize No. 1,003, is Mrs. Reeve, Radley Cottage, Maidenhead.

JEMIMA.—Your prize cheque will be forwarded to you when the next batch is sent out.

PYRAMID.—Thanks for your note as to the misprint. I will substitute your amended "Acrostic" for that first sent by you.

BARITONE.—Certainly.

CROSS PATCH.—The omission of your name was quite unintentional.

KING HAL.—The corrections shall be made.

IMPISI.—You have made me curious to know how and when and where "the whole cult of legitimate poetry" (as you call it) decided that "art" was not a proper rhyme to "heart."

EDGCOMB.—Thanks for your letter. I have duly noted the correction.

WAVERLEY.—Your suggestion of "Excelsiorism," or "Excelsiomania," as an answer to Puzzle No. 1,006, arrived too late.

BIGSWEAR.—Your answer to Puzzle No. 1,006 was also too late.

SCRIVENER.—I fear that even the most ingenious of TRUTH Puzzle solvers would be unable to explain the anachronism to which you refer.

R. MARTIN.—It must not be supposed that the "Assorted Specimens—Good and Otherwise" are published in this page in the order of their merit. An attempt is made to select a number of representative answers from amongst those received, but the order in which they are printed is not intended to foreshadow the Puzzle Editor's judgment as to their relative excellence.

THE PUZZLE EDITOR.

"TRUTH" PUZZLE, No. 1,007.—ASSORTED SPECIMENS—GOOD AND OTHERWISE.

ACROSTICS ON LORD SALISBURY, WRITTEN IN AN EULOGISTIC AND A CRITICAL STRAIN.

 Having some space at my disposal, I am able to print a further selection of the Acrostics received.—PUZZLE EDITOR.

CRITICAL.

S "Stramash" there is, and has been, in the East,
A Alarm thereat he has daily increased;
L Loss thereby of prestige and fame,
I Isolation we truly can claim;
S Submissions he's made from hour to hour,
B Bluster, he wrongly considers, shows power;
U Upset the next General Election will see,
R Rout of the Tories there then will be;
Y Yells that each true Liberal will raise
When Salisbury's Government's seen its last days.

COMMENDATORY.

S Statesman thus wisely controlling our fate,
A Atbara's victory—the Mahdi's checkmate;
L Line of battleships in squadrons arrayed,
I Income of nation from which they are paid;
S Soudan campaign, Egypt's land to restore,
B Benin, the home of Fetish no more;
U Uganda, protected by lake, land, and sea,
R Rhodesia, at peace with Matabele;
Y Yoicks! tally-ho!—this the cheer we will raise!
"Luck to Lord Salisbury! Long be his days!"
Beta.

S is a Statesman supreme in debate,
A the Achievements by which he grew great;
L is his Loyalty, steadfast and true,
I the Ideal kept ever in view;
S is the Shrewdness that bid him beware
B of the Bluff of the false Russian bear;
U is the Union, Great Britain's salvation,
R are the Rads that would work its damnation;
Y is each Year that adds greater renown,
Through Salisbury, to England her Church and her Crown.

S is a Statesman Sero sed serio. *
A is the Answer received to a query O;
L that this means "a bit late but d——d leery O,"
I his Intentions which help to pave Hades;
S are the Smiles of the fair Primrose ladies,
B are the Buffets of each bye-election;
U are the Unionists ripe for defection,
R is the Rout of Joe, Arthur, and Halsbury;
Y is the end of "the Rule of Lord Salisbury."
* Sero sed serio the Cecil motto. Singeon.

S is the Sultan, whom he failed to amend,
A the Armenian, whom he dared not defend;
L is the Laughter, which in Crete he provokes,
I the Insistence, which he always revokes;
S is our Strength, which he never dares use,
B is the "Black Man," whom he does dare abuse;
U the Union of Paper, on which he insists,
R is this Reed, which each foreigner twists;
Y "Yes," already roars the old British Lion,
"A lath is this Salisbury; yes, a lath painted iron!"

S stands for Spain, which he knows to be dying,
A the Port Arthur, lost but by Czar's lying;
L is the League of the Primrose, which knows,
I as the Insight he'll in office disclose;
S is Soudan, which he means to regain,
B is the Baffers in Crete he'll yet tame!
U is the Union he is staunch to uphold,
R are the Rads, whom he's put in the cold;
Y, Yes, for in spite of them, England is true,
Crying "Salisbury for England!" England's for you!
Avonside.

S his Surrenders, "polite" but depressing,
A our Amazement at some acquiescing;
L is the Legend of Talienwan,
I Indignation at finding it gone;
S are his Sneers at the critics who doubt,
B Curzon's Brave, whom events have found out;
U Bismarck's Utterance (true iron man!),
R "painted Rod," iron colours, that "ran;"
Y is a Yielding that all would approve,
Salisbury resigning before the next move.

S the Success that's substantially ours,
A the Assaults that his skill overpowers;
L are the Living, the dominant races,
I their Invasion, in peace, of good places;
S is the Statesman, sagacious to shun
B all Belligerent tactics for "fun;"
U is the Ugly, the Jingo's disease,
R are his Ravings in impotent wheeze;
Y is the Yearning that Salisbury keeps power,
Salisbury resigning! Heaven spare us that hour!
Robert Martin.

S was a Simpleton passing as wise,
A was an Animal wore a disguise;*
L is a Liberal view of the case,
I the Intrigues that his Party disgrace;
S the Stupidity, seldom excelled,
B of a Braggart by Jingoes propelled;
U Is a Ukase to cut him adrift,
R is a Rabble to give him short shrift;
Y is the Youth of this country so fine,
Lustily calling on him to resign.

S was a Statesman veracious and sage,
A 's the Activity him doth engage;
L is the Lion whose welfare he seeks;
I is the Ignorance 'gainst him that speaks;
S is the Signs of the times that he sees,
B is the Band he draws in by degrees;
U is the Urgency he has foretold,
R is the Rumour that he has been sold;†
Y is the Yokel would have him resign.
Go it, Lord Salisbury, victory 's thine!
Béranger.

* Vide fable of Ass in Lion's skin.
† Vide Daily Press for many rumours to that effect, all groundless.

S is a Statesman, famous and wise,
A is Ambition, which caused him to rise;
L is his Lordly appearance, you know,
I is for India, which worried him so;
S is the Sadness we all of us feel,
B alfour is the man we prefer at the wheel;
U is the Use he has been to our land,
R is for Russia, who forces his hand;
Y is the question we all of us cry
When Salisbury declines all our foes to defy.

S for the Statesman who stands at our head,
A for old Albion, whom he has led;
L for the Lies the Russians have told,
I for our Indignation twofold;
S for the Staunchness, alas, that we lack,
B for our Brag (but then we're so slack!)
U for the Upstarts, all in one band,
R for the Rude things said of our land;
Y for the Yells the warlike all cry.
"Fight for us Salisbury, fight 'til we die!"
Crosspatch.

ASCOT RACES by LONDON AND SOUTH-WESTERN RAILWAY.

The Station at Ascot is within 400 yards of the Grand Stand, the whole distance being by an asphalted path.

ON MONDAY, 13th JUNE, A SPECIAL TRAIN will leave WATERLOO Station for ASCOT at 4.20 p.m., and other SPECIAL TRAINS as the Traffic may require, also extra Trains for Horses and Carriages.

ON TUESDAY 14th, WEDNESDAY 15th, THURSDAY 16th, and FRIDAY, 17th JUNE,

SPECIAL FAST TRAINS at frequent intervals from WATERLOO' Vauxhall, Hammersmith, Kensington (Addison-road), West Brompton, Chelsea, Clapham Junction, Twickenham, and Staines to ASCOT.

ON THE RACE DAYS SEVERAL OF THE ORDINARY TRAINS WILL BE SUSPENDED and SPECIAL TRAINS will run at Special Fares as after-mentioned.

CHEAP SPECIAL TRAIN on 14th, 15th, 16th, and 17th June, will leave WATERLOO Station for ASCOT, at 8.35 a.m., Hammersmith 8.18, Kensington (Addison-road) 8.29, West Brompton 8.32, Chelsea 8.34 a.m., returning from Ascot at 7.0 p.m., calling at Vauxhall, Clapham Junction, Richmond, Twickenham, Staines, and Virginia Water, both going and returning, at Single Journey, 3s. 6d.; Return, 5s. 6d.

SPECIAL TRAINS (1st and 2nd Class) from WATERLOO to ASCOT on each of the FOUR RACE DAYS from 9.30 a.m. till 12.45 p.m., returning from ASCOT to LONDON after the Races till 7.0 p.m. THESE SPECIAL TRAINS will, as a rule, stop at Clapham Junction, Twickenham, and Staines in both directions (except that between 10.45 and 11.45 a.m. the Down Trains will stop only at Staines, and that some of the earlier Return Specials will not stop between Ascot and Vauxhall).

SPECIAL FARES ON ALL THE RACE DAYS after 9.30 a.m. by SPECIAL TRAINS TO ASCOT. Single Journey, first class, 7s. 6d.; second class, 6s. Return, first class, 12s. 6d.; second class, 10s. RETURN TICKETS, FIRST CLASS, AVAILABLE FOR ALL THE FOUR DAYS, 42s.

ADDITIONAL BOOKING OFFICES. Tickets may be procured and general information given on and after Saturday, June 11th, at the Company's West End Office, 30, Regent-street, Piccadilly-circus; the Central Office, 9, Grand Hotel-buildings, Charing Cross; the City Office, Exeter-buildings, Arthur-street West; Dun Horse Yard, High-street, Borough; Lime-house Office, 799, Commercial-road; Swan-with-Two-Necks, Gresham-street, City; Lavington's, 69, Old Bailey; Bolt-in-Tun, 64, Fleet-street; George and Blue Boar, Holborn; Kingston's, 37, and 39, Southampton-street, Fitzroy-square; First Avenue Hotel, Holborn; Red Cap, 6, Camden-road, N.W.; and 99, Leadenhall-street; Messrs. Ashton's Library, 38, Old Bond-street, W.; Empire Office, 30, Silver-street, Notting Hill Gate, W.; Myers' Offices, 343, Gray's Inn-road, and 1A, Pentonville-road, N.; and Messrs. T. Cook & Sons' Offices; also at Waterloo, Vauxhall, Clapham Junction, and Kensington (Addison-road) Stations. Tickets may also be procured at Messrs. Tattersall's, Albert Gate, on and after MONDAY, JUNE 13th.

The Company's West End Office, 30, Regent-street, Piccadilly Circus; the Central Office, 9, Grand Hotel Buildings, Charing Cross, the City Office, Arthur-street West; Swan-with-Two-Necks, Gresham-street, and Lavington's, 69, Old Bailey, E.C., will remain open until 10.0 p.m. on Monday 13th, Tuesday 14th, Wednesday 15th, and Thursday 16th June, for the sale of Tickets and for giving general information.

ON TUESDAY 14th, WEDNESDAY 15th, THURSDAY 16th, and FRIDAY 17th JUNE, the Cheap Excursion Trains to Virginia Water, Windsor, Twickenham, Teddington, and Kingston, from Waterloo, Vauxhall, Clapham Junction, Kensington (Addison-road), West Brompton, Chelsea, and other Stations, will not run.

CHAS. J. OWENS, General Manager.

"A Clean and Easy Shave once a day makes all men, and a few women also, quite happy."—GORDON STABLES, M.D., R.N.

The delightful sensation of shaving at home with a really sharp razor cannot easily be described, there should be no cutting of the skin, no dragging of the beard, simply an indescribable sense of freshness, nothing else.

The Proprietor of the "RIGID-CURVE" STROP warrants his Invention to produce an edge upon a razor so sharp as to readily sever a hair held loosely between finger and thumb.

Price, with full instructions, 3s. 6d., carriage paid. Money returned any time within a month if not approved.

A. HOWARTH, 53, Penn-road, Wolverhampton.

WIRE CYCLE SADDLE.
WOODS' PATENT.

Fitted with Felt or Leather Cover.

AN IDEAL SADDLE FOR LADY OR GENTLEMAN.

NO MORE CHAFING.

SADDLE SORENESS ENTIRELY PREVENTED.

One Month's Trial Allowed.

Prices and Testimonials on application to

THE LONGFORD WIRE CO., LTD., WARRINGTON.

Showrooms—61. ST. MARY AXE, LONDON. [Please mention this Journal.

"COOPER" CYCLES.

From £5 10. Competition Defied.

Latest design Frame, large Weldless Steel Tubes, Ball Bearings, Tangent Wheels, Brake, and Mud-guards, Cushion Tyres, £5 10; Pneumatic, £7 10; Ladies', with Dress and Gear Guards, from £6. Twelve months' warranty. Lists free. AGENTS WANTED

Wm. Cooper, 753, Old Kent Rd., London, S.E.

Madame Marie Mathieu,

Who has been privately patronised by the highest ladies in England and abroad, begs to state that BY THEIR DESIRE she has now taken additional rooms at

23, CONDUIT STREET, W.

She wishes it to be known that she is the SOLE OWNER and IMPORTER of the OIL which she uses in her treatment for the removal of wrinkles and in all her preparations for the skin.

Prices: Derma Paste, 10/6; Crême Roma, 5/-; Avoinine Powder, 3/6.

All these preparations are harmless, healthy, and most beneficial to the skin.

Hours: 11 a.m. to 6 p.m.

NICOLE FRÈRES
POLYPHON MUSICAL BOX

Is the greatest novelty of the age. It plays to perfection any selections of secular or sacred music desired. It is not a toy but a delightful musical instrument. All Dealers, or write for No. 50 Catalogue, post free. From 16s. 6d. to 50 Guineas.

NICOLE FRÈRES Ltd., 21, Ely Place London, E.C. Established 1815.

Genuine Old Welch Dressers

(Inlaid and Carved Oak), from £6. 10s.

ILLUSTRATED PRICED CATALOGUES POST FREE.
ALL GOODS CARRIAGE PAID TO ANY STATION IN GREAT BRITAIN.

ESTATE DEPARTMENT.
Auctions and Private Sales, Valuations, Lettings, Surveys, Repairs, and Decorations.

HEWETSONS,
TOTTENHAM COURT ROAD, London, W.

MARTYRS TO INDIGESTION, KIDNEY TROUBLES, RHEUMATISM GOUT, &c., &c.

AVOID BEETROOT SALTS!

—

USE ONLY 'GLEBE' SUGAR.

THE
Chancery Lane Safe Deposit
AND OFFICES COMPANY, LTD.

CHAIRMAN: Sir WILLIAM H. MARLING, Bart., Stanley Park, Stroud.
VICE-CHAIRMAN: ROBERT C. PONSONBY, Esq., 1, Clement's-inn, Strand, W.C.

SAFES and STRONG ROOMS for the Deposit of Deeds, Bonds, Plate, and Valuables of every description from £1 1

Rooms for Consultations, Writing Rooms, and Telephone Rooms, &c., Free of Charge.

Rooms for Arbitrations, Meetings of Shareholders, Creditors, and Companies' Meetings from 10s. 6d.

Registration of Keys with Accident Insurance Policy for £100, on payment of 1s.

Offices, Flats, and Chambers to Let, close to Law Courts, Patent and Public Record Offices. Moderate Rents.

DEPOSIT BANK.
MONEY RECEIVED ON DEPOSIT in Large or Small Sums, Repayable at Eight Days' Notice. Compound Interest allowed at £2 10s. per Cent. per annum.

Further particulars can be obtained from E. Vincent Evans, Manager and Secretary of the Company, 63-4, Chancery-lane, London.

JUNO CYCLES ARE THE VERY BEST
Any JUNO Twelve Monthly Payments.
JUNO Lady's or Gent's Safety, £12 12s., 21/- monthly; £14 14s., 24/6 monthly. JUNOS from £10, 16/8 monthly. Write for New Season's List of JUNO Cycles & Accessories, sent post free. Junos shipped to all parts of the world. Large discount.
METROPOLITAN MACHINISTS CO., LTD., 75, 76, Bishopsgate Without, E.C.: & at Piccadilly Circus, London W.

PARISIAN
FONDANTS, CHOCOLATES, and BONBONS of the finest quality and from the first makers in Paris.
Depôt des Chocolats de la Maison.
F. MARQUIS (Passage de Panoramas) PARIS.

S. SAINSBURY,
176 and 177, STRAND, LONDON.
ESTABLISHED 1839.
Third door west of Norfolk-st., connecting the Strand and Thames Embankment.
Lists on application.

The Test

of DR. TIBBLES' VI-COCOA is in the Drinking, and it can be tested FREE. Therefore write to us for Dainty Sample Tin (a postcard will do) which will be sent post free, if when writing you name Dr. Tibbles' Vi-Cocoa, in 6d. Packets, and 9d. and 1s. 6d. Tins. Sold by Grocers, Chemists, and Stores.

Address:
DR. TIBBLES VI-COCOA, LTD.,
60, 61, & 62, Bunhill Row, London, E.C.

FRANZ JOSEF

APERIENT WATER

Highly appreciated all over the World for Twenty Years past.

Is the Only Palatable Natural Aperient Water. SOLD EVERYWHERE. HEAD OFFICE: BUDAPEST.

MAPLE & CO

Tottenham Court Road LONDON and Rue Boudreau PARIS

THE LARGEST AND MOST CONVENIENT

Furnishing Establishment

IN THE WORLD

ACRES OF SHOWROOMS ACRES OF SHOWROOMS

MAPLE & CO have the largest and most perfect selection of well-made DINING-ROOM and LIBRARY FURNITURE in the WORLD, including Sideboards of original design in Pollard OAK, Fumigated OAK, rich dark Mahogany, and Walnut, as well as every variety in comfortable Chairs, Easy Chairs, Settees, Lounges for private or club use.

The Canterbury Sideboard, a new model in Oak, Walnut Mahogany, fitted with two drawers, cupboard with cellaret, and re below; plate glass in back with shelf above supported by fluted colu cupboard enclosed by cathedral glass door with recess above having p glass at back; 4 ft. 6 in., £8 17s 6d

Specialities IN LIBRARY FURNITURE

The "Russell" Shutter Front Table, in Oak, with panelled back and sides, having numerous fitted and other drawers, pigeon-holes and slides, the whole automatically closing with one operation; 4 ft. 2 in. wide, £6 6s Oak Revolving Chair, £1 2s 6d
"The very thing for a busy scribbler."—Purple Pansy.

MAPLE & CO LONDON a PARIS

Easy Chairs

FIVE HUNDRED TO SELECT FROM

The "Lincoln" Chair
A very comfortable and restful shape, well upholste in durable tapestry, in various artistic colourl £2 8s 6d

MAPLE & CO

LONDON AND PARIS

FURNISH HOUSES and RESIDENTIAL FLATS IN GOOD TASTE FROM ONE HUNDRED POUNDS UPWARDS FREE CONSULTATIONS WITH FURNISHING EXPERTS LARGEST STOCK IN THE WORLD

MAPLE & CO

The "University" Suite, in solid Carved Oak, consisting of Six Chairs, upholstered in tapestry or stamped leat finished brass nails, at 16s 9d each; Two Elbow Chairs, 26s 9d each; Sideboard, £6 15s; Dinner Wagon, £2 1 Extending Dining Table, with patent screw, £3 12s 6d; Overmantel, £3 7s 6d. The very best value obtainable.

Printed for the Proprietor by LOVE & WYMAN, Limited, Great Queen-st. W.C. and published at 10, Bolt-ct. Fleet-st. E.C. in the Parish of St. Dunstan's-in-the-West In the City of London. Cheques and Post Office Orders should be made payable to REGINALD E. BOOKER, "Truth" Buildings, Carteret-st. Queen Anne's-gate, S.W.

· TRUTH ·

"Cultores Veritatis Fraudis Inimici."—Cicero.

No. 1120. Vol. XLIII. Thursday, June 16, 1898. Price Sixpence.

NOTICE.

The terms of Subscription to Truth, which are payable in advance, are as follows:—To any address in the United Kingdom, for 3 months, 7s.; 6 months, 14s.; and for 12 months, 28s. The Thin Paper Edition is forwarded to countries within the Postal Union for 3 months for 7s. 8d.; 6 months, 15s. 4d.; and 12 months, 30s. 8d. Cheques and Post Office Orders should be made payable to the Manager, Truth, "Truth Building," Carteret-street, S.W.

ENTRE NOUS.

THE Queen is to arrive at Windsor Castle next Wednesday morning from Balmoral, and her Majesty will go to Osborne about July 15. Lord Bridport and Sir Edmund Commerell will go to Windsor on Tuesday evening as the Lord and Groom in Waiting on duty.

It is rumoured at Cowes that the Queen will probably buy the Norris Castle estate, which is to be sold next week. Norris Castle is a very picturesque place, and the finely-wooded park adjoins the Osborne domain. Norris was built by Lord Henry Seymour, and the Queen (then Princess Victoria) and the Duchess of Kent once spent part of a summer there. In 1844 the Queen and Prince Albert were anxious to buy Norris (in preference to Osborne), but the place was not then in the market. The property was purchased about fifteen years ago by the late Duke of Bedford, who left it to his nephew, Lord Ampthill. Norris was occupied during two summers for some weeks by the late Emperor Frederick (when Crown Prince), and his wife and family, the place being lent to him by the Duke of Bedford.

The Prince and Princess of Wales will proceed at the end of next week to Windsor Castle, on a two days' visit to the Queen, and the Duke and Duchess of Connaught are to be her Majesty's guests from Saturday the 25th, until Monday the 27th.

The Duke and Duchess of Connaught are to be the guests of the Queen at Osborne for ten days at the end of July, after which the Duke will be occupied for some time with the manœuvres, and the Duchess and Prince Arthur will probably go to France, and spend a month at La Bourboule-les-Bains, in Auvergne.

There would appear to be a job in the air with respect to the Duke of Connaught. Lord Wolseley is, we are told, to retire from the Command-in-Chief of the Army and to become Governor-General of Canada, and the Duke is to succeed him as Commander-in-Chief. Why, ask several newspapers, should the Duke be excluded from the highest prize in his profession, because he is the son of the Queen? Why, I would ask in reply, is he to be awarded the prize, because he is the son of the Queen? Why he should be excluded, is because we have other soldiers whose ability to fulfil the duties of the post is far superior. I need only mention the names of Lord Roberts, Sir Evelyn Wood, and Sir Redvers Buller. As Generals, they, and many other officers, are head and shoulders above the Duke. Does any human being suppose that, if the latter had been the son of Mrs. Jones instead of her Majesty, he would have attained his present position in the Army? He is, no doubt, a worthy and estimable gentleman, and he has honestly sought to do his duty in that state of life in which he has been born. But good intentions do not make a good General, and, from all that I am told by officers who have served under the Duke in the various commands that he has enjoyed, he does not happen to be a good General.

A paragraph has been going round the papers which states that next month the Duke of York is to be the guest of the Duke of Roxburghe, at Floors Castle, for the Highland Society's Show at Kelso. There is no truth whatever in this announcement, and, as a matter of fact, the Duke of York will be absent from England on a cruise in H.M.S. Crescent when this show takes place. What is true is that the Prince of Wales has accepted the Presidency of the Highland Society for next year, when the annual exhibition is to be at Edinburgh, and H.R.H. will be the guest of the Duke and Duchess of Buccleuch at Dalkeith House during the Show week. It is quite possible that the Princess of Wales may also visit Edinburgh on the occasion.

Princess Henry of Prussia and her two children are to arrive at Buckingham Palace on Saturday from visiting the Queen at Balmoral, and early next week they will return to Germany. Princess Henry goes to visit her sister, Princess Louis of Battenberg, at Heiligenberg, near Darmstadt, where she will meet Princess Beatrice.

The Emperor and Empress of Russia are to spend a fortnight in Denmark in August, after which they will go to Germany for several weeks, most of the time being passed at or near Darmstadt. It is probable that the Empress will come to England for a short time in September, in the very strictest incognita, in order that she may pay an entirely private visit to the Queen at Balmoral. The Empress of Russia was greatly benefited some years ago by a course of waters at Harrogate, and there has been some talk of her paying another visit to that place, as she has been very much out of health for the last six months.

The Duke of Teck has gone to Stuttgart for the summer, and is the guest of his cousin, the King of Würtemberg.

The Duke of Cambridge is to arrive at Homburg from London on July 31, for a stay of three weeks, after which H.R.H. will return to England, and on August 24 he is going to Wynyard Park, on a visit to Lord and Lady Londonderry, proceeding afterwards to Scotland.

There were a full number of presentations at last week's Drawing Room, but a small entrée, and a very limited attendance of the Corps Diplomatique, so that the general company were admitted to the Throne Room ten minutes after the Royal Circle had been formed. It took an hour and a quarter to dispose of the ordinary presentations, but there was most vexatious bungling with many of the ladies' trains, which caused constant delays.

The floral decorations at Buckingham Palace on the night of the State Ball were very beautiful and were much admired. The Ball was by no means crowded, so many people being still out of town, and it was a strange bêtise to have the function so soon after Whitsuntide. The second Ball will take place next month, and the dates of the two State Concerts have not yet been fixed.

Lady Mary Byng is to be replaced as Maid of Honour to the Queen by Miss Susan Baring, daughter of the late Lord Revelstoke, and sister of Lady Castlerosse and Mrs. Robert Spencer. Miss Baring is a niece of Lady Ponsonby, and a grand-daughter of Lady Elizabeth Bulteel, daughter of Lord Grey, the Reform Bill Minister.

The apartments in Hampton Court Palace which were occupied for many years by the late Dowager Lady Desart have been given by the Queen to Lady Augustus Hervey, sister-in-law of Lord Bristol. I understand that these apartments were offered by the Queen both to the Dowager Lady Churchill and Lady Granville.

The St. James's Gazette is astonished and scandalised at the refusal of "a post in her Majesty's Household" by Piper Findlater, for whom "personal attendance on the Queen" would surely be "a fitting reward." This is all vastly fine, but no such post has ever been offered to Piper Findlater. He could have obtained an outdoor place at Balmoral, with very small wages (18s. per week), but if he is a man of much "simplicity of character," as stated by the St. James's Gazette, I am disposed to think that he has done well to avoid the perils of a menial situation at Balmoral—a domain which (like most other Royal Palaces) is a hotbed of jealousies, intrigues, backbitings, and toad-devouring.

Sir William MacGregor, Governor of British New Guinea, is to replace Lord Gormanston as Governor of Tasmania. This is an excellent appointment, being a recognition of many years of thoroughly good and useful public work. It will be exceedingly difficult to replace Sir William in the post which he has filled so admirably for the last ten years.

Mr. Godson, M.P., seems to have nearly escaped his knighthood. According to the diverting story that is being told, the Hon. Member left town about the middle of last month, and gave strict orders at his house that no circulars were to be forwarded to him. There presently arrived an unstamped letter, which the servant laid aside with a pile of circulars, and it there remained until Mr. Godson returned to town. He was just about to pitch the whole lot of papers into a waste-paper basket, when he observed the mystical word "Salisbury" inscribed on the corner of the envelope of one of the bundle, and, lo and behold! it turned out to be the Prime Minister's offer of the knighthood which afterwards made such a belated appearance among the Birthday Honours.

"TO JUNE, THE SUMMER'S CROWN":

BY A CHILLY BARDLET.

Sweet, sunny June! Thou jocund month
  Of picnics and of posies!
I too, like other bards, would sing
  Thy revels and thy roses!
I'd sing thy blossoms and thy birds,
  Thy sunny hours that bring them—
But stay! I must poke up the fire
  Ere I proceed to sing them.

Gladly, O June! I'd add to all
  The idylls bards have written;
But, on my word, I'm half afraid
  My thumbs by frost are bitten.
I'd praise the sun-steeped summer scenes
  Thou morn by morn unfoldest,
Were I but sure the longest day
  Were not to be the coldest!

Come, Amaryllis, let us haste
  On some sweet sylvan ramble!
'Tis June! the meadows call to us
  To 'mongst the hay-cocks gambol!
Come, Daphne! and coy Chloe, come!
  Does not the sun your pulse stir?—
One moment though, I'll first put on
  My very warmest ulster!

On second thoughts, O jocund June!
  I do not think I'll bother
To pen a brand-new ode to thee:
  I'll save myself the pother:
I'll in my chimney corner sit,
  And merely send the printer
Those verses, with the heading changed,
  I wrote last March to Winter!

For the TRUTH HOTEL LIST, see page 1532 in the present issue.
For HOSPITALS and APPEALS, see page 1534.
For AMUSEMENTS, see pages 1530-1.
For OUR PUZZLES, see page 1541.

I wish that the scribes, male and female, who furnish newspapers with descriptions of the toilettes of ladies in the Park and at parties would give us a little variety in their style and their subjects. Why do the chroniclers always tell us what the same ladies wore? What can it signify to any one except their maids and their adorers, whether they looked beautiful in red, white, yellow, or blue? Equally unimportant is it how many dresses a silly woman orders for the Ascot week. In the Daily Mail I observed the other day that one lady had ordered thirty, and another even more. I breathed a silent thanksgiving to Providence that I was not one of their husbands, or connected with them in any other way, which might involve the necessity of paying for these varied vestments.

Loveliness is also always ascribed to the same ladies. Some of them I seem to think have been beautiful as long as I can remember. Once let a woman's beauty be established on a good solid advertising basis, and she goes on being beautiful for ever in spite of time. Nature has very little to do with it, nor, indeed, art. Let half-a-dozen newspapers persistently allude to her as the beautiful Lady —— or Mrs. ——, and then every one takes her beauty for granted. Not to accept it is to own oneself as much out of the fashion as not to accept Wagner as the only true musician that ever lived. Once accepted, the lady remains for good and all in the beauty pew. Some of these advertised ladies are really good-looking, some of them have been; but some of them neither are, nor by any possibility short of a miracle, can ever have been.

I think it helps a woman anxious to enter the ranks of the beautiful, or of the well-dressed, to be known amongst her intimates as Lady Jim So-and-So, or Mrs. Jenny So-and-So, or some such petit nom. The chroniclers like this. It gives a sort of air of being in the "right set" to allude to her in this apparently familiar manner.

The smart men, like the smart women, are also perennials. Here, too, it is an advantage to be a Tommy or a Bobby or an Algie. How it can interest any one to learn that one or other of these battered relics condescended to stroll in the Park on Sunday, to dine at some restaurant on Monday, or attend a garden-party on Tuesday, or a ball on Wednesday, surpasses my understanding. But I suppose that it does, otherwise why should these important movements be registered in the newspapers? Many of these gay young dogs I knew as gay young dogs forty years ago.

I am assured that the reason why we are told so much about these people is that there is a great craving for this sort of information in suburban circles. At a dinner party a gentleman is expected to be at least on newspaper acquaintance with them. There is much discussion during the repast between the guests whether Lady —— "is looking really as nice as I see that the —— says she did at Lady —— party;" whether "the dress that Mrs. —— wore really suited her so well as the —— pretends it did;" and whether "Mr. —— is as attentive to Mrs. —— as one would suppose by what one reads." All this is thoroughly gone into, and a guest who can throw some new light on the subject is in a good deal of request as a diner out—the funny part of the whole thing being, that probably not one of the persons present ever saw any of those about whom they are all talking.

It is curious how few of the men who suddenly make millions retain their money. The desire for it seems to increase with what they acquire. Mr. Hooley is one more instance of this. A few years ago he seems to have had little more than nothing. Then he made millions, bought estates, started a yacht, took one floor of a huge hotel as his place of business, was elected a member of the Carlton Club against a handsome subscription to the Tory chest, and was eagerly run after by flatterers and toadies who hoped to get money out of him. It is always bankruptcy or a baronetcy with these gentlemen. The former fate has overtaken Mr. Hooley, and, according to him, it is due to his having been persistently blackmailed by journalists. The St. James's Gazette professes to know that he has been plundered in this fashion of nearly a million, and that in one instance a newspaper got £200,000 out of him, and in another he paid £10,000 for one article.

These sums strike me as somewhat exaggerated, although I make no doubt that Mr. Hooley has paid through the nose for many of the puffs in newspapers. There are a vast number of little financial papers in the City, whose very names are unknown to the general public. Their mode of procedure is this: they threaten to attack an individual or a company unless they are bought off. It may be said, Why pay them, when their circulation is practically nil? They meet this by sending the paper gratis all over the country. Whenever a person receives a newspaper gratis with a puff or an attack on a company or an individual in it, he may take it for pretty certain that the newspaper is a blackmailer. One dodge is this: an abusive article is written and sent in proof to the person attacked. If he pays, it does not appear; if he takes no notice of the hint, it does. Mr. Hooley would do a great service to the Press if he would give chapter and verse for his assertions. These blackmailing newspapers are a reproach to journalism. They should be hunted down like vermin. I would point out to him that it is hardly fair to make a general accusation of this kind, without specifying who are the black sheep.

It is not, however, with the newspapers alone that Mr. Hooley must deal. If he is prepared to make revelations, he must do this without favour, and include all individuals, whether in the City or in the West End, whether City magnates or West End cadgers—no one omitting and no one setting down in malice. We must have a full and complete list of the guilty, otherwise it will be of no real value. Amongst the guilty I include those of the directors of the Hooley companies who took large sums for allowing their names to appear on the boards of these companies, exclusive of their qualifications as directors. Such moneys, as any directors who may have been induced to sell their names must have been aware, came out of the pockets of the shareholders of the companies, and were received from them by the very persons who were by way of being the moral guarantors that the capital was a legitimate one.

Scott Adie, 115, Regent-st., London, for Shooting Suits, Golf Suits, Travelling Coats, Inverness Capes, Carriage Rugs from 10/9, Shawls, hand-knit Hose, Scotch Cheviots, and Harris Homespuns.

For my part, I am no worshipper of golden calves when throned on high, but I do not like to rend one of these calves when in the dust, "deserted in his utmost need by those his former bounty fed." All that I know of Mr. Hooley's mode of procedure in bringing out companies is derived from what I have seen in print, and there is a certain amount of point in his statement that he simply bought to sell at a profit, and did sell at one, openly stating what it was. The cycle industry suddenly assumed large proportions. The demand for cycles exceeded the supply, and the profits on sales were enormous. Mr. Hooley stepped in, bought a Cycle Company, and resold it on an estimate of its value based upon the profits of the moment. The public—being mainly composed of those fools between whom and their money there is a natural tendency towards severance—fought for the shares. They were idiots not to see that competition would very soon reduce profits. Personally, therefore, I have exceedingly little pity for them if they have lost their money.

If really this be all, then I am bound to say that Mr. Hooley's scheme of making money by promoting companies compares advantageously with that of the South African Gold Kings. What was theirs? They bought a mine. Then they converted it into a company by selling it to themselves at a heavy profit under the Transvaal limited liability laws. The next step was to arrange for dealings in the shares of the company on the London Stock Exchange at a high premium, the dealings being purely fictitious. This brought in the public. Put in figures, the plan worked out thus:—A would buy a "claim" for £10,000. He would convert it into a company at Johannesburg by selling it to himself as a company for £200,000. Then he would agree with some stockbrokers in London to make dealings at £4 for each £1 share. This he did by giving them the right to sell a certain number of the shares at £4, and to purchase them for £3; and in order to induce them to push the shares up to a higher figure, they were further given options for fresh shares at £4 and at £5 per share. If all the shares could be disposed of in this fashion at an average premium of £3, it is obvious that the worthy A, by an outlay of £10,000, managed to make £600,000. The whole speculation was based on the fact that the public buys on a rising market, their hope being that the rise will continue so as to enable them to sell at a profit to some one else the shares that they themselves have acquired. Moreover, there is this to be said of Mr. Hooley—he did not profess to be a patriot. To my thinking, the patriot promoter, who fills his pockets by pretending to be influenced by Imperial instincts, is the veriest humbug that ever was palmed off on a credulous public by the Press.

What does the Carlton Club contemplate doing with Mr. Hooley's little cheque for the privilege of membership? Is it to be devoted towards showing that the great heart of the nation is still true to its Tory love? We are fond of talking of the corruption in the United States. We shudder with horror when we hear of the Party funds that are expended there by each candidate for the Presidency. But what do we do ourselves? No General Election can be fought without each Party having a war chest. And how is it filled? By selling what the Party has to give to rich men ready to purchase the wares. A Peerage, of course, commands the highest price. What homilies should we read the Americans if we were to learn that, having made Senatorships hereditary instead of elective, they were sold to any brewer or successful financialist ready to pay the price!

Heaven forbid! One of my readers, who has been impressed by the recent celebrations of Nelson's memory, wants to know why nothing is done for Wellington, and thinks that, with Waterloo Day so close at hand, now is the time to agitate on the subject. If my correspondent will go and look at Apsley House and one or two other places that I could name, I think he will agree, on reflection, that Wellington's services have not been altogether forgotten by his grateful countrymen. If a craze for commemorating defunct warriors is once started, goodness knows where it will end. If Wellington, why not Marlborough? If Nelson, why not Blake? If Marlborough and Blake, why not the conquerors of the Spanish Armada, or the victors of Agincourt and Crecy?

I am asked to notice a new attraction that is being provided for visitors to the North Wales coast. Llandudno Junction, as many of my readers know, is a station on the right bank of the Conway, and a central point from which fine views are obtained both up and down the river, and from which branch lines run along the valley of the Conway in one direction, and in the other to Deganwy and Llandudno. Just opposite the station is the ancient castle of Conway. To merely feast the eye of the tourist with these sights is apparently deemed insufficient. For the future the nose of the tourist is likewise to be delighted with perfumes from certain chemical works, which, thanks to the Holyhead and North Wales Gas and Water Corporation, are now in course of erection at the Junction. Strange to say, this enterprise is not appreciated in some quarters. It seems to be doubted whether the chemical works will be an agreeable and popular addition to the amenities of a district which is largely dependent for its prosperity upon the beautiful scenery and pure air.

The compassion of one of my lady readers has been excited by the sad case of a poor widow who was summoned at Southwark for allowing an unmuzzled dog to be at large. The widow's own story was that her child found the dog starving on the doorstep and gave it a night's shelter, and the next morning the ungrateful and ravenous brute chewed up a bonnet, and then ran into the street, where it was pounced upon by a constable. As a final reward for her hospitality, the poor woman had to pay a penalty of 14s. This seems decidedly hard, and as my lady friend remarks, scarcely calculated to encourage such acts of kindness to animals. It need not, however, prevent anybody from handing over a lost and famishing cur to the police for removal to the Dogs' Home, and that, after all, is the best thing that can be done with it.

"HÔTEL BURLINGTON," AT SUNNY BOSCOMBE. (200 rooms). Every luxury. Delightful grounds. Magnificent golf links. Sea water baths. Moderate charges.—Bournemouth East Station.

There are 2,323 entries of stock for the Birmingham Show of the Royal Agricultural Society next week, as compared with 2,688 at Manchester last year, 1,883 at Leicester in 1896, and 1,703 at Darlington in 1895. The Prince of Wales will attend the annual meeting of the members on Wednesday, at which Lord Coventry is to replace Lord Spencer as President of the Society.

I have seen it stated in some provincial papers that when the excavation in the north transept of Westminster Abbey was made for the grave of Mr. Gladstone, a coffin containing the remains of Lady Rich, the sister of Devereux, Earl of Essex, was discovered, and that it is believed that some bones which were also discovered were those of the latter. This is an entire mistake. The coffin found was that of a Lady Rich who died in 1773, and who was the wife of a baronet. It was left where found. The name and date were on the coffin, and the burial, with the name, is entered in the Abbey register as having taken place "in the North Cross," and that is the precise spot where the coffin was found. The registers only begin with 1607; but it seems probable that the Lady Rich who was sister to the Earl of Essex was buried in St. John the Baptist's Chapel, where her brother and many of her relatives are known to have been buried in a vault, which is full of decayed coffins and remains.

Apropos of my remarks on the Wass Collection, Sir Charles Isham writes:—

> I entirely agree with Truth that a coat of arms is not an ornamental appendage to a dinner service. There are, however, a few appropriate mottoes for the purpose. I myself designed, in prominent characters around the plates, the Isham motto, "In things transitory resteth no glory"—a sentiment equally applicable to the crockery and the viands. I did one for my son-in-law, E. Corbett, with his family motto, "Deus pascit corvos," and the crest, a raven.

Undoubtedly a very happy idea, and one which may commend itself to many families owning suitable mottoes. The "Bis vivit qui bene" of the Becher family would look well placed on a dinner plate. "Semper paratus," a motto which many families have adopted, has a peculiar significance at meal times, and no doubt there are many others equally to the point. Earl Fitzwilliam, of all men, ought to have his motto on his dinner service, "Appetitus rationi pareat."

By the way, my printers are solely responsible for the statement that Messrs. Goode & Co. are at present showing a collection of Worcester enamels by "the late Thomas Bolt." The works to which I endeavoured to call attention are those of the late Thomas Bott.

Suburban and provincial audiences are to share with London the opportunity of seeing Sarah Bernhardt during her approaching visit. For the first week, in addition to nine performances at the Lyric Theatre, Mr. Abud has arranged for her to play Camille on Thursday, June 23, at the Grand Theatre, Croydon. During the second week of her stay, besides eight performances in town, she will act on the 28th at Deptford, and at Brighton on the 30th.

"THE MOST UNKINDEST CUT OF ALL."

> The members of the London Wagner Society's Committee have protested in the most emphatic way against the grave breach of faith committed by the Covent Garden management in mutilating "Siegfried" last Thursday night. "One single cut," they declare, would have been enough "to constitute a breach of faith," but, in fact, "the most deplorable excisions were made."—Daily News.

Unhappy Management! What charge against you could be graver?
You promised "Siegfried" quite complete, without one missing quaver;
Seven hours of Wagner 'twas to be, and not one minute shorter,
And yet you've put your patrons off with seven—less a quarter!

Faults of commission there have been, but these they might have pardoned,
But those omitted bars—'tis these their hearts t'wards you have hardened;
More discords they'd have gladly borne, but oh! 'twas rankest treason
For you to make the number less—and spoil the Wagner season.

The Wagnerites have much endured; its almost past explaining
What they have suffered in the course of their protracted training;
But now their ears they have inured to vocal incoherence,
They court the most exacting test of their grim perseverance.

Know, then, irreverent Management! these Wagnerites are furious
At conduct they insulting deem, as well as most injurious;
And that, if you again omit those bars, you'll court disaster,
For they will certainly cut you if you still "cut" their Master!

On my table the other day I found a new book of reference, which I feel it a duty to commend to the notice of my Service readers and others interested in naval and military affairs. The book in question is "Whitaker's Naval and Military Directory." What I chiefly welcome in it is the complete alphabetical index of all the officers of the Army and Navy on the active list, with brief particulars of their service. The want of an index of this kind has been the greatest defect in all the Army and Navy lists with which I am familiar, and it is only one out of several useful new features in this directory.

The office of Principal of Glasgow University, which will become vacant at the beginning of August by the resignation of Dr. James Caird, who was appointed by

A Delightful Drink.—St. Ronan's Table Water, taken from the Natural Springs at Innerleithen. Supplied to the House of Commons and Leading Clubs. A Table Water of the finest quality, in splits, pints, and quarts. Sold everywhere.

Mr. Gladstone in 1873, is in the gift of the Crown, and it will probably be offered to Lord Kelvin. The salary is £1,100 a year, with residence. It is well known in the north that the Queen is anxious for the appointment of Dr. Story, but it may be hoped that a clergyman will not be selected. It would be an immense descent from Principal Caird to any conceivable ecclesiastic of the Presbyterian Church.

A gentleman travelling in Egypt last year fell in with a small native boy, who was being educated at the Government school at Edfou. The boy refused backsheesh for a small service or two which he rendered, but asked the Englishman to send him an English book on his return home. This was done; and here is the letter which the donor received in acknowledgement from the Egyptian youth. It is an instructive as well as amusing document, because it illustrates so well the results of teaching a language on purely theoretical principles :—

Edfou, May 18, 1898.

Dear Sir,—With politeness and respeetablity I offer to you my very best. I have the honour to inform you that I am the most humble scholar that trained up from Edfou school and have by my success obtained the book which "you" have send it to me and that I had thanked you very much for you are the best man in the world. I am 15th years old of a good healt and can render the function very well. I beg you sir to sent to me a dictionary from Arabic into English and a geography book that will be the best politeness to "you" my dear Sir.

May it pleases your Excelleney to aeeept the applieation of your servant. Gadees Sadaros.

Give all my compliments to all your parentes small or large. If you please Sir sent to me these books and also your pictour to see it because I am very fond to your bright face. Your son

Gadees Sadaros,
Edfou Government School, 1898.

Here is another sample of English as she is wrote in the East—the writer this time being a Baboo charity-monger, who issues this document as a printed appeal :—

The Remittance will Save You from Reading the Reminders and Me an Expence of Sending You.

Sir,—If you do not know of me before, know me now. My name is Jaising Rao Ramchandra. . . .

You remember the last year and the famine.

In order to save the famine orphans and young widows from starvation and from being eonverted into Christianity by the Missionaries I took to eollect Orphans and Widows. From December 1896 to September 1897 the number of the children is gone to 781 and the number of widows to 130.

In addition to the collection the income of A. J. R. P. and Co., was given toward the work and to fill up the Gap I had to sell all gold and silver in my house amounting to Rs. 7,000.

The effect of famine is over to the rich and able but not to the forlorn and distitute ehildren.

So is the Introductory Story.

And now davancing a paee or two nearer, I say that you are brought up in the belief of all suitable, religious doctrines—You have faith in the Almighty—I believe also that you have a soul, just as I myself have, to be lost or saved according to our deserts Sir, in the name of that God in whom you have faith—and by that Soul which must survive our moral existence and by all these I ask for mercy—Have mercy on famine Orphans and Widows—A few Rupees from your pocket will save them and the prayers of fervid gratitude shall night and morning ascend on your behalf from the lips of 781 Famine Orphans and 130 Widows young and from respeetable classes.

A, Sir! let me not implore you in vain, you have the power to alleviate the sufferings of innoeent children. On my knees do I Implore you to send something a few Rupees—a few annas &tc. In the name of Heaven and in the name of all that you hold sacred, do I ask to perform this act of mercy.

A Remittance by Return of Post Please.

Jaising Rao Ramchandra's literary style is marked by qualities of cool effrontery and flowery unctuousness which put to shame the feeble efforts of our own practitioners in the begging-letter line.

On Tuesday and Wednesday, June 28 and 29, there is to be a bazaar at the Hôtel Cecil on behalf of the London Hospital, which has more use for money than money to use. Each stall is to represent a separate newspaper, and each is to sell some special article; thus, at the Morning Post stall, flowers will be offered by the flowers of the aristocracy; at the Daily Chronicle stall china will be sold by attractive ladies of Liberal views; at the Gentlewoman stall, duchesses and minor titled lights will dispense—I forget exactly what, and so on. The bazaar will be opened at 2.30 by the Princess of Wales and the Duchess of York; and during both days there will be many "side shows," at which the leading actors, actresses, singers, and dancers of the day will be on exhibition. The Hospital is really in want of funds, and the bazaar is got up to procure these funds, and not, as often happens, for purposes of self-advertisement, in which charity is only a pretext. The scheme of a Press Bazaar is, in the main, due to Mrs. Spender, the wife of the editor of the Westminster Gazette, who undertook the secretaryship of the committee of management; and a hard time, I need hardly say, she has had of it. So far as I can learn, the New Woman will shine by her absence, so Sir William Harcourt can go there without offence to his preference for those of the fair sex to whom he has been accustomed.

At the London Hospital, it cannot be said that money is wasted or squandered. But this is not the case with all Hospitals. In some there are sinecures that should be abolished, others are run for the glorification and benefit of some one medical man; at others, there is what practically amounts to robbery. When the Press has got through its collecting mission for the London Hospital, it would do well to look into the general management of Hospitals. If I had my way, I would pass a law vesting all the funds now possessed by London Hospitals in the County Council, and charging on the rates whatever is needed in excess of the interest obtainable on these funds. There might be a special rate of ten per cent. on all receipts from places of amusement, in which gate money at race meetings within a certain distance of London should be included, and a like rate on the takings of public houses in the Metropolitan area. The general fund would probably be increased by rich men, desirous to make themselves comfortable in the next world; for it is surprising how liberal a man of wealth is with his money when he has to separate himself from it.

In the new edition of his useful annual, "Hospitals and Charities," Sir Henry Burdett combats the idea that there is a certain limit to the aggregate amount which can be raised in a year in the shape of charity subscriptions, and that consequently a special effort made on behalf of one charity or group can only be made at the expense of others. If the experience of last year is to be accepted as conclusive of the point, Sir Henry certainly makes out a primâ facie case. Taking ninety-three Metropolitan hospitals, it appears that both the ordinary income and that from legacies and special donations increased very considerably last year, the total income being upwards of £150,000 in excess of the average for the three preceding years. This is notwithstanding the public contribution of £227,000 in donations and subscriptions to the Prince of Wales's Hospital Fund. It has also to be remembered that the enormous sum of £2,000,000 was also voluntarily contributed last year to the Indian Famine Relief Fund.

These figures do not in themselves absolutely establish Sir Henry Burdett's point, because for that purpose one ought to have the whole of the charity statistics of the year. The hospitals got the lion's share of last year's boom in collections. Many other charities and groups of charities allege that they suffered heavily, and if this is true, it goes to show that some part of the money given to the hospitals and the Famine Fund was diverted from other sources. Sir Henry Burdett gives particulars of the incomes of all charities for 1896, but I cannot find any for 1897. However, it looks as if the Diamond Jubilee collections had certainly increased the aggregate amount of giving, for the time at least. It is also quite certain that the Prince of Wales's Fund, so far from having impaired the ordinary revenue of the hospitals, has substantially increased it; while it is also pretty certain that the Fund has attained to a considerable extent the end with which it was started—that of roping in a new class of subscribers to the Metropolitan hospitals.

On the other hand, the returns of hospital income for last year seem to establish one point which was made in TRUTH when the Prince of Wales's Fund was started. The basis of the Prince of Wales's appeal was that an additional revenue of about £150,000 was required to equalise the income and expenditure of the London hospitals. In reference to this, it was said in TRUTH that if the deficit were wiped out at once, it would grow again very quickly. What do we now find? An additional income of £150,000 was actually raised last year, independently of about £227,000 contributed to the Prince of Wales's Fund. The deficit which the Prince desired to wipe out ought, therefore, to have disappeared at the end of last year. Has it? I shall be greatly surprised to hear that it has. My impression is that, however much the income be increased, the expenditure will always outrun it. And I have a suspicion that your charity financier, as a rule, would prefer to show a deficit than a surplus on his year's accounts. This deficit plays the part of the bunch of carrots held before the donkey's nose.

I am asked to say that at 3.30 on Thursday, June 30, there is to be a concert at 1, Holland Park-road, on behalf of the Hammersmith Branch of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children, and that tickets are to be obtained from Mrs. Val Prinsep at the above address.

The following amounts have reached me towards Lady Jeune's fund for sending poor and sickly London children into the country for a holiday:—Lady M., £2; W. S., a ten-rouble note; A. F., 5s.; J. M., £1 1s.; A. E., £1. I have also received £5 from Mrs. S. Darling on behalf of the sisters of the man Karditz.

A military friend of mine makes the remarkable statement—which I repeat with all reserve—that not a single gun is ready or has ever been ordered to arm the fortifications and batteries which have been constructed at vast expense during the past three years at coaling stations and other places on the coasts of the United Kingdom where additional defences were required. The new batteries in the Isle of Wight, for instance, have been completed for more than twelve months, but have not up to the present received a solitary gun. My friend's explanation of this singular state of things is that when Parliament was called upon to vote the money for the fortifications, the Artillery Branch of the War Office unfortunately forgot to ask for the money for the guns, and so far it has neglected to repair the omission. I should like to hear whether there is any foundation for this story. It will sound wholly incredible to some people, but not to those who know the ways of the War Office.

Much has been said, or suggested, I should say, respecting the reasons for the withdrawal of the 2nd Battalion Royal Irish Regiment from the North-West Frontier. It seems only fair, therefore, to that battalion that further publicity should be given to the following extract which has just been published in Brigade, District, Depot, and Regimental Orders in Ireland. As the rumours that have been current have been propagated all over the English-speaking globe, the official contradiction of them certainly ought not to be confined to Ireland.

EXTRACT

From a letter from the Adjutant-General to the Commander-in-Chief in India, dated May 23, 1898.

I am directed by the Secretary of State for War to inform you that a perusal of the papers connected with the withdrawal of the 2nd Battalion the Royal Irish Regiment from the Field Force on the North-West Frontier has satisfied the Commander-in-Chief that a grave injustice was done to the 2nd Battalion the Royal Irish Regiment when it was recalled from Field Service.

I hear that the officers of the Native Army in the Madras Command have been rendered extremely uneasy by a report that Major Currie is seeking reappointment as Commandant of a native regiment. This officer was some years ago gazetted to the command of his regiment, but he elected not to accept the appointment, and remained on as private secretary to the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal. He had previously acted for some years as A.D.C. to the Viceroy. On a change in the Lieutenant-Governorship of Bengal, a new private secretary appeared on the scene, and Major Currie was straightway reappointed from the civil department to the Army Staff, regardless of the fact that he had not put in any regimental service. It would seem incredible under these circumstances that Major Currie should be allowed to obtain again the regimental command which he has once refused. On the principle, however, that it is better to protest against a job before it is perpetrated than afterwards, it seems justifiable to express a hope that no such appointment will be allowed to take place.

CHALLIS'S ROYAL HOTEL, Rupert-street, Piccadilly-circus.—The new Louis XV. Dining-room now open for Luncheons and Dinners. Table d'Hôte Luncheon, 2/-, from 12.30 to 3 p.m.; Table d'Hôte Dinner, 3/6, from 6.30 to 9 p.m., served at separate tables. Open to non-residents.

In regard to the recent article in TRUTH on the Staff College, it is my duty to mention that I have received from an officer who has been through the College a letter categorically denying, in the most plausible and genial manner, every single statement and suggestion in that article. Wherever others have cursed the College, this officer cordially blesses it, and he speaks all round in the highest terms of the teachers and the teaching, and the general tone and spirit of the place. After giving this general summary, I trust that I may be excused for not publishing the letter, which is very long, and really does not carry the matter any further than my general statement. It is of course impossible for any stranger to the College to profess to decide upon a conflict of evidence like this. Neither can I withdraw anything that has been said merely because some one else says something different. But I am glad to know that some at least of the officers who have been through the College tell a different tale.

If I am cut off prematurely before the completion of my due span of three score years and ten, this calamity will be in a great measure attributable to the draftsmen of the Army Act and the Queen's Regulations. There is nothing else in legal and official literature to equal the complications of these documents. Some time ago, apropos of the case of Private Simpson, of the Grenadier Guards, a gentleman laying claim to considerable experience of military life and martial law wrote to me from a West End Club asserting that Simpson could not legally be fined more than 10s. in any case, and not even as much as that, unless he had incurred three previous convictions in the last twelve months. Not feeling sure on the point, I consulted an expert of my acquaintance, and then referred again to my correspondent for his authority. In reply he sent me the terms of the Regulations on which he relied. I turned them up, digested some pages of elaborate provisions bearing on the point, and then felt sufficiently sure of the ground to insert the paragraph which appeared in last week's TRUTH. Forthwith come letters in shoals from all branches of the Army, informing me that the Regulation referred to only applies to summary punishment by a C.O., and has no bearing on the sentence of a court-martial. It may be so. There is nothing whatever in the Regulation to show whether it is or whether it isn't. But I am quite willing to admit that this is merely one of the pitfalls prepared by the draftsmen for the discomfiture of the unwary; and I lose no time in withdrawing the doubt suggested as to the legality of Simpson's punishment. I don't wonder, though, that soldiers, when they take to looking into the ordinances under which they serve, get a little confused as to their legal rights.

I heard last week that a detachment who had been at Lydd Camp for musketry training for a whole month—about three times the usual period—had only fired during that time twenty-one rounds per man. This is solely owing to the men being employed on fatigues of one kind or another in lieu of the training for which they are sent to the Camp. To make matters worse, the fatigues are fixed for the morning and the musketry for the afternoon, and, as any one can see for himself, it is a mere waste of time and money to set about teaching a man to shoot when he is tired out and his hands are shaking after several hours' heavy labour—e.g., lifting 7 cwt. rails, which is the form which the fatigue work has taken in some cases. It is true that the men thus employed were Engineers, but I presume that a man is put through a musketry course for the purpose of learning to shoot, whether he is an Engineer, or an Infantry man, or a Horse-marine; and if this is the way the course is gone through, the country might just as well be spared the expense of sending men to Lydd for the purpose.

Since referring to the subject a few weeks back, I have received from many quarters corroborative evidence as to the filthy condition in which bedding is too often served out to soldiers when going under canvas. A gentleman who has had some personal experience in the ranks told me the other day that the most disagreeable experience of a soldier's life, so far as he was concerned, arose from this cause. Obviously it is a preventable cause, and one which ought to be prevented. It is important to notice that mere washing is insufficient for this purpose. Referring to this point a medical correspondent writes :—

> I should just like to remark that even boiling water will not kill them, and the best way to destroy them is to put the bedding in a slow oven overnight, as they cannot stand dry heat, but go off pop. This was told me many years ago by a man who kept a lodging house for tramps, when I was in practice in the country.

"They" are, I believe, equally susceptible to the fumes of sulphur, though I cannot say whether this treatment causes them to "go off pop." There ought to be a strict rule that all bedding when returned into store should be either fumigated or treated with "dry heat."

There is a good deal of force in the War Office answer to the memorial of Boards of Guardians in favour of the payment of pensions at shorter intervals than once a quarter. It is, of course, true that more frequent payment would involve considerable extra trouble, and in some cases expense, to the men in attending to draw their pensions, and they ought not to be exposed to this unless there is a general and strong desire for the change. According to Mr. Powell Williams' letter, the pensioners who become chargeable to the rates through spending the whole quarter's pension before the quarter runs out, are only an insignificant proportion of the 75,000 pensioners in the United Kingdom, and in this state of things it becomes more easy to understand why the pensioners as a body are averse to the change. The Guardians, of course, look at the matter from the ratepayers' point of view, and they are right in doing so. But it does not seem at all certain at present that what the ratepayers would save by keeping a few spendthrifts out of the workhouse would be equal to what the taxpayers would have to spend owing to the increased cost of paying the pensions.

---

GIVEN AWAY.—A high-grade New Hudson Gent's Cycle, fitted with "IXION TYRES," for the best two or four lines of verse on the "Ixion Tyre." Lady's Cycle also given for lady competitors only. Five consolation prizes given in each competition. Further details of competition and "All about Ixion Tyres" sent, on application, free. Competition verses must be sent in before 31st July, with this advertisement attached, and must be marked "Competition" corner of envelope.—The New Ixion Tyre & Cycle Co., Ltd., 144, Holborn, London.

Here are two cases which help to show how good soldiers are lost to the Service: (1) A man in a field battery in Natal, having upwards of six years' service, is willing to re-engage to complete his twelve years, if he can be transferred into a Hussar regiment in the same colony. He is fully qualified for the Cavalry, and the Hussar Colonel is willing to take him. His own C.O., however, declines to sanction any transfers, apparently from mere reluctance to lose his men. The natural result is that the gunner, not being allowed an opportunity of bettering himself, declines to re-engage, and the country loses his services altogether. (2) A company sergeant-major of ten years' service in the Yorkshire Artillery goes away on pass to visit his wife in her confinement. The wife being very ill, he telegraphs for an extension of leave, and receives a telegram in reply granting the extension, but ordering him to bring back a medical certificate. He is unable to catch the doctor who is attending his wife, and consequently returns without the certificate. On this being reported to the C.O., he is placed under arrest for disobedience of orders. Eventually he is released without punishment, but in disgust at the way he is treated he proceeds to purchase his discharge, and I believe has now left the Service.

Some time ago I called attention to the recent record of the Buffs on the Indian frontier, by way of showing what a very large proportion of kicks and what a very small proportion of ha'pence had been meted out to this gallant regiment since the beginning of the Chitral Campaign. The Buffs are now at a camp in the Swat Valley, and a recent letter from the regiment gives an impressive picture of some of the discomforts and hardships they are enduring. The heat appears to be terrific, and the men have only field service tents, as many as eighteen men being, in some instances, crammed into one tent. The Buffs have done their duty gallantly during the last three years, and no doubt they are ready to do it still, but it really seems time that they were allowed a change.

I continue to receive a great deal of correspondence with reference to the anomalies that have been created by the new messing allowance regulations. Some of the complaints are trivial; but there are three which I think the War Office should look into. They are: (1) the stoppage of the allowance when a man is in hospital, which means practically the addition of threepence a day to the existing hospital stoppage; (2) the exclusion of warrant officers from the allowance; and (3) the proviso that sergeants serving beyond twelve years, if they elect to accept the messing allowance, shall forfeit their deferred pay, which means that, while a private soldier gains threepence a day from the new concession, a sergeant of twelve years' service or upwards only gains a penny. I hope it will not be long before some further regulation is issued dealing with all these points.

Here is a story sent to me by an old soldier, apropos of what was said in TRUTH the other day about the dishonesty of native cooks in India:—

> The native cooks in my time always had tea and coffee to sell, and though we felt no doubt that the stuff was stolen from us, it was very difficult to bring the theft home. At one station the tea in the sergeants' mess used to be so wretchedly thin and watery that we at last insisted on the caterer himself seeing the tea made. This he did, not only going into the gloomy oven of a cook-house himself in the evening, but with his own hands throwing the tea into the boiling copper. Strange to say no improvement resulted. Everybody was at a loss to explain the mystery, until one day a happy thought occurred to the caterer, and after wetting the tea he had the copper carried outside into the light, and lo! on the surface of the water was found floating a shallow tin dish in which, of course, lay the greater part of the tea which the caterer imagined he had thrown into the boiler. Things were better after that, and the cook a day or two later paid a forced visit to the triangles at the police station.

It does not look as if the recent concessions to Mr. Atkins had produced as yet the expected effect on recruiting. In the Times the other day I saw some statements about the reduction of the standard for Guardsmen enlisted for service at Gibraltar, pointing to the conclusion that the supply of men is deficient. In conversation with an officer of a Line regiment I received a still more significant piece of information. He tells me that by a recent order Medical Officers on recruiting duty are enjoined to pass "flat-foots."

Flat-footed men have hitherto been excluded from the Army because they are practically useless for marching, except on perfectly level ground; and I rather fancy that a flat instep is regarded by experts as a sign of constitutional weakness. A flat-footed man would not have been much use for hunting the wily Pathan over his native hills in Tirah. The "flat-foots" now being enlisted are sent to the gymnasium, apparently under some vague idea that the shape of their feet can be altered by exercise on the trapeze or the horizontal bar, which is about as practical as the beadle's notion that little Jellaby's skull was compressible by pulling at his legs, when he had got his head stuck through the area railings. Up to the present I hear that the flat-foots remain as flat-footed as ever. If the War Office must have these gallant fellows, I would suggest that they should be formed into a flat-footed corps or brigade, and stationed permanently in the Fen country or central London. They probably go well enough over pavement, and would be quite at home on sentry-go at Buckingham Palace.

Below I pillory a few more minor military grievances. I have heard more than once about the defective accommodation at the Army Pay Corps Offices, Aldershot, and,

FOR BEAUTIFYING AND PRESERVING THE TEETH nothing equals ROWLAND'S ODONTO, which removes tartar, and imparts a pearl-like whiteness to the enamelled surface. Use ROWLAND'S ODONTO for keeping your teeth sound and white. Of Stores and Chemists.

THE HOTEL CECIL RESTAURANT.—Orchestra daily. M. François, Chef de Restaurant, from the Grand Hotel, Monte Carlo. The new Grill Room is now open.

considering the amount of money voted of late years for Army works and buildings, it is a scandal that better premises are not by this time available :—

Herbert Hospital, Woolwich.—Until a recent date patients in this hospital were allowed to receive friends on visiting days in the patients' library. This privilege has recently been stopped on one of the visiting days, Thursday, owing to the room being used as a lecture hall for the men of the M.S.C. This necessitates patients seeing their visitors in the corridors, which have no sitting accommodation, and are quite unfit for the purpose, unless they can go into the grounds, which is, of course, not possible for all patients, and is impossible for all in bad weather. This inconvenient state of things appears to have arisen from the fact of the dining hall, which was formerly used for M.S.C. lectures, having been closed and blocked up since certain recent references to it in TRUTH. Those in command at the Herbert Hospital seem to think very much more of their own dignity and convenience than of the comfort and well-being of patients.

Army Pay Corps, Aldershot.—The Army Pay Corps offices at Aldershot consist of seven rooms. Four of these are occupied by six officers, and the remaining three by twenty clerks—seven clerks each in two rooms and six in the third. The dimensions of these rooms are, roughly, 16 ft. by 16 ft. by 10 ft., but a considerable space is taken up by cupboards and shelves loaded with books and papers. The provision for ventilation is of the slightest, and when it is necessary to keep the windows closed the atmosphere of the rooms quickly becomes intolerably foul. Is it not a disgrace to the authorities that important work at the chief military station should have to be performed under such conditions?

1st Battalion Grenadier Guards, Gibraltar.—Since this battalion has been at Gibraltar it has had to find certain working parties, in which three sergeants are included, the members of the working party drawing extra pay and attending no drills and parades. Naturally this employment is much sought after, and it is supposed to be distributed in turn among the sergeants of the battalion in periods of two months at a time. A recent complaint, however, points to a good deal of favouritism in the distribution of this privilege, many sergeants being reappointed for a further spell of duty at the conclusion of their two months, while others are passed over altogether. Probably this is done without the knowledge or approval of the Colonel, and when his attention is called to it it will no doubt be remedied.

1st Battalion Northamptonshire Regiment, Peshawur. — A number of men of this battalion were recently brought up for sitting at dinner with their collars unhooked or their coats unbuttoned, and punishments of five and seven days' C.B. were awarded. It seems that there is an order in force with regard to the buttoning of coats and the hooking of collars at meal times, but with the thermometer at 108 deg. in the shade—which was the temperature recorded on the above occasion—the order seems anything but a sensible or considerate one. Surely in tropical climates some licence might be allowed to soldiers in regard to dress when not actually on parade.

4th Battalion Connaught Rangers, Galway.—Attention was called in TRUTH earlier in the year to the fact that colour-sergeants of this battalion were being employed on such duties as regimental guards, canteen duty, orderly sergeant, and even orderly corporal, while the Depot colour-sergeants were entirely exempted, and various Depot N.C.O.s were employed in berths to which they seem to have had very little claim. No attempt has been made up to the present time to redistribute the duties at Galway Depot, and it seems time that some higher authority looked into the question. In one instance a sergeant acting schoolmaster, drawing 1s. a day extra pay in that capacity, has been allowed to take over a Depot company, for which he receives a further 1s. a day extra pay, which seems to be an irregularity in itself, to say nothing of the fact that the sergeant has under him two colour-sergeants.

In the Strand Magazine for June there is an account of a submarine boat, which has been tried successfully in Baltimore Harbour. It can go, I gather, for twenty miles at any depth under water, without coming to the surface. If this be so, maritime war will be revolutionised; for, of course, such a boat could approach a battle-ship without being detected, and could then affix a torpedo to it. Whether this boat really does all that is asserted or not, it is pretty clear that it will not be very long before such a war engine is invented; indeed, given electricity as a motor and compressed air, it is a wonder that it has been so long in being invented. The matter is a very serious one to us, for such a boat would render all the sea monsters of war, in the building of which we are spending so much of our money, as much out of date as Noah's Ark.

I fear that an injustice was done to Lieutenant Ruck-Keene by a recent paragraph in TRUTH which stated that he had been promoted out of the Royal Yacht over the heads of seventy or eighty officers of the same rank. As a matter of fact, Lieutenant Ruck-Keene had already three years and five months' seniority as a sub-lieutenant when he was appointed to the Victoria and Albert in May, 1890, and he would in the ordinary course of things have been appointed at the end of June in that year. As he was not promoted until the end of August, he certainly does not seem to have gained anything by his appointment to the Royal Yacht; and, indeed, it would appear that the delay in his promotion cost him six places on the list.

The new Castle liner, Carisbrooke Castle, is, in every respect, a magnificent vessel, equipped from stem to stern in a manner befitting a line which carries as many millionaires as some lines do bagmen. But in one respect the vessel is unique. Her engines are fixed on a new principle—I understand that they are balanced or slung in some mysterious manner—with the result that the vibration, which to many of those who go down to the sea in ships is the worst affliction of the voyage, is to all intents and purposes got rid of. In other respects also the noise and rattle of machinery have been very much reduced. I suppose that one of these days Mr. Rhodes will be constructing a through electric railway from Cornhill to Cape Town. But for the present the Castle Line would seem to have done about as much as is humanly possible to make a voyage to South Africa as luxurious as a fortnight up the river in a houseboat.

The Assistants of Customs seem to be in a perennial state of grievance, and generally with very good reason. Their latest complaint is that the existing staff are excluded from the benefit of the improved condition. which are to be enjoyed by future members of the services New comers, for instance, will attain a salary of £85 after three years' service, while the most fortunate of the present Assistants have to wait twice as long to reach the same position. The Secretary to the Treasury is said to have addressed comforting words to a deputation which waited upon him two or three months ago, but there is an uneasy feeling among the Assistants that the matter is being quietly dropped, and it might therefore be as well to have it revived on the Estimates.

A good example of the ubiquitous operations of the Spanish Prisoner is sent to me from Burma, a letter of the usual type having been addressed to an English gentleman at Prowe, a town on the Irrawaddy about 200 miles up from Rangoon. It is a striking proof of the estimate which these buried-treasure swindlers place upon the intelligence of those whom they approach that they should seriously address to such a place a cock-and-bull story about a fraudulent deserter from a Spanish Cavalry regiment who has absconded with the regimental chest, and buried it at some spot unknown 200 miles up the Irrawaddy. But, as if this were not enough, the letter in which this highly plausible story is set forth is obviously and undisguisedly a lithographed form!

LÉRINA.—Finest Liqueur. Made by the monks at the Abbey of St. Lérins, Isle St. Honorat, nr. Cannes, and well known to all visitors to the Riviera. From all Stores and Wine Merchants.

The truth seems to be that there is a certain class of people who, in the presence of a sufficiently seductive appeal to their cupidity lose all common sense and regard for probability. I had the other day an inquiry about the Spanish Prisoner from a worthy farmer in Essex, who had been favoured with one of the letters. The farmer himself was cautious and sceptical—there is, I believe, a considerable Scotch element at present farming in the Eastern Counties. The farmer's wife, however, was of a different opinion, and felt convinced that her spouse was throwing away a chance of a fortune when he proposed to put the letter behind the fire, so I was appealed to to settle the differences of this worthy pair. When the farmer's wife learns that the Spanish Prisoner has secreted his stolen property not only in Essex, but also at a remote spot in Upper Burma—not to mention most other places upon the face of the habitable globe—she may begin to feel that her husband was right in not at once remitting cash to Valencia for the purpose of securing a share in these ill-gotten gains.

Lord George Hamilton alluded in his Indian Budget speech to the comparative smallness of the expenditure in connection with the Plague. The expenditure may well be small, if it is characterised all through by the flint-skinning parsimony which is displayed towards the nurses who have gone out to India from this country. Their pay is supposed to be Rs. 175 a month, which, even if they got all of it, would be little enough, considering that out of this sum they have to maintain themselves, to keep necessary servants, and to pay their laundry expenses. It appears, however, that this pay is frequently sweated down by a variety of stoppages, until in some instances next to nothing is left for the nurses to draw. What is due is usually not forthcoming for some weeks after the proper date, and several ladies have been kept waiting for six months for the repayment of expenses which they incurred in going out to Bombay. The value of such work as the nurses undertake cannot be estimated in rupees, but in common gratitude the Plague Committee ought, at any rate, to treat them with more generosity and consideration.

To the recent Jeremiad of the coroners at the exclusion of their ancient order from the Honours list must now be added a plaintive cry from the Mofussil Bench. The District Judge who voices it avows his disagreement with me on many points—I may perchance have fallen foul of his Honour at some time or other—but he seems to think that on this question I can do the Indian Judicial Departments some service. He says that with the very rare exception of a High Court Judge the members of the judiciary in India are entirely ignored in the distribution of decorations. Young secretaries, junior revenue officers, even missionaries, are glorified by the bestowal of C.S.I.s and C.I.E.s; but the man who presides over the administration of justice in the Mofussil, no matter how long and how successfully, is seemingly never deemed worthy of such a reward. As the grievance is taken to heart by these functionaries, I hope it will be redressed in the next list. At the same time I wonder that they should hanker after honours which are notoriously dispensed more by favour than by merit.

The following rule appears among the regulations for open competitive examinations for sorters in the London Post Office:—

> 5. No candidate will be admitted to examination who does not, at such time as may be fixed by the Civil Service Commissioners, produce an undertaking, signed by his parent or guardian, that he will, if successful, reside either with his parents or guardians, or with relations or friends approved by such parents or guardians.

The justice and expediency of this regulation are certainly open to question. The candidates for whose benefit the rule is laid down are between eighteen and twenty-one years of age, and if fit for employment in the public service at all, they ought to be fit to live in lodgings on their own account without supervision. It may often be extremely difficult for candidates from the country to live either with parents or guardians, or with relations or friends approved by such parents or guardians. Nor will it always be possible for London youths whose parents or guardians happen to reside at some distance from the place where they have to be employed. Consequently, the regulation must operate in many cases as a disqualification. If the Postmaster-General is so anxious about the welfare of his employees when not engaged at the office, he had better employ a few qualified dames to board and lodge them and look after their shirt-buttons, their socks, and their morals.

Do the regulations of the Post Office service permit the postmaster of a "head office" to engage in trade? A correspondent mentions a case in which the postmaster of a provincial town carries on one business on his own account and is interested as a more or less active partner in two others. It is urged that this is unfair to other tradesmen in the same line, particularly when they have to send business messages through the telegraph office; and it appears to me that there is considerable force in the objection.

About three months ago a communication was addressed to the Home Secretary in reference to the condition of the churchyard at Wedmore, Somerset. The churchyard has been used as a burying ground for the past four hundred years, and it has become so overcrowded that almost every time a fresh grave is dug old coffins are broken and human remains disturbed. Not long ago some dogs were found munching the bones of one of the rude forefathers of the hamlet, which the sexton had thrown out in excavating for a fresh interment. The Home Secretary promised on March 24 that the matter should receive his attention; but he has apparently forgotten it, and I am now requested to jog his memory. It certainly seems desirable that an inspector should be sent down to Wedmore, with a view to an order being issued for closing the graveyard.

WHITEHALL COURT, S.W.—To Let, Bachelor and other Suites. Electric Light, Service, Bath-rooms. Meals in public or tenants' own rooms.—Apply, Manager.

A striking exposition of municipal mismanagement and muddle-headedness has just been given by the Vestry of St. George, Hanover-square. These worthies were addressed by a householder in Grosvenor-street, W., in reference to the inopportuneness of the visits of the parochial dustmen. In well-regulated districts the unpleasant though necessary business of carting away the contents of the dustbins is accomplished as early as possible in the morning; but in St. George's the time is left to the caprice of the contractor and his men, and it pleases them to put in an appearance in Grosvenor-street and the neighbourhood at some hour in the afternoon, when they can be pretty certain that plenty of people will be leaving and entering the houses. It was pointed out to the Vestry that it was a source of great annoyance to have the dustmen arriving at the door simultaneously with guests for luncheon or afternoon callers; and a request was made that the carts should be sent during the early hours of the morning. The Vestry replied that it was unable to comply with the request, and added:—

> The dustmen are the servants of the contractor, who employs his men to suit his convenience, though where he can do so he is always willing to meet the wishes of the ratepayers.

Then it was suggested that a clause might be inserted in the contract providing for the clearance of the dustbins before a certain hour in the morning, but the Vestry refused to entertain such a proposal. Their view is that it is the duty of the ratepayers to submit to the convenience of the contractor, not of the contractor to consult the convenience of the ratepayers. The afternoon visits of the dustmen may be an intolerable nuisance to everybody living in the street and everybody going there. The Gallios of St. George's, however, care for none of these things. All they think about is the interests, or supposed interests, of their friend the contractor.

It would be a relief—even if a melancholy one—could it be definitely stated how many young children are to be sacrificed to the Italian ice-cream industry before the responsible authorities consider it their duty to take any action in the matter. Another coroner's jury—assembled to inquire into the death of a child poisoned in the London streets through eating ice-cream obtained from a barrow-man—has "directed the attention of the local sanitary authorities" to the case, and, having thus conscientiously performed its duty and passed the matter on, have again retired into private life; whilst, of course, the local sanitary authorities, foreseeing a troublesome question in store for them, will quietly ignore the meddlesome jury's representation. And the unclean Italian will go on poisoning these unfortunate little children because it is, apparently, nobody's duty to commence a crusade against the death-dealing nastiness to be found in those brightly painted barrows. No—we certainly are not a consistent people.

The accounts and finances of the Borough of Sudbury must be in a delightful muddle, judging from the report of the auditors. They call attention to various irregularities and discrepancies in the accounts, but what will most keenly interest the ratepayers who feel compelled to pay their rates is the discovery that some of their neighbours are allowed to escape that painful ordeal. It appears that there is a large accumulation of outstanding rates, owing to the fact that arrears are not "brought forward" in the rate-books; and that in various instances no charge whatever has been made against persons liable to pay the water-rate. Clearly a few elementary lessons in book-keeping would be useful in the municipal offices at Sudbury.

A rather interesting point was raised in a discussion by the Southampton Town Council on the vexed question of deputation expenses. It seems that the Town Clerk has a free pass over the London and South-Western Railway, but that when he comes to town with a deputation on municipal business, he nevertheless charges the Corporation with his railway fare. Is he justified in making such a charge? He contends that he is; for one reason, because he looks upon the complimentary ticket as a personal arrangement between himself and the Railway Company, and for another, because he has to pay "various expenses" incurred by members of the deputation, "which must be charged in some way." The precise nature of these "various expenses" did not transpire, but apparently they cannot be put down in the bill in the usual way.

There would be no doubt about the Town Clerk's right to charge the Corporation with the fare for each journey, if he travelled with an ordinary season ticket purchased at his own cost. It is, however, a little difficult to see how he can be entitled to do this when he is using the free pass—unless, of course, it is quite clear that the railway company presents the pass to him as a private individual and not as Town Clerk. Some of the members appeared to think that the "personal arrangement" to which he referred was entirely dependent upon his public position, and it seems probable that this is the case. If it were not, the shareholders of the railway company would have a right to complain.

The Portsea Guardians were last week asked to perpetuate a peculiarly audacious piece of jobbery. The post of house clerk was vacant, and a committee recommended that it should be filled for the next three months by an assistant in the office at a salary of 20s. per week and part rations. To this they coolly added a further recommendation that an outsider should be brought in to act as assistant at a salary of 30s. per week and part rations, the object obviously being to give this outsider an opportunity of learning the work from the temporary house clerk and then to degrade the latter to the second, and promote the former to the first place. Recently, the Portsea Guardians have got into bad odour on account of certain jobs, but this proposal was too outrageous even for their taste, and after a lively debate the recommendation of the committee was rejected.

Fashionable Stationery.—Latest Designs.—Invitation Cards, Ball Programmes, Menus, Visiting Cards, &c.—Parkins & Gotto, Court Stationers, Oxford-street, London, W. Patterns free.

My belief in the advantages of boarding out pauper children is not to be shaken, as a correspondent seems to think it may be, by the occurrence of an isolated case of cruelty. In a recent case at Scarborough a child was severely thrashed by its foster mother, who was forthwith prosecuted by the Guardians and fined by the magistrates. This is submitted for my consideration as an example of the defects of the system; but, so far as I know, nobody has ever been foolish enough to suppose that boarding out is an absolute safeguard against the ill-treatment of a child. What the advocates of boarding out assert is that with proper care in the choice of foster parents and reasonable vigilance in looking after them, the chance of the children being ill-treated is exceedingly small. Experience has shown that this is true, and if there is now and then an unfortunate exception to the rule, it is, after all, nothing in comparison with the deep and widespread evils of the barrack-school system.

There might, perhaps, be some reason for misgivings with regard to the boarding out system if all poor law medical officers performed their duties in the perfunctory fashion which seems to have been adopted by Dr. Vassalli in this Scarborough case. He had, for instance, stated in a certificate that the child was suffering from debility. Asked why he did so, he replied, "I had to fill up the space with something, and so I put debility!" It is satisfactory to learn that the Guardians have expressed their "strong disapproval" of the doctor's conduct.

The following letter from a legal correspondent, apropos of the article in a recent number of Truth on the rights and duties of testators in regard to their dependants, is extremely interesting:—

I am very glad to see that you have vigorously attacked that iniquitous part of our law by which a man may leave his wife and children destitute and bequeath all his property to a religious society.

It is material to point out that by a still unrepealed clause of Magna Charta every man's wife and children in this country are entitled to "their reasonable parts" of his personal property at his death, and that he has a disposing power over one-third of it only. Nor has any judicial decision laid down that the effect of the general words of the Wills Act of 1837 is to work an implied repeal of this particular express provision.

Three or four years ago, in a Consolidating Bill, an express repeal of the clause in Magna Charta was proposed by the Government, but the Bill was soon abandoned, and has not since been reintroduced. If this clause of Magna Charta was already impliedly repealed by the Wills Act, why has it not been expressly repealed by one of the very numerous Statute Law Revision Acts which have been annually passed during the last twenty years?

The answer seems to be that the Statute Law revisors considered that the Magna Charta clause could be read together with the Wills Act (as, with considerable straining, it can), and is still in force.

Be this as it may, the fact that, to remedy the gross injustice which you so properly attack, it would merely be necessary to revive a disused clause of Magna Charta, seems to afford no slight ground for proceeding at once to remedy it, now that Mr. Pochin's exquisitely disgraceful will has drawn public attention to the subject.

In assuming that under the present law a testator has the power to dispose of the whole of his estate without restriction, I followed the authority of the learned author of "Williams on Personal Property," who lays down, without qualification, that the Wills Act "expressly" empowers every person of full age "to bequeath by his will . . . all personal estate to which he shall be entitled, either at law or in equity, at the time of his death." If I understand the author of the above letter aright—and I have every respect for his authority—it is open to question whether this power covers more than the one-third part of the estate, in respect of which a disposing power was given by Magna Charta. It is strange that no one has ever tested this point, but I suppose the truth is that cases in which testators have willed away their whole estate from their wives and children have been very rare. Even in the Pochin case, however, the widow and children would have been entitled under the rule laid down in Magna Charta to nearly double the amount which they actually obtained by the favour of the Bible Society. Anyhow, the fact that a legal doubt may exist on the point strengthens the case for legislation; and, in place of a Government Bill expressly repealing the clause of Magna Charta, what seems to be required is a Bill reaffirming this just and wholesome provision, and limiting accordingly the disposing power given in the Wills Act.

In 1893 a debtor became bankrupt, estimating his assets at £26,250. In 1898 the trustee has issued a report showing that the estate has only realised 35s., the proceeds of the sale of the pawnticket of the debtor's watch! The cost of this operation has amounted to £10 10s. 4d., distributed in the usual way. Why it should cost all that to realise one pawnticket I fail to understand, nor why the operation should take five years. This case is probably unique, even in the annals of bankruptcy administration.

I cannot say as much for all the bankruptcy cases to which my attention is called. For instance, a disappointed creditor forwards from Bristol the Official Receiver's final statement in a case where the assets were estimated at £62, and actually realised £46. The costs came to £28, and when the landlord and another preferential creditor had been satisfied, there remained £2 12s. 3d. for the unsecured creditors, whose claims amounted to £209. What else could be expected? One cannot say that £28 is an extortionate sum for costs. There is much room for improvement in bankruptcy administration no doubt, but the best bankruptcy system ever devised cannot work for nothing, nor can it get blood out of a stone. It is idle for creditors to expect to gain anything by making a man bankrupt who even on his own valuation is only worth £62.

Ought not touts selling the wares of quacks from door to door to possess hawkers' licences? I ask the question in view of an experience sent to me by a lady at Chester, who describes how an individual of this class, perceptibly the worse for drink, forced his way into a cottage to the great annoyance of the woman of the house, who would probably have had difficulty in getting rid of him had not the lady happened to be present at the time. The lady subsequently found that the agent, in company with another man, had entered other neighbouring cottages in the same way, much to the indignation of their occupants. These men represent a firm of quacks at Leicester. Both carried bags containing their wares, and they are therefore presumably within the category of hawkers. Many of the articles which they offer for sale are of an objectionable character, even if they were not offered in an offensive manner, and any powers which the law gives the police for restricting the operations of such gentry should be enforced.

H. L. Savory & Co.'s Cigarettes.—By Special Warrants of Appointments to H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, H.R.H. the Duke of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha, H.S.H. the Duke of Teck, and the Houses of Lords and Commons. To be obtained of all the leading Houses in the trade.—Sole address, 59, Piccadilly, London, W. Specimen case of samples, containing all sizes, 2s. 6d., with price list.

A tradesman is concerned to know whether it is legal for him to dun his debtors with a certain printed form headed, "Final notice before proceeding in the County Court (as per Act of Parliament)," and ending, "If you think it advisable to pay before going into Court bring this notice with you." These forms are bought at half a crown a hundred—a price at which the publishers must make an exceedingly handsome profit—and I believe they are used pretty extensively. The wording and get-up of the notice are, of course, intended to frighten people into the belief that it is issued under the sanction of the County Court; but so far as I know, there is nothing illegal about this method of intimidation. Whether it is a trick which a respectable tradesman ought to employ is quite another question.

In an action in the Inverness County Court the other day it was stated that the defender, James Cameron, had during the past two or three years carried on business under about half-a-dozen different names—a fresh name being assumed as soon as the old one became too well-known—and obtained goods on credit from tradesmen in various parts of the country, who never, or hardly ever, succeeded in getting any money from him. The local agents of Stubbs & Co. said that they had innumerable inquiries respecting Cameron, and that they generally replied that it was useless to spend good money in trying to recover debts from him. A Scotch correspondent asks me to warn confiding tradesmen against this individual, but in view of his Protean capacity for disguising his identity, such a warning is not of much good. Nor is it of much good, I am afraid, to point out to tradesmen the wisdom of making their inquiries before instead of after giving credit to unknown customers.

One interesting question arises out of the above case. An official witness proved that this man Cameron is an undischarged bankrupt. Does the law in Scotland allow undischarged bankrupts to trade at all, to say nothing of carrying on such a game as Cameron appears to have played?

Waygood Lifts for Hotels, Mansions, Clubs, Flats, &c. These can be worked by hydraulic, hand or engine power, and electricity. R. Waygood & Co., Ltd., Falmouth-road, London, S.E.

In my Legal Pillory this week the parallel cases from Eccleshall make a particularly effective object-lesson in Justices' justice. On the one side a defendant is fined a shilling for being drunk in charge of a horse and cart—a serious offence inasmuch as it endangers the lives and limbs of the lieges—and £2 for assaulting a constable by biting, striking, and kicking him. On the other, three defendants are mulcted in penalties to the monstrous amount of £16 18s. 8d., simply for being found on the highway with a couple of poaching nets in their possession. The Eccleshall Solons evidently look upon the safety of the public and the protection of the police as matters of no importance whatever in comparison with the preservation of game from the raids of unauthorised sportsmen. The following list also contains a series of instructive contrasts between the terms of hard labour which are unhesitatingly meted out for acts of vagrancy and petty larceny, and the pecuniary penalties which a muddy-minded magistracy deem sufficient punishment for the most outrageous assaults:—

Eccleshall Police-court. Before Messrs. B. Fitzherbert and H. Vyle. Wm. Jones, charged with being drunk while in charge of a horse and cart, and with assaulting a policeman. Defendant was very drunk, and the policeman took possession of the horse and cart, whereupon Jones kicked and bit him and dealt him a blow on the back of the head. Fined £2 for the assault and 1s. for the drunkenness, with 9s. 6d. costs.

Eccleshall Police-court. Before the same magistrates. John Wright and Frank Wright, charged under the Poaching Prevention Act, with being found in possession of two rabbit nets on the highway; and George Charles, charged with aiding and abetting them. The Wrights find £5 11s. 4d. each; Charles, £5 16s., or two months each in default.

Thorpe Petty Sessions. Before Rev. Canon Norman, Messrs. T. H. Baker and J. Woodgate. Joseph Phillips, farmer, charged with cruelty to a horse by working it while in an unfit state. The animal was very lame owing to a deformity of the foot, and it had two large raw wounds on the shoulders, one 3½ in. long. Fined £1 9s. 6d.

Thorpe Petty Sessions. Before the same magistrates. Samuel Rose and Arthur Rose, charged with stealing one-and-a-half bushels of watercress. Twenty-one days each.

Nuneaton Police-court. Annie Jones, charged with stealing a sheet. One month.

Newtownenningham Petty Sessions. Before Colonel Tynte, R.M. W. A. M'Candless and John Huston, charged with assaulting James Stevenson, and occasioning him actual bodily harm. Defendants inveigled complainant into a shed where he was savagely assaulted. Owing to his injuries he was confined to his bed for six days. Fined £2 each and costs.

Ballygowley Police-court. John Wilson, charged with stealing a coat and a pair of boots. Six months.

Newmarket (Suffolk) Petty Sessions. Before Messrs. R. W. King and C. H. Hammond. Wm. Langham, a stableman, charged with sleeping in a stable and having no visible means of subsistence. Seven days.

Paisley Police-court. Before Bailie Robertson. Alexander McMillan, charged with assaulting his wife. The woman and her child were shut out of the house for some hours in the rain. The accused then dragged them inside, pulled his wife about by the hair of her head, and struck her several times on the face. He also struck the child. Fined 21s.

Newport (Salop) Police-court. Before Messrs. C. C. Cotes, S. T. H. Burne, and C. E. Morris. Mary Hayward, aged 75, charged with stealing twopenny worth of coal from the railway. Fined £1.

Glasgow Western Police-court. Before Bailie Dick. John Russell, charged with assaulting a young woman. As she was going home the accused seized her and tried to drag her into a close. Her screams brought a man to her assistance, and Russell then gave her a blow on the face. Fined £3 3s.

Leyland Police-court. Before Messrs. J. Whittaker and J. Stanning. Matthew Cross, labourer, charged with stealing ten hens' eggs from a farm building. Fourteen days.

Wigan Police-court. John Bethell, charged with poaching. One month.

Subscriptions greatly needed by The Royal Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Animals.—2,876 convictions this year; 7,545 last year. Address complaints of cruelty, contributions, letters, &c., to Secretary, 105, Jermyn-st., London.

Blackpool Police - court. Jonathan McQuirk pleaded guilty to assaulting his wife. He went home drunk, and his wife put him on the sofa. At four o'clock in the morning he awoke, went upstairs, pulled his wife out of bed, gave her two black eyes, and severely injured her breast. For two years she had been treated with systematic cruelty and brutality. Fined 20s. and costs, and bound over.

Northwich Police-court. John Connor, charged with violently assaulting Martha Willett, aged 79. Defendant lodged with the old woman, and he assaulted her because he was dissatisfied with the dinner she provided for him. Her arms were covered with bruises, and he struck her twice in the eye, which was blackened. Fined 40s.

Dunfermline Sheriff Court. Before Sheriff Gillespie. Thomas Sneddon and George Sneddon pleaded guilty to seriously assaulting Thomas Duffy by striking him with their clenched fists, knocking him down three times, and kicking him. Duffy's injuries confined him to his bed, and the Sheriff characterised the assault as a very brutal one. Fined £4 each.

Ashby Petty Sessions. Before Messrs. G. Moore, J. B. Joyce, P. Hastings, Rev. C. T. Moore, Canon Beaumont and Major Hatchett. Caleb Boonham, labourer, charged with taking seventeen pheasants' eggs. Fined £1 19s. 6d.

Rotherham Police-court. Before Messrs. Hickmott and Wragg. John Wray, charged with stealing a pair of clogs. One month.

Swainsthorpe Petty Sessions. Before Messrs. C. A. Fellowes and R. H. Denny. John Thrower, labourer, charged under the Poaching Prevention Act with being in unlawful possession of seventeen partridges' eggs when searched on the highway. Fined £3; in default one month.

Spilsby Police-court. Before Messrs. W. D. Gainsford, H. Walker, and H. Mackinder. John Wm. Cole, charged with sleeping out and having no visible means of subsistence. Fourteen days.

Old Hill Police-court. Wm. Powell and Margaret Higgins, charged with stealing a shirt from a clothes line. One month each.

The special jury entrusted with the task of deciding whether the New York Mutual Life Insurance Company were justified in refusing to pay a claim for £10,000, made by the brother of one of their policy-holders, took only eighteen minutes to arrive at the conclusion that the company were acting within their rights. From the few facts reported in the papers during the course of the trial it is difficult to see how they could have come to any other conclusion. What I am curious to know is whether the case is going to end here.

It is satisfactory to find that the prisoner Graham Bennett was, as I suggested last week, tried before the Lord Chief Justice at Somerset Assizes instead of being kept in gaol until the Quarter Sessions at Bath a month hence. The evidence against Bennett, who was charged with an assault, turned out to be of so flimsy a character that the Judge stopped the case and directed the jury to return a verdict of not guilty. It would have been, his Lordship said, utterly unsafe to convict on such slight evidence. This puts in a still worse light the conduct of the Bath J.P.'s in insisting upon the committal of the man to the Quarter Sessions, though the Assizes were to be held much earlier, and in fixing the bail at an amount which, to the prisoner, was practically prohibitive. If these dunderheads had had their way, Bennett would have suffered five or six weeks' imprisonment before his innocence could be established.

At Llandilo Petty Sessions the other day a somewhat strange distinction was made between two cases of trespassing in pursuit of rabbits. The first defendant was a collier who is on strike, and who pleaded that he was, in consequence, very poor and hungry. He was fined £1. In the second case two colliers who are not on strike, but working at advanced wages, were the defendants. They were only fined 9s. 6d. each. Do the Bench regard poverty as an aggravation of the offence of poaching? Or is this a method of showing their disapproval of strikes?

I am glad to observe that the Irish judges follow in the footsteps of the English Bench in dealing with Shylockism. Last week the usurer Levin, alias "H. Staples," of 4, Nassau-street, Dublin, applied to the Queen's Bench for judgment against one of his victims who had fallen into arrear with the repayment of a loan and interest. Levin contended that, under the terms of the promissory note on which he sued, the whole amount of the loan and the interest—which was at the modest rate of from 500 to 600 per cent.—became due the moment default occurred in the payment of a single monthly instalment; but the Judges showed a strong disinclination to assist him with the machinery of the Court in enforcing such a monstrous claim, and the motion for judgment was ultimately struck out. This man Levin, who runs nearly a dozen usury-shops under different aliases in Dublin and other towns, is a Polish Jew, and as great a pest to Ireland as his more notorious compatriot Isaac Gordon, of 6, Livery-street, Birmingham, is to this country. Levin, indeed, learnt the tricks of the trade from Gordon, and the latter is still closely concerned in the former's enterprises.

A usurer calling himself James Bell, and hailing from 26, Brown-street, Manchester, tries to impress people with a sense of his respectability by adding to his circular a postscript in which he says he will be glad to give bankers' and solicitors' references, if desired. Bell was asked for these references by a recent would-be borrower, but it is almost superfluous to say that they were not forthcoming—indeed, the usurer declined to give any information whatever as to his terms until he had paid a visit to the applicant's house, though he states in his circular that "all particulars" can be furnished and the business be completed by post. I shall not be at all surprised to find that James Bell is the very latest alias of the ubiquitous Isaac Gordon. If it is not, this Manchester worthy at any rate imitates Isaac's methods to the extent of copying his well-known circular almost word for word. The postscript is the only new feature in it.

Mr. "Moses Moss" warned his readers last month against the circulars of "Alexander Baring & Co., stock and share dealers, 11, Bridge-street, Bath." It may be remembered that Baring & Co. came under my notice a year or so back, when the firm was shown to consist of an unknown individual renting a small room in a side street, and merely calling there occasionally to take away letters. At that time "Baring & Co." was advertising a promising appointment as private secretary, and endeavouring to extract fees from those who responded. He represented also that his head office was in London, but declined to disclose the exact site. Since Mr. "Moses Moss's" reference to him, he seems to have finally decamped. A gentleman calling the other day at 11, Bridge-street, found the door locked and Baring & Co.'s name removed. "Baring" had left no address, and the landlady had orders to return all letters to the Post Office—a pretty certain indication that the late tenant was ready to risk some loss rather than have his present whereabouts traced. The landlady stated that in "Baring & Co.'s" absence she had frequently signed for registered letters delivered at his office, and no doubt money to any amount has been sent for investment in Baring's "co-operative system of successful Stock Exchange dealing."

WATER SUPPLY TO COUNTRY HOUSES.—Read "Water Supply to Mansions." The Times says, "a practical pamphlet." Post free.—MERRYWEATHERS, 63, Long-acre, W.C., and Greenwich, S.E.

Another item of information which may be of interest is that on the floor of Baring's late office, after his departure, were found several envelopes addressed to "Ajax," together with the following advertisement from the Daily Telegraph :—

A REALLY GENUINE and SAFE INVESTMENT for amounts from £5 to £100. No gambling. A permanent income of £5 per week guaranteed on each £100 invested, and £1 per week on each £20; other amounts in exact proportion. References may be had from over a thousand investors in all parts.—For full particulars address Ajax, Box 7,945, Postal Department, Daily Telegraph, Fleet-street, E.C.

Evidently another phase of "Baring & Co.'s" operations. I shall be glad to hear of any one who may have had dealings with "Ajax." In the meantime, it seems desirable that people who have been sending their money to "Baring & Co." should communicate with the police, who ought to hunt up this rascal, and be prepared to lay their hands on him when wanted.

An old trick is being worked anew by some party who has christened himself "The Anglo-American Agency," 196, St. Vincent-street, Glasgow. The trick is done by means of an advertisement, so ingeniously worded as to lead gullible people to imagine that "£21 bicycles" are being "given away" by the Agency. All that the Agency literally promises, however, is to forward, for the sum of eighteenpence, a "gent's epingle-de-cravate or ladies' broché (sic), together with our offer, and on your complying with offer the bicycle is forwarded free of charge." The "epingle-de-cravate" or "broché" consists of a paltry bit of Brummagem jewellery, which would be dear at sixpence, and the "offer" is to send a bicycle to anybody who induces twelve persons to buy twelve watches at 30s. apiece from the Agency. If the offer is taken a very handsome profit can, of course, be made on the sale of the twelve watches and the "gift" of the bicycle for £18; and in any event the Agency has a rich harvest in the eighteenpences it rakes in from a foolish public. It is an artful dodge, but I cannot say that I have much sympathy for those who are covetous and credulous enough to succumb to it.

By the way, in reply to one or two inquiries recently received, I should certainly not advise any prize-winner in the competitions of the A.B. Cycle Company, Limited, 59 and 60, Chancery-lane, to pay £9 or upwards in cash for the cycles offered by way of prizes. This dodge for selling bicycles was dealt with in TRUTH some months back. It was then being worked by a firm calling themselves the Windsor Cycle Company, who advertised some simple puzzle for solution, and then informed the successful competitors—which probably meant all who entered—that they had won a second or third prize, or whatever it might be, entitling them to buy one of the company's cycles at an alleged reduced price. The first prize is to be given free, but of course there is only one first prize winner, while there may be any number whose prize takes the form of the privilege of buying a bicycle—at a price. I believe that the A.B. Cycle Company above-mentioned is merely the Windsor Cycle Company under a new name, and it carries on business on precisely the same lines.

Poor Monsieur Emile Solomiac, of Bordeaux, is still in deep mourning for his "beau père," but he is now adopting a new dodge for unloading the "Grand crû La Générale" upon the British public. Apparently the four cases of La Générale, 1888, are at last exhausted, and he asks you to buy "deux barriques d'excellent vin rouge de mon Domaine Grand crû La Générale année 1892, étampé au Domaine," at the reduced price of 200 francs per barrique of 300 bottles. He explains that he has been for some time past one of a syndicate of wine growers who, in consequence of the difficulty in disposing of their wines through the middlemen, have determined to deal direct with the consumer. He has now been offered the post of manager of the syndicate, but it is necessary for him, in the first place, to dispose of the whole of his own stock. Hence the alarming sacrifice of "Grand crû La Générale." He is a persistent gentleman, too, this Monsieur Solomiac, for, not having had an answer to one application which he made at the end of March, he follows it up a few weeks later with another, laying stress upon the great personal obligation which will be conferred upon him by sending an order. In this last letter he announces that the syndicate contemplate sending him shortly on "un voyage dans votre belle et noble patrie." If he will kindly name the date of his arrival, I think that our "belle et noble patrie" will do well to have a policeman waiting for him when he lands.

Let me again warn those whom it may concern against the insinuating appeals of Mr.—self-styled the "Reverend"—Robert Macmillan. I hear that this gentleman is once again busily touting about the City, going from office to office in search of cash, the immediate object of his appeal being a bazaar which he proposes to hold in the hall of his church at Southwark at the end of July. There must really be a great deal more benevolence and a good deal less intelligence in the City of London than one would at first sight suppose, when a man like Macmillan can pick up in this way the means of carrying on his questionable enterprises. I know that people have short memories, and it is more than three years since Macmillan's character was fully exposed in the course of the libel action which he brought against TRUTH. But even within the last six months the fact has been made public that Macmillan, having brought a shady action in a County Court, was sternly rebuked by the judge, described as a "notorious scoundrel" by counsel, and declined an invitation to go into the witness-box and deny this soft impeachment.

Some information has reached me respecting H. Hodges, the individual who issues circulars from Coromandel House, Lovel-road, Winkfield, Berks, in the character of a sportsman and gentleman compelled by reverses of fortune to maintain his position by disposing of stable secrets. Hodges says he is not "an ordinary advertising tipster," but that, of course, is just what he is. "Coromandel House" is one of a row of small cottages, and Hodges only uses it as an accommodation address. As to his statement that he is a member of the principal clubs, I am advised that if he belongs to any club at all it is probably a Sparrow or Quoit Club. Recipients of his circular will be able to judge from this the value of the invitation Mr. Hodges holds out to them.

As one interested in the cause of international peace and arbitration, I would warn those of similar views against the appeal circulated by Mr. Lewis Appleton, in his capacity of Secretary of the British and Foreign Arbitration Society, 1, Queen-street, Westminster. This is not the first time that Mr. Appleton has been referred to in TRUTH. Some years ago he came under my notice in connection with appeals to raise a sum of £55, in order, as he alleged, to release certain books of his from the publishers, who had a lien on them; and investigation showed at that time that his statements were far from accurate. In July of last year I noticed the interesting fact that this apostle of peace had been convicted at a police-court of a violent assault upon a housemaid, and on two other occasions a woman, in whose house he was living, has applied for protection against him.

In the appeals which he is now circulating among persons supposed to be interested in the cause of international arbitration, Appleton states that he is personally responsible for liabilities of the Association to the amount of £192, of which £146 is due to himself for disbursements. He also lays stress upon the fact that he has been associated with the movement for upwards of thirty-five years, that he has been entirely without remuneration for the last seventeen years, and that he has devoted the whole of his resources, amounting to upwards of £3,000, to the promotion of the cause. Appeals of this kind have been circulated for many months past, and in one of them, written last October, Appleton intimated that he was contemplating suicide, owing to the severe mental torture that he was suffering, apparently from the embarrassments of himself and the Association. For his allegations respecting his expenditure there is no evidence beyond Mr. Appleton's own assertions, as the British and Foreign Association has published no accounts for many years past. As to Mr. Appleton's previous services to the cause of peace, the fact is that he was originally Secretary of the London Peace Society, and gave up that office owing to financial irregularities. He then founded the International Arbitration Society, and after some years his connection with that body was terminated for similar reasons. These circumstances cannot be regarded as corroborative evidence of Appleton's pecuniary sacrifices on behalf of the cause. Seeing that this individual is now an undischarged bankrupt, and that the British and Foreign Arbitration Society publishes no accounts, his appeals should certainly be disregarded, and I think that even the prospect of his making away with himself may be regarded with equanimity.

In last week's TRUTH it was stated that a gentleman, who had ordered engravings direct from the plate from the South Kensington Fine Art Society, had received in return for his payment what were merely "litho copies of engravings with an imitation plate mark." I have received from Messrs. Willett & Sandford, solicitors of Arundel-street, a letter informing me that the foregoing statement is absolutely without foundation, offering me, on behalf of the South Kensington Fine Art Society, every facility for satisfying myself as to the untruth of the statement, and asking me to withdraw it with suitable apology. It is not necessary for me to avail myself of the invitation to satisfy myself by inquiring of Messrs. Willett & Sandford's clients. On receiving this letter, I at once communicated with the gentleman who had made the statement impugned, and it turns out that he has made a complete mistake, and that the plates to which he referred were not purchased of the Kensington Fine Art Society at all. I lose no time, therefore, in contradicting the statement made in last week's TRUTH about the engravings, and I must apologise to the Kensington Fine Art Society for having given currency to it. Perhaps the Society may also be disposed to give me an opportunity of inquiring further into their advertisements of pictures by various masters (including "Turner") noticed in TRUTH of the 26th ult., as I shall be equally prompt in correcting and apologising for anything erroneous in my remarks on that matter, if the Society think that it is due to them.

John Barleycorn blessing Temperance would make a pretty companion picture to Satan rebuking Sin. Not altogether a fanciful picture, however, as the following document will show. It is a perfectly authentic document, being a printed circular issued to "the Trade" by a leading wine and spirit merchant at Newcastle:—

DEAR SIRS,—As you will doubtless be aware, the Temperance Festival Committee require £250 to meet the deficiency of last year caused by the bad weather.

I have been approached with a view of soliciting a little assistance from the Trade, and as the object is a worthy one, and a means of bringing a large number of people to the city, I shall be pleased if you will send me a small contribution which will be duly acknowledged in the Daily Chronicle.—I am, yours faithfully, JOHN FITZGERALD.

This is, indeed, heaping coals of fire on the heads of the more rabid enemies of the drink traffic. I only trust that some of them will remember it to the credit of "the Trade," and not attribute it to any sordid motive—such as catching the Temperance vote. There is, however, something a little suggestive about the reference to the large number of people who will be brought into the city by the Temperance Festival. Does the worthy Councillor anticipate that any of these will stray into the "long bars" of Newcastle? After all, I suppose that even the most enthusiastic Temperance man in the liquor trade must look with an indulgent eye upon "moderate drinking."

For Truth, and all other Newspapers, Magazines, and Periodicals, send your Subscriptions to WM. DAWSON & SONS, Ltd., Cannon House, Bream's-bldngs., London. (Estab. 1809.) Catalogue gratis.

DEATH AT A HALFPENNY A GLASS!

Another London lad has just fallen a victim to the deadly fascination of "hokey-pokey," sold by an itinerant Italian ice-cream vendor. Another child is lying ill from the same cause.—St. James's Gazette.

How is it, in the face of facts
But too unpleasantly existent,
We seem to take a kind of pride
In being grossly inconsistent?
Why is it that our legal net,
Framed for enmeshing most rascallions,
Is wholly powerless to catch
These death-distributing Italians?

Woe to the grocers who embark
On an adulterating mission!
Woe to the London dairymen
Whose milk is not above suspicion!
Woe to the butchers, British born,
Who sell unwholesome legs and shoulders!
Such men are promptly pilloried,
The scoff and scorn of all beholders.

But any unwashed immigrant
Who cares to start an ice-cream barrow,
To hamper him with stern restraint
Is deemed pedantically narrow;
He, quite unchecked, may cater death
In glasses, daily, for the million,
And microbes of putridity
Distribute simply by the billion!

Vainly the analysts attempt
With horrible reports to shock us;
All vainly of bac. coli tell,
And colonies of streptococcus!
The law has not a word to say
Against the pestilential brewage
Of "a soft, frothy, yellow paste"
That's virtually "the same as sewage"!*

And so, though endless sums we spend
On what should be complete inspection,
We are most foolishly content
With sanitation by selection;
We fall with a most crushing force
Upon more venial offenders,
Yet calmly those Italians brook
Who are persistent poison vendors.

Must London, then, much longer wait
For some protection from the dangers
Which, from their lairs off Saffron Hill,
Are spread by hordes of filthy strangers?
Free Trade by all means—we have oft Enlarged its benefits and joys on—
But, in the name of common sense,
Don't let us have free trade in poison

A lady writes:—

Having two sons in the —th Middlesex Rifles, I have been much alarmed at reading in the Standard that the South Eastern Railway "will convey bodies of Volunteers on the Saturdays in July, August, and September." What is the meaning of these ominous preparations for dealing with the dead?

Of course, this poor lady is under a misapprehension. But her anxiety shows the effect on nervous people of all the war scares that have lately been propagated.

The concession of extra pay for Sunday work has just been granted by the directors of the London and South-Western Railway to all clerks of ten years' service and upwards. This is such a good step in the right direction, and goes so far towards redressing a substantial grievance, that one does not altogether like to find fault with the decision; but still it seems to me a pity that the directors did not, while they were about it, extend the principle of Sunday pay for Sunday work—already enjoyed by every other class of their servants—to the whole of the clerical staff without any limitation. Of course, it is right and proper that senior members of the staff should be specially considered; but there are plenty of ways in which their claims can be recognised without making their junior work on Sundays without extra pay.

My most humble apologies are due to the editor of a paper called the Southern Echo, published at Southampton, whose feelings have been deeply hurt by reason of his journal having been referred to in TRUTH as a "Southampton paper," without further indication of its identity. So keenly does the Southampton editor—I regret deeply that I cannot give his Christian and family names in full, but I have not the slightest idea what they are—resent this omission that upwards of thirty lines of his valuable space are devoted to the ventilation of his wrongs. I beg him to believe that the omission was solely due to the fact that the correspondent who sent me the letter of Mr. Rohss, which was the cause of this outrage, neglected to state the name of the paper in which it appeared. It will comfort my contemporary to know that I have given orders in future that when the SOUTHERN ECHO is referred to in TRUTH it shall appear in the largest capitals my printers can find room for, and if the editor will forward his name, I will see whether I can advertise that for him, too, on the same scale.

Intending explorers of the Klondyke goldfields, and those who have friends already there or on the road, would do well to pay a visit just now to the Royal Aquarium. Under the personal direction of Mr. Keast, himself a practical miner, an exhibition has been arranged showing the methods of placer (or surface) and quartz mining. After being drawn on a pony sledge to the mine, the visitor is conducted through all the processes of surface mining from the "puddling-tub" to the "pan." The apparatus used is not only genuine, but is handled by practical and experienced men who are perfectly competent to explain every detail. The quartz or reef mining model is an accurate representation of underground gold seeking, and here the explanations of Mr. Keast are accompanied by a reference to many interesting specimens of gold bearing quartz.

It is stated in a recent advertisement in the Times that the Colonial Secretary has allotted a number of vacancies in the British South Africa Police to a certain college, where men can receive "special training . . . . to fit them for early or ultimate settlement as colonists." "Ex-public schoolmen preferred," says the advertisement; "good character and strong physique indispensable." I hope that ex-public schoolmen, or any other young men who are attracted by the glamour of this announcement, with its imposing allusion to "The Right Hon. the Secretary of State," will take the precaution of ascertaining what a policeman's lot really is, and what a settler's prospects really are, in Rhodesia. The number and persistency of the complaints that come to hand show that many police recruits, as well as other emigrants, pass through a painful process of disenchantment when they reach that much-puffed country.

* Dr. Klein, the great bacteriologist, found one of the samples of ice-cream submitted to him to be so full of putrid decomposition as to be "practically the same as sewage."

One of the latest growls that I have heard is from a trooper in the B.S.A. Police at Bulawayo Camp, who writes very scornfully and strongly of the paucity and poorness of the diet on which he is expected to maintain the health and strength required for the service. For breakfast the allowance is 1 lb. of bread, 1½ oz. of coffee or tea, and 3 oz. of sugar, but no butter or milk. Dinner consists of bread and meat—the latter a small plate of stewed stuff, "mostly fat and bone." For his remaining meal, the trooper is expected to be content with the bread and tea (if any) left from breakfast. The deficiencies in quantity and quality of the rations have, of course, to be made up by purchases at the trooper's own expense; and at the lowest estimate every man spends at least 10s. a week in that direction. Provisions are so dear that even for that sum he gets very little.

Without expecting an epicurean table, a man may still be reasonably dissatisfied with this sparse and inferior diet. There are, moreover, other grievances in regard to the supply of the promised full kit, the accommodation and equipment of the troopers' quarters, and, above all, the exorbitant stoppages that are made from their pay on all sorts of trivial pretexts. On such grounds as these, men who were quite prepared to put up with merely unavoidable discomforts and hardships, have become disgusted with the Service; and I hardly think that any "special training" at a college would reconcile them to it. To all who contemplate joining the Rhodesian Police I would, therefore, repeat the advice I have given before: Don't.

In view of the congestion of Private Bill business in the House of Commons, the triviality of many of the objects for which people seek legislation is matter for surprise. A number of worthy persons have assumed the title of the "Association for the Prevention of Premature Burial," and are at present advocating an elaborate scheme to safeguard themselves and their fellow mortals against the horrors of burial alive. Among other things they desire that the sanitary authorities should establish "waiting mortuaries," properly warmed and lighted, for the comfortable reception of supposed corpses, and that the death shall be verified by two independent officers before interment. Since dead men tell no tales, there is no saying whether there is any real case for invoking the Legislature and laying new burdens on the ratepayers in the interests of those wrongfully suspected of being dead; but it is worth while to bear in mind that any one apprehensive of a mistake on this point can guard against it on his own account by giving the necessary instructions to his doctor and his executor. Premature burial is a nasty idea. But the idea of keeping the departed for an indefinite period in comfortably-warmed and well-lighted apartments at the public expense is not exactly a nice one.

Regularly every morning I wade through the war news in my paper. Each morning I learn on what terms President McKinley is prepared to make peace, and to what terms the Spaniards are ready to assent; where Admiral Sampson is, and what Admiral Cervera is doing; what troops have been embarked for Cuba, and how many have landed; what is the condition of the Santiago fortifications in American opinion, and what it is in Spanish opinion; what new exploit Admiral Dewey has performed at Manila, and how he has done nothing new; how a Spanish ship has been destroyed, and how it has not been destroyed. One day I read of a great battle; the next day I find that it was only a thunderstorm. One day the European Powers are, I am told, determined at once to interfere, and the next day I am told that they never have contemplated doing so. This is occasionally varied by one of "our own correspondents" sending a conversation to his newspaper that he has had, or says that he has had, with an eminent diplomatist, who garrulously discourses on the situation, but seems to know no more about it than I do. I still religiously peruse these valuable and varied items of news. But I am inclined to think that few have my long-suffering patience—notwithstanding the startling head-lines that draw attention to all this contradictory information.

A friend of mine recently had a conversation with President McKinley. He describes him as one of the most level-headed men that he ever came across. Surely, if so, the President might indirectly find out on what terms peace might be brought about. The Spaniards are thoroughly over-weighted. They must perceive that, come what may, they will lose Cuba, and the more intelligent amongst them must be aware that the loss is really a gain. Why, then, should not the United States convey to Spain that, if she evacuates Cuba, or Cuba and Porto Rico, the war may end at once? A coaling station on the Philippine Islands might be thrown in, if America wants one. It really is not worth while going on with the war to decide who is to pay costs. This would not be worthy of the Americans, neither would it be any benefit to them to become the possessors of the Philippines.

This advice is well meant. I do not, like Mr. Chamberlain, denounce the United States one day, and the next day; finding that I want them to protect me, beslaver them with professions of affection. I am a fair-weather and a foul-weather friend. I am not anxious to cement my friendship for Americans by joining with them in a battle for some great and noble cause, against foes who are as mythical as the great and noble cause itself. I regard this sort of stuff as the lowest form of rhetorical claptrap. I would have each fight her own battles if inclined to fight, but neither fight with the other on any issue. If we do happen to differ on any point, then let us refer it to arbitration. "Happy thought! Let us swear eternal friendship" is all nonsense; and it is not thus that friendships and cordial relations between countries are brought about. A friendship to be inaugurated, as Mr. Chamberlain suggests, by the two friends kicking some third party, generally ends in the friends, having kicked the life out of the third party, fighting like demons over the corpse. Great and noble cause, indeed! Show me one great and noble cause for which two nations have fought in the last three centuries. Wars used to be dynastic; then they were waged for conquest. At present they are waged for markets. We may reasonably aspire to supply China with our goods, but to call the maintenance of the integrity of China a great and noble cause is mere hypocrisy.

"Kronenquelle" Water.—The famous Natural Mineral Water for Gout, Rheumatism, and Diabetes Prices: 1 dozen bottles, 10/6; case of 50 bottles, 40/-.—Sole Importers, W. Schacht & Co., 26, Finsbury-pavement, London, E.C. Pamphlet by eminent medical specialists post free on application.

Trains de Luxe.—Luchon Express, every Tuesday and Thursday, direct to Luchon. Engadine Express, to Coire and Lucerne. Carlsbad Express, daily to Bayreuth, Carlsbad, &c. Tickets and all particulars from International Sleeping Car Co., 14, Cockspur-street, London, S.W.

So profound is the ignorance of the Conservatives in regard to public opinion in America, that a Conservative member recently quoted Mr. Smalley as one of its authorised exponents, and this was cheered by his brother Conservatives. Their notion is that, now that a Conservative Minister has condescended to address some friendly words to the United States, all Americans must be in such an ecstasy of gratitude, that they are eager to show it by pulling our chestnuts out of the fire for us. Mr. Smalley, in one of his lucubrations in the Times, had fallen foul of Mr. John Morley for objecting to an alliance between British and American Jingoes. This, it would seem, is evidence that the Radicals are the enemies of the United States, and it has consequently excited the indignation of all Americans. Mr. Smalley is, as is well known, a gentleman of such aristocratic instincts, that a Radical stinks in his nostrils. Never was a more unfounded charge made than this of his. Probably the heartiest supporters of amity between the two nations in this country have been for years Mr. John Morley and Sir William Harcourt; and in this feeling they have represented what has always been an article of the Radical faith.

We Radicals, who still hold to the political school of Mr. Bright and Mr. Gladstone, have always looked to the United States as furnishing proof that a country may become great and powerful without being imbued with a spirit of militarism; without joining in the scramble for territory in all parts of the globe, and without meddling in the quarrels of other Powers. We would have America, therefore, remain a living evidence of the folly of such courses. If she renounces these sound principles, we shall expect her next to convert her President into an hereditary Monarch with all the antiquated tomfooleries of a Court, and her millionaires into Dukes and Earls. She will have an Established Church richly endowed, and a landed aristocracy transmitting its estates from father to son, and leaving its younger sons to be provided for by the State. Her farmers will become tenants, instead of owning the farms that they cultivate, and she will regard her present form of government as a dark spot in her history.

For all mercies let us be thankful. The peace party in the Cabinet has secured a victory in the Cabinet. The Foreign Office has once more vanquished the Colonial Office. Our dispute with France in regard to certain territories in the centre of Africa has been decided peacefully, and the two countries are not to be dragged into war in order to decide to whom a few collections of mud huts and a few square miles of jungle and forest are to belong —a matter which is almost as important as whether we or France shall have an exclusive right to shoot bears at the North Pole. The essential was that there should be a line of delimitation between the right of grabbing claimed by both countries, and this line has fortunately been drawn, thanks to the common sense of the Foreign Office and to the exertions of our Ambassador in Paris.

In times past Africa was left as a field of missionary labour. Associations sought to Christianise the natives. But this attempt soon became a mere pretext for robbing them of their earthly possessions. "Look up to Heaven," said a missionary once to an intelligent black chief. "Yes," replied the chief, "in order that whilst my eyes may be raised to Heaven, you may steal my land." Nowadays we seem to have given up even the pretence of spreading Christianity in the Dark Continent. We openly and avowedly want its inhabitants to buy our goods, and to work for us or to give place to us. If these unfortunates inhabit a district where Europeans can live, we extirpate them by means of spirituous liquor and the diseases that we drag in our train. If they inhabit a part of the continent where Europeans cannot live, we send punitive expeditions to force them to receive our goods. In either case, we call upon Providence to bless us for our civilising efforts.

A Sea Bath in your own room. Bracing and refreshing is Brill's Sea Salt. A safeguard against colds and rheumatism. Invaluable in the nursery.

SCRUTATOR.

MR. CHAMBERLAIN AND FOREIGN POLITICS.

When a clever advocate has a bad case, he makes the best of it. Mr. Chamberlain's case last Friday was so bad that, remarkable as are his powers of debate, he could make positively nothing out of it. He had attacked the Russian Foreign Minister and the Russian Emperor at Birmingham in the language of a fish fag, accusing the former of being a liar, and comparing the latter to the devil, and having thus contributed to the peace and amity that ought to exist in Asia between us and Russia, he had explained that we must throw up the sponge, and allow Russia to overrun China, unless we could find some great military Power to enter into an alliance with us, and kindly lend us her troops to defend our interests in that part of the world.

When questioned in the House of Lords as to this speech, Lord Salisbury replied that he had not read it, and he almost implied that he hardly remembered that Mr. Chamberlain was a member of his Cabinet. In the House of Commons, Mr. Curzon, speaking as Lord Salisbury's representative, declined to say whether the Foreign Office was responsible for the speech, and left it to the Colonial Secretary to explain it.

Mr. Chamberlain, on rising, asserted that he himself agreed with his own speech, and then attempted to show that Lord Salisbury agreed with it. If not, why, he asked, had the Premier not turned him out of his Cabinet? He might as well have sought to show an agreement between himself and a man into whose house he had managed to get a footing, because the owner had not kicked him downstairs. After this he endeavoured to explain away his speech. It was, he suggested, a sort of philosophic essay, in which he put forward alternative schemes of policy, without binding himself to any one of them in particular. This absurd attempt to evade the meaning of his own words was received with jeers from the Liberal side of the House, and dismayed silence from the Conservative side.

The real truth of the matter is, that Mr. Chamberlain had, as usual, sought to attract attention to himself by putting forward an unauthorised programme, and this impudent attempt to score against his own colleagues had been met by a snub. His attitude was that of isolation, but the isolation can hardly be described as "splendid." Another member would, under the circumstances, have resigned. Mr. Chamberlain has not done this, and he dares Lord Salisbury to eject him from his Cabinet. Probably nothing would please the Premier more than to do this, and I fail to see why he should not. Mr. Chamberlain has burnt his ships. Ejected from the Liberal Party, he found salvation in a Tory Cabinet. If ejected from that Cabinet, he is lost, for the Liberals are not likely to take him back into grace.

In the division that took place, some of the Liberals voted for a reduction of Lord Salisbury's salary because he is not Jingo enough to please them; for the Jingo microbe has its victims amongst Liberals. The majority of Liberals voted for it because Lord Salisbury had not had the courage to repudiate in words Mr. Chamberlain's scheme of foreign policy. Lord Salisbury, no doubt, made mistakes in the Chinese discussions with Russia; but in the main, as it seems to me, he brought about a result of which we have no reason to complain. He had his aims, they were reasonable, and he attained them. But every now and then he allowed himself to be temporarily diverted from them by the War Party amongst his supporters in the Press, in his Cabinet, and in the House of Commons. His most serious mistake was to throw these blusterers Wei-hai-wei as a sop; but, provided he does not waste money in erecting fortifications there, and the lease merely means that it is not to be leased to any other Power, no great harm is done.

In Asia there is room for Russia and for us. The former is opening out Manchuria to civilisation. This will be a gain to the world, and, incidentally, to us, for our trade with Russia is large, whilst our trade at present with Manchuria is small. That Russia should have a port and a naval basis there is only reasonable. What we should do is to endeavour to establish friendly relations with Russia, recognising the fact that she is a great and powerful Empire, and that such an arrangement is only possible on the give and take principle. As regards China proper, with its hundreds of millions of inhabitants, we ought to seek to secure a general accord, that it shall remain a free trade area, where each foreign country will be able to compete for a market on equal terms.

What is Mr. Chamberlain's scheme? Russia, he says, cannot be trusted to keep any engagement; we ought, therefore, to come to no arrangement with her, but to live in perpetual antagonism, much as Carthage lived with Rome. As we are ourselves powerless to prevent her doing what she pleases in China, we must seek an alliance with a great military Power, to aid us in holding our own against the Czar, who is the devil, and consequently devilish in wickedness and ability. France is the ally of Russia. The only military Power to which we can appeal to help us is Germany, therefore with Germany we ought to enter into an alliance. Assuming that this be a sound policy, the primary difficulty in its way is, that Germany has not the remotest intention to enter into any such alliance with us. The keystone of her policy is to keep on good terms with Russia, and thus to secure herself against a joint attack by Russia and France. Were such an attack to take place, our alliance would not help her, and she certainly would not select the moment of attack to denude herself of troops by sending them to China to look after our chestnuts, for she would need them all at home. There is no country which practises the do ut des more than Germany. Supposing that she were prepared to enter into such an alliance, what would she claim for it? We should have to guarantee to her her European dominions, including Alsace and Lorraine. We should have to aid her in securing coaling stations, fortresses, and colonies all over the world, in order to enable her to compete with us commercially. The suggestion is a ridiculous one, and the only result of Mr. Chamberlain making it has been that Germany has declined it without thanks.

Since the fall of Napoleon in 1815 we have refused to enter into any permanent alliance with one or more of the Continental Powers against others. The only war alliance which we have joined since then was with France against Russia. This was for certain specific ends, and there is no British Statesman who does not now admit that the Crimean war, which was the outcome of this temporary alliance, was a mistake.

No man was more opposed to our taking sides in the alliances of Continental States against each other than Mr. Gladstone. Although the warmest of friends to Italy, he denounced even any indirect approval of the Triple Alliance to which she was a party. His doctrine ever was that, if something can be gained for liberty in any part of the world by general concert, we should be a party to that concert, but that beyond this we should carefully eschew all alliances. Never did I more regret his loss than last Friday. He would have skinned Mr. Chamberlain alive, and left him without a shred of flesh to cover his mangled bones.

At present we assert a right to absolute supremacy on the high seas. European Powers have colonies and they have foreign commerce. Our supremacy necessarily places both at our good pleasure. Such a claim may be wise or foolish; but there is no question that its tendency is to lead other nations, if they do not combine against us, to be unwilling to enter into an alliance with us in order to make us supreme on the seas. Isolation, therefore, is the consequence of our policy. Mr. Chamberlain fails to realise this, and he actually pointed out in his speech how useful it would be if we could induce some one great Continental Power to place her navy at our disposal, in order that we may be saved the necessity of outbuilding the navies of the entire world! To this claim to naval supremacy we have lately added the doctrine of expansion. This expansion, we are told, is the law of our being. It may be, but the doctrine is hardly likely to secure to us allies. Mr. Chamberlain's error is in supposing that the Great Powers are as simple as the Liberal-Unionists of Birmingham, and that he can humbug European Statesmen as he has humbugged Birmingham electors.

What struck me as the most clap-trappy of the clap-trap in Mr. Chamberlain's Birmingham speech was his declaration that he is in favour of cordial relations with the United States. One would really suppose that no one had desired this before he announced that he was in favour of it. As a nation we have been for the most cordial relations with the Americans for many a year. As a nation we have insisted on these cordial relations being maintained, whenever any of our rulers sought to weaken them. In the Confederate war, it was the people of England that prevented the recognition of the Confederacy. It was the people that insisted on the Alabama claims being referred to arbitration, and the Conservatives have for years denounced Mr. Gladstone for having agreed to this "surrender." Only the other day the Jingoes were howling for war with America rather than agree to arbitration in the Venezuela matter. The present Government sided with the Jingoes, and we should have been dragged into war, had it not been that the people made it clear that no such war would be permitted. Mr. Powell Williams—one of the Birmingham gang which affectionately and submissively regards Mr. Chamberlain as almost a divinity, and whose mission is to inculcate this cult—only a few days ago informed his Birmingham constituents that Mr. Chamberlain, by asserting that we ought to maintain cordial amity with the United States, has done as much for the well-being of the United Kingdom as Mr. Gladstone effected in his lifetime. Mr. Curzon, on the other hand, in his speech, met this statement by saying that, if we are on better terms with America than heretofore, it is entirely due to Lord Salisbury—the fact really being that it is due to neither, but to the action of the great mass of men which collectively makes "public opinion."

On the whole, though fully recognising Mr. Chamberlain's talents as a debater, I am glad that he has gone over to the Tories. I wish them joy of him. What he has always failed to understand is that, when men agree to row in the same boat, they ought to keep stroke. He is always trying to score off his brother oarsmen. If the Cabinet of which he is a member finds favour with the country, he tries to take all the credit to himself; if on any particular matter it does not find favour, he tries to separate himself from his colleagues, and to induce a belief that his counsels have been overruled. In the Press he has his organs, which puff him as though he were a pill, or a hair wash. A gentleman of this habit I would rather see in the camp of the enemy than in ours. He wants to be the head of the Party in which he now serves, just as he wanted to be the head of the Liberal Party in times past. He knows that his only chance is to divert attention from home politics, and to drag us into a war. He tried his best to force on a war against France about a frontier dispute in Western Africa. Lord Salisbury has prevented the success of this endeavour. For this I am grateful to Lord Salisbury. Foiled in this, Mr. Chamberlain wants to drag us into a war with Russia, and he implores Germany to aid us. Lord Salisbury, on the other hand, seeks no such entangling alliance, and, as he has said, he sees no reason why we should not come to some arrangement with Russia in regard to Asia to our mutual advantage. For this also I am thankful to Lord Salisbury. The Tories have a majority. They, not the Radicals, have the destinies of the country on their hands. It is Hobson's choice with us. We have to choose between Lord Salisbury, whose aim is peace, and Mr. Chamberlain, whose aim is war. Under these circumstances I stand by Lord Salisbury against Mr. Chamberlain, although I should be glad to see them both replaced by men more in accord with the political views of Radicals in respect to home politics, and less prone to expend all our resources on armaments. In Lord Salisbury I recognise a man endowed with many Statesmanlike qualities, who is not a Liberal, but who would not sacrifice what he honestly believes is to the interest of his country in order to serve his own personal ends. In Mr. Chamberlain I recognise a pushful, wire-pulling politician, ever subordinating the interests of his country to his own, and ready to be Tory, Unionist, Liberal, or Radical as it suits the exigencies of his ambition. Differing from the Tories on almost everything, I can respect an honest, conscientious Tory, however misguided I may think him. But for Mr. Chamberlain and politicians of that kidney I have no more respect than I should have, were I an American, for a Tammany Hall Boss. I like consistency, and I think that in this view I am not peculiar. A man who first gets into a Liberal Cabinet by the profession of ultra-Radical opinions, and who then gets into a Tory Cabinet by the profession of ultra-Tory opinions, and who, whether a Liberal or a Tory Minister, intrigues against his chief, may be puffed by his immediate followers as the noblest of patriots; but he has lost the confidence of the country, and can never regain it.

I think that it was Mr. Morley who the other day urged the reading of newspapers. I am not prepared to say that the advice should be discarded, but I would recommend those who follow it never to believe anything in a newspaper on a controversial issue, which is not proved in the clearest manner, and to distinguish between argument and mere dogmatic assertion. Otherwise he will find himself often fooled. He should not surrender his own judgment to the newspaper, nor make its views his own because these views appear in print. If he does, he becomes a mere sheep, baa-baaing as the newspaper that he affects tells him. For instance, I have seen it alleged again and again that Russia, in the recent China negotiation, was guilty of bad faith. This has been asserted and re-asserted in newspapers, and Mr. Chamberlain has translated it into the coarsest and most vulgar abuse. Now, these negotiations—or all that we know about them—are contained in a Blue Book. I like to go to the fountain head. Therefore I read and re-read the Blue Book. I could not see a vestige of evidence to support the charge. In regard to the lease of Port Arthur, Russia had again and again distinctly stated her intentions, and they were received by us without protest. When the lease was granted, Lord Salisbury made no complaint, but only asked to be assured that the stipulations in regard to foreign commerce contained in the Treaty of Tientsin would not be abrogated. Only fifteen days after the lease had been notified, did he protest on strategical grounds. The Russians can hardly, in this matter, be charged with bad faith, nor did Lord Salisbury make that charge against them. So, too, as to Port Arthur being made a port of entry. Lord Salisbury never even asked for this. Our Ambassador at St. Petersburg did so, as he admits, without instructions. Count Mouravieff assented. When this was communicated to Lord Salisbury, he replied that he did not want Port Arthur to be a port of entry, because it is entirely unfitted for commercial purposes, and is only important as a fortress. So persistent were the assertions as to bad faith in the newspapers, that I thought that I might be mistaken. I consulted one of the ablest lawyers in the House of Commons, and begged him carefully to peruse the Blue Book. He did so, and came to the same conclusion as I had. This, therefore, is an instance of how public opinion can be prejudiced by bold, reckless assertions in newspapers.

THE CASE OF DANIEL COLLINS.

Much interest, I am glad to know, has been aroused by the story of the conviction and death of Daniel Collins, narrated in last week's TRUTH; and there is every hope of some further inquiry being held into the case, and of an attempt being made to obtain the release of Galvin, Collins' fellow prisoner. It may conduce to these ends if I dot one or two of the i's and cross a few of the t's in my last article.

To begin with, it is important to note the part which Mr. Loveland-Loveland, the presiding magistrate, played in bringing about the conviction. It has already been mentioned that Dr. Counsel, who defended Collins, expressly put it to the jury that he refrained from relying on the defence of insanity, first, because he considered his client entitled to an absolute acquittal on the evidence; and, secondly, because, under those circumstances, he could not take the responsibility of asking for a verdict which would have the effect of consigning the prisoner to a criminal lunatic asylum—with the probable further consequence that he would become permanently insane. In putting his case thus, Dr. Counsel said that he felt confident of the approval of the Bench—as well he might, seeing the flimsy character of the case for the prosecution. The point was not left in doubt, for, in charging the jury, Mr. Loveland-Loveland emphatically expressed his approval of the course which the prisoner's counsel had taken, remarking that the committal of the prisoner to a criminal lunatic asylum would probably bring about the result which Collins' friends must be most anxious to avoid. Yet having made this declaration, the judge proceeded to sum up dead against the prisoner, and there can be little doubt, in view of the character of the evidence against the prisoners, that it was the judge's undisguised indication of his own opinion which, more than anything else, led the jury to convict. Is this a fair attitude towards the prisoner on the part of a judge presiding at a criminal trial? Admitting, as he does, that there was evidence on which the jury might have found the young man mentally irresponsible, admitting also, as he does, that the state of Collins' mind was so precarious that committal to a criminal lunatic asylum might have the effect of permanently deranging him, he yet acquiesces in and approves of the virtual withdrawal of the defence of insanity, only to sum up in favour of a conviction, and, the conviction obtained, to pass a sentence of twelve months' hard labour! Does this learned magistrate, presiding regularly at one of the busiest criminal courts in the kingdom, seriously suppose that a youth who has already been under treatment for mental derangement, and whose intellect is admittedly in a precarious condition, is likely to fare better as a convict under sentence of hard labour than in an institution designed for the reception and treatment of the insane? It would really seem that he does, for, in passing sentence, after the prisoner's counsel had put forward the medical evidence as a reason for mitigating punishment, Mr. Loveland-Loveland dismissed this plea with an off-hand remark that the prisoner would be very well looked after where he was going to. It can only be inferred from this that in Mr. Loveland-Loveland's opinion the discipline of a convict prison is more suitable to one in danger of becoming permanently insane than that of a criminal lunatic asylum. An agreeable thought, considering the number of prisoners of doubtful sanity who must be tried at London Sessions in the course of a year!

How young Collins was really looked after where he went to, the sequel sufficiently shows. In consigning him to a gaol as a more suitable place than a lunatic asylum for a man whose reason was tottering, Mr. Loveland-Loveland in fact consigned him to death in six days' time. The prison authorities are in no way responsible for that tragic result, no notice having been given to them that any evidence of insanity had been given at the trial. The responsibility for the lad's death rests solely upon those who failed to give this warning when he was handed over to the gaolers. Who may be in fault for this remains to be seen; but seeing that Mr. Loveland-Loveland stands committed to the view that a sentence of hard labour was the most suitable treatment for a youth of Collins' antecedents, and that he would be properly looked after in the gaol, this gentleman may well be asked to explain what steps he took to ensure that Collins would be looked after in any different manner from any other prisoner consigned to Wormwood Scrubbs from London Sessions. It behoves the Home Secretary to put this question to Mr. Loveland-Loveland, and if the Deputy-Chairman replies that he gave proper and suitable instructions, then it will be for the Home Secretary to ascertain why and by whose default such instructions were not carried out.

So far as Mr. Loveland-Loveland is concerned, this is the most serious feature in the case. But I cannot refrain from commenting upon the part he played in inducing the jury to convict. I have already argued at length that the verdict was utterly against the weight of evidence, and that had the conviction gone before a court of appeal it could not possibly have stood. Without going over that ground again, it is yet necessary to refer to the way in which Mr. Loveland-Loveland dealt with the one scintilla of evidence of false pretences or criminal intent which can be found in the case for the prosecution. This was the evidence of Julius Jacobs as to what was said to him by Galvin in regard to the value of the shares offered for sale to Jacobs' Company. This Jacobs, as already mentioned, had in February last completed a sentence of twelve months' hard labour for an attempt at blackmailing, and he was cross-examined upon that fact in Collins' case. The charge against Jacobs will be in the recollection of many of my readers. It was that of attempting to blackmail a Mr. Bebro by the threat of publishing a libel upon him in a financial journal. In the Collins case Jacobs, as already stated, admitted that he put himself into communication with the police after Collins had asked him to quote a price for the shares, and before he had himself made any offer for them. He admitted before the magistrate that he "wanted to catch" Collins, and that "it would have been a good advertisement for his Company." In plain English, he set a trap for Collins, in conjunction with the police, with an eye to business for himself. The statements of a man of such antecedents, acting from such motives, would hardly weigh heavily with the majority of jurymen. Apparently, that was what Mr. Loveland-Loveland thought, for what did he do? In his summing-up, he actually went out of his way to reassure the jury as to Jacobs' value as a witness by giving him a testimonial on his own account, stating that to his own knowledge he (Jacobs) had been instrumental in exposing certain serious financial frauds in the City! In any case, these remarks would be grossly irregular. A judge has no more business than anybody else in Court to put to the jury on his own responsibility facts which have not been formally proved in evidence, and which would not be admissible as evidence even if proof of them were tendered. But what is to be thought of a judge who resorts to a gratuitous irregularity of this kind for the purpose of gaining a conviction, or with the view of removing from the minds of the jury a doubt of which the prisoner would otherwise have got the benefit? It is a course directly opposed to the principles of English justice, and, I am thankful to add, to the traditions of the English Bench in criminal cases.

And what a fatuous misapprehension of the whole merits of the case does this judicial testimonial to the virtues of Jacobs imply! Upon the face of this earth there is no more odious creature than the blackmailer—the man who attempts to make money for himself by trading upon the misconduct or the timidity of another. It would seem that Jacobs, having been convicted and punished for this vile offence, and having very possibly, as the result of his imprisonment, got into confidential relations with the police, was now minded to rehabilitate himself by posing as a vindicator of the law, and thereby giving "a good advertisement" to his Company. How does he set about realising this public-spirited design? By setting a trap to lure a youth of weak intellect into a breach of the criminal law. There is no evidence of a shadow of criminal intention on Collins' part in the first instance. He simply saw the advertisement of Jacobs' Company, and sent them a sample share asking what price it would fetch—an act far more consistent with a belief that the share was marketable than that it was worthless. Jacobs gives an evasive reply, comes to the conclusion that there is something wrong, communicates with the police, tempts Collins to put a selling price on the shares, and then, himself believing the shares to be valueless, offers a fictitious price for them. Then, and not till then, does Collins send a friend, who states (according to Jacobs) that the interest on the shares has been paid—the one solitary indication of a false pretence as to the value of the shares, and even this resting solely on Jacobs' testimony. What can this be called but setting a trap? And what view would any average man take of a witness, only four months out of gaol, who lays a trap of this kind for the avowed purpose of advertising his own business? Yet this is the witness whom Mr. Loveland-Loveland, in his desire to secure a conviction, goes out of his way to rehabilitate from the Bench.

Again, how does this view of Jacobs' conduct affect the merits of the case? Surely, it shows that if Collins and his friend eventually committed anything in the nature of a false pretence (which I deny), they were led into it entirely by Jacobs' own false pretence as to the value of the shares. An offence committed in this way—criminal intent absent in the first instance, and only developed by the instigation of the agent provocateur—is of all offences the most venial, and, in the opinion of most men who have given the matter any thought, reflects discredit only upon those who instigate and procure it. Not so thinks Mr. Loveland-Loveland. In proportion to his admiration of the virtuous and public-spirited Jacobs is his abhorence of the nefarious designs of the villain Collins, who had dared to ask so good a man to quote a price for an unmarketable stock. So Mr. Loveland-Loveland, regardless of the lad's previous good character, regardless also of the beneficent provisions of the First Offences Act for such cases made and provided, consigns Collins to twelve months' hard labour, fortified in this righteous decision by the thought that, as the lad is of doubtful sanity, this will be a much more wise and merciful course than sending him to a lunatic asylum. The case is such a topsy-turvy mockery of justice from beginning to end that, but for the coffin and the grave in the background, one would laugh at it as one laughs at some travesty of judicial procedure in an opéra bouffe.

I trust that the other prisoner, Galvin, will be released without delay. No time should be lost by his friends in taking the proper steps for that purpose. His position is solely that of an accomplice of Collins, and if poor Collins was wrongfully condemned and mercilessly punished—as to which, among those qualified to judge there can hardly be a difference of opinion—Galvin ought not to be kept in gaol a day longer. But the case ought not to rest there. At every stage it reflects upon the fitness of the Deputy-Chairman of the London Sessions for the position which he fills, and it requires to be carefully investigated and considered by the Home Secretary from that point of view. If by the fault of any judge or magistrate such a miscarriage of justice occurs as the facts of this case suggest—a miscarriage aggravated a thousandfold by the death of the victim—it is necessary for the protection of all innocent persons that effectual steps should be taken to prevent the same judge making the same mistake again.

A KLONDYKE PROSPECTOR'S PROSPECTS.

A strange tale of Klondyke company-promoting reached me the other day from Vancouver. The writer was a Mr. David T. Evans, who found himself stranded in Vancouver under the following circumstances. A few months ago Mr. Evans, being then in London, saw advertised in a London daily the prospectus of the Klondyke-Yukon Gold Mining Company, Limited. He sent for a copy of the prospectus, put himself in communication with the secretary, and found that by taking 200 shares he could be appointed as a member of the prospecting expedition which the Company proposed to send out to Klondyke. The Company does not appear to have possessed anything in the shape of property, either in Klondyke or elsewhere, unless "options" can be so described. The purposes for which it was formed were thus indicated in the prospectus :—

> This Company has been formed for the purpose of despatching within the next few weeks a trading, mining, and exploring company for prospecting and acquiring auriferous lands in the Klondyke and Yukon districts, to which the attention of the world has been directed by the published and proved reports of enormous gold discoveries.
>
> The Company has secured the services of thoroughly skilled, practical and experienced gold mining experts and prospectors, and the expedition will be despatched viâ Wrangel and Telegraph Creek to take up claims on behalf of the Company, and to proceed with their immediate development.
>
> Several valuable options for the purchase on favourable terms of proved rich properties have been received, and the Company has a reliable and responsible manager in British Columbia, who is looking after the Company's interests in obtaining options of desirable claims and concessions, and who is making arrangements for trading junctions and depots.
>
> The capital of the Company has been made moderate so as to permit of each shareholder having a large interest in the heavy profits anticipated, instead of a large capital which causes the profits to be attenuated.
>
> No expedition will leave for these goldfields better prepared, and so calculated to meet with success, as the one despatched by this Company.

These statements were seasoned with the usual highly-coloured representations of the wealth of the Klondyke and Yukon districts, and the usual promoter's anticipations of the wealth awaiting those who joined the Company in good time. The Directors were :—

> J. D. Robertson, Esq. (late Coolgardie Goldfields), 8, Ruskin Mansions, W.
> Montague Manning, Esq. (late Peak Hill Goldfields), Laverstock, Salisbury.
> S. H. Reed, Esq. (late Gympie Goldfields), 1, Onslow-place, S.W.
> E. H. Wasser, Esq. (Messrs. Bartels & Co.), 8, Hanover-street, W.
>
> (With power to add to their number.)

Messrs. Sydney Reed & Co., of 20, Great Marlborough-street, were the solicitors, Mr. R. L. Sewell was stated to be the Company's manager in Dawson City, and the registered offices were at 20, Great Marlborough-street, the offices of Messrs. Sydney Reed & Co.

Now Mr. Evans was a practical miner, with some years' experience both in coal and quartz mining. He was favourably impressed with the prospectus, and he entered into an agreement with the Company to become one of the prospectors on the following terms. He was to apply and pay for 200 shares, and to serve the Company for three years at a salary of £200 a year, payable quarterly; the Company on their side undertaking to provide him with an outfit suitable for the Klondyke region, to convey him to the gold fields, and "to provide all necessary provisions and travelling expenses" during the engagement. Mr. Evans accordingly applied for the 200 shares, and paid for them £140 in cash, giving some kind of charge as security for the balance. He was taken by Mr. Reed, the Company's solicitor, with whom his negotiations seem to have been conducted, to an outfitter, and provided with certain clothes; and he was ultimately conducted by Mr. Reed to Liverpool to sail to Halifax by the steamship Gallia, having been previously offered a passage to Alaska viâ Cape Horn by a sailing ship, which he declined. Another gentleman, who was to be a member of the expedition, accompanied them from London, Mr. Reed explaining (according to Evans' version of the story) that the rest of the party would be found at Liverpool. The other members were not visible at Liverpool, and when the landing stage was reached, Mr. Reed explained that they were engaged in saying farewell to their friends. The farewell seems to have been so protracted as to prevent their catching the boat, for they never put in an appearance, and Mr. Evans and his solitary companion departed alone. It is only fair, however, to mention here that Mr. Reed denies this part of the story in toto. Mr. Reed provided the two prospectors with their tickets to Vancouver, and gave them £3 or £4 in cash to cover their incidental expenses, informing them (I am still following Evans' statement) that they would be met at Montreal by a representative of the Company, and that, when they arrived at Vancouver, they would join Mr. Robertson, apparently the commander of the expedition, who had left for New York on the previous Tuesday by the Lucania. They did not find any representative of the Company at Montreal, nor did they find Mr. Robertson at Vancouver. They made inquiries for him in every direction, but with as little success as though Mr. Robertson had never existed. The small amount of money which they had brought with them was soon exhausted, and at the end of the first week in May they were in a more or less destitute and hopeless condition at Vancouver, when Mr. Evans communicated his story to me, for the purpose of obtaining any information he could as to the position of the Company which had played him this trick.

Naturally the first thing I did was to send round to Mr. Reed, the solicitor of the Company, in Great Marlborough-street, to make inquiries as to the accuracy of the facts. I fully expected that Mr. Reed would be able either to contradict some of the statements, or to mention other circumstances which would put a different complexion upon them. But so far as I can find he is not in a position to do either the one or the other. He says that Mr. Evans joined the Company of his own free will, and denies that any persuasion was used on the Company's side; but that is really not very material. He also denies, as already mentioned, that he said anything about the rest of the party joining at Liverpool; and he repudiates any mention of a representative who was to meet them at Montreal

For the rest, he explains that out of the Company's proposed capital of £20,000, only £285 was subscribed, out of which £180 had been handed in cash to a gentleman named Power (not Robertson) who was to take charge of the expedition at Vancouver. Power sailed some time ago by the Majestic for New York, and has not been heard of since. Concerning Mr. Power's antecedents, Mr. Reed's knowledge seems to be strangely defective. All that he can tell is that Mr. Power was formerly connected with the gold mining industry in West Australia, and that he came to the Klondyke Company with an introduction from some one in that part of the world. On the strength of this introduction the Company seem to have appointed him to the command of their operations in the Klondyke-Yukon district, and to have handed over to him the bulk of their available assets. Mr. Reed appears to sympathise with the position of Mr. Evans and his fellow prospector at Vancouver, but he has not yet abandoned hope of Mr. Power and the £180 ultimately coming to their rescue. Under these circumstances I fear that the prospect before these unfortunate prospectors is a poor one.

This story is not very creditable to the representatives in London of this precious Company. Mr. Evans has paid to the Company £140 in cash, in return for which he has received a passage to Vancouver worth about £16, a few pounds' worth of clothes, and a share of £4 in cash handed over to himself and his comrade; and against this he is left in a destitute condition on the other side of the globe with no immediate hope of getting back or of finding a living where he is. From Mr. Reed's statement of the case it would appear that the Company never had the means of sending a properly equipped expedition to Klondyke, and that the statements in the prospectus as to the intention of sending out such an expedition were either purely imaginative, or contingent upon the British public providing the necessary funds for the purpose. Even if the extraordinary story of £180 having been handed to an unknown gentleman from West Australia, for the purpose of enabling him to take command of the expedition at Vancouver, and conduct it to the goldfields, is to be accepted, it does not place the intelligence and forethought of the directors in a much more favourable light. To have taken from a working man the whole of his available wealth under such circumstances as these is an utterly unjustifiable proceeding, and I suggest to the four directors above named, and to their solicitor who took the principal part in their transactions, that their plain duty to Mr. Evans is to provide him at once with the means of returning to England, even if they have to find the money out of their own pockets. The whole story should be a warning to sanguine and inexperienced people against the folly of investing their cash and prospects in wild-cat schemes of this kind.

A FLOWER-BED OF PROCRUSTES.

Events theatrical have followed one another so rapidly this week that, to give a clear impression of them all would require the talent of a Japanese landscape-gardener—that marvellous faculty of working in little, of making a pool of water into the sea, of oak trees not six inches high a forest, and a tempest with a feather fan. But so admirable a gift is denied to me, and I must remain discontented with pruning or lopping off my favourite trailers, with being, in fact, a Western gardener, and arranging at the best but a flower-bed of Procrustes.

This classical allusion takes me at once to the villa of Mr. Owen Hall's necromancer upon the heights of Rome, and at the same time suggests the torments devised by the Prefect of the City for Mr. Necromancer Wright. "To be bitten in the stomach by wild monkeys," for instance, is a form of punishment that would certainly have received the approval of Caligula. He would probably have made Mr. Owen Hall master of the revels as a reward, unless, indeed —and this hypothesis is not improbable—he had first desired personal proof of its value from the inventor. I am all for transferring this and other curious classicisms —as, for instance, the expletive d——n, as used by Marcus Pomponius when annoyed—from the ingenious pages of Mr. Owen Hall to the more careless chronicle of Suetonius.

Seriously, the Romans must have lived—and sworn—in somewhat similar terms, and I am not convinced that Mr. Owen Hall's story is not more near the Roman world than those pretty lyrics after Herrick of Messrs. Harry Greenbank and Adrian Ross, and the dancing music of Mr. Sidney Jones. But fortunately this question asks no reply; or, if it does, the answer is lost on the silvery heights of Miss Marie Tempest's singing, choked in the diamond coils of that marvellous snake she wears about her arm, and danced victoriously off the stage by sweet Miss Letty Lind. Iris, Maia, Antonia, Heliodorus, Archias, Manlius! Delightful names! And what an amusing story is wound about them in the most lovely of environments! For the necromancer's villa is worthy the times of the Cæsars, and of Mr. George Edwardes—the alcove, especially, where, dressed in black gauze and diamonds, and seated on a raised daïs backed with glittering golden mosaic, and with wings of Egyptian scarabs in precious stones, Maia, the sorceress, gives the oracle to the Lady Antonia, come in her gilded litter with all the pomp of the "ladies of old time" to consult her. This and that moment in the play are exquisite. And Antonia's villa at Baiæ in the second act; a revel of colour and proportion. And Antonia herself! How fresh and bright she is! Antonia (Miss Hilda Moody) in her marvellous robe, cloth of gold upon gold, with masses of heavy hair about her shoulders and a voice like Philomela's. But alas, there is Procrustes—or Lampsacus, perhaps?—hastening up under the peach-blossoms with his shears, and I must cease. I think the fruit-trees of Antonia's villa will blossom all the year.

MR. BRET HARTE'S "SUE" AT THE GARRICK.

Mr. Bret Harte took Sue by the hand and led her forth from the pages of the "Judgment of Bolinas Plain." Miss Annie Russell was waiting at the stage-door, and like a good little fairy (for she has much of the wizardry of art) she has lent to her life and youth and infinite sympathy, so that now Sue lives for us indeed. But Sue did not come empty-handed to her fairy. She had a fine wardrobe: the wayward innocence of girlhood that loves the cows best, the sense of the incomplete when she is married to the man she does not love, that utter ignorance of the outer world which does not even know what a circus is, the sudden bursting into blossom when she meets the acrobat, her flight with love, her repentance and return (by what strange accident of life!) to her husband.

But not only did Miss Annie Russell wait at the stage-door; a band of excellent artists was with her, and without exception, the disembooked souls (if I may dare the expression) have flitted into marvellous lodgings. Ira Beasley slouches convincingly about in Mr. Edward Morgan; Mr. W. Sampson permits Sue's father, Silas Prescott, to swear and deal in crops or daughters to the very life; Mr. Lionel Adams and Re—ligion are one as Parson Adams; Mr. Joseph Brennan is the Sheriff himself, with his bovine admiration for Sue, his rustic brutality, and his crude humour; Mr. Samuel Reed as Judge Lynch of the Vigilance and General Hanging Committee made one feel just a little nervous for my neck in the front row of the stalls; and the acrobat was very Hyde of very Hyde in Mr. (Jekyll) Mills. I do not name the minor avatars, though I never saw a better fit of souls and bodies. The manager, Mr. Charles Frohman, is the best of psychical tailors, the Poole of the spiritual world.

The play is dramatic and imaginative, replete with observation, and teeming with wit and humour—that rare quality. The witticisms, moreover, are born naturally of the dialogue, and while they make us laugh, each adds its little touch towards the finishing of the complete picture; they are not hauled from the depths of the unexperienced and put indifferently into the mouths of rococo diplomatists, waiters, or schoolgirls of seventeen.

Yes, Bolinas Plain is a curious place, far distant indeed from our refinement and convention. And yet how real are those uncouth shapes, with their angular minds, rendered to the life by these excellent comedians! If I were to make any suggestion, it would be that the second act, where sheriff, acrobat, husband, and wife play at a grim sort of hide-and-seek, might allow of considerable compression. We are fully conscious of the situation, and to wait while tea is being prepared and drunk—so slowly—is trying. The action is also too long delayed when the Sheriff comes to himself, while he binds up his wound and staggers about the stage. Let us know he is badly wounded, and then the sooner he hobbles off to vengeance the better. This American play is well worth seeing, as played by Americans, but do not let our actors forget that the Atlantic lies between us in life and art.

NOTES FROM PARIS.

THE FRENCH "MR. SPEAKER."

WE have a new President of the Chamber. He is worthy to lave himself in the silver bath of De Morny, and to act the part of host in the tapestried Salle des Fêtes. The pink and sky-blue boudoir of the Duchesse de Morny has rendered yet more elegant by Gambetta. He placed the Petit Bourbon on its present footing of delicious luxuriousity. As "La Princesse" paid for it, no expense was spared. Be it known that "La Princesse" means the Exchequer. "Elle est si bonne Princesse!" M. Deschanel is fully sensible of the delectable side of his office. He is a hard worker, and more serious than he looks. What was bad in his election was the way in which the Government managed it. The support it gave Deschanel was an open vengeance. And against whom? Against Brisson, whose private and public life had no wrong side, and whose Republicanism was tried and sincere. The reason of the vengeance was this: Brisson—and with too good reason—denounced coup d'état intentions and flabby resistance to them. The Ralliés were preparing to strike the blow, and the Government were their passive tools. The country half-believed Brisson before the first ballot, and entirely believed him before the second. He was sent back by greatly increased votes to the Chamber, and upset the plan on which he had thrown light. Brisson is anything but the bore the Gaulois and other such papers represent him. His conversation can be playful and brightened with wit. He is very simple in habits and manners, though he has an air of dignity. Mme. Brisson is a dear, good woman, his worthy companion in all respects. She rose to her high situation at the Palais Bourbon, without losing simplicity or giving herself airs. She is an accomplished musician, and has fine mental gifts. Living all her life with great artists, orators, authors, these gifts have been well nurtured. She has no children, but adopted the orphans of Albert Joby, an advocate of great promise and fine character, who died young. He was no relation of the Brissons, who have brought up his children.

Méline is the man of monopolies and monopolists—that is to say, of the rich as against the rest. He would not be a party to a coup d'état, but he would connive at one for the benefit of his wealthy friends. I dare say he has let himself be persuaded that such an event is inevitable, and has wished to be on the side of the broom-handle. M. Faure may think that if a clean sweep were made, he would come out of the crisis life-President. This would explain his love for Sovereigns, Ducs, Duchesses, and other aristocrats, and the regal part he played at a recent aristocratic carousal. The Mass at the Elysée for the victims of the Charity Bazaar should be mentioned in this connection. Why are there not Masses there for the victims of colliery explosions?

Deschanel has those social gifts and talents for which some women are remarkable. No woman could have more tact, charm, quick repartee, or a keener feeling for what is elegant, distingué, refined. He dances to perfection, has an elegant figure, and a face that would be of feminine beauty were the forehead not so virile. The well-cut profile is one for Sèvres, alabaster, or cameo. It looks delicate, but if you examine it you will find it strong. He was nursed on Greek and Latin, but took most kindly to Greek. I suspect him of a weakness for Alcibiades, Pericles, Aspasia, and the society that gathered round them. Nobody talks of love at an Epicurean banquet with more Anacreontic feeling than the new "Mr. Speaker." Now that I think of it, he is in some respects a kinsman of Moore, but received a better education, and has a harder head. Had he been born to wealth, he might have grown up a dandy; but he was born the son of a proscript of the coup d'état at Brussels (1856), and was reared in honourable poverty. As it is, his dress is merely elegant, and a good deal of the elegance is thrown into it by the wearer. There is no better drawing-room actor. He is a very clever orator, though his speeches are over-studied. But he is a first-rate lecturer, as his father was before him. Such a man must have aristocratic leanings. He would have been in Athens with Alexander and Aristotle as against the disciples of Demosthenes. But I do not think he realises what a vast distance lay between Athens and Corinth, though they were but thirty miles or so apart. A Corinthian Republic, perhaps, would suit him better than an Athenian.

If you want to entirely Furnish your House or select any article of Furniture or Carpet, &c., send for HEWETSONS' Illustrated Priced Catalogue.—HEWETSONS, Tottenham Court-road, London.

The Maximum of Effect at the Minimum of Cost.—An Object Lesson in Decorating and Furnishing can be obtained by inspecting Messrs. WARING'S Suites of furnished rooms at 175-181, Oxford-st. W.

M. Emile Deschanel, the Speaker's father, was also an Athenian in education and feeling, but had no particular taste for elegance, except in literature. He went in, as a professor of classic literature, for analysis of the feminine heart. I have somewhere two little keepsakes he once upon a time gave me on "Le Bien qu'on dit des Femmes," and "Le Mal qu'on dit des Femmes." He was a worshipper of Racine, and discovered endless keys to his tragedies. They turned in the rusty old locks, and were wonders of ingenuity. Throughout the Empire Professor Deschanel had a black mark against him. He nearly caused the interdiction of certain courses of lectures in the Rue de la Paix by his expositions of Shakespeare. Poor Badinguet had just been holding out the olive branch to the Bishop of Orleans and patronising Darboy, Archbishop of Paris—the future martyrs of the Commune. Deschanel père found in this a parallel with Richard III. between the two bishops. It was seized by the audience. I never heard anything more spirited and more amusing than the lecture. The passages relating to Richard and the bishops were admirably read. He also gave a lecture on Juliet's love affairs, which brought pockethandkerchiefs to eyes. Romeo he thought a poor creature. But love is blind, and all the interest of the play was centred in Juliet. Professor Deschanel has now a chair at the Sorbonne and a seat in the Senate.

It is usual for the President to send his aide-de-camp to the weighing-ground immediately after the Grand Prix race to congratulate the winner. That fortunate goes to the State tribune to return thanks for the distinguished attention. He is congratulated afresh. If he enjoys being stared at by a mob of well-dressed people, he should be the happiest man alive. Mlle. Marsy was a winner at Longchamps last year. At once an aide-de-camp was sent to present her M. Faure's congratulations. As he approached, she was surrounded by a cheering throng. One would think she personated patriotism. The officer had difficulty in reaching her, but at last succeeded. Mlle. Marsy had thrown off her weeds for Max Lebaudy. She was in high spirits, and was delighted anew with Longchamps. It was so like the theatre, and particularly in the obligation she was placed under of receiving the President's compliments from his own mouth. As the aide-de-camp had not been instructed to take her to the State tribune, his face fell. But it was a case of Greek meeting Greek. The lady took his proffered arm. He led her through the thickest throngs, and thereby lost so much time that the company at the State tribune were moving to their carriages before the aide-de-camp and the lady came up. In the name of military discipline the aide-de-camp dropped his fair companion's arm. With a low bow he left her, and bounded forward to stand at M. Faure's elbow. A cause of embarrassment was surmounted; but congratulations were later presented in the Bois. Mlle. Marsy takes morning rides there, and so does M. Félix Faure.

At the last Grand Prix, Rothschild's Roi Soleil was the winner. It is not possible that such a lover of Sovereigns as our President could have thought ill of the horse bearing that name. But M. Méline may have said, "If you congratulate the owner, Drumont will vote for Brisson. My candidate for the Presidency of the Chamber will, in that case, be beaten. Please spare me the humiliation, and yourself the pain of having to call Bourgeois to replace me." At any rate, no aide de-camp, or even civil secretary, was sent to felicitate Rothschild. He waited, as in politeness bound, for the officer to come forward. But when he saw the Presidential party on the move, he modestly remarked that, after all, he was as good as Mlle. Marie Louise Marsy. A cold wind has since blown between the Rue Lafitte and the Elysée. But Brisson has been defeated and Méline can still hang on.

None of the Paris senior Rothschilds has any taste for horses or the Turf. But as the Turf has become such a power in the world, they think well to have a well-jewelled finger in that pie. The money that Roi Soleil won could have brought them little satisfaction. Baron Alphonse de Rothschild is indifferent to the admiration of the crew that gathers to Longchamps on the Grand Prix day, and makes it one of the ulcerous spots of the earth.

They have given up having ordinary balls at the Hôtel de Ville, and have arranged to give fêtes in honour of the arts, sciences, and great industries. But the Invitations Committee find it would never do to issue 6,000 cards only for each fête. They have stretched the list to 8,000. The last fête was in honour of the arts. All the grand artists of France appeared on a platform. There was a concert in honour of music, a dance in honour of dancing, a theatrical show in honour of the drama. Endless were the models. They were each and all dressed with chic, but not with fashionable style. J. P. Laurens presided on the artists' platform.

Hotel Albemarle, Piccadilly, London. Private Suite, Bath, Electric Light, Lift. Vermersch, Proprietor. Paris: Imperial Hotel, Champs Elysées. Boulogne S/M: Imperial Pavilion Hotel.

Walking, Cycling, Shooting, Yachting Dresses, &c.—John Busvine & Co., Tailors and Riding Habit Makers to H.R.H. the Princess of Wales, the Princess Victoria of Wales, the Duchess of Fife, the Princess Charles of Denmark, the Marchioness of Lorne, the Princess Henry of Battenberg, the Duchess of Connaught, the Duchess of Albany, the Empress of Austria, the Empress of Russia, the Empress of Germany, the Princess Henry of Prussia, the Princess Victoria of Prussia, the Infanta Eulalia of Spain, the Countess de Paris, the Duchess d'Aosta.—4, Brook-street, London, W.

LETTER FROM THE LINKMAN.

THE return of Ascot Week, dear Lady Betty, recalls a story which may suitably be applied to the present situation. A singularly stout lady was staying in the neighbourhood of Ascot for the race-week. On the first morning of her visit a hip bath was provided for her use, but unfortunately, when the lady sat down in this, all the water overflowed, thus creating a vacuum. Obviously, the lady could not extricate herself from the bath, so crawling upon all fours, with the bath on her back, she steered for the nearest bell. The maids pulled the bath and pulled the lady, but there was no separating the two. At last the village blacksmith was called in, who, punching a hole in the bath, let in the air, thus destroying the vacuum, and the lady was released.

The astonishing speech which Mr. Joseph Chamberlain recently delivered at Birmingham has placed the Cabinet in a position very similar to that occupied by the lady whose adventure has been described in the previous paragraph. The supporters of the Government may pull this way and they may pull that way as they will, but a hole must be made in the Cabinet before the Government and the speech can be separated. Is this hole to be made by the retirement of Lord Salisbury or by the resignation of Mr. Joseph Chamberlain?

* * * * *

The following letter has been addressed to me:—

"Mayfair, Saturday, June 11.

"Sir,—I am a Dowager, and I have daughters. Every morning I take them to the Park; every afternoon I take them to tea-parties; every night I expose them in the best ball-rooms. Notwithstanding all these exertions, no young men can be prevailed upon to propose. I have read in a book that 'the Australian savage, when he has fixed his affections on a girl, on the earliest convenient day steals up behind her and deals her a violent blow on the head with his club. The girl is stunned, and, before she recovers her senses, he carries her off to his home.' As the eligible young men of to-day refuse to propose in the ordinary manner, I foresee that the time is approaching when the marriageable girls will have to imitate the Australian savage. It is only by imposing the severest restraint upon my daughters that I am able to prevent them from doing this as it is; and it is plain to me that very shortly the marriageable girls will combine, and, armed with clubs, will provide themselves with husbands on the same system as the Australian savages procure their wives. Marriage, which is man's pleasure, is woman's business.—Yours faithfully, Dowager."

It is to be hoped that these good ladies will not inaugurate the system in the Royal Enclosure at Ascot. But the New Woman does not inspire confidence, for the New Woman is the Old Woman demoralised.

* * * * *

The appointment of Sir Charles Scott to succeed Sir Nicholas O'Conor as British Ambassador at St. Petersburg is supposed to be mainly due to the intervention of the Czar. Sir Charles, as British Minister at Copenhagen, had several opportunities of discussing current events with the Czar when the latter visited that capital. Sir Charles Scott is an especially amiable diplomatist, and there is very little doubt that he will be both successful and popular at St. Petersburg. The vacancy created at Copenhagen by his promotion will probably be filled by the appointment of Sir Henry Dering, Sir Edmund Fane, or Mr. Phipps to that post. In all probability the names of these three diplomatists will be submitted to the Queen, with whom the choice rests, as Copenhagen is essentially a Family post. It is especially gratifying to perceive that, notwithstanding all rumours to the contrary, Lord Salisbury has appointed members of the Diplomatic Service to the vacant Embassies, and it is to be hoped, therefore, that he has at last realised the folly and the injustice of presenting the prizes to friends of his own who have no experience of foreign politics.

* * * * *

"A meeting was held yesterday at Stafford House, under the presidency of the Duchess of Sutherland, in aid of the work of the National Association for Promoting the Welfare of the Feeble-Minded." The Association has much excellent work to do. For instance, it should direct its labours towards converting those feeble-minded men and women who are convinced that the only way of enjoying Ascot Races is by herding together in their thousands in a sheep-pen which can only comfortably accommodate as many hundreds. The Association might, moreover, give some attention to those feeble-minded persons who imagine that they increase in importance by associating with those who bear titles. A man betrays the small opinion which he has of himself when he supposes that he attains additional importance by contact with others who are more socially distinguished than he is. Another section of the community which deserves to be attended to by the Association is composed of those feeble-minded individuals who conceive that money is to be made not by saving money but by spending money. The latter method, which is essentially the new method, generally leads to the Bankruptcy Court and frequently to the Criminal Court. Another branch of the feeble-minded class attaches itself to the latest millionaires, imagining that the latter will reward their undignified advances by giving them valuable information as regards Stock Exchange transactions. Millionaires amass wealth not by possessing generous instincts or by exercising benevolent qualities; they become rich generally by over-reaching those who come into contact with them, and by holding fast to their money bags. "The National Association for Promoting the Welfare of the Feeble-Minded" has an especially splendid field of action in this country, and therefore it is worthy of the heartiest support. Lord Herschell moved the first resolution at the recent meeting, which commenced with the following clause:—"The existence of large classes of feeble-minded persons is a danger to the moral and physical welfare of society." This is absolutely correct, only unfortunately "society" was not spelt with a capital "s."—Believe me to be, very truly yours,

MARMADUKE.

SPORTING NOTES.

THE annual London meeting of the members of the Jockey Club is to be held next Monday at the Duke of Richmond and Gordon's house in Belgrave-square, and it may be hoped that there will be a large attendance, and that several matters of practical importance, which have been too long neglected, will at last receive attention. In the first place, it would be well if some influential member would call attention to the pernicious policy now followed by the Stewards in allowing the number of race meetings to be increased, whereas the interests of sport call urgently for an extensive cutting down of the List of Fixtures. Week after week there is racing from Monday morning until Saturday night, and the whole thing is preposterously overdone, for the class of sport now provided at most meetings is beneath contempt. It is the same thing over and over again, with the same horses running over the same distances. There is a deal of touting and jobbery in connection with the licensing of meetings, for the vested interests are very powerful, and no Stewards appear strong enough to stand up against them. The fact is that any one would suppose that, instead of the turf existing for Mortlock's (Oxford-st.), Estd. A.D. 1746.—The collection of China and Glass now on view in their Galleries fully maintains the high reputation and pre-eminence enjoyed by "Mortlock's" for the last century and a half, and well repays a visit of inspection.

Spa, Belgium.—Summer Season.—Casino, Concerts, Racing, Pigeon Shooting, Theatre. Delightful situation. Excellent Hotels. For details apply to Jules Crehay, Secretary, Casino.

the improvement of the breed of horses, its object is to pay exorbitant dividends to the shareholders of grand stands (as at Epsom) or of gate-money meetings. However, the Newmarket authorities watch the chaos which their fatuous policy has produced with stupid unconcern.

It is also disgraceful that the Derby, Leger, and other great weight-for-age stakes should still be open to geldings, and this is a flagrant scandal, which ought to be stopped before the entries for any of the events of 1900 are made.

There has been a great deal of most insane nonsense both talked and written about Count Schomberg's defeat at Auteuil. The fact is, that this very much overrated horse was fairly and squarely beaten simply because he has not yet learnt the business of jumping over such a steeple-chase course as that of Auteuil. It is now said that Count Schomberg is to win the Goodwood Cup, but the fact has probably been overlooked that he has earned a 12 lb. penalty for his Chester Cup victory last year, which will effectually settle his chance unless there is a complete collapse in the field. The Sportsman announced the other day that £15,000 had been offered and refused for Count Schomberg, but the flim-flam was rather too strong for the other sporting papers, none of which referred to the trash except in terms of derision. Most people are sick and tired of these wondrous tales of sensational offers which some papers are so fond of recording, and in nine cases out of ten it will be found on investigation that no bonâ fide offer has ever been made. A gasconading owner exclaims that he would not take some monstrous price for his steed, whereupon some parasite declares that the animal is well worth the sum mentioned, and then we are informed next day that the amount has been "offered and refused." The tale about Count Schomberg was obviously the production of some vigorous and mendacious imagination. Here we have a horse that was thought to be very well sold when his present owner gave 5,100 gs. for him at the Newmarket sales last December. Count Schomberg has done nothing since he then changed hands, and it seems highly probable that he has won his last race, while his value as a sire is very small. Who, then, can for a moment believe that £15,000 was offered and refused for him?

Some of the papers regularly publish the most insane nonsense about racing affairs. The Daily Mail has informed its readers that the price of 100 to 1 stated to have been laid against Jeddah for the Derby at Epsom "is a merely mythical one, and such a price was never laid." What is the object of printing such trash? 1,000 to 10 was being offered all over the ring during the hour before the start for the Derby, and at least one bet of 1,000 to 8 was laid then. Even more flagrantly idiotic is the assertion of the Daily Mail that, "as a fact, 33 to 1 is the most ever actually offered against any horse!" This information will astonish both layers and backers, and the writer manifestly knows no more about turf matters than a baby does about astronomy.

Galtee More has been despatched to Russia, and a better sold horse never left this country. Twenty thousand guineas is a truly exorbitant price for a horse of no very splendid pedigree, who owes far more to his luck than to his merits. Galtee More had the good fortune to be raced in a miserably moderate season. One of the sporting papers has been indulging in the most extravagant rhapsodies about the horse, but the object of such nonsensical heroics is perfectly apparent. It is utterly impossible to make Galtee More out to be a flyer by even the most astute manipulation of his running. He won the Two Thousand very easily indeed, but he beat nothing better than Berzak, who is a bad animal, as Velasquez was evidently out of form, and he was never in the race for a single yard. It took Galtee More all his time to defeat Velasquez in the Derby and Chelandry in the Leger, and that Lord Rosebery's pair are far from being wonders has long been universally acknowledged. The fact of Velasquez having been so easily beaten for the Jockey Club Stakes by Love Wisely is sufficient evidence to prove that he is a moderate horse; but he is said to have been more or less amiss all last year. Galtee More had nothing better to beat than Cortegar at Sandown Park. Indeed, Mr. Gubbins' steed never met a good horse in any of his weight-for-age races. As to handicaps, he was beaten badly for the Cambridgeshire, having 9 st. 6 lb. on his back, and he started favourite for that race, so it is clear that there was no excuse for his defeat on the score of condition. It cannot be said that the form of this Cambridgeshire was exceptionally good, for of the nine horses which finished in front of Galtee More, Sandia is the only one which has since won a race. Considering all the fulsome praise which has been lavished on Galtee More by jobbers who have a "best horse of the century" regularly every season, he might have been expected to make a better show in the Cambridgeshire, for the field was a very poor one from the class point of view. Galtee More has proved himself to be the best of an exceedingly moderate lot of three-year-olds, but he has never achieved anything which justifies his claim to a place in the equine temple of fame. If he had been foaled a year sooner he would have been simply lost over any distance by St. Frusquin and Persimmon. As to the romance about Galtee More giving Kilcock a stone and a beating, he could not have beaten the old horse at weight-for-age over six furlongs, and a gallop over a mile or upwards with a proved non-stayer would be a fatuous farce. However, such are the fiddle-faddle fairy tales with which some infatuated buyers are easily humbugged by mendacious imaginations. It is simple lunacy for any one seriously to compare Galtee More with Ormonde. The Duke of Westminster's horse easily defeated the best of his own year, of the previous year, and of the following year whenever he met them, and in either 1885 or in 1886 Galtee More would have been nowhere. Ormonde easily defeated Minting more than once; and let it be remembered that Mr. Vyner's horse won the Kempton Park Jubilee Handicap with 10 st. on his back, and having behind him an infinitely superior field to that which ran for last year's Cambridgeshire. Bendigo, moreover, who had won the Jubilee Handicap from a good field with 9 st. 7 lb. on his back, had no chance with Ormonde. Galtee More is a very lucky horse, and his late owner has been so prodigiously favoured by fortune in connection with last year's Derby winner, both in his turf career and by his sale for such a monstrous price, that he will do well to take leave of the turf, lest he should experience the lean time, which is certain to arrive after such a flood tide of good luck.

I pointed out a fortnight ago that it would be prudent to ignore the placings in the Derby, so far as regarded Dunlop, as Dieudonné could certainly have beaten this horse if he had been ridden out, and so, probably, could some others in the field. The bad running of Dunlop in the Grand Prix last week proved that my view was correct, and the utter collapse of all the English horses shows that our three-year-olds are a deplorable lot. Some of them may have fair speed, but they are not real stayers.

Mr. Rose has a very nice two-year-old in Santa Paula, by Common out of Penitent, dam of Ravensbury, and if this filly goes on all right she is sure to distinguish herself on the turf. Santa Paula wants time, and she is not likely to start for any race before the Imperial Produce Stakes of £3,000 at Kempton Park, which is run on October 7.

Cap Martin has done well in a trial at Newmarket, and he will most likely win the Ascot Derby this afternoon, while to-morrow Dieudonné will have to do his best in order to beat Mr. Baird's colt for the rich St. James's Palace Stakes. Cap Martin is now probably in much better form than ever he was as a two-year-old. He was galloped over the Bunbury Mile.

I hear that the Duke of Westminster's best two-year-old for Ascot will be Flying Fox, by Orme out of Vampire, and he is very likely to win the New Stakes.

The sporting papers "go for" either The Rush or Newhaven II. for the Gold Cup. My own opinion is that one of the French horses will win the Cup this year, either Masque II. or Elf II. Masque II. has been showing excellent form in France, and he is believed to be a very much improved horse. Elf II. has won many of the principal long-distance races in his own country. Both horses are thorough stayers, and they also have nice speed.

Kilcock may win the Wokingham Stakes on Friday, but this race is always a dangerous event to meddle with. Hermiston and Altesse are both well in among the light-weights.

It is most unfortunate that Baron de Rothschild's Le Roi Soleil, winner of the Grand Prix, should have been struck out of the Sandown Foal Stakes of £2,000, which is run at the October meeting, as this race would have been a good thing for him, and it was his only engagement in England. Le Roi Soleil was withdrawn from this race when he was a yearling. I daresay that Baron de Rothschild's colt will be entered for the Jockey Club Cup at the Newmarket Houghton Meeting, which event closes next Tuesday.

There will be racing next week at Newcastle, Windsor, Gatwick, and Sandown Park. The North Derby of £1,500 at Newcastle has no fewer than sixty-three horses left in, and the best known animal in the list is the colt by Bend Or out of Jenny Howlet, who, however, is more likely to win a good handicap. I shall plump for The Virginian, who is half brother, by Ayrshire, to Whittier. There are actually only thirteen acceptances for the Northumberland Plate out of an original entry of thirty-one. What an ignominious collapse for a race which, at one time, was one of the heaviest betting handicaps of the summer! I should fancy that King Crow will win for Mr. Vyner. Seventy-eight two-year-olds have accepted for the Seaton Delaval Plate of £1,200, and Simonside may win. This colt is nominated by his breeder, Lord Londonderry.

At Sandown Park the great race will be the Sandringham Foal Stakes of £2,000 for three-year-olds, of which forty-five are left in. The week after Ascot is an absurd date to fix for a three-year-old race, considering the number of events for animals of this age at that meeting. Disraeli, Dieudonné, Wantage, and Nun Nicer are all engaged, but it is impossible to attempt a prediction on this race until after the Ascot events have been decided. If Wantage is still a maiden next week, he certainly ought to win, having 21 lb. the best of the weights with both Disraeli and Dieudonné.

After a lapse of three years, another sale of Sir Walter Gilbey's hackneys—for the breeding of which he has won such a high reputation—is to be held by Messrs. Sexton, Grimwade, & Beck, at Elsenham Paddocks, on July 8. The sale will include some well-known prize-winning mares, and, in fact, with four exceptions, every hackney filly bred by Sir Walter since 1895.

Cambridge men have been lucky in that their boat-races ended in a blaze of glorious summer sunshine, the first there has been this year. How bright Ditton Corner looked after the wretched wet weather, and what enthusiasm there was when on Saturday evening First Trinity for the first time in the last quarter of a century paddled down head of the river. Not only were First men proud, but all the other colleges, save one, rejoiced at their success. Their victory meant more than going head. It meant that the overwhelming power of Trinity Hall, which had been so scandalously abused in its use, was at last at any end. It was on the strength of an eight years' headship that certain members of Trinity Hall, in the Lent and October terms, had openly revolted against the University Boat Club. Never before had a Trinity Hall First boat captain set the University President at defiance. Can any sane man believe for one moment that the Hall would have acted as it did if Mr. Trevor Jones, "their representative on the river," had exercised his influence for the honour of the University? It is somewhat singular if his efforts had, in fact, been directed to helping Mr. Fletcher and Mr. Dudley Ward, that he and Mr. Fletcher should have found themselves at daggers drawn. He has been coaching the Hall first boat. So far from endeavouring to impress on the men the necessity for acting upon the advice of Mr. Fletcher, he has succeeded in eradicating from Mr. Steele's rowing the faults he had acquired during the Lent and October terms, when Mr. Fletcher was coach. At least, so says the correspondent of the Field. The correspondent and the coach are probably not unknown to one another. It really looks as though the Granta in its anger had made a mistake in ridiculing the suggestion of the Field as to the effects of the coaching of Mr. Trevor Jones on Mr. Steele. The material that this eminent coach had at his disposal was, including Steele, four trial eight men, another of whom, Bullard, had to leave the University crew through a strain, two Blues in Bell and Howell, and the bows of the winning clinker and coxwainless fours. On paper, a good enough combination, but when the obvious object of the coach has been to eradicate the efforts of Mr. Fletcher, the result is at once apparent. The composition of this crew had not been changed during training. It was bumped by a crew that had, as usual, shuffled its men ten days before the race. Fortunately, the coach, Mr. Close, had loyally carried on the work Mr. Fletcher had begun. His efforts have been rewarded. A bubble reputation has been burst. Mr. Trevor-Jones and Mr. Howell, the First boat captain, are, I hope, satisfied with their year's work at Trinity Hall. The theory that the king can do no wrong cost King Charles the head of his body. The same theory with regard to Mr. Trevor-Jones has cost the Hall the head of the river. If he ceases to be the representative of the Hall on the river it will be better for the credit of his College and the peace of the University. No wonder the victory of First in which the new University president, Mr. Etherington Smith, had rowed stroke for one week only, was popular, while the Hall boat passed Ditton in chilling silence. Their coach, Mr. Close, will no doubt have too much good sense to endeavour to occupy in Cambridge rowing the position that Mr. Trevor-Jones attempted to assume. By the way, Mr. Close, an old University president, rowed for First the last time it was head, and that was in 1874. A slightly better rowing record than that of the Hall coach.

Of course, the shortening of the distance between the boats led to many more bumps taking place. After all, the object of the races is for such events to occur. Under the old rule, a really good boat could beat a really bad one. That was all. The gentle gibe of the Field correspondent to Third that, had not the distance been altered, First would not have bumped them, and the sneer about dying for one's University, being a pleasant method of demise, have probably come home to roost. Now, First are head, and Third have regained their place. First stayed head with ridiculous ease, thus showing that if the distance had been longer Hall would not have been within miles of them. Third, as usual, improved, and ran into Emmanuel at Grassy. Christ made five bumps, and Peterhouse and Emmanuel II. also did well, each going up four places. The alteration in the starting distance was undoubtedly a success.

At Oxford there has been, owing to illness, some excellent racing for the University sculls and pairs. C. K. Phillips was a certainty for the sculls, but he was ill, and so Burnell and Tinnie had a great race in the final, which the former just won. He has great strength, but not much form. As Phillips could not row, Pitman (New) had Thorpe as a partner in the Pairs, and for a like reason F. Warre (Balliol) had Herbert instead of his brother. The consequence was a Trinity pair—Beale and Prideaux—went very near indeed to winning. After beating the Balliol pair, New only just beat them by a length.

With regard to my remarks last week on the position of houseboats at Henley, a correspondent says that, in effect, these positions are put up to auction, and that Henley is in fact a gate-money meeting. I do not see that this can be helped. He suggests, however, that houseboats should be entirely excluded from the Henley reach during the race week. The fancy prices that are charged for the boats make them the privilege of the wealthy, who entertain their friends in lavish manner. For the most part, neither host nor guest care one rap about the racing. If they and their hotels were done away with and the course chained off so that no boats could get on to it, the racing would be better, and those who desired to look on would have a chance of seeing the crews. There is a good deal in this suggestion. If the Committee, or some other authority, have power to allocate the position of houseboats and to keep them off the course as at present, there should be no difficulty in getting further powers which would enable these suggestions to be carried out, and in addition there should be power to put a tax on all boats using the course. It would not be difficult to float a boom across the river and charge a fee for passing it.

Once again Vardon secured the Open Golf Championship. There was but a stroke between him and W. Park, who was only a stroke ahead of Mr. Hilton. Then came Taylor and Mr. Tait. The match was played at Prestwick. Hilton's score on his second round was spoilt by an eight at the Himalayas. Park missed a four-foot putt on the last green, and so failed to tie. Vardon, Park, and Mr. Tait each went round in 75, the lowest score that was done. The second hole was thrice done in two by the six leading players, Taylor doing it twice. Taking the lowest scores by each of the first six players at the different holes, the total would be 30 out and 31 home. What one of these players can do another can do, and therefore it follows that the best return was fourteen worse than the best possible. This example from the score sheet is the best possible instance one could have of the almost human impossibility of anything like perfection at golf.

So far as Oxford is concerned, there has been no cricket, and by the time the Dark Blues meet Surrey three weeks will have elapsed without a representative match having been played. They play Surrey on June 20. With such a small card, the men have not a chance of being fairly tried. At Cambridge things are very different. All last week there was cricket, and the upshot of their matches has been to make at least two new players certain of their places. By his batting against both the M.C.C. and Surrey, Winter has practically assured himself of his place, as, in addition, he bowled his lobs most successfully against the club. He had no chance given him in the second innings against Surrey. This was a mistake. But then the Cambridge men threw their chances away by bad fielding. Catches are meant to be held. Hawkins also bowled admirably, and with Hind, Jessop, and De Zoete as bowlers, and, if needs be, himself and Fernie, Wilson will be able to captain a good side, provided a sprain, from which he is suffering, allows him to play. Burnup's patient batting has been simply invaluable. Taylor, the wicket-keeper, looks like regaining his old form with the bat. Stogdon has yet to do some really good work. The prospects of Cambridge are certainly good. In county cricket, Yorkshire has been having a grand time. The stand by Hirst and Haigh for the ninth wicket was as phenomenal as the utter collapse of Surrey before the bowling of Wainwright and Rhodes. The Gloucester team had a lively time against Notts. But their batsmen were so busy in making centuries that they left the bowlers no chance of getting rid of the Notts men, who played a regular stonewall game. Similar steady play, especially on the part of Brann, saved Sussex from a beating by Kent, who have secured Thomson the Northampton bowler.

As usual, the Civil Service sports were in every way a success, and the scratch men had a good time, but then they had to show their best form. Blignaut, the South African, was at scratch in the quarter and just won in fifty-one seconds. If Fitzherbert settles down to hard work he will beat him. Coltart ran finely in the hurdles, Mockel, the South African, going to pieces. In the sprint, Jupp and Blignaut did even time, but in the final King was the winner. In the closed events Edwards was very promising in the sprint, and Perry's high jump was very good. The two miles walking handicap rested between the veterans Jackett (410 yards) and Callow (470 yards). Their ages are somewhat over fifty and sixty respectively, and the younger man won by a hundred yards.

In the Trinity College, Dublin, sports, Dickenson and Meredith showed excellent form in the quarter. In the half, Martelli, a freshman, looks like making a runner, and Barbor's long jump was good. It is a pity that a meeting with Cambridge was not arranged. However the team is to be pulled by a team of Old Blues before the Inter-University sports.

What will the Bishop of Oxford say to this? Not only are cyclists specially invited to the nine o'clock morning service on Sundays at St. Mary-at-Hill, Monument, but after the service, which lasts three-quarters of an hour, the Rev. W. Carlile provides tea and bread and butter in the rectory, at a nominal charge of threepence, for the convenience of those who cannot get breakfast otherwise. A clergyman welcoming cyclists to church and supplying breakfasts for them in the rectory! The very thought must horrify the anti-Sunday-cycling Bishop. It will rejoice more sensible people.

MAMMON.

From MOSES MOSS to BENJAMIN BOSS.

Sunday.

MY DEAR BEN,—It cannot be said that business has been at all active during the past week, and it is evident that the public are still to a very large extent keeping out of the Stock Markets. The fortnightly settlement, moreover, diverted attention a good deal, and there were fears that Mr. Chamberlain might introduce in his speech in the House of Commons some further disquieting observations bearing on foreign politics. This, however, proved not to be the case, and even the most timid could hardly be frightened by his line of defence of the Government's policy.

The Political Horizon Clearing.

In fact, the various political anxieties have now almost altogether disappeared, and one cannot help wondering not only that Lord Salisbury and Mr. Chamberlain uttered their serious warnings, but also that the public at large took fright at them. In China, further advantages have been conceded to this country at Hong Kong, and active steps are being taken in many quarters for the development of the resources of the Chinese Empire. Advices from Paris are to the effect that the West African question has practically been settled, and, beyond the Spanish-American war, there is really no serious trouble. There seems to be a prospect that a decisive blow will be struck in Cuba during the next few weeks, and then perhaps the peace-makers may have a chance, although at present the Spanish people would evidently not be prepared to accept the severe conditions which the Americans would insist upon. The Yankee department has been subjected to "Bear" raids on the part of leading operators in Wall-street who are anxious to get in at a lower level, but so far every reaction has been followed by a recovery, the market being intrinsically very strong. Grand Trunks, too, have suffered from occasional breaks, which is not surprising, as a big "Bull" account has been piled up. Home Rails have experienced a considerable advance, and precisely those stocks to which I have so frequently directed attention, viz., Dover "A" and Coras, have been in most request, and the tone generally has been much stronger. The Foreign Market has at times shown weakness on a fresh fall in Spanish Fours, but the "Bears" are now again buying back, and Paris appears to be in a better mood. Amongst South Americans there has been a good deal of irregularity, and the mistaken policy adopted by Chili in placing her Treasury Bills behind the back of her usual agents caused a fall in these bonds, while Brazilians are see-sawing according to the movements of the Rio Exchange. Argentines, however, have been firm. In the Mining department South African shares, after dulness, have firmed up somewhat on another record crushing for May, but the largest business has been transacted in West Australians, which at one time were very active and strong, and although the highest points have not been retained, a considerable portion of the improvement has remained. In the Industrial section the great success of the Goldsmiths' and Silversmiths' Company issue has been a feature, and now the market is again being threatened with all manner of industrial prospectuses, amongst which the bad and indifferent ones distinctly predominate.

MONEY AND GILT-EDGED INVESTMENTS—THE DANGER OF LOW RATES—CONSOLS FIRM.

A variety of circumstances has contributed to a further easing-off in rates of discount, amongst which the release of further Japanese funds has been the principal influence. At one time the rate for three months' bank bills fell to $1\frac{3}{8}$ per cent., and it is even now only $1\frac{7}{16}$ per cent. This demoralisation of rates is very much to be regretted, as all the Continental exchanges have moved against London, and gold is already being mopped up in the open market for Japan, India, and Russia, while as much as £768,000 has been withdrawn from the Bank of England in Japanese yen. I quite expect that rates will further stiffen, and it would, indeed, be most salutary if, by such a movement, our stock of gold could be protected. Unfortunately, next month dividend payments will again flood the market with surplus balances, but before this happens we shall probably have a hardening of rates at the turn of the half-year. The new Indian loan, too, will absorb large sums, and it is this consideration chiefly, perhaps, which has kept Consols from moving higher. The top quotation recently touched was $112\frac{1}{8}$ cum dividend, while now the price for the account is $111\frac{3}{8}$ xd. Silver has reacted, the Spanish demand having been satisfied, and the price is now $\frac{3}{4}$ lower at $26\frac{3}{4}$d. Rupee Paper has hardened to $62\frac{1}{2}$, and British Corporation stocks and Colonial Government bonds have been firm. The last Four and a Half per Cent. Chinese Gold Loan has improved to $88\frac{1}{4}$, the Seven per Cent. Silver Loan to $98\frac{1}{2}$. Japanese bonds are unchanged at 102.

HOME RAILS FIRM—SHARP ADVANCES IN CHATHAMS, DOVER "A," AND CORAS.

For a considerable time I have taken a favourable view of Dover "A," and I am pleased to find that the market is beginning to adopt the same opinion. Dover "A," which I recommended from 108 upwards, have risen to $113\frac{3}{4}$, reacting to $113\frac{3}{8}$, the report that important negotiations are in progress between the South Eastern and Chatham Companies having helped the advance. Many a time have I broken a lance in favour of the fusion of the two companies, and it may, after all, come to this, although it is generally believed that the new arrangement will stop short of that. The pooling arrangement now in existence, however, between the two Companies distinctly requires revision. By any such measure the Chatham Company would certainly benefit, and it is not, therefore, surprising that Chatham Ordinary should have moved up to $22\frac{7}{8}$, the Arbitration Prefs. to $137\frac{1}{2}$, the Second Prefs. to 99. The Ordinary, however, has since reacted to $22\frac{1}{8}$ on realisations. Brighton "A" have eased off to $176\frac{3}{4}$, but most of the Heavy stocks are firmer. Traffic returns during the past week showed a decrease of £60,000, the comparison being with the week before Whitsuntide week of last year, but a total traffic increase for the current half year of £690,000 remains, which must be considered very satisfactory. Great Eastern have also improved to $121\frac{5}{8}$, but Great Centrals have been kept back by adverse criticisms, which must, however, be characterised as greatly biassed. Metropolitans and Districts have been steady, and the improvement has made no further progress owing to large sellers coming on the market. The strength of the Scotch section has been a feature, Caledonian Deferred Ordinary (Coras) rising at one time to $58\frac{3}{8}$, North British Deferred to $45\frac{1}{8}$, but there has since been a relapse to $57\frac{3}{4}$ and $44\frac{7}{8}$ respectively. The improvement is precisely in accordance with my repeated predictions.

YANKEE RAILS—SHARP FLUCTUATIONS—A YELLOW FEVER SCARE.

The war news does not at present appear to affect the course of prices of Yankee rails to any extent. The struggle has reached a point at which the final defeat of Spain at a comparatively early date seems a foregone conclusion, while the blocking-up of Admiral Cervera's fleet in Santiago harbour seems to have been carried out most effectually. There is, moreover, very little prospect of the reserve fleet ever seriously starting from Cadiz, and if the American troops effect a landing in force near Santiago de Cuba during the next fortnight the fall of that city seems to be inevitable. In the meantime, business in the United States is progressing very favourably, and the outlook for the grain crop is so excellent that a very buoyant feeling is making itself felt for the Granger stocks. According to the Government crop report, the winter wheat yield will be 366,800,000 bushels, and that of spring wheat 270,500,000 bushels, a total of 637,300,000 bushels, against 513,000,000 bushels last harvest. The previous record figure was for 1891, when 611,000,000 bushels were harvested, according to official estimates, but, according to other sources of information, the yield really exceeded 650,000,000 bushels. It is believed that the actual acreage under wheat this year is 3,600,000 acres larger than that of the bumper year 1891, and thus it is quite on the cards that, all things being favourable, the 1898 crop may reach 700,000,000 bushels of wheat. During the last few days a "Bear" raid has been in progress in Wall-street, apparently originating with some of the recent "Bulls," notably James Keene, who wanted to depress values to a lower level so as to buy more. The movement was, however, short-lived, and they did not succeed in getting down Milwaukee to below $102\frac{3}{4}$ here, from which there has been a rebound on the very favourable crop news. Union Pacifics, Union Pacific Prefs., and Norfolk and Western, after similar declines, are also firmer again, and the only weak spot has been in southern railway stocks, which have been put down on reports that yellow fever has broken out in the Mississippi Valley. Louisville and Nashville have suffered most from the yellow fever scare, and there has also been a set-back in Southern Prefs. and Ordinary. This decline appears to be altogether overdone, and any reassuring news would doubtless cause a sharp recovery. As regards the Norfolk and Western, it is reported that for the present dividends will be semi-annual, presumably in February and August. The earnings of the Company would justify the regular payment of 4 per cent. per annum on the Preferred, but this has not yet been decided upon. The recent buying of the stock, however, suggests that the next dividend will be larger than the last. I consider both Norfolk Prefs. and Common a good purchase at the present level. The recent improvement in Wabash "B" bonds has been due to a rumour that a dividend would be paid. While this is apparently premature, there is no doubt that the position of the road has greatly improved. As the Wall-street Journal mentions, the Company is operating to greater advantage, its Buffalo extension is proving profitable, and its local business is ensuring a steady and healthful growth. The Denver and Rio Grande is also working into a good position, and the following remarks in the Wall-street Journal, on the authority of a railway official, are interesting:—

> It seems to me that one of the most desirable of the cheap securities is Denver and Rio Grande Preferred. Since 1896, the Company has paid 2 per cent. dividends on the Preferred stock, besides maintaining a high state of efficiency and retaining a considerable surplus. Earnings for the nine months ended March 31 show an increase of 21 per cent. over the corresponding period in the previous year, and increases since that time continue large. If it had not been for the blow to silver mining, gold mines of Colorado, which promise to produce this year $40,000,000, might still be undeveloped. Coal, iron, and farming industries are receiving the attention which they deserve, and are adding materially to the wealth of the state. Denver and Rio Grande is feeling this condition. The opening of the Ogden gateway to Rio Grande Western, making that road and its connections integral parts of a trans-continental system, is of great advantage to Denver and Rio Grande, and explains, in part, the increases in earnings.

Under all the circumstances, I should think that those who wish to operate in American Rails cannot do better than select, say, Milwaukee on a reaction, Louisville on the present decline, and also Union Pacific Prefs. and Ordinary, Norfolk Prefs. and Common, Atchison Prefs., and Denver Prefs. and Common. While the prospects of Northern Pacific securities are doubtless favourable, it looks almost as if the rise had gone far enough for the moment. As regards Louisville, it may be said that they have always been a good purchase when they have been depressed by the yellow fever rumours, neither did that scourge in the long run interfere with the earnings of the road for instance in 1897. Canadian Pacifics have at times been very strong, and touched 89⅜, from which there has been a relapse to 88¾; but traffics of this road keep up better than those of the Grand Trunk, and again show an increase of $43,000 for the week ended June 7, while the last Grand Trunk traffic for the same week showed a gain of only £383. This came as a great disappointment to the many "Bulls" in this market, and caused a break of three points in the various quotations, from which there has been but a moderate recovery to 73½ for the First Prefs. and 77⅛ for the Guaranteed. Only a week ago I wrote, as it now turns out, somewhat prophetically, that "it must not be forgotten that a big 'Bull' account has been piled up in these stocks, which might give trouble if any untoward event took place."

Foreigners and South Americans—Paris Irregular—Spanish Fluctuate.

The tendency of the Paris Bourse has been less optimistic during the past week, partly, no doubt, owing to the heavy sales effected from Madrid of Spanish Fours, which at one time put down the price to 33¾, from which there has been a rally to 34¼. The run upon the Bank of Spain for silver made a disagreeable impression, but this demand has now apparently been met, and the rumours of coming trouble in the Spanish capital have not so far been realised. Italians have kept up pretty well, and Turks have been bought for Paris account. The Coulisse trouble, however, still interferes with business on the Paris Bourse, and the majority of the Coulissiers are still contemplating a migration to Brussels. Argentine Government stocks, after reacting on fresh rumours of impending trouble with Chili over the boundary question, have improved again, the 1886 Loan being quoted at 90¾, the Funding Loan at 88¾. For the hundredth time the statement is now made that the boundary question is in course of peaceful settlement. Chilians, on the other hand, have experienced a sharp decline, the 1886 Loan to 73, the 1892 Loan to 83. Here, too, there has been borrowing on Treasury bills, and it is rumoured that the leading firm here, who have always acted as agents for Chili, only received information concerning this financial measure by having the bills offered to them from another quarter. If this report is correct, it shows a most injudicious action on the part of the Chilian Government. Brazilians have fluctuated within narrow limits, and are fairly steady, the Rio exchange having improved. Argentine Railway stocks have been dull, Buenos Ayres Great Southern easing off to 140, Buenos Ayres and Rosario to 73, Central Argentine to 82. Mexican Sixes have shown strength at 98¼, and Mexican Rails have improved, the first Prefs. advancing to 76. Under these circumstances, Inter-Oceanic of Mexico "A" Debentures at 70, the position of which I fully explained in last week's issue, look remarkably cheap. Peruvian Corporation stocks have been firmer.

The Kaffir Circus—Another Record Crushing.

There has been an absence of political rumours concerning the Transvaal during the past week. Matters have apparently settled down in Pretoria, and the next event will probably be an attempt of the Boer Government to borrow. Possibly Dr. Leyds will try his luck on the Continent first, as he would not meet with much encouragement here; but there is little doubt that further concessions to the mining industry must precede any important loan. In the full text of President Kruger's speech on being sworn in, a further reduction in the price of dynamite is, morever, emphatically promised. This is what he said on this point: "We all know that when the dynamite contract was entered into in 1893 the price of dynamite was £6 per case. The Government had brought it down to £5, and later to 85s., and now they had succeeded in reducing it to 75s. per case. I will do my utmost to bring the price still lower, until it suits the requirements of the mining industry. . . . . I promised the mining industry that I would not leave the matter until I had reduced the price of dynamite still further." Crushings for May have proved most satisfactory, and again show a large increase, and a record both for the Witwatersrand district and for the total production. In April the Witwatersrand district produced 335,125 oz., while for May the output was 344,160 oz. Again, for April the total output, including the outside districts, was 353,243 oz., while in May it had risen to 365,016 oz. I notice that the Angelo shows very well with a crushing of 6,561 oz., as against 6,120 oz. in April. The Jumpers has produced 6,009 oz. in May, as against 5,398 oz. in April; the Jumpers Deep 6,517 oz. in May, as against 6,170 oz. in April. The Knight's showed 6,511 oz., against 5,656 oz. The New Primrose showed well with a yield of 9,967 oz., against 9,653 oz., but the Glencairn return was smaller, viz., 6,430 oz., against 6,747 oz. Some of the mines of the Robinson group showed declines owing to a scarcity of native labour. The Simmer and Jack, as I anticipated, makes an excellent showing with a yield of 15,536 oz. for May, against 14,351 oz. in April. The record output has not affected the market to any extent, although Rand Mines are firmer at 29 9/16, after touching 29 and 29⅝. Consolidated Goldfields of South Africa are steady at 4 1/16, and East Rands have shown a firm front at 4 11/16. Simmer and Jack at 3 7/16 are well supported, although a much higher quotation would be justified. New Primrose have been steady at 3⅜, Glencairn at 1¾. Randfontein are being dealt in at 1 5/16, Johannesburg Consolidated Investment at 1⅛, Barnato Consols at 1½. It is to be hoped that when Mr. Sol. Joel returns from his visit to the Continent the Barnato group will revive again. The various Deep Level shares have hardened, Goldfields Deep being quoted 8 5/16, Crown Deep 11⅝, Robinson Deep 9¼, Geldenhuis Deep 7⅜, Rose Deep 6¼, Henry Nourse Deep 5, Durban Roodepoort Deep 3⅝, Knight's Deep 1⅞, Roodepoort Central Deep 1 5/16, Nigel Deep 15/16. De Beers have been pretty well supported from Paris, and are quoted at 27¼, while New Jagersfontein stand at 7⅛xd.

Golden West Australia—High-class Hannans' Mines to the Front.

The feature of last week's business in the "Kangaroo" department has been the further and accentuated strength of the high-class mines in the Hannan's district, which have for some time been in favour with the public. In all cases the improvement appears to have been justified, although I would much rather buy Hannan's Brownhill at their present price of 8⅜, Lake View Consols at 9¼, or Ivanhoe at 6 9/16, than, for instance, Golden Horseshoe at 9½. Against the merits of the last-mentioned property I have nothing to say, but developments so far do not appear to justify the present quotation. The May output of the Lake View Consols is fully up to expectations, the return being 9,169 oz. 18 dwt., against 8,759 oz. 14 dwt. for April, an increase of over 410 oz. As regards the Hannan's Brownhill another crushing is now to hand, but this has no reference to the new machinery which has been erected, and which is expected to yield phenomenal results, as fully set forth by me in last week's issue. These shares at one time touched 8¾, and all those connected with the Company are predicting a much higher value. Crushings have not been so numerous this week, but those that came to hand

London and Paris Exchange, Ltd., 21, Throgmorton-street, London, E.C. This Corporation is prepared to make Advances on Mining Shares, at 6 per cent. per annum, subject to a deposit of 20 per cent. Clients by this system save the heavy contangoes usually charged.

China and Glass. — Messrs. Goode, Artists and Designers, solicit an inspection of their collection in their recently-extended South Audley-street premises, now by far the largest and most important in Europe. Messrs. Goode guarantee the excellence of all their productions, and invite a comparison of their prices with those of any co-operative stores.

were satisfactory, as will be gathered from the following list:—

	Tons of Ore Crushed.	Oz. of Gold.	Assay of Tailings Per Ton.
Great Boulder Proprietary ...	1,410	3,076	—
Consolidated Murchison ...	505	503	—
Westralia and East Extension...	1,417	1,271	—
Golden Arrow	70	35	—
Yalgoo Proprietary	40	34	—
Bellevue Proprietary	241	492	—
Hannan's Brownhill { Sands ...	615	2,600	—
Hannan's Brownhill { Slimes ..	450
Diorite King	100	154	—
Burbank's Grand Junction ...	103	312	12 dwt.
Lake View Consols	5,526	4,867¾	17 dwt.
Do. Tailings ...	3,370	2,668	3⅜ dwt.
Do. Slimes ...	2,045	717	3 dwt.
Do. Concentrates	25	624	—
Do. Sulphides ...	95	293	—
Great Boulder Main Reef ...	800	1,200	—
Burbank's Birthday Gift ...	372	505	—
Australian Champion Reef ...	125	130	5 dwt.

According to a British Australasian cablegram, the Hannan's Brownhill mill has had a successful trial, and the Boulder No. 1 Company's battery is running on Great Boulder ore, which suggests the question as to why this should be so? According to the same cablegram the Ivanhoe continues to open up large reserves of oxidised ore. The Great Boulder Main Reef Company have driven at the 275 ft. level for eight days through a rich shoot of ore averaging over 4 oz. to the ton, which will be good news for the shareholders in this property, which at one time was very disappointing. From the Hainault Mine there is also good news. For some reason or other Burbank's Birthday Gift shares have been dull of late, although crushing is going on steadily. Mail advices from the Golden Pike state that in prospecting at the 400 ft. level on the lode recently discovered, a vein carrying heavy oxidised gold has been cut. Though it is small at present, the occurrence of oxidised gold at the depth and in conjunction with sulphides makes the find an important one. Should the vein widen out on driving it will have an important bearing on the value of the lode. As regards the Londonderry, one of my Western Australian contemporaries states that the shareholders should congratulate themselves on their newly-acquired property, now known as the Kalgoorlie Prince. The Company's engineer is said to have taken unpicked samples from the shaft at a depth of 73 ft. (where a leader has been struck about 6 in. in width), which have assayed 20 oz. per ton. It is hoped that on deeper sinking the lode will widen out considerably. Of course it would be absurd to expect 20 oz. as a regular output, but if the general average should be about 2 oz. per ton, there will be reason for congratulation. London and Globe Finance shares have improved to 1⅜ on dividend anticipations, after suffering a temporary relapse. The W.A. Market Trust group has been steady, although Market Trusts have eased off to 2s. 1½d. Northern Territories are quoted ⅞–1, and the shares of the Joint Stock Trust and the W.A. Loan and Finance have hardened to ¾, while W.A. Joint Stock Founders have gain ⅛ at ⅜. It is expected that a dividend on the latter will be paid shortly. Associated Gold Mines have also improved to 3⅞ on the declaration of a dividend of 2s. per share. Lady Shentons have been a steady market at 2 3/16 x.d., and the news from the property continues very satisfactory. Great Boulder Proprietary have been steady at 18s. 6d. The proposed amalgamation of the Central Boulder and West Boulder Companies is meeting with some opposition. West Australian Goldfields have been the turn firmer at 1 5/16, and Hampton Plains are quiet at 11/16. Considering the alluvial troubles, Peak Hill Goldfields are keeping remarkably firm, and are quoted 2½.

INDIAN, AUSTRALASIAN, AND BRITISH COLUMBIAN MINES.

Quite an active demand has been experienced in the Indian section, mostly for the lower-priced shares. Mysore Gold have, however, also risen to 5 7/16, and Road Blocks are ¼ higher, while Mysore West and Wynaad have improved after their recent decline, notwithstanding the fact that they are in sight of reconstruction. Coromandel and Champion Reefs have also moved up. The Nine Reefs Company is about to issue Preference shares in order to obtain more capital. In Australian mines, other than West Australian, Aladdin's Lamp are quoted 1 7/16, and there has been a hardening tendency in Mount Lyell North and Mount Morgan; but British Broken Hill are easier at 9, and Mount Lyell have given way to 10, while Broken Hill Proprietary are steady at 2 3/16. Croydon Consols are still quiet at 3s., although the news from the mine is distinctly more favourable, 245 tons having yielded 360 oz. of bullion by cyanide treatment, and the last mail news mentions the discovery of several leaders showing fine prospects of gold. It now remains to be seen when cable news confirming the further discoveries may come to hand. In New Zealand mines movements have been irregular but chiefly in the downward direction. Komata Reefs and Hauraki are lower, and there have also been declines in United New Zealand, Taitapu, and Waihi. My correspondent at New Plymouth (N.Z.), whose warnings against oil flotations to be expected in London I mentioned some time ago, returns to the charge. He states that a promoter has left for San Francisco, taking with him a drum of oil obtained from one of the springs, which is bonâ-fide enough, so far as quality is concerned; but the oil, according to my correspondent, is not to be had in payable quantities. He mentions that thousands of pounds have been expended without any adequate return having been obtained, and on the east coast of New Zealand large sums have been spent in boring for oil, but these attempts have not been successful either. In British Columbian mines, Hall Mines, Whitewater, and Klondyke Bonanza are easier; but Dawson City (Klondike) Dominion Trading are firmer. As regards the British America Corporation, the tone has been somewhat dull during best part of the week, but an improvement to 19s. has since set in. It must be admitted that the prospects of the Company are distinctly improving. In addition to the strike in the Rossland property of this Corporation known as Mine No. 1, it appears that Mr. W. A. Carlyle (Engineer-in-Chief of the Corporation) has made much progress with the various other properties. The plant on the Nickel Plate is now being reconstructed. One drill is in operation in the drifts and another will be started shortly. The overhauling of the Josie has been completed, and active work is now proceeding. Three drills are at work cross-cutting in the workings at the 300-ft. level. Work is also well under way in the Le Roi, Columbia, Kootenay, and Great Western. There are indications of an improvement in the Mexican section. Grand Central have risen to 1⅞ on excellent news from the property, and Consolidated Goldfields of Mexico are hardening at ⅞ to 1. It is reported that the cyanide extraction is rapidly improving, 72½ per cent. having been saved during the week to which this report refers. This Company should not be confounded with the Goldfields of Mexico, the shares in which stand at only 11/16.

THE SYNDICATE TOUTS.

A new prophet has arisen amongst the syndicate touts under the name of Wilkinson, Jones & Co., stock and share dealers, 10, Featherstone-buildings, High Holborn, London, W.C. Although I have not hitherto heard of this firm, they maintain in their circulars that they have already had six deals in Lake Shore, New York Central, Northern Pacific, Union Pacific, Denver and Rio Grande, and Milwaukee, and that these have realised enormous profits. The last profit they boast of is one of £70 on each £10 invested in Milwaukee. This is really a little bit too thick, and I should very much like to hear from any one in the flesh who has really obtained this splendid profit. Of course, this announcement is intended as a bait to tempt further subscriptions to an operation in "a certain stock concerning which they (Wilkinson, Jones & Co.) have received some very special information." They go so far as to say that the £10 shares in this syndicate will return a profit of not less than £50 to £60 each. It seems remarkable that, instead of making money in this "certain stock" for their own account, Wilkinson, Jones & Co. should be philanthropic enough to offer to share the enormous profits with complete strangers, and from every point of view I think it most advisable to give their syndicates a wide berth.

MAJOR HOWE & CO., LTD.—Fashionable BOOTS and SHOES.—16, Coventry-st., W.; 60, Strand, W.C.; 81, Gracechurch-st.; and 13 Queen Victoria-st., London. "Note Addresses." (Repairs)

New Enterprises and Issues.

The prospectuses of the following new enterprises and issues have been placed before the public during the week:—

Victoria-street Properties, Limited.—This is an issue at par of £87,500 Four and a Half per Cent. First Mortgage debentures of £100 each, being part of a total authorised debenture issue of £120,000 of the Victoria-street Properties Company, Limited. These debentures will form the first and only mortgage on the properties of the Company. The share capital of the Company is £100,000 in Preference and Ordinary shares of £5 each.

Cobourg, Northumberland, and Pacific Railway Company invite subscriptions to an issue of £151,200 Five per Cent. Perpetual First Mortgage debentures of £100 each, at the issue price of £102. The debentures will be secured by a first mortgage of the railway to the Toronto General Trusts Company, as trustees for the debenture-holders, and will form a first charge upon the railway now in course of construction from the port of Cobourg, on Lake Ontario, to a junction with the Ontario and Quebec section of the Canadian Pacific Railway at the Central Ontario Junction. The Canadian Pacific Railway Company have contracted to lease, maintain, and work the line for 999 years from completion.

The Gill McDowell Jarrah Company, Limited.—This Company has been formed for the purpose of acquiring the extensive freehold and leasehold forest estates, timber yard, railway, rolling stock, saw-mills, &c., now held by Messrs. Gill & Co. and Messrs. McDowell & Co., at Perth and other places, Western Australia. The capital of the Company is £250,000, divided into 125,000 Six per Cent. Preference and 125,000 Ordinary shares of £1 each. The present issue is of 83,334 Preference and 83,334 Ordinary shares, out of which 50,000 shares will be appropriated to provide working capital.

The British Wall Paper Company, Limited.—With a nominal share capital of £300,000 and a Debenture stock of £100,000, this Company has been established to amalgamate some of the principal British firms and companies now engaged in the manufacture of wall papers, and with that object agreements have been entered into for the purchase of the businesses and works of Messrs. Mitchell, Arnott, & Co., Limited, Golborne, Lancashire; Wilkins & Co., Limited, Derby; Walker, Carver, & Co., Limited, Pendleton; David Walker, Middleton; and Heywood Paper Staining Company, Heywood.

The average of profits stated in the prospectus of the various businesses acquired is based upon two years' working only. As they are represented as established concerns, it seems strange that the returns should be taken for so short a period. Competition in this business is also very keen and this does not, therefore, appear a promising undertaking.

My Letter Box.

The following are replies to inquiries from various correspondents:—

Government, &c., Bonds.

Flora.—I think you may disregard the rumours as to the boundary troubles between Chili and Argentina. T. C. N.—Spanish will hardly fall so low as you seem to think, and they are close to the point when they might be picked up.

Banks, Trusts, and Financial.

W. W.—Outside brokers; have nothing to do with them, but follow my advice to deal only with members of the Stock Exchange. Miss M. C.—I have repeatedly warned my readers not to be tempted by the circulars of the British and Foreign Investment Association, and I specially referred to that concern again in last week's issue. J. D. J.—I always advise my readers to have nothing to do with foreign lotteries, whether the circulars emanate from Valentine & Co., bankers, of Hamburg, or from other touting intermediaries. A. S. S.—I am inclined to look upon this concern with suspicion. The objects would be useful enough, but I question whether they would be properly carried out. The document is returned in your envelope. L. S. O.—Write to Messrs. Effingham Wilson, Royal Exchange, London, E.C., who are publishers of this kind of literature. Birkbeck.—It is not advisable to put too many eggs into one basket, and you had better put your further savings into high-class securities. A Nurse, Brighton.—You will have to tell me what kind of security you require. You can get nearly 3 per cent. in British Corporation stocks. Is that enough, or will you prefer 4 per cent. in Industrial debentures, or 5 per cent. in ditto Preference stocks?

Home Rails.

C. N. P.—1. Thanks. I am glad you are doing so well in "Doras" and "Coras" on my advice. 2. Great Central, 1894, Ordinary are worth buying. They are still in receipt of 3 per cent. interest during construction of the extension to London. Exmoor.—The exchange under the circumstances would appear to be useful.

American and Foreign Rails.

P. N. R.—I am glad to hear you made money several times on my advice in Union Pacific Prefs. and Ordinary. The last time you got in rather high, but you should hold for a rise of a couple of dollars on your price. O. P.—Take the rumours about the yellow fever cum grano, and do not throw your Louisville away. In the matter of American rails it is advisable to spread an investment, so as to form a small kind of trust. You might, for instance, buy Milwaukee, Norfolk Common, Atchison Prefs., Louisville, Reading First Prefs., and Union Pacifics. Carolus.—Yes, the A Debentures of the Interoceanic of Mexico are a good purchase at 70. They are earning 4¾ per cent. of their dividend, and will doubtless in time get their full dividend of 7 per cent. Manchester.—You may safely hold your Northern Pacific Prefs. and Common (1 and 2) for a rise. No reason to sell Central Pacifics (3). Yes, you may as well exchange from the Four per Cent. Grand Trunk Debentures, which leave you so large a profit, into the American Railroad Bonds. 5. Certainly hold your Great Central 1894 Prefs., and buy more to average.

Mining Shares.

Brodrick.—I should not advise you to act further concerning New Crœsus yet. But hold all your South African shares. Norfolk Enquirer.—With reference to the West Australian mines mentioned, No. 1 is a good property, although troubled by the alluvial miners; No. 2 is no catch, but No. 3 (Londonderry) looks much more promising, and the shares should advance. Instead of No. 4 I should advise you to buy Lady Shenton, one of the best mines in Western Australia, and a dividend-payer. Hold the last-mentioned shares, too. H. H.—Very doubtful. Great Malvern.—There are too many of these British Columbian concerns, and the only course is to wait until results are attained. J. P.—There is much truth in your argument, but do not forget how bad the times have been, and how easy market attacks knock down prices without rhyme or reason. Just now there is an improvement again, and matters look more promising. The British America Corporation should come right in the near future, and whenever the amalgamation proves a success, you will probably reap the reward of your patience. Sicily.—1 No catch. 2. Await further developments. If certain financial arrangements are carried through, there will be a sharp advance, but it all depends upon that. 3. The London office address of the Modderfontein B is 28, Austin Friars, E.C.; and of Knights, 22, Bury-street, St. Mary Axe, E.C. U. X. Y. Z.—Temporarily neglected; should recover again. W. F., Glasgow.—If the negotiations in question succeed, these shares should recover again. Beta.—Yes, I think it would be wise to join the reconstruction. J. T. M.—1. London and Globe are promising, and should be held for a rise. 2. Florence are likely to improve. Constant Reader, Constantinople.—I cannot tell the probable life; it is a fair mining risk. G. G.—Yes, the reinvestment would probably bring you profit on Nos. 1 4. I am not so sure about No. 5. As regards No. 6, I know no more than you do from the published reports. Nagpur.—No, I do not advise this purchase. Ajax.—1. High enough. 2. Too high. Amongst high class West Australian mines, Hannan's Brownhill, Lake View Consols, Ivanhoe, Lady Shenton, and Sons of Gwalia are a good selection. 3. No. J. M.—No, this concern has been too often reconstructed, and I would not advise you to throw good money after bad. East Haugh.—No option but to hold these shares. Laurel.—Very disappointing, and I really should not like to advise you. T. W. D.—No, I should advise you to hold. Jona.—A. Florence are very promising. B No catch. J. T., Gateshead.—De Beers (1) and London and Globe (2) are fair investments; also No. 3. No option but to hold No. 4, and certainly No. 5 (Johannesburg Cons. Investment). Sabretache.—Yes, I still consider that an improvement will come in time. Look at the splendid crushings.

Industrial Companies.

Basilisk.—I am afraid there is no market for these shares, so there is no option but to wait. Dog Otter.—Goldsmiths' and Silversmiths' Prefs. are now quoted at a considerable premium. Nil Desperandum.—I am afraid there is no prospect of an early dividend, and you might as well take the advice given to you. Stafford.—You really must decide yourself whether to join the reconstruction. I have never said a word in favour of this concern. You cannot expect the information referred to. Colombo.—Yes, Welsbach Ordinary are an excellent purchase as a sound speculative investment. Gratitude.—I should think that the whole of the property must remain as security for the debentures. Stuart.—All the stocks in question are more or less speculative, but, in view of the fair return now obtained on them, there is no reason why you should not invest in them. Personally, I should prefer the various Welsbach stocks. Woodland.—A fair investment, but no catch. Lancashire Lad.—Yes, Nos. 1 to 3 are fair investment securities, and No. 3 (J. W. Benson Ordinary shares) are distinctly progressive. Anxious, Longford.—A local Birmingham concern, with respect to which no conclusive information is to be obtained here.

MIXED INVESTMENTS.

Frederick.—1. It will be advisable to hold the Railway stock. 2. There is no business in the market in Wireless Telegraph shares, and the insiders have it all their own way. Pater.—You might put the money into the "A" Debentures of the Interoceanic Railway of Mexico, earning 4¾ per cent. of their 7 per cent. dividend at 70, and in Welsbach Incandescent Gas Ordinary at 113. Both are progressive stocks. Malta.—I am glad you bought Canadian Pacifics (1) and Grand Trunk Guaranteed (2) low down on my advice. On the next improvement you might take your profit. 3. Certainly hold Lady Shenton and Florence for a marked improvement, which may come about any day. Vere.—1. The penalty of not joining a reconstruction is generally the forfeiture of the shares. 2. These two South African shares should come right in time. 3. It all depends when you bought the "old" Union Pacific shares. There has been an assessment of $15, and a bonus in new Prefs. which worked out to $8 per share. Walpole.—The Hotel shares No. 1 will probably improve, and there is no reason to sell Nos. 3, 4, or 6. Mexican First Prefs. (7) might with advantage be exchanged for the "A" Debentures of the Interoceanic of Mexico at 71. No. 2 may turn out all right; I do not think much of No. 5, and the Company No. 8 is too young for a conclusive opinion to be stated. Elf.—1. There has been no reason for the weakness of London and Globe Finance shares beyond rumours, all of which have been contradicted. The shares are now again on the up-grade, and should go considerably higher. 2. Perhaps by employing a sharp solicitor. 3. I do not know anything special about the Stroud Water Company or about the circular in question. Stonehenge.—1. Yes, Septimus Parsonage & Company is a progressive business, likely to yield further good results. I do not consider Nos. 2 and 3 to be tempting at present prices. 4. No option but to hold. Hastings.—You might sell your Grand Trunks on the next improvement. No option but to hold your Mining shares, Nos. 1—5. E. M., Devon.—1. Yes, both Cape Three per Cent. or Canada Three per Cent. would be a good choice. 2. No catch. 3. The official list of the Stock Exchange. Mrs. P., Ipswich.—1. No, I do not think much of the Bread shares. 2. Not yet. 3. A fair investment. 4. No reason to sell these South African shares now. On the contrary, Nos. 1, 3, 4, 7, 9 should be averaged. You had better do so at once. Stornaby-on-Tees.—I do not know enough of the Tea Estates Company to offer any advice, and you can find the necessary information about South African and West Australian mines in my letter. An Anxious Mother.—1. The Industrial Company in question is a fair investment of the kind. 2. Mexican Sixes are promising, but perhaps it would suit you better to buy Inter-Oceanic Railway of Mexico Seven per Cent. "A" Bonds at 71, which are at present earning at the rate of 4¾ per cent. per annum. No reason to sell the other stocks referred to.

MY CHAPTER ON INDUSTRIAL STOCKS.

Rates at the settlement were easy in the Industrial department, and quotations have been well maintained, while a few advances were not wanting. Thus, there has been a rise in Welsbach Incandescent Gas stocks, the Ordinary to 113, the Preferred to 98 xd., the Deferred to 18s. 6d. The new burner is now being sold in the provinces, and it is stated to have made an excellent impression in Manchester where it was on view last week. In fact, the difficulty will be to obtain a sufficient supply as enormous orders have already been placed. Russian oil shares have been strong on the splitting arrangement, and the new £1 shares are quoted 2⅜-½. It is to be hoped that the directors' efforts to obtain a new title to the property will be successful. Fish Oils are firmer, being quoted 3⅞ ex. rights representing the Volenite shares. When writing last week on Volenite shares, then quoted at £4, I expressed the view that a jump was to be expected shortly, and these shares have now risen to 6¼. Coats' Ordinary are firmer at 60½, and English Sewing Cottons have been in some demand at 1½ to ⅝. Fine Spinners, however, remain dull and neglected. In Lyons shares there have been dealings at 4, ex. the dividend of 1s. 9d. per share, and ex. rights on the new shares, which are considered as representing a bonus of 5s. per share. The new Lyons shares are quoted $\frac{5}{16}$ premium. Apollinaris are slightly easier at 11¼, and Schweppe Deferred stand at ⅜, the Ordinary at 1. Bovril Ordinary are quoted $\frac{15}{16}$, the Deferred $\frac{11}{16}$. In the Cycle section there has been a better tendency during the last few days, and an improvement is marked in Dunlop Deferred to 9s., the Ordinary to 15s., French Dunlops to 3s. 6d. Humber Ordinary have improved to 11s., the Preferred being quoted 14s. Singers stand at 8s. 9d. xd., the Prefs. at 12s. 6d. xd., Swifts at 10s., the Prefs. at 16s. Cycle Components are easier at 1⅛, but Rudge-Whitworth Prefs. have put on $\frac{3}{16}$ to 4¼. The failure of Mr. E. T. Hooley has not affected Cycle shares to any extent, and whatever holdings he has of these will certainly not be thrown on the market, as according to the various public statements shed, there is a surplus of about £400,000 over liabilities. Mr. Hooley mentioned in an interview with a representative of the Daily Telegraph that he still held shares in some of the good cycle Companies, and expressed the opinion that there were half-a-dozen good Companies which had been depreciated because the shady promoters had brought out ninety-four rotten ones. Allsopp Ordinary have now risen from 148½ to 154½, but a slight setback to 153 occurred on Saturday. There was hardly any contango on this stock at the settlement, so that it is evidently in short supply. Other Home Breweries have been fairly steady, and Anglo "A" and "B" remain firm, and have improved to 16¼ and 116 respectively. Asbestos-Asbestic have been freely offered, and fell from £8 to £4 on a very small seller showing his hand. Bryant & May have not been so much sought after lately, and have fallen from 19¾ to 18¾. The Hudson's Bay dividend of 13s. per share for the year was not liked at first by the market, but on finding out that the period was only up to May, 1897, and that this Company's improved prospects only commenced in July, 1897, the market looked more favourably on the announcement, and after being as low as 20½, the shares are now slightly firmer at 20¾. Music Hall shares have been quiet, but Palace Theatres have been steadily bought on prospects of an increased dividend, 25 per cent. for the year being talked of. Empire shares 15s. paid have been inquired for up to 5⅜, but are inclined to be easier again, as at about 5 many shares seem to come on the market. Drury-lane shares continue to be inquired for round about 22s. 6d. for the £1 shares, 15s. paid. The Oxford has just paid a good dividend of 6s. per share, with a bonus of 2s., and the shares stand at 6¾ ex all. The statement made by Sir Walter Hely Hutchinson at Skinners' Hall, last week, with regard to the coal industry in Natal, appears very favourable. I hear of another coal Company from that quarter, the "Natal Navigation Collieries Company," but this must not be mistaken for the Natal Steam Coal Company, which is in working trim, and which I have already mentioned to my readers. For the month of May there was a large increase in its output of coal over April, and by September it is expected that from 5,000 to 6,000 tons of coal will be raised monthly, so that considerable dividends are looked for. The price of the shares is still firm at 1¼-⅜. I see that Mr. W. Hunt, 116, Earlsfield-road, Wandsworth, London, S.W., is sending about circulars in which he praises up "The Smoke Prevention and Engineering Syndicate, Limited," with a capital of £35,000. This is not an investment which I should care to put any money into. By the way, an amalgamation is imminent of the well-known firm of Cooper, Cooper, & Co. with Messrs. John Dodds & Co., who are doing a very large tea trade in the north, and with a Ceylon Estates Company.—Your affectionate Uncle,

MOSES.

All Rights Reserved.]

QUEER STORY.

THE CURSE OF TIDDLEYWINKS.

I WAS interesting myself just then in the subject of cab men's shelters, which was attracting the notice of the public, and which seemed to me to afford good scope for the production of likely journalistic copy. With such an idea in view, I determined to make the acquaintance of some of these places by a tour of personal inspection, and there to interview the attendants, and certain of the frequenting cabbies, and see what interesting information I could elicit from them. It was whilst thus engaged that I was put in possession of the following story. Beyond the fact that it was told me by a cabman whom I met in one of these shelters, it cannot be said to have any connection whatever with the special object of my mission. But that, of course, does not impair its interest, which seemed to me sufficiently great, and out of the common, to warrant my offering it for publication in the "Queer Story" columns of TRUTH. It has been satisfactory to me to find that the Editor has endorsed my opinion.

The shelter to which I have alluded is situate not very far from Victoria Station. I happened to go there on a wet night, when it was nearly full of cabmen; and having stated that I was a member of the Press, who had come to gather information with a view to throwing light on the shelter question, which was then being much discussed in the papers, I was at once made welcome, and became the recipient of some very strongly expressed opinions on the villainy of Railway Companies and the iniquity of blacklegs—every man present being evidently a staunch Unionist. A particularly truculent cabby had just buttonholed me, and with his face bent forward, about a foot from mine, was, as it were, firing his views into me at short range, to the accompaniment of much play with his clenched fists, and some really shocking language; and I was just casting about in my mind how I should disengage myself from his attentions, not, however, seeing any immediate chance of doing so, when a merciful interruption came to my relief.

Another cabman entered the shelter, to whom the attention of all present was instantly turned.

"He-e-em! 'Ere comes 'is lordship."

"Bill, remove them big feet o' yours out of the gangway, and mike room for the Dook ter pars."

"Wot yer thinking of, mites, not standin' up and payin' yer respects to 'is grice?"

"Don't he look prahd, just? See 'ow 'is lip curl. Aristocrat every inch—ain't he?"

"Wonder the lid of this 'umble shanty don't blow orf at contynin' 'im!"

Of these, and other such facetious observations, the new comer took no notice, but made his way to a quiet corner, ordered some tea of the attendant, and sat down to discuss it. He was a tall, gaunt individual, about fifty, apparently, dressed in a tight-fitting, very shabby Newmarket, and a low-crowned napless top hat. His weather-beaten face was haggard and extremely melancholy, and his dark eyes were so deep-set as to be half hidden from view in the shadow of his overhanging brows. These points were obvious to any one at half a glance. And there was something else also that must have been obvious, even to the most careless observer. I knew in an instant (and should have known equally, without the chaffing allusions of the other cabbies) that this, their mate, was a man who had been born and bred in a very different station of life from that wherein circumstances had now placed him. This of itself, of course, did not go for much. In all sorts of humble occupations, down to that of tramps or street-loafers, one is constantly coming across men who have seen better days. But these usually are individuals in whom the vice and drunkenness that have reduced them to what they are have stamped out every vestige of what can make them interesting; leaving them mere contemptible specimens of the degradation to which man—the man, may reduce himself by yielding unchecked indulgence to man—the animal.

The present object of my attentions, however, did not appear to be a person of this kind. His face showed none of the coarsening marks of vicious excess. Rather did it appear to wear the expression of one who was oppressed by some dark cloud of mental anxiety. He interested me from the first moment I looked at him, and I thought at once as I did so, "I should like to hear that man's story." When a journalist, idem a professional interviewer, experiences this feeling, it will go hard but he will find means to gratify this his curiosity. I began to cast about in my mind for such means then.

I had already escaped from my truculent Unionist and his short-range volleys—a deafer, if a wiser, man. I strolled across to the attendant to question him.

"Who's that?" I inquired in a low voice, indicating by a gesture the subject of my inquiry, who, I saw, was still buried in his meditations and his tea.

"Drives a 'ansom. None on us know 'is nime," said the attendant, with a mysterious wink. "We gen'rally corls 'im 'The Dook.'"

"Why do you call him that?"

"Oh, cos he's a bloke oo've bin 'igher up in the world and carn't forgit it."

"Holds his head high, I suppose?"

"Well, 'tyn't so much that e's orty, rather that e's so reserve. Won't tell no one nuthink about isself. It's b'leeved, 'owever, that 'e is really a lord, and that 'e come to grief through 'orse-ricin'. My be, nor myn't be. Carn't sy. You might arst 'im."

"Not much use, from what you tell me," I observed.

"Not much, I think," replied the attendant, turning away to serve some customers.

Now I flatter myself that I am a man of resource in my own line, and that few interviewers have been more successful than I have in extracting information from unwilling subjects. I soon made up my mind how I would set about dealing with this reticent cabdriver. I would play a little game of bluff, and see what came of it. If what I desired, so much the better. If not, it did not much matter, after all. There was a vacant seat beside him. I occupied it. I wished him good evening, assuming a recognisant smile as I did so.

"Good evening," he returned, with some gruffness. Then, noticing my smile, and being evidently puzzled by it, he asked, quickly: "You are not one of us. Who are you? What brings you here?"

"I'm doing the cabmen's shelter question for the papers," I told him; and dropping my voice to a confidential pitch, I added, "I must say it is a great surprise to me to find you here."

"You know me, then?" he demanded, frowning annoyance.

"Considering that I was a sporting correspondent in those days, when you were on the turf, and that I then had to attend every race meeting in the country, you can hardly wonder at my being sufficiently familiar with your features to recognise them again, in spite of the changes that time and circumstance have wrought in you."

"Hush! hush!" he exclaimed, hurriedly in a low voice. "Not so loud. I have kept my identity secret from these fellows. I don't want them to know who I am."

"Right," I whispered, with a comprehensive wink, feeling extremely elated to see how well my game of bluff was succeeding. "You may rely on my discretion. By-the-way, though, there are just one or two little questions, which I and others who used to be interested in your turf career——"

"I know what you're going to ask," he interposed, with nervous quickness; "you're going to ask me to tell you the truth about Tiddleywinks."

"How clever of you to guess! That's precisely what I was going to ask—the truth about Tiddleywinks," I answered promptly, wondering inwardly who, or what, Tiddleywinks might be.

"I can't tell you here, before all these fellows. But, look here! Go and wait for me outside. If we leave this place together, it will attract attention. I will join you in a few minutes. And there's a public handy, where we shall be able to converse in peace. I can get one of the men on the rank to look after my cab. Good evening," he concluded, in a loud voice.

"Good evening!" I replied, and sauntered out.

I was by no means sure that this was not a little dodge of his to get rid of me; but I had no intention of letting him do so, if he had that design. I waited close at hand, in a place that commanded a good view of the exit from the shelter. In two or three minutes he came out. I joined him, and, after he had spoken a few words about his cab to one of the men on the rank, we proceeded to an adjacent public and seated ourselves in the tap-room. I ordered liquors and cigars. They were produced. We lighted up. We sipped preliminary sips. And I was ready to hear the truth about Tiddleywinks.

"Devil knows what's come over me to-day," said my companion, at the outset. "I've always been one to keep my own counsel, and, if it hadn't been for the curious feeling that's on me, you might have asked me for the truth about Tiddleywinks till you were black in the face, and you wouldn't have got it. But somehow, there's a sort of sensation in me just now that impels me to unburden myself of this secret. You don't know what it is to be under a curse, I suppose?"

For the DECORATING and FURNISHING in best modern manner, or in any of the traditional styles, of a single room or an entire house, HAMPTON & SONS, LTD., prepare, free of charge, suggestive schemes and competitive estimates.—Pall Mall East, S.W.

"No, I don't. I should have imagined that in these fin-de-siècle days curses were out of date."

"Ah! So I used to imagine," he exclaimed bitterly. "And I acted on the belief. I wish to God I hadn't! You recollect my uncle from whom I inherited the title?"

"Perfectly," I asserted, with the air of one whose answer was a foregone conclusion.

"Well, it was his curse, and nothing else—I swear solemnly it was nothing else—" (he spoke with energy and excitement) "that explains the truth about Tiddleywinks."

"What made your uncle"—"curse you" I was going to say; but being uncertain, from his words, whether the malediction referred to himself or to the indeterminate Tiddleywinks, I altered it into "pronounce that curse?"

"I am going to tell you. I do not suppose you are aware that my uncle had another nephew, my own first cousin, who was a much greater favourite with the old gentleman than I, the heir, was."

I shook my head. As I was not expected to know this, there was no object in my appearing to do so. Indeed, I might easily (as I saw) give myself away, if I pretended to know too much.

"But my uncle was a just man," he continued. "And—in spite of his predilection for my cousin—he felt it his duty to let the bulk of his property go with the title, although, of course, it was in his power to devise the whole of his personalty as he pleased. But then, if he had left it away from me, I should not have been able to sustain my position—still less to carry on his large stud of racers, which he had constantly expressed his wish that I should do after his death—on the same scale as he had been accustomed to do during his life. However, he wished to leave his favourite nephew something; and that something he proposed should be the sum of twenty thousand pounds. Most testators, under the circumstances, would have put him down in the will for the amount and have said nothing about it to the prospective legatee. But my uncle, being somewhat eccentric, and never making any secret whatever of his testamentary intentions, confided to my cousin what he proposed to do.

"My cousin, on becoming the recipient of this confidence, did a rather extraordinary thing. He said that though it was awfully kind of uncle to leave him so handsome a sum of money, he should like something else better. Had his uncle not spoken of his intention to mention him substantially in his will, he should not, of course, have presumed to say anything on the subject. And if the proposed bequest had been less valuable than the legacy he wished substituted for it, he would, equally, have been silent. But the fact was—[I should say that my uncle's life was then, as he himself knew, in a very precarious state, and the doctors considered it improbable that he could live for more than a year at the outside]—that if he was to succeed to any of the old fellow's possessions at all, it was the darling wish of his heart that he should succeed to—Tiddleywinks!"

So then Tiddleywinks was something capable of being devised and bequeathed—some good or chattel; probably, I surmised, a house or a small estate. However, I was soon enlightened on the point.

"My cousin—I must tell you—was quite mad on horse-racing. I don't believe he really cared a twopenny damn for anything else; and Tiddleywinks was then in the zenith of his two-year-old career, in which you, no doubt, recollect he achieved an undefeated record."

I nodded and looked, as I flattered myself, sapiently recollective. The fact, of course, was that only at this moment had I discovered what Tiddleywinks was. But I am sure that, from my expression, any one would have inferred that I was vividly recalling to my mind's eye the well-remembered triumphs of this undefeated two-year-old.

"Tiddleywinks, in fact, was the best horse of his year," he continued, "which is as good as saying that, if he went on all right, he had every chance of winning next year's classic races, for all of which he was entered. And people were already backing him, at no extravagant odds, for the Guineas and the Derby; which, considering that the former was some seven months ahead, shows the high esteem in which Tiddleywinks was held. And my cousin being, as I say, quite mad on the subject of horse-racing, told the old gentleman, in so many words, that if it was a choice between inheriting Tiddleywinks on the one hand, and the entire residue of his property on the other, he should unhesitatingly choose Tiddleywinks.

"Now, my uncle, himself a keen sportsman and a turf enthusiast, was quite delighted with the sporting spirit which my cousin's request showed; and he at once gave him his promise to bequeath him Tiddleywinks. I heard of it; and I ventured a mild remonstrance with uncle; for I did think it rather hard that I should be compelled (as I knew I was, by the terms of his will) to carry on his expensive racing establishment after his death, and yet be deprived of the only first-class horse and certain money-maker in the whole stables. But the old man put aside my remonstrance testily. Was I not satisfied with all the rest of his property, that I must grudge my cousin this one horse? No! He should certainly have the colt. He should add a codicil to his will to that effect without delay.

"And so he would have done; and now I wish to God he had!" ejaculated my informer excitedly. "But he postponed the matter for a day or two; and, during that time, his chronic complaint suddenly assumed an acute form, and he died within a few hours of the seizure. I was with him alone (my cousin being in Scotland at the time) during his last moments; and just before the end came, he addressed me in these words—it is eighteen years ago, but they are branded on my memory in burning letters:—

"'Jack,' he said, 'I have not been able to alter my will about Tiddleywinks. But I charge you, my lad—I charge you solemnly—to give him to your cousin Charlie when I am gone. And if," he added, after I had promised acquiescence, suspecting (as I now think) that I had it in me to be scoundrel enough to go back upon my pledged word to a dying man, 'if you fail to do so—if you keep the colt for yourself—may the possession of Tiddleywinks be a curse to you—a blighting curse—that shall haunt you with evil and ruin to the end of your days!'"

Here the cabman paused and wiped off the sweat which I saw standing in large drops on his forehead. Then he swallowed his toddy at a gulp; and after that, proceeded:

"Now comes the shameful part of my conduct, which you have already guessed. I will hurry over it. I will only say that I did break my promise to my dying uncle—I did keep Tiddleywinks. You remember his subsequent performance in the Guineas; how he started a hot favourite with the odds on; how queerly he ran; what a rumpus there was; how I and Jack White, the jockey, were actually called before the Stewards. Of course, there was nothing against either of us. Indeed, no one was more astounded and dismayed by the colt's running than I was, and I had dropped many thousands over the race. The Stewards acquitted us, absolutely. But the mob hooted us; and all the papers said nasty things. You see, people couldn't believe that Tiddleywinks had been fairly defeated by a colt to which, as a two-year-old, he had more than once given a stone and a beating.

"That was the beginning. It went on in the same way. People were compelled to change their opinion, and to admit that their suspicions of foul riding in the Guineas received no confirmation from Tiddleywinks' subsequent performances, and the papers—but, no doubt, you remember all this, having been yourself a turf correspondent—were soon ascribing Tiddleywinks' miserable failure in his third year to his having been over-raced as a two-year-old; which was more rational, but equally untrue. For I know, as well as I know my own face in the glass, that the hopelessness of his subsequent career—and you will remember that he never again won a race—was due to my uncle's curse, and to that alone.

"In everything I undertook, also, bad luck dogged me. After a few years I came a financial smash. All my property, including my horses, was sold in Bankruptcy. Being thus left without a penny-piece in the world, and my connection with Tiddleywinks being severed, I thought that the curse had perhaps expended itself. I was mistaken. I fell lower and lower. At last I came to cabdriving. And then—and then—come outside a minute," he exclaimed, rising suddenly. "I have something to show you."

He led the way into the street. In some surprise, I followed him. He stopped at the end of the cab-rank, and laid his hand on the withers of a broken-kneed screw that stood there, spiritless and dejected, between the shafts of a hansom.

"Look," he said. "Perhaps you've thought that my ideas about the curse have been a bit fanciful. Listen, now. A year ago, when I first sunk to cab-driving, I was supplied with this horse and this hansom by the proprietor to whom I applied. I knew the old beast again in an instant, I tell you, and he knew me. A sort of shudder came over me, and I felt faint and queer; for I saw the curse was still dogging me, with relentless steps. . . . . You can guess? Yes; you're quite right. This broken-down old crock is—Tiddleywinks!"

A few minutes later, having thanked him for his interesting story, I wished him good-night. I had now the necessary data for identifying him, which, by reference to certain turf records I easily did. I will not say more here than that he was a baronet, once very well known both in racing and social circles, whose brief career on the turf is still remembered as phenomenally disastrous in a calendar whereof its long list of striking and sensational disasters is not the least phenomenal feature.

But there were certain points which I wished to elucidate, and information about which I was unable to obtain in any records. I determined, therefore, again to seek out my cabman-baronet, and ask him if he would enlighten me on these uncertain matters. Not knowing where he lived, I repaired to the shelter where I had first met him, hoping I might find him there, or on the adjacent rank. I was disappointed; so questioned the attendant at the shelter as to whether "the Dook" was still plying from that cab stand.

"Bless us," answered the functionary. "No, 'e yn't. M'r'over, 'e yn't plyin' from any keb stand now—unless they runs keb stands in Kin'dom Come, wich the Bible don't s'y, as I knows on."

"Do you mean he's dead?"

"Yes; didn't yer see? It wos in the pipers."

"I never saw it."

"I did. Read orl abaout it. Haccident in Trafalgar-square. Oss cum daown on the incline; bein' slippery arter rine; killed itself—pore ole crock wich orter hev gone to the knackers a yeer ago—an' pitched 'the Dook' agynst a lamp-post, fracturin' 'is skell. 'E wos tiken to Charin' Crorse 'Orspital, and died without recoverin' consciousness. The keb was orl smashed, an' the fare, a lidy, was lucky to escipe as easy as she did, with a sprined wrist, and three teeth through 'er top lip."

"Now you mention it," I said, "I do remember reading about that accident. But I had no idea that the poor fellow who was killed was 'the Dook.'"

"Aye, but 'e wos, though. Funny thing abaout it, too. I think 'e ad a sorter presentiment that e'd ave a haccident with that 'oss of 'is. 'E wos in 'eer only the night afore, and some of 'em got charfin' 'im abaout that ole skeleton of a moke of 'is, an' arskin' 'im wy 'e didn't insist on the boss lettin' 'im 'ave another. Well gen'rally, yer know, he didn't never arnser their charf—being that reserve. But on this occision, 'e surprise us orl by noddin' 'is 'ead in a gloomy wy and syin':

'The fack is, mites, I seem sorter tied to the ole beast. 'E won't larst much longer, nor'll I, and I shouldn't wonder if we didn't both go to glory together!'"

"Funny 'e should 'ave sed that the dy before, wosn't it? And wot did 'e mean by bein' 'sorter tied to the ole beast?' But there! There never was no understandin' 'im—being that reserve. P'raps they'll be ible to mike more of 'im upstairs!"

Savoy Hotel, Savoy Restaurant, London. Large reception-rooms for fashionable réunions. Orchestra plays daily during dinner and opera supper.

ART NOTES.

It was pleasant to move about at the Continental Gallery on Friday last, as well as the crowd would allow one, and listen to the audible chuckles with which many of Mr. Gould's cartoons were being greeted. Rarely have I seen a party of private viewers enjoy themselves more thoroughly. For once they were not busily engaged in looking at each other and talking of anything but the show they had come to see, but were actually examining the pictures upon the walls, and sharing with evident relish in the veritable feast of fun which had been provided. Mr. Gould's cartoons have many excellent qualities, but one of the chief reasons for their popularity is their intelligibility. There is nothing recondite or ultra-subtle about them; no unnecessary beating about the bush, but a direct emphasis of the political point to be made, a straightforward accentuation of the situation caricatured. The nail that is to be driven in is hit upon the head with a really refreshing vigour and directness. Mr. Gould's humour is essentially of a popular description. It is a humour we can all of us appreciate; a humour, moreover, which is good humoured, and which requires for its elucidation neither commentary nor key. Take, for example, one of Mr. Gould's most popular cartoons, "The Old Lady of Niger and the Tiger," drawn by him as "A Forecast of the Unionist Alliance of 1895." Here we see a political adaptation of the well-known nonsense verse:—

There was an old lady of Niger
Who smiled as she rode on a tiger;
When she came from that ride
The dame was inside,
And the smile—on the face of the tiger.

Lord Salisbury is, of course, the old lady, and Mr. Chamberlain the tiger. The smile of the Marquis is delightful in its serene fatuousness as he rides out gaily on the back of his Colonial Secretary; but even more delicious is the triumphant leer of the Chamberlainic tiger as it returns from that fateful ride, increased in bulk to an extent that only too clearly suggests the absorbing incident that has happened. "The Family 'Bus," another of Mr. Gould's most successful cartoons, is, unfortunately, not included in the present Exhibition. Who does not remember that irresistibly funny scene—the Colonial Secretary running after the already well-laden Salisbury 'bus, and insisting that room shall be found in it for himself and the old lady (Mr Jesse Collins) and the two little boys (Messrs. Austen Chamberlain and Powell Williams)? It is in this turning of the ordinary and well-known incidents of daily life to account in his cartoons that Mr. Gould is so very happy.

Of his good humour I have already spoken. His cartoons prove with pleasant clearness that he does not put too much gall in the ink he uses for his caricatures. As he himself says in his amusing preface to his catalogue, whilst extenuating nothing which he attacks, he certainly does not set down aught "in malice." It is, indeed, a long cry from the method of Gilray to the method of Gould. The blows of the bludgeon have given place to the tickling of the rapier. Were a proof of this needed it would be found in the fact that Mr. Gould's victims positively enjoy the punishment he so genially administers to them. He caricatures no one more frequently than the Colonial Secretary; his most successful hits are at the expense of that pushful member of the Ministry, and yet Mr. Joseph Chamberlain is one of his most ardent admirers. It is an open secret, too, that Mr. Gladstone was much interested in Mr. Gould's talent; and that the original of one of the latter's most striking Gladstonian cartoons some time ago found a place upon the walls at Hawarden Castle. In the present exhibition a special screen has been devoted to cartoons of the deceased statesman, and these, I noticed, had nearly all of them a little red star on them, when I was at the Continental Gallery, showing that they had already found purchasers. There has also been a run on the Chamberlain caricatures. There is one fact in connection with the majority of the exhibited drawings which will, I think, lend them an additional interest in the eyes of visitors to the Continental Gallery. Nearly all the cartoons have been drawn as comments on passing political events from day to day for the columns of an evening newspaper. This implies, of course, great rapidity in production, and it is not the least notable of Mr. Gould's qualities that he is able to thus invent and produce a cartoon in a space of time not much greater than that taken by the average political journalist to produce a leading article. Altogether the exhibition is a great success, and can be cordially recommended to all who take an interest in current politics.

MUSIC.

EXIT THE CARL ROSA COMPANY.

BUSINESS with the Carl Rosa Company has notoriously been going from bad to worse, and a meeting of shareholders is called for to-day (Wednesday) to decide whether another attempt shall be made next autumn to carry on the enterprise with a cheaper troupe, or whether the affair shall go into liquidation. Beyond much doubt liquidation will be the preferable course, and thus this once celebrated enterprise will be at an end. Those who have followed the series of articles which have during the past few years been published in TRUTH upon the Carl Rosa Company, will be by no means surprised at what is now likely to happen. Last year's losses it seems were greater than ever, and as by the sale of the lease of the Royal Court Theatre, Liverpool, the company has lost its last really valuable asset, there seems very little more to be done. The losses shown in the balance-sheet last year amount to no less than £6,607. This, however, only carries the account to December 31, and it is, I believe, a fact that since then the tale of woe has continued, and misfortune has indeed set in with even still greater severity. The directors' report candidly states that the trivial amount which it had been intended to pay back to the luckless shareholders on the reduction of their capital, agreed to last winter, has been lost, and the "return of capital contemplated, will, therefore, have to be abandoned." On this point I have received from a shareholder, whose name is extremely familiar in the musical world, a letter as follows:—

> What do you think of the enclosed? I am inclined to think that the shareholders can bring an action for the recovery of the money which legally was assigned to the shareholders, in consideration of their consenting to the reduction of their shares. However, you know more about this than I do.

My correspondent, however, really credits me with much greater knowledge of the law than I can presume to possess. Moreover, no one personally blames the directors, now, by resignations—a fresh example I fear of the rodents and the sinking ship—reduced to four, namely, Mr. Bruce, formerly local manager of the Liverpool Theatre, Mrs. Carl Rosa, Herr Ganz, and Mr. Vert. The directors may not have been wise, but they have, at least, been honest. Indeed, Mrs. Carl Rosa is known to be a very serious loser indeed by the impending break up, and there is hardly a shareholder who will not extend to her his pity at the misfortunes due to the mismanagement of others. The subordinates had far too much of the upper hand, and I have more than once enjoyed the sardonic pleasure of informing individual directors of arrangements and engagements of which they themselves were wholly ignorant. It is quite possible, therefore, that Mr. Vert and some of his colleagues may not have known that the money passed by resolution to be returned to the shareholders was being spent in an obviously losing game. Perhaps at the meeting to-day some explanation may be forthcoming upon this point, although, as the chairman, Mr. Nicholson (who a year or two ago spoke so scornfully of any allowance for depreciation of operatic costumes), and Mr. Friend, the company's manager, have both resigned, there may be some difficulty about speaking with authority.

At any rate, it is significant that the general meeting to confirm the resolution to reduce the capital and to return a portion of the money to the shareholders took place as recently as December 10 last. Yet twenty-one days later, when the balance-sheet was made up, it showed that during the year there had been a loss of £6,600. Either therefore the directors were ignorant of this desperate state of affairs, or the resolution of December 10 must have been a silly piece of empty form, or (which is far more likely) the severe losses which have swallowed up the small amount of money the shareholders expected to be returned to them have occurred since the new year. In any event, liquidation is a by far more sensible step than the inevitable loss of more money which must ensue if the company resolve to continue "with operas that do not entail such a large expenditure as has been the case during the past." Provincial managers let their theatres to the Carl Rosa Company, and give that body a very large percentage of the gross receipts, only upon condition that the troupe and the repertory shall be maintained as far as possible upon the highest class. If the Carl Rosa Company decide to take round a cheaper troupe, it is inevitable that the provincial managers will revise their contracts. Indeed, the directors themselves seem to have recognised the fact that liquidation is the wiser course. They have called a second meeting later on to-day to confirm any resolution for liquidation passed at the meeting called at noon. Should, as is most likely, the resolution to liquidate be carried, it is the intention of the company to "endeavour to sell its remaining assets, and, after satisfying the liabilities, to divide what remains among the shareholders." Thus will pass into the shadows the most promising operatic enterprise that Great Britain has boasted within the memory of the present generation.

Once more to indicate the reasons which have reduced the company to its present state would be a task analogous to thrashing a dead horse. The mistakes made have been plainly stated in these columns year by year, and with an iteration which would have been tedious had not the question been of such primary importance to the welfare of music in England. Down to the time of the death of Carl Rosa matters went swimmingly enough. Rosa himself was not only a shrewd man of business, but was also an excellent musician—a combination of the greatest rarity. His policy, as everybody is aware, was to confine his repertory to operas within the means of his troupe. He also sagaciously kept down expenses, allowing himself the luxury of only one very costly leading artist, and training up the junior members of the company eventually to take the place of the "star" at a more modest salary. Among other things, although sorely tempted, he refused (his unmusical successors have rushed in where he feared to tread) to mount "Die Meistersinger" in the provinces, on the very proper and most artistic ground that a travelling orchestra was unfit to perform the accompaniments, without resorting to shifts which make Wagner's music ridiculous. Also he regularly had a London season which, although it might not have been particularly profitable, yet served as an admirable advertisement for his provincial business. But the great point of his policy was to pass through the ranks of his company a number of fresh voiced and promising young artists, whom he trained personally, and who, under his guidance, contributed largely to that excellent ensemble which was once the pride and glory of the Carl Rosa troupe. In the result, as we all know, he earned a large fortune for himself, and after he converted his business into a limited liability company he paid a regular and highly satisfactory dividend of 7 per cent. on the Preference and 8 per cent. on the Ordinary shares.

No sooner, however, had Carl Rosa died than troubles began. His successors as managers of the company were not men of music, while, although they may have imagined themselves to be men of business, yet the proof of the pudding must be sought in the eating, and it is significant that from the year following Rosa's death the dividends have wholly ceased. It is true that the directors' reports from year to year gave the most roseate excuses, and hopes that were not fulfilled. In 1890, at the first meeting of the company after Carl Rosa's death, Sir George Grove resigned, and his example was afterwards followed by Earl de Grey, the Earl of Radnor, the late Sir Augustus Harris, Mr. Gardiner, Sir Frederick Bridge, and others. During the year 1889 (when Carl Rosa really had been responsible for the policy of the company) the profits were close upon £10,000, plus nearly £3,000 written off for depreciation. In the following year ending December 31, 1890, the profits dropped down to £4,400, and no depreciation was written off. In the third year, 1891, there was a loss of nearly £1,500; in 1892 a loss of £1,300; in 1893 a profit of £1,200; in 1894 a profit of £1,100; in 1895 a loss of £2,200; in 1896 a nominal profit of £188; and in 1897 a loss of £6,607. Since 1890, however, there really has been an almost continuous loss, for the asset of £27,000, the value of the Court Theatre loan, has disappeared from the accounts, while, instead of £3,000 a year, for eight years nothing has been written off for depreciation, and accordingly we have in the accounts the very ridiculous feature that the value of the scenery and dresses is placed at the exact amount which was originally paid for them, although operatic costumes, unlike old port and the voices of eminent prime donne, do not become more valuable with age.

Indeed, as the company will probably now go into liquidation, the real value of these assets becomes to the shareholders, and to others interested in the future of opera in English, a matter of special importance. In the new balance-sheet it is true it is rather difficult at first sight to understand what amount is really fixed as the value of the stock-in-trade. In 1896 the value of the scenery, properties, and furniture was fixed at £26,746, whereas it now figures at £32,254, "after deduction of purchase money of the Royal Court Theatre, Liverpool." To suppose, however, that the Carl Rosa scenery, properties, wardrobes, and music will fetch anything like this amount will be laughed at by any one who has the slightest experience in matters theatrical. The "goodwill," which (after deducting certain deferred Ordinary shares) is now fixed at £6,474, is another absurd item. Can any one suppose that the goodwill of a company which has been a failure for years past, and now is in imminent danger of liquidation, can be worth £6,700, or anything like it? The value of the "opera rights" is fixed at £9,100, they apparently having gone up nearly £200 since last year. It is true that on December 31 the company had £8,000 cash in hand, besides £1,000 invested, but, as a paragraph in the Directors' report warns us to expect, much of this money has since disappeared, most probably in the losses which have been sustained since the New Year. Indeed, it would have been much better, when a proposal for liquidation was before it, if the company had made up their balance-sheet to the present time, and, above everything, had caused an independent valuation to be made of the stock-in-trade. If this had been done, the shareholders would, I think, have had an eye-opener.

Of course, the question remains whether, even after many years of no dividends and a period of serious loss, the company could have continued. There is no doubt that there are some operatic troupes still going round the provinces which make good profits out of performances of opera in English. As a rule, they are strictly modest concerns, paying very small salaries, and giving performances still more modest. Nevertheless, from a commercial point of view, they undoubtedly do make money, and it is a question whether it is worth the while of the Carl Rosa troupe to imitate their policy. There are two strong reasons against it. In the first place the Carl Rosa Company, whatever may be its financial condition, has always retained its high celebrity as an art enterprise. For the troupe to go upon the lines of some of its smaller competitors would, with resultant loss of prestige, in all probability end in still further disasters. It is perhaps more important that the company have not the proper staff to carry out any such policy. In nearly all cases the managers of opera troupes who make money in the provinces are themselves musicians with long operatic experience, and are thereby enabled to train their new artists in much the same way as Carl Rosa himself did. This, indeed, is the crux of the whole situation. An opera company may perhaps be made to pay, providing the head of the whole concern is a practical man, conversant with his work both from a musical and a business point of view. The lack of musical knowledge or of business capacity is, in almost every case, fatal.

THE PUNCTURED WAGNER CYCLE.

The first cycle of "Der Ring des Nibelungen" came to an end on Saturday amidst alarums and excursions, followed by furious Wagner protests, vocalists' indispositions, newspaper chaff at the stage management, and a general suspicion that "Wagner in Bow-street," was a punctured cycle. It is reported that the profits of the first four night performances have been something like £1,400, which, if true, induces a comfortable reflection that opera after all can be made to pay. Indeed, it is likely to raise the ire of the professed Wagnerites to boiling point. That "Siegfried" on Thursday was plentifully "cut," perhaps provoked less dissatisfaction among the subscribers and the public than in the minds of the Elect, who, after a musical gorge extending from five to half-past ten (including dinner time), wanted more. So we have had "protests" by the Wagner Society, "interviews" with Mr. Schultz-Curtius (who has missed the one opportunity in his life of holding his peace), and the rest of it. Defects beyond question developed themselves during the week, and, as I ventured to predict, some of the absurdities of "Playing at Bayreuth" had to be abandoned. But it is nevertheless a fact, and one upon which Mr. Schultz-Curtius, Mr. Higgins, and Mr. Maurice Grau are entitled to sincere congratulations that, despite defects, last week's performances of "Der Ring des Nibelungen" were by far the finest that we have ever before seen in England, and in some respects were vastly superior to those at Bayreuth itself. Of course, with its out-of-date machinery, Covent Garden cannot hope to compete in stage effects with such well-appointed theatres as those of Munich and Vienna. But, from an orchestral point of view, the Royal Opera performances have been inferior to none, while vocally they have been superior to almost anything that Bayreuth has ever given us. This much, at any rate, is to our credit.

It was foreseen by people experienced in the ways of operatic audiences in London that some of the "dragooning" proposed during the cycle would not work. The darkened theatre really never was tried at all. It would, of course, have been quite possible to have followed the system adopted by the late Sir Augustus Harris, who, at each performance of the "Ring," caused the whole of the gas to be put out and not again to be relighted during the entire evening. The electric light, under Harris's régime, also went out, and then the theatre, except as to the stage, was in thorough darkness, the electric lamps only being re-illuminated during the entr'actes. At Covent Garden, instead, the gas in the great chandelier, and also round the circles, was kept alight throughout the performance, and, although it was lowered, it was generally possible to read fairly large print. This would have been an advantage had it not been for the fact that the gas caused the upper circles to be made inconveniently hot. Accordingly, the scheme of closing the windows and ventilators next had been abandoned. On the first night of the cycle the good folks in the amphitheatre were nearly stifled, and their anathemas of the "dashed tomfoolery" of Bayreuth caused an alteration of policy, and a restoration of such ventilation as Covent Garden affords. Also the proposal to keep people out during the progress of the music had to be abandoned at the outset, and although the bulk of the audience came splendidly up to time, late comers were admitted when they liked. On Thursday evening the system of playing the opera in its entirety and without "cuts" had to be set aside. This, it seems, was due to two of the principal artists, who, whether the opera be by Wagner or not, invariably hold the key of the situation. MM. Jean and Edouard de Reszke had learnt their parts in "Siegfried" last year, in accordance with the reduced version used at Covent Garden and at many of the German theatres. For the "cuts" to have been restored would have necessitated their forgetting their former studies and relearning their parts afresh. M. Edouard de Reszke is known to be a slow "study," and accordingly it was, I believe, proposed that he should be replaced by Herr van Rooy. This, if I am correctly informed, very nearly set the fat into the fire. A hint was dropped, though not of course from the great tenor himself, that if his brother did not sing, it was highly probable that M. Jean himself would postpone his appearance. Accordingly, on Thursday the "cuts" were observed, and the performance closed before half-past ten. Since then we have had protests and indispositions and interviews galore. But the growls all emanate from a small minority. Only 600 seats in the whole house were allotted to the Wagner party, some of whom rather rejoice than otherwise that the loquacity of Wotan the Wanderer was cut short. The cranks are bound to grumble. If there had been no "cuts," they would probably have "protested" at M. Jean de Reszke wearing a beard.

The dinner arrangements worked fairly well. Fortunately the weather was fine, for otherwise the spectacle of ladies in evening dress wandering down Bow-street to the Strand restaurants at a quarter past six in the evening might have been less picturesque than it actually was. On this head, by the way, I am bound in justice to the Covent Garden authorities to correct an error made last week. Relying upon a complaint which I had received from a lady correspondent, I mentioned that there was no apartment in which the ladies in the gallery could place their bonnets or other head coverings. This seems to be an entire mistake, and one which, as a mere male, I clearly could not be supposed to discover for myself. There are ladies' cloak-rooms in all parts of the house, and in the gallery and amphitheatre alone there are, I am assured, two huge rooms capable of holding 8,000 or 10,000 bonnets. Indeed, I am bound to say that from first to last the Covent Garden staff, with Mr. Neill Forsyth at their head, did everything in their power for the comfort of the audience, and to alleviate the inconvenience which people were put to in coming so early and in being forced to clear out of the house during the dinner interval.

The orchestra under Herr Mottl was certainly by far the finest feature of the "Nibelung" performances last week. The band parts, indeed, have never before in this country been played with so much delicacy and refinement, and with such nice observance of all the details of expression, while the voices were supported instead of being drowned, and the various "leading motives" were brought out with the utmost clearness. In short, the performance was such as we usually expect in the concert-room under Mottl, Levi, or Richter, rather than in the opera-house. I have already dealt with "Das Rheingold." "Die Walküre" went even better. Here Mme. Eames proved to be the finest singing Sieglinde we have yet had in this country. From an acting point of view she was rather tame, but that possibly was due to her Italian training. Precisely the same fault was found with M. Jean de Reszke, who appeared as Siegfried on the following day; but here, as elsewhere, we have a choice between the declamatory and youthful German and a poetic, though vocal, tenor trained in the more refined school. The engagement of M. Edouard de Reszke for the Wanderer in "Siegfried" was a musical mistake. The part does not suit him, and it lies indeed beyond the range of his voice, so that the notes in many cases had to be altered. Herr van Rooy would have been much better. Miss Brema in "Die Walküre" was a magnificent Brünnhilde, although the absurdity was committed of putting her in this part to sleep in the last scene of "Die Walküre" and awakening her as Mme. Nordica in "Siegfried" on the following night. Mme. Nordica as Brünnhilde, in the great scene at the close of "Siegfried," with M. Jean de Reszke, absurdly enough wandered down to the footlights in the approved fashion of Romeo and Juliet. She did much the same on Saturday night, turning her back upon Gutrun's warriors, and singing to the gods aloft. It is, however, only fair to say that Mme. Nordica at short notice replaced Mlle. Ternina, who has had hard luck at Covent Garden, for she on Thursday was ill. In "Götterdämmerung" the artists were on less familiar ground, but the performance was on the whole a very good one, particularly the splendid Waltraute of Frau Schumann-Heink. It is true that M. Jean de Reszke was indisposed (suffering, according to one writer, from that novel disease, nervous rheumatism of the liver) and was replaced by Herr Dippel. This, according to the Wagner Society, is what they wanted. It is hoped the rest of the audience were equally satisfied.

Sir Arthur Sullivan has been obliged to relinquish his idea of composing a new cantata for the Leeds Festival, and a work by Mr. Cowen will be accepted instead. The delay in the announcement of the subject of Sullivan's new choral work most probably prepared the public for the fact that the production of the successor to the "Golden Legend" must again be postponed. Ill-health is assigned as the reason, but Sir Arthur's friends need not be unduly alarmed at the seriousness of his illness. Indeed, no one would, in fact, be surprised to find Gilbert and Sullivan in collaboration again at the Savoy before the year is out.

I have received further communications concerning the "Registered" teachers of the Associated Board, but consideration of this and other matters must for this week be postponed.

The concerts of the week have again been numerous, and some of them have been really interesting. Among the most attractive was the Jubilee of Mr. Ganz, in which Mme. Patti took part, singing a couple of songs and the same number of encores. Her rendering of Lotti's once familiar air, "Pur dicesti," was a perfect marvel of genuinely artistic vocalisation. Mme. Patti had, I believe, not before sung "Pur dicesti," but her rendering of this fine old Italian aria was a lesson to a good many younger singers. At the Philharmonic Concert on Thursday, the cream of the programme was given up to Mr. Eugene D'Albert, who gave a fine interpretation of Beethoven's E flat Concerto, and likewise conducted his Symphony in F, op. 4. This had been announced as a novelty, although, as a matter of fact, it was played under Richter at St. James's Hall twelve years ago. It does not much improve with acquaintance, and the scherzo is certainly its best number. Frau Hermine D'Albert sang a dramatic though somewhat lugubrious solo, entitled "The Little Mermaid's Death and Transfiguration," besides two of her husband's other songs. This accomplished lady is already well-known here under her maiden name of Fräulein Hermine Spies, and some years ago she was famous as a singer of Brahms's Lieder. Mr. D'Albert gave the only recital on Monday with an exacting programme comprising no fewer than five pianoforte sonatas, rather a dose in the summer season. On Monday night also Dr. Richter resumed his evening performances. A piece of Svendsen's, already tried at the Crystal Palace, was produced, but the audience would have been much better pleased if it had been replaced by some more Wagner pieces. The only Wagner work in the programme was the "Tannhäuser" overture employed to play the people out. The great attraction, however, was the "Symphony Pathétique" of Tschaikowsky, a work which Richter was the first to make popular here, although he was certainly not the first to produce it. A large number of other concerts I cannot now refer to.

GIRLS' GOSSIP.

DEAREST AMY,—You will want to hear something about the Drawing Room, the last of the present season. One of the sensations was a train composed of aluminium. Fancy, dear! I remember reading about an evening gown made of spun glass that was worn in America by the Infanta Eulalie of Spain; and Sir Thomas Wardle tells us that silk is adulterated on the Continent with salts of tin, and silver and gold are by no means extraordinary ingredients of silk or brocade; so there is perhaps less reason for surprise about an aluminium train than at first sight there appears to be. One pictures, however, a rather frying-pan effect, very opposite to the reality, which glitters like silver and is entirely soft and supple. It does not tarnish like silver. The train in question was worn by Mrs. Crawshay, of Cyfarthfa, and was woven in Bond-street by a young girl who, up to the beginning of this year, had no knowledge of weaving. I believe she threw her first shuttle on February 28. It will thus be seen that weaving is not an impossible or uncongenial task for ladies, and if our English noblesse could be persuaded to patronise English hand-made goods, they would bring gladness to many a home where young girls could in a good old fashion help to support themselves and others by a recognised industry. This is the second order for aluminium cloth received by the Bond-street School, or, as it is more correctly called, the British and Irish Weaving School. The first was woven by a deaf and dumb pupil who began work on January 22, and her achievement is therefore equally praiseworthy. The second order took eight days to make, and a third pupil wove the aluminium braids which were used with it.

The Countess of Uxbridge, presented on her marriage by her mother, the Marchioness of Hastings, wore her poetic wedding gown, all softly falling Brussels point, under a train of lily brocade put on with a hood of chiffon and snowy plumes. Lady Hastings looked beautiful in steel and silver-sewn net over white satin, appliqués of Chantilly lace being introduced effectively among the glittering sequins. The Marchioness also presented Princess Victor Duleep Singh on her marriage. The Duchess of Westminster wore lovely diamonds. She was sweetly dressed in white satin, flounced with Mechlin run on silk muslin, and trimmed with pink roses and white lilac, the latter matching the design upon the white brocade of which her Grace's train was made. It was lined with pale green, and this tender note of colour was repeated in a sash of chiffon. The Marchioness of Ailesbury, presenting her younger daughter, Lady Marjory Brudenell-Bruce, wore black and mauve, and carried a Goodyear bow-bouquet of lovely mauve and white orchids. Lady Powis wore white and pale green trimmed with carnations, and carried an Arcade bouquet of Malmaison carnations and lily of the valley. Lady Freake, in a pretty lilac and grey shot satin, had a train of striped black gauze trimmed with orchids, and lined with orchid-mauve satin. Miss Freake was in white and pink. Lady Van-Notten-Pole's shepherdess dress was very quaint and pretty. Mrs. "Ronnie" Greville looked very nice in pale blue. Lady Brassey had a princess gown in bright Malmaison pink and train of pansy-purple velvet, the whole softened with lovely old lace. Mrs. Ismay wore an artistic mingling of black and white and silver, and carried a splendid bouquet of white orchids and pink roses. Mrs. Bruce Ismay was in pink satin veiled with cream-tinted lace embroidered in gold, silver, and pearls. Lady Jerningham's turquoise-velvet train, trimmed with shaded tulips worn over white satin and lace, was much admired, as was her bouquet of parrot tulips. Baroness Gray had a delicious Joyce dress of ivory and green shot satin, with Chartreuse velvet train embroidered with pearls and brilliants. Mrs. Edward Powell wore white satin trimmed with lace and chiffon, and a train of rich brocade, one corner turned back and embroidered with turquoise and silver. She carried a beautiful bouquet. The exquisite Irish embroidery on Mrs. Geo. Scott's lovely gown and train was much admired; and so was the cream-coloured brocade woven at Macclesfield and given as a wedding present to Mrs. Kinloch by the constituents of her brother, Mr. Bromley Davenport, M.P.

Madame Kato, wife of the Japanese Minister, was much observed in her exquisite white satin dress, embroidered in turquoise, paste, and silver, and trimmed with sprays of laburnum. The train was in blue and yellow brocade lined with pale blue and trimmed with laburnum.

Lady Eden wore a lovely Paquin gown in white satin, veiled with tulle and silk muslin, and trimmed with bands of lace embroidered with geraniums composed of pink ribbon. The train was also satin, trimmed with the ribbon-petalled geraniums and profusely studded with paste. Lady Ermyntrude Malet wore silver brocade, with pearl embroidery and priceless point d'Alençon. The Countess De La Warr's apricot crêpe-de-chine was trimmed with white Chantilly.

The dresses in the new piece at the Gaiety are quite lovely and most effective, without being in the least "stagey"—a word that is losing its meaning, by the way, since the revolution in theatrical costume. The Gaiety gowns were made by Louise et Cie., who made their name in bonnets, and have now added dressmaking to their business in Regent-street. They will probably achieve equally great things in this department as they have hitherto done in headgear.

The gay world is intent on Ascot and its gowns, its hats, its sunshades, and its endless etceteras. I expect to have oceans to tell you about it next week.

What extraordinary positions people sometimes choose to be photographed in! We have been looking at the brides and bridegrooms depicted in some weekly papers, and could not help noticing how much more naturally the men pose than the brides. Some of the latter appear to be intently examining the ceiling, as though they fear that it is about to give way. Others have their backs to the spectator, their heads twisted round at a most extraordinary angle in order to show a profile or three-quarter face. A few are photographed with their eyes cast down, so that one suspects them of chronic squints. Almost all are in evening dress, a style that is becoming to very few in a photograph, especially when the area of the latter is so small that no clothes whatever are visible. The effect of an elaborately crimped coiffure and a necklace of more or less importance, combined with an apparent total absence of garmenture, is rather funny.

One bride and bridegroom have their backs to each other. If they behave like that so early in married life, where will they end?

A real, old-fashioned honeymoon is rarely seen now. Three days of retirement from the world and its excitements are as much as the married couples of this restless age can afford. In some ways it is well that the "moon" should be reduced to something under a week. To be bored with each other is such a sad commencement. It establishes a precedent, and that is often a fatal thing to do.

The girls have been cycling a great deal lately, and they are highly delighted with a charming afternoon-tea house called "The May Trees," which they have found in Fox-lane, Cowley, between Uxbridge and West Drayton. The place has been started by some enterprising ladies, who, being cyclists themselves, have had practical experience of the difficulty ladies have in finding decent places to get tea during long country rambles. A party of our friends had a picnic at "The May Trees" the other day, ordering their lunch in advance. It sounds an excellent idea both for the proprietors and the customers, and I shall expect to hear soon that other ladies are starting similar ventures round about London.

Mrs. Fourstars made her annual pilgrimage with the children to the Crystal Palace on Thursday to see the fireworks. We joined the happy little party, and came back delighted with the evening's entertainment. The fireworks are always good, and this year the great Brock has excelled himself. The battle of Manila is a terrific blazing, deafening affair; but the youngsters were still more pleased with a comic piece—a fireworks cow milked by a pyrotechnic milkmaid, who finally carries her glowing pail to a fiery pump, from which it is filled up with flaming "water." But there are newer attractions at the Palace this season. A very good variety entertainment, beginning with a clever play without words and ending Costumes for Henley Regatta.—Messrs. Redfern have now on view in their Showrooms some very pretty and effective Costumes for Henley, to which a visit of inspection is invited. Very moderate in price.—Redfern, 26, Conduit-street, W.

Surgical Corsets.—A desideratum after an operation is a properly adjusted, light, and comfortable support. This can be obtained from Mesdames Sykes, Josephine, & Co., The Celebrated Anatomical Corsetières, 280, Regent-street, Oxford-circus, London.

with a really brilliant ballet imported from Paris, is given in the theatre. In the open air, on the terrace below the North Tower Gardens, a "café chantant" entertainment is provided each afternoon and evening, and here again a ballet is one of the principal items in the programme. By these and other enterprises the management is making a bold bid for increased support. Everybody hopes that it will succeed, for nobody would like to see the Palace overtaken by the fate which was said to threaten it some time ago.

Christabel writes from Paris :—

I send you some toilettes seen during what is called here "La Grande Semaine," comprising Auteuil, the Grand Prix at Longchamps, the réunion of the mail coaches, &c. . . . The Grand Prix is no longer the exhibition of costumes it used to be, but there were some wonderful toilettes. A most beautiful hand-painted muslin had an artistic garland of flowers round the foot of the skirt and coming up in tablier fashion in front. Around and mixed in among the flowers were tiny ruches of narrow pink ribbon. The bodice had a little painting to match mixed with ribbon ruches and lace, and the waist was encircled with a sash of silk muslin, the whole made up over pale pink silk. The hat worn with this was the shape called bergère, of white rice straw, trimmed with white tulle and marguerite daisies.

A white muslin skirt was ornamented with real Valenciennes insertion in a sort of lozenge pattern, and finished with a wide shaped flounce; the bodice had a wide pink moiré ribbon coming from the shoulders, forming bows in front, and then turning round towards the waist and under the arms, ending in long sash ends at the back. The sleeves were muslin and lace over pink silk, like the skirt and bodice. Foulard was much patronised also, and the new make called foulard satiné is very pretty, having a more brilliant surface than the ordinary sort. I saw a very nice one in deep rose shade, with small white pattern, made with a plain skirt and wide shaped flounce. The bodice was extremely taking, with a deep falling collar at the back, coming over the top of the sleeves, and then forming full revers in front, all edged with wide écru Cluny lace, which is coming up again very much. Round the waist was a black velvet band, edged on each side with gold galon. The hat worn with this was white straw, with a wreath and aigrette of wild convolvolus. A mauve foulard had two wide pleated flounces placed one above the other, and headed with a small ruche of the same material arranged to form a lozenge pattern. The bodice, gathered in at the waist, had a wide insertion of embroidered muslin, edged with a plissé of foulard, forming a deep square trimming in front like a yoke, the middle of which was filled in with white chiffon. With this a white straw hat was worn, ornamented with violets, and a very pretty costume it was.

White cotton embroidery is very much to the fore; it is to be seen on blue lawn or cambric, or, in fact, anything. At the Grand Prix a well-known Russian lady wore a princess robe of white muslin embroidered thus.

A picturesque gown was of blue muslin enhanced with old Venetian point, the hat turned up in front, with tea roses mixed with pinks and their green leaves.

A well-known actress wore a very pretty costume of blue silk muslin, covered with Irish guipure, with black velvet round the neck and end of sleeves. A Lamballe hat in Manila straw, with plenty of pink roses, veiled with pink tulle, completed this elegant dress.

I must not forget to mention that Mme. Faure was dressed in mauve taffetas, with silk muslin of the same shade in front. Her white and black bonnet had a white aigrette. Her married daughter, Mme. Berge, wore white crêpon, and a white hat with long white feathers.

Clare sends me the following from Dublin :—

DEAREST MADGE,—Nothing is more quaint or curious in its ways than Fashion. It is called a tyrant, yet does it not seem somewhat of a contradiction, thus to style a power which is voluntarily and eagerly obeyed? And not alone that, but even in an age which questions everything in Heaven and earth and all the philosophies, its decrees are never questioned. Cheerful, ready obedience is the rule, no matter at what cost of personal self-denial and self-sacrifice. The benighted beings who make the exception can hardly be called rebels, since rebellion loses its meaning where obedience is voluntarily. Fashion has no punishment for them, the act of disobedience to its decrees brings its own punishment. So much the worse for those who will not follow fashion; let them go into the outer social darkness, for there is no other alternative. Into the regions where dowdies and those melancholy beings who are not up-to-date wander in hopeless, pitiful obscurity. One shudders to think of their condition, and can only hope, poor things, that they are happy in their own sorry way. They may enjoy peace and satisfaction, though doing the wrong things at the wrong times, or the right things at the wrong times, which comes to the same thing; and their hearts may be light, though their skirts are wrongly cut, and their sleeves of an obsolete pattern. But how can they do it? And how pitiable to see those who ought to know better in impossible materials and last year's headgear.

Perhaps one of Fashion's most curious decrees, is the law which has established your "season" in town in the very heart of summer. Though it is accepted without question, and heroically obeyed, what June longings must just now be stifled in many hearts, and the secret preference of real to artificial roses. There may be even some to whom the noise of "hidden brooks" would be more grateful and soothing than that of the roar of the mighty city. Here we abandon our capital in the summer, many of us, it must be said, in favour of yours, which ought in a manner—if we carried out Unionist ideas to the full—to be ours also. But having gone through a "season" in the winter, only the ultra fashion, which is not for all of us, requires another. We may with clear consciences go abroad, or to the seaside, or into the heart of the country, if so minded.

Last week June came to us in full splendour, abruptly following the wintry May. How difficult dressing has been this year! One's ingenuity has been taxed to its fullest in working winter and summer clothes together, alternating their wear not only daily but sometimes hourly.

Leopardstown race meeting on Friday and Saturday gave summer toilettes their first opportunity. Every one seemed to seize it eagerly, the dressing was so brilliant and worthy of the sunshine. The scene was very pretty in the enclosure, where a band played the background of hills and trees set it off effectively. On Saturday a rival attraction was the garden-party given at St. Ann's, Clontarf, by Lord and Lady Ardilaun. Lord Ardilaun has developed the house, which was the residence of his father, Sir Benjamin Guinness, into a palatial structure, and suitably extended the gardens and pleasure-grounds. The sea—an inlet which stretches to Clontarf—is at the gates, and the sandy ridges on which the golf links of Dolly Mount lie, are close by. Lady Ardilaun is a charming hostess; she looked very well in a green brocade costume, her hat being in harmony with it. The band of the Rifle Brigade played under the trees, where tea and all sorts of refreshments were also dispensed. Lord and Lady Ardilaun, the heads of the Guinness family, are—in Ireland—its popular members. Lord Ardilaun has resisted all temptations and remained an Irishman, unlike his younger brother, Lord Iveagh. The bestowal of the Ribbon of St. Patrick on the younger, instead of the elder, brother was warmly resented in Ireland. To say the least of it, it was an outrage on good taste. Whether Royalty or Vice-royalty were most answerable for it, who can say?

The Duke and Duchess of Devonshire spent some days at Lismore Castle, and gave many dinners to the neighbours in an informal way. The rumour now runs that they are to receive a Royal visit at Lismore in the autumn, but it hardly seems likely. Another rumour with regard to Royalty relates to the Duke of Connaught as Commander of the Forces in Ireland instead of Lord Roberts, and in residence, of course, at the Royal Hospital. But rumours regarding Royal visits to Ireland are in inverse ratio to the visits.—Yours ever,

CLARE.

To turn to things culinary. Banana cream with strawberries is an entirely new dish :—

Cut three or four ripe bananas into halves lengthways, then cut them across and lay them on a soup plate; dust them with pounded sugar, pour over them a liqueur glass of maraschino and the juice of half a lemon. Make a gill of milk and the yolks of two eggs into a custard, in which dissolve ½ oz. of soaked gelatine; flavour with vanilla, and when it is quite cold mix it with 1½ gill of whipped cream. Now place some of the bananas in a pipe mould, pour in a portion of the cream, and let it set; repeat the layers of banana and cream until the mould is full. Pick 1 lb. of ripe strawberries into a basin, sprinkle them with fine sugar, and pour over them a tablespoonful of maraschino. When they are required for table turn the cream out on a dish, fill the centre with the strawberries, which must be mixed with 1½ gill of whipped cream. Put the remainder of the strawberries and cream in little groups round the dish, with a fresh strawberry here and there for garnish.

FRANCES MOORE has now on view the latest Models from Paris in Hats, Bonnets, &c. Special and exclusive designs in Toques.—8, Maddox-street, Regent-street, W.

Beautiful Gowns, both Day and Evening; Tea Gowns, Mantles, Lingerie, and Millinery, are to be seen at Madame OLIVER HOLMES', Court Dressmaker, 61, New Bond-street, London, W.

Mayonnaise of sweetbread is a delightful dish. The principal point to be observed is, to have the sweetbreads properly braised:—

Soak a couple of calf's sweetbreads in cold water for two hours, put them on the stove in fresh cold water; when nearly boiling, strain them, and put them on again in fresh cold water. Then drain, wrap each sweetbread in a slice of fat bacon, put them into a stewpan with veal or chicken broth to cover them. Add 6 peppercorns, a blade of mace, a shalot and a bouquet of herbs, cover them with a buttered paper, replace the lid and simmer the sweetbreads in the oven for an hour and a half. Allow them to cool in the liquor; after which, drain them free from moisture, cut them into slices, dip each one in thick mayonnaise sauce, decorate the surface with leaves of tarragon and coralline pepper and arrange them in a pyramid on a bed of crisp lettuce, and garnish them with chopped aspic and sprigs of tarragon and chervil.

Loin of veal dressed in the following way makes an excellent cold dish for a lunch party:—

Take a nice square piece of the loin of veal without the chump end. Remove the bones and all the sinew. Lard through the lean part with strips of fat bacon. Lay the meat, back downwards, on the board, and cover the inner part with a thick layer of the forcemeat; garnish it with strips of truffle, chopped parsley, and the kidney of the loin sliced and slightly fried. Roll the veal tightly, keeping the fillet well to the centre, and bind it with tape. Put the meat into a buttered cloth, tie the ends, and sew up the length to keep it in a bolster shape. Now braise the meat with stock, herbs, vegetables, a blade of mace, and 6 or 8 peppercorns; if possible, add a pint of light wine. When the veal is done remove it to cool in the braise, then drain it, remove the cloth and string, wipe the meat free from moisture, and brush it over with good clear glaze. Place the veal on a dish and decorate tastefully with aspic jelly and sprigs of parsley.

Ever, dear, your loving cousin, MADGE.

DIAMONDS OR OLD SILVER
For PRESENTS.
SPINK & SON

SPOONS AND FORKS 2/11 oz. BELOW STORE PRICES.
17 & 18, Piccadilly, W.
AND AT
1 AND 2, GRACECHURCH STREET, CORNHILL, E.C. Est. 1772.

"SANITAS EMBROCATION."
For Aches, Pains, Sprains, Strains, Bruises, Stiffness, Neuralgia, Lumbago, Rheumatism, and for Veterinary purposes.

"I have little doubt that 'Sanitas Embrocation' will come into prominent favour as a table requisite and for various other purposes, human and veterinary." (Prof.) WOODROFFE HILL, F.R.C.V.S.

In Bottles, 8d., 1s., and 2s. 6d. Of all Chemists, Stores, and
THE SANITAS CO., LIMITED, BETHNAL GREEN, E.

THE
GOLDSMITHS & SILVERSMITHS COMPANY, LTD.
Show Rooms: 112 REGENT STREET, LONDON, W.,
invite inspection of their magnificent Stock of DIAMOND & GEM ORNAMENTS,
containing special and exclusive Designs which cannot be obtained elsewhere. Each Article is mounted by the Company from their carefully selected Stock of Loose Stones, and is guaranteed to be absolutely perfect. All Goods are marked in Plain Figures and sold DIRECT to the Public at MERCHANTS' NET CASH PRICES, thus saving Purchasers all intermediate profits.
DIAMONDS. DIAMONDS. DIAMONDS.
DIAMONDS. DIAMONDS. DIAMONDS.
ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE POST FREE.
SELECTIONS FORWARDED ON APPROVAL.
Goldsmiths & Silversmiths Company, Ltd., 112, Regent Street, W.

CHUBB'S LOCKS
WEST END BRANCH:
68, St. James's Street, S.W.
HEAD OFFICE:
128, Queen Victoria Street, E.C.
PRICE LISTS POST FREE.

A Feature of the Metropolis. SPIERS & POND's
CRITERION RESTAURANT, Piccadilly Circus, London, W.
EAST ROOM. Finest Cuisine, unsurpassed by the most renowned Parisian Restaurants. Luncheons, Dinners, and Suppers, a la carte and prix fixe. Viennese Band.
GRAND HALL. Musical Dinner 3/6 per head. Accompanied by the Imperial Austrian Band.
WEST ROOM. Academy Luncheon 2/6 Diner Parisien 5/-, during both of which the renowned Mandolin Quartette performs.
BUFFET & GRILL ROOM. Quick service à la carte and moderate prices. Joints in each room fresh from the Spit every half-hour.
AMERICAN BAR. Service of special American Dishes, Grills, &c.
Splendid Suites of Rooms for Military and other Dinners.

TRELOAR'S ORIENTAL CARPETS

TURKEY, PERSIAN, & INDIAN CARPETS, DAGHESTAN RUGS, &c., ANTIQUE CARPETS AND RUGS.

Illustrations of Turkey Carpets sent free on Application.

TURKEY CARPETS have lately been supplied by

TRELOAR & SONS

to the following Institutions, &c.:—

The CONSERVATIVE CLUB, St. James's Street.
The UNITED SERVICE CLUB, Pall Mall.
The ROYAL MARINES, Chatham.
The FRENCH HOSPITAL, Victoria Park.
The LAW SOCIETY CLUB, Chancery Lane.
The ROYAL MARINES, Devonport.
The 2nd ROYAL WILTS REGIMENT, Portsmouth.
The 4th BATTALION KING'S ROYAL RIFLES, Aldershot.
The ROYAL MARINE ARTILLERY, Eastney.
The ROYAL MARINES, Gosport.

If favoured with inquiries we will quote price and forward on approbation any Carpets or Rugs upon receipt of reference or remittance.

TRELOAR & SONS,
68, 69, & 70, LUDGATE HILL, LONDON, E.C.

"THE OLD FAVOURITE."

MAX GREGER'S CARLOWITZ.

SAFEST,
SOUNDEST,

DINNER WINE.

PURE
HUNGARIAN BURGUNDY.

"RICH IN PHOSPHATES."
Baron Liebig.

FROM 15s. PER DOZ.
OF ALL WINE MERCHANTS AND GROCERS.

See that every cork bears the brand
"MAX GREGER."
Without it the wine is not genuine.

RECOMMENDED BY THE MEDICAL PROFESSION FOR UPWARDS OF 35 YEARS.

DURING SUMMER

You should never be without a bottle of

ROWLAND'S KALYDOR,

Which cools and refreshes the face and hands, removes Freckles, Tan, Sunburn, Redness and Roughness; heals and cures Irritation, Eruptions: it imparts a radiant beauty to the Complexion, and arrays the face, neck, and arms in matchless whiteness, unobtainable by any other means. Bottles, 2s. 3d. and 4s. 6d.

ROWLAND'S ODONTO

is of inestimable value in preserving and beautifying the teeth, strengthening the gums, and giving a pleasant fragrance to the breath; it eradicates tartar from the teeth, prevents and arrests decay, and polishes and preserves the enamel, to which it imparts a pearl-like whiteness. 2/9.

Ask Stores and Chemists for ROWLAND'S Articles.

HAMPTON & SONS LD

Decorations. Furniture.

For the most satisfactory means of Furnishing throughout in best manner at any degree of cost, see Hampton & Sons' extensive and unrivalled Stocks of all the latest and most tasteful productions in Furniture, Carpets, Fabrics, &c.

SUGGESTIVE SCHEMES, ESTIMATES, AND ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUES SENT FREE.

Carpets. Fabrics.

Fine Arts.

PALL MALL EAST, TRAFALGAR SQUARE, S.W.
Works: Belvedere Road, Lambeth, S.E.

FOOT'S PATENT TRUNKS

THE TRAVELLERS' DELIGHT.

EVERYTHING AT HAND WHEN WANTED.

A perfected system of sliding drawers, which renders every part of Trunk equally accessible, and enables any article to be instantly removed without disturbing remainder of contents. Avoids confusion, saves time, prevents articles being crushed. Drawers divided and made any depth to suit requirements.

Made various sizes in Compressed Cane, Wood Fibre, &c.

Prices from 40s.

ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE POST FREE.

T. J. FOOT & SON, 171, New Bond St., London, W.

"COOPER" CYCLES.

From £5 10. Competition Defied.

Latest design Frame, large Weldless Steel Tubes, Ball Bearings, Tangent Wheels, Brake, and Mud-guards, Cushion Tyres, £5 10; Pneumatic, £7 10; Ladies' with Dress and Gear Guards, from £6. Twelve months' warranty. Lists free. AGENTS WANTED

Wm. Cooper, 753, Old Kent Rd., London, S.E.

CHATTO & WINDUS'S NEW BOOKS.

THE JACOBITE. By HARRY LINDSAY, Author of "Methodist Idylls." Crown 8vo, cloth, 6s.

SOME LATER VERSES. By BRET HARTE. Crown 8vo, cloth, 5s

"In this delightful volume the author shows no falling off from his first self. He is still master of the two moods of humour, the pure comedy and the bouffe, in which he first showed his extraordinary range."—Daily News.

MERIEL: A Love Story. By AMÉLIE RIVES, Author of "Barbara Dering." Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d.

"Rarely, indeed, in English fiction do we come across a novel in this genre marked by the tenderness, the delicacy, and the passion that distinguish Amélie Rives's new work. 'Meriel' has something of the glowing warmth and passionate abandon of Mrs. Browning's love-poems."—Echo.

THE HERITAGE OF EVE. By H. H. SPETTIGUE. Crown 8vo, cloth, 6s.

"Sometimes you are quite charmed at the author's cleverness, insight, and truthfulness. . . . The author compels your attention. If it is her first book, then it must be pronounced a success."—Pall Mall Gazette.

ON THE BRINK OF A CHASM.

By L. T. MEADE, Author of "Dr. Rumsey's Patient." Crown 8vo, cloth, 6s.

"The story is of unfailing interest."—Scotsman.

"Handled with all Mrs. Meade's well-known liveliness and skill."—Manchester Guardian.

London: CHATTO & WINDUS, 111, St. Martin's-lane, W.C.

DADDY TREGELLAS, a New Story by BARING-GOULD, and THREE LONG STORIES by RICHARD MARSH, Author of "The Beetle." Also New Stories by ERNEST G. HENHAM and FERGUS HUME in UNDER ONE COVER. Price 3s. 6d.

Fourth Thousand. Crown 8vo, cloth, price 3s. 6d.

FERGUS HUME'S NEW NOVEL.

HAGAR OF THE PAWNSHOP.

Country Life says: "Full of incident and interest, and a marvellous study. . . . The beauty of the story lies in the consummate skill with which the author works out the character of Hagar. . . . The wealth of imagination is prodigious, and the whole book is exceedingly clever and entertaining."

The most weird story published for many a day.

By RICHARD MARSH.

Just Out. Price 6s. With Illustrations. FIFTH EDITION.

THE BEETLE: A Mystery.

The Daily Graphic says:—"'The Beetle' revels in the weird. It is the kind of book which you put down only for the purpose of turning up the gas and making sure that no person or thing is standing behind your chair—and it is a book which no one will put down until finished except for this reason."

The Speaker says:—"A story of the most terrific kind is duly recorded in this extremely powerful book. The skill with which its fantastic horrors are presented to us is undeniable."

LONDON: SKEFFINGTON & SON, 163, Piccadilly, W.

Publishers to H. M. the Queen and to H.R.H. the Prince of Wales.

ON THE STŒCHIOLOGICAL CURE OF

CONSUMPTION,

ASTHMA, BRONCHITIS, INFLUENZA, AND ALL THROAT AND LUNG COMPLAINTS.

By JOHN FRANCIS CHURCHILL, M.D.

One Shilling, Post Free.

T. BURLEIGH, LATE DAVID STOTT, 370, OXFORD STREET.

SMITH, ELDER, & CO.'S NEW BOOKS.

MRS. HUMPHRY WARD'S NEW NOVEL.

At all Booksellers' and Libraries, crown 8vo, 6s.

HELBECK OF BANNISDALE.

By Mrs. HUMPHRY WARD,

Author of "Robert Elsmere," "Marcella," "Sir George Tressady," &c.

From the Times:—"A book which will take rank with Mrs. Humphry Ward's best work. . . . The story is a story of a great passion worthily told. Fine luminous passages, fraught with delicate significances, permit us to understand the atmosphere in which the two chief actors move."

From the Daily News:—"Mrs. Ward's touch has gained in lightness, in swiftness, and spontaneity of effect, and there is charm and grace, as well as force, in the impression the story leaves upon the mind. The descriptive passages abound in beauty."

"This delightful volume."—DAILY NEWS.

Just issued, with frontispiece. Demy 8vo, 16s.

COLLECTIONS AND RECOLLECTIONS.

By "ONE WHO HAS KEPT A DIARY."

From the Spectator: "One of the most entertaining books that we have ever looked through. Mr. Russell not only tells us who is who, but he tells us who was who. We lay down the book with a proud feeling that we have enjoyed a short intimacy with every one from Sydney Smith to Augustine Birrell and from the First Gentleman in Europe to Mr. Labouchere. All the people who flit before us live, and some of them live in quite a new light."

Just published. Small crown 8vo, 5s.

SONGS OF ACTION.

By CONAN DOYLE.

"Dr. Conan Doyle writes a good song and a good ballad. He has the requisite amount of pathos, and his humour is spontaneous."—Yorkshire Post.

NEW VOLUME OF

THE BIOGRAPHICAL EDITION OF

W. M. THACKERAY'S COMPLETE WORKS.

Published to-day. Large crown 8vo, cloth, gilt top, 6s.

YELLOWPLUSH PAPERS, &c. With 24 Full-page Reproductions of Steel Plates by George Cruikshank, 11 Woodcuts, and a Portrait of the Author by Maclise.

 A volume will be issued each subsequent month, until the entire Edition is completed on April 15th, 1899.

 A Prospectus of the Edition, with Specimen Pages, will be sent post-free on application.

COMPLETION OF THE NEW EDITION OF SYMONDS' "RENAISSANCE IN ITALY."

Now Ready. In 2 vols., with Portrait and Index to the 7 vols., large crown 8vo, 15s.

THE CATHOLIC REACTION. By the late JOHN ADDINGTON SYMONDS.

New Novel.

At all Booksellers' and Libraries. Crown 8vo, 6s.

THE AMBITION OF JUDITH. By OLIVE BIRRELL, Author of "Anthony Langsyde," "Behind the Magic Mirror," &c.

London: SMITH, ELDER, & CO., 15, Waterloo-place.

MUDIE'S SELECT LIBRARY.

For the CIRCULATION and SALE of all the BEST

ENGLISH, FRENCH, GERMAN, ITALIAN, RUSSIAN, & SPANISH BOOKS.

TOWN SUBSCRIPTIONS from ONE GUINEA per annum.

LONDON BOOK SOCIETY (for weekly exchange of Books at the Houses of Subscribers) from TWO GUINEAS per annum.

COUNTRY SUBSCRIPTIONS from TWO GUINEAS per annum.

N.B.—Two or Three Friends may UNITE IN ONE SUBSCRIPTION, and thus lessen the Cost of Carriage.

SURPLUS LIBRARY BOOKS NOW OFFERED AT GREATLY REDUCED PRICES.

A NEW CLEARANCE LIST (100 PAGES) SENT GRATIS AND POST FREE TO ANY ADDRESS.

The List contains Popular Works in Travel, Sport, History, Biography, Science, and Fiction. Also New and Surplus Copies of French, German, Italian, and Spanish Books.

MUDIE'S SELECT LIBRARY, LIMITED,

30—34, NEW OXFORD ST.; 241, BROMPTON ROAD, S.W.; 48, QUEEN VICTORIA ST., E.C., LONDON; AND AT BARTON ARCADE, MANCHESTER.

NINE NEW SIX-SHILLING NOVELS.

THE LAKE OF WINE.
By BERNARD CAPES.

THE DULL MISS ARCHINARD.
By ANNE DOUGLAS SEDGWICK.

EZEKIEL'S SIN.
By J. H. PEARCE.

THE LONDONERS.
By ROBERT HICHENS.

DREAMERS OF THE GHETTO.
By I. ZANGWILL.

A CHAMPION IN THE SEVENTIES.
By EDITH BARNETT.

THE MINISTER OF STATE.
By J. A. STEUART.

THE OPEN BOAT.
By STEPHEN CRANE.

THE SCOURGE-STICK.
By Mrs. CAMPBELL PRAED.

TWO NEW THREE-AND-SIXPENNY NOVELS.

HER LADYSHIP'S ELEPHANT.
By D. D. WELLS.

THE OLD ADAM AND THE NEW EVE.
By RUDOLF GOLM.

London: WM. HEINEMANN, 21, Bedford-street, W.C.

TEN POPULAR NOVELS.
SIX SHILLINGS EACH.

THE STANDARD BEARER. S. R. CROCKETT.
THE CROOK OF THE BOUGH. MENIE MURIEL DOWIE.
ACROSS THE SALT SEAS. J. BLOUNDELLE-BURTON.
BETWEEN SUN AND SAND. W. C. SCULLY.
SONS OF ADVERSITY. L. COPE CORNFORD.
MISS ERIN. M. E. FRANCIS.
VAUSSORE. FRANCIS BRUNE.
THE PHILANTHROPIST. LUCY MAYNARD.
CROSS TRAILS. VICTOR WAITE.
BIJLI THE DANCER. JAMES BLYTHE PATTON.

METHUEN & CO., 36, Essex-street, W.C.

JUST ISSUED.

THE TEMPLE (London), containing Twelve Artist's Proof Etchings by PERCY THOMAS, R.P.E., and Introductory Notes, &c., by the Master of the Temple (Rev. CANON AINGER).—FROST & REED, 47, Queen's-road, and 8, Clare-street, Bristol; or all Booksellers and Fine Art Dealers.

Fourth Edition (Sixth Thousand), crown 8vo, 3s. 6d.

HEALTH and CONDITION in the ACTIVE and the SEDENTARY, by N. E. YORKE-DAVIES, Royal Coll. Phys. Lond., Author of "Foods for the Fat."—Contents:—Perfect health, how to attain. Deviations from health. Insidious causes of disease. Causes of premature decay. Diseases due to diet only curable by diet. Epochs in life. Exigencies of modern society. Idiosyncrasies. The foundation of health. Tight lacing, diseases from. Preservation of female beauty. A short life and a merry one. Constitutional flaws. Aristocratic ailments. The London season. The débutante. The diet of grief. Vegetarianism injurious. Ailments of mal-nutrition and of excess. Obesity, gout, acidity, leanness, indigestion, &c., &c.

Opinions of the Press.

"Those who desire a long and healthy life will perhaps find their best means of obtaining it in the study and observance of such rules as are laid down here. The book is a rational and practical guide to 'Health and Condition.'"—Morning Post.

"Full of valuable hints and suggestive warnings as to the results of improper food and insufficient exercise."—Daily Telegraph.

London: SAMPSON LOW, MARSTON, & CO., St. Dunstan's House, Fetter-lane, Fleet-street, E.C.

STERILITY IN WOMEN: Its Causes and Curative Treatment. An Illustrated Treatise based on the special practice and observation of the last 15 years. Price 3s. 6d.; post free, 3s. 8d.
London: HENRY RENSHAW, 356, Strand.

NEW BOOKS.

NEW EDITION NOW READY.

In 1 vol., extra crown 8vo, cloth, gilt top, price 7s. 6d.

THE STORY OF GLADSTONE'S LIFE. By JUSTIN MCCARTHY, M.P. Containing 45 Illustrations, representing Mr. Gladstone at different periods.

"This is a charmingly-written sketch of Mr. Gladstone's public career, with some interesting glimpses at the same time into his private life."—The Observer.

Square crown 8vo, cloth, Illustrated, price 6s.

A MIDDY'S RECOLLECTIONS, 1853 to 1860. By Rear-Admiral the Hon. VICTOR A. MONTAGU.

"The life on board ship, the boisterous humour of the gunroom, and the stern discipline of those rough-and-tumble days are described with a sailor's breezy frankness. . . . He has written a fine, inspiriting narrative of as eventful a career as ever fell to the lot of a British midshipman. To fight through three wars before attaining the mature age of nineteen is surely a record to be proud of. . . . Every British boy, and especially every British boy whose eyes are turned towards the navy, should read this book, and he will do so with profit and delight."—Pall Mall Gazette.

"You will be more than pleased by Admiral Montagu's 'A Middy's Recollections,' written in an ideally sailor-like style and spirit—modest, breezy, frank, and free."—Truth.

"Breezy, full of cheerfulness, Admiral Montagu lived his boyhood in stirring times and was a part of them. His record is a piece of pleasant and straightforward work."—Country Life.

Demy 8vo, cloth, price 12s. 6d.

ARISTOCRACY AND EVOLUTION, By W. H. MALLOCK.

"With the main idea of this work, which is quite the most important that Mr. Mallock has yet produced, we do not think there can be any dispute, though most of the active sociologists in England either ignore that idea or are openly hostile to it."—Spectator.

Crown 8vo, cloth, price 5s.

HIS GRACE O' THE GUNNE, By I. HOOPER.

"It is a very good story, with some striking episodes admirably presented."—The Chronicle.

In crown 8vo, 864 pages, cloth, price 3s. 6d. net.

WHO'S WHO, 1898.

"This is undoubtedly the handiest biographical dictionary and compendium of information, referring to prominent persons and their doings, in existence."—Nature.

A. & C. BLACK, Soho-square, London.

Just Published. Price 2s. 6d., post free.

GOUT AND ITS CURE. By J. COMPTON BURNETT, M.D. "The Author has had a wide experience in Gout, and presents us with a very readable little book."—County Gentleman.—London: James Epps & Co., Ltd., 170, Piccadilly, and 48, Threadneedle-street.

New Edition. Now ready. Price, Cloth, 2s. 6d., by Post 2s. 10d.

SEASIDE WATERING PLACES, describing 258 Holiday Resorts on our Coasts, the Channel Islands, and the Isle of Man, enabling anyone to decide where to go for the Holidays. Illustrated and with Map.
London: L. UPCOTT GILL, 170, Strand, W.C.

THE ESMOND SADDLE (moveable).

15/- 17/6

For Ladies and Gentlemen.
Absolute freedom from all Saddle Discomforts and Increased Power Guaranteed.
TRY ONE FOR A WEEK.
Botolph House, Eastcheap, London.

A REMARKABLE PIPE! Why? Because

The "MASTA" Pipe

Absolutely carries out what is claimed for it—viz., Simplicity of Construction, Perfect Freedom from Nicotine, No Choking, Cool, Dry, Sweet, Clean, & Healthful Smoking.

Prices from 1/6, 2/6, 3/6. Your Tobacconist will supply it. If any delay, write The "Masta" Patent Pipe Co. (Dept. 18), 153, Fleet-street, London, E.C.

Mr. RICHARD PICKERING, Grapes Hotel, King-street, Workington, April 1st, 1898:—"I am very pleased with my pipe; it is a nice cool and dry smoker, and wastes no tobacco in the bowl."

"A Clean and Easy Shave once a day makes all men, and a few women also, quite happy."—GORDON STABLES, M.D., R.N.

The delightful sensation of shaving at home with a really sharp razor cannot easily be described, there should be no cutting of the skin, no dragging of the beard, simply an indescribable sense of freshness, nothing else.

The Proprietor of the "RIGID-CURVE" STROP warrants his Invention to produce an edge upon a razor so sharp as to readily sever a hair held loosely between finger and thumb.

Price, with full instructions, 3s. 6d., carriage paid. Money returned any time within a month if not approved.

A. HOWARTH, 53, Penn-road, Wolverhampton

£20 TOBACCONISTS COMMENCING. Illd. guide (259 pgs.), 3d., "How to open respectably £20 to £2,000." Tobacconists' Outfitting Co., Euston-rd., Ldn. Hairdressers fitted.—H. MYERS.

Post free, 1s. 1d.

EXHAUSTION AND PREMATURE DECLINE IN MAN. A treatise on the restorative effects of Electrolysis.
HENRY RENSHAW, 356, Strand, London.

ESTATES, AUCTIONS, &c.

HAMPSTEAD-HEATH.
The well-known Freehold Estate of the late Sir Spencer Wells, Bart.

One of the finest of the historical residential properties on the northern heights of London, occupying a truly grand position on the western side of the glorious heath of Hampstead, to which it has an absolutely unparalleled frontage.

A residence for a family of distinction, surrounded by gardens and grounds of remarkable beauty, famous for their luxuriant timber, having an area of 15a. 3r. 8p. or 36a. 0r. 21p., embracing most extensive picturesque views, including Harrow and Windsor in the distance.

A perfect and almost matchless country seat, within five miles of Charing-cross; a portion of the estate affording charming sites for the erection of other high-class residences.

Messrs.
DEBENHAM, TEWSON, FARMER, & BRIDGEWATER are instructed by the Trustees under the will of the late Sir Spencer Wells, Bart., to SELL, at the MART, on TUESDAY, JUNE 28th, at TWO, in Two Lots, with possession, the very beautiful FREEHOLD RESIDENTIAL PROPERTY, known as Golders-hill, Hampstead Heath, for many years the favourite abode of the late owner.

Lot 1, will comprise the mansion, a picturesque structure with high gables, deep bays, and large outer porch, approached from the road by a carriage drive with entrance lodge, and enjoying most delightful landscape views. It contains fourteen principal and secondary bed and dressing rooms, two servants' bedrooms, and dormitories for eight female servants, two bathrooms, with hot and cold supplies, a fine suite of reception rooms, communicating by folding doors, comprising morning room, about 26 ft. 9 in. by 16 ft. 9 in., drawing room, 34 ft. by 23 ft. (including the large bays), dining room, 30 ft. by 20 ft. and 13 ft. high, handsome billiard room, 32 ft. by 19 ft. 10 in. and about 13 ft. 6 in. high; also on a slightly lower level an ornamental conservatory (leading to a studio, with sky and north lights), and a large smoking room. The domestic offices include butler's pantry, lofty modern kitchen, servants' hall, and other conveniences; capital cellerage. The halls and corridors and some of the principal rooms are warmed by hot-water pipes, the house is fitted with electric bells, fire hydrants, &c., and gas is laid on throughout. Excellent modern stabling for nine horses, carriage-houses, covered washing-shed, harness room, groom's room, and loft: capital well-fitted laundry with bedroom, &c., over; dairy and bakehouse. There are lovely pleasure grounds with groups of fine old forest trees, choice shrubs and conifers, splendid lawns, ornamental sheets of water, summer houses, extensive shady walks, and beautifully undulating park-like meadow land; a large productive kitchen garden walled on three sides, a thriving orchard, ample glasshouses, gardener's cottage, model farmery, and other premises, in all about 15a. 3r. 8p.

Lot 2, about 20a. 1r. 13p. of beautifully timbered, undulating park-like land adjoining Lot 1, and having long frontages to the Heath as well as to West Heath-road, presenting unique sites for the erection of first-class houses. On this lot there is an ornamental entrance lodge next the Heath.

Illustrated particulars, with plans and conditions of sale, may be had of Messrs. Francis & Johnson, Solicitors, 26, Austin Friars, E.C.; and (with orders to view) of the Auctioneers, 80, Cheapside.

OLD SWAN HOUSE, CHELSEA EMBANKMENT, S.W.
Commanding beautiful Views over the River and Battersea Park.

An exceptionally choice
FREEHOLD TOWN RESIDENCE.
Designed by R. Norman Shaw, Esq., R.A.,

and constituting a unique specimen of the Early English style of Architecture.

The premises, which possess the unusual frontage of nearly 50 ft., are decorated and fitted in a most artistic and complete manner, including electric light. The accommodation comprises entrance hall (32 ft. by 28 ft.), paved with mosaic, cloak-room, lavatory, butler's pantry, and footman's-room; noble dining-room (28 ft. by 18 ft.), with serving-room and lift from basement, cheerful morning-room (26 ft. by 18 ft.), ante-room, elegant drawing-room (47 ft. by 17 ft.), lighted by seven recessed alcove windows, library (20 ft. by 20 ft.), 10 capital bed-rooms, bath-room, &c., ample and well-lighted domestic offices, including servants hall, housekeeper's-room, large kitchen, scullery, &c., with spacious wine, coal, and other cellarage. There is a beautifully-proportioned and admirably lighted principal staircase of easy ascent, likewise a secondary staircase. In the rear is the excellent freehold stabling and coachhouse, which is entirely detached from the mansion, although having access thereto. It consists of two stalls, loose box, double coachhouse, with dwelling-house adjoining, containing men's living-rooms, harness-room, and three bed-rooms. Possession on completion of the purchase. TO BE SOLD by AUCTION, at the MART, Tokenhouse-yard, near the Bank of England, E.C., on THURSDAY, JULY 7th, 1898, at TWO o'clock punctually (unless an acceptable offer be previously made privately).

Particulars and conditions of Sale of Messrs. FLOWER, NUSSEY, & FELLOWES, Solicitors, 1, Great Winchester-street, E.C., and with orders to view, of Messrs. LOFTS & WARNER, Estate Agents and Surveyors, 130, Mount-street, W.; and of Messrs. TROLLOPE, Estate Agents, Surveyors, and Auctioneers, 7, Hobart-place, Eaton-square; West Halkin-street, Belgrave-square; 14, Mount-street, Grosvenor-square; and 5, Victoria-street, Westminster, London.

By direction of the Executors.
NO. 44, LENNOX-GARDENS, S.W., and STABLES. The handsome double-fronted TOWN MANSION of the late Marquis of Northampton, K.G., for whom it was specially arranged and fitted.

The Residence, which is admirably planned and of modern construction, overlooks ornamental gardens, and contains unusually good hall, three reception-rooms and serving-room on ground floor, three handsome and well-proportioned drawing-rooms (all communicating) on first floor, 13 bed and dressing rooms and bath-room on the upper floors, and very complete domestic offices in the basement; principal and secondary staircases, service and luggage lift, &c.; the excellent stabling, situate at the rear and known as No. 13, Lennox-mews, comprises five stalls and loose box, coach-house, harness, and good men's rooms, &c. The whole held for an unexpired term of over 75 years at the very moderate ground rent of £80 per annum. Possession on completion. TO BE SOLD by AUCTION, at the MART, Tokenhouse-yard, near the Bank of England, E.C., on THURSDAY, JUNE 23rd, 1898, at TWO o'clock punctually (unless an acceptable offer be previously made privately).—Particulars, plans, and conditions of sale of Messrs. FEW & CO., Solicitors, 19, Surrey-street, Strand, W.C.; and, with orders to view, of Messrs. LOFTS & WARNER, Estate Agents and Surveyors, 130, Mount-street, W.; and of Messrs. TROLLOPE, Estate Agents, Surveyors, and Auctioneers, West Halkin-street, Belgrave-square; 7, Hobart-place, Eaton-square; 14, Mount-street, Grosvenor-square; and 5, Victoria-street, Westminster, London.

TO INVALIDS.—A LIST of MEDICAL MEN, in all parts, receiving RESIDENT PATIENTS sent gratis, with full particulars, Schools also recommended.—Medical, &c., Association, Ltd., 8, Lancaster-place, Strand, W.C. Tel. Add., "Triform, London." Telephone No. 1,854 (Gerrard).

TATTERSALL'S THURSDAYS' SALES at ALBERT GATE.
Messrs. TATTERSALL beg to give notice that their THURSDAYS' SALES have commenced, and will be continued during the season.
SALES ON MONDAYS AND THURSDAYS.

A COMMANDING BUILDING, suitable for Club, Hotel, Restaurant, Theatre, Music Hall, Stores, Flats, Religious or Philanthropic Institution, or for Commercial Firms requiring large space. — OXFORD MANSION, Oxford Circus, London, W.—To be SOLD by TENDER, on 30th JUNE next, this well-known BUILDING, of striking elevation and fireproof construction, standing on nearly ¼ acre, with four frontages of 100 feet, each within a few yards of the new Oxford Circus Station of the Central London Railway. Six stories; floor space about 54,700 sup. feet; 153 rooms and large central hall and basement; artesian well. Portland lease 58 years.—For particulars and forms of Tender, apply to LEGGATT, RUBINSTEIN, & CO., Solicitors, 5, Raymond-buildings, Gray's Inn, London, W.C.

AMUSEMENTS.

MADAME TUSSAUD'S EXHIBITION, Baker-street Station.—Gordon's Last Stand at Khartoum. New Portrait Models of the late Mr. W. E. Gladstone, Emile Zola, &c.

OPERA and THEATRE TICKETS.—Boxes, Stalls, Dress Circle, and Upper Circle in good positions for "The Opera," and every Theatre in London, can be had at any office of the DISTRICT MESSENGER AND THEATRE TICKET COMPANY. Branches City and West-end. Letters and telegrams to 193, Piccadilly, next to Prince's Hall.

MAPLE & CO

LONDON and PARIS

GARDEN AND LAWN

FURNITURE

TENTS UMBRELLAS
CANOPIED SEATS
"UMBRA" CHAIRS 6s 10d
LAWN CHAIRS 3s 6d
MADEIRA CHAIRS 6s 9d
HAMMOCK CHAIRS 3s 3d
DUNSTER TABLES 7s 6d
UMBRELLA TENTS with Iron Tables 34s 6d
PLAIN and FANCY HAMMOCKS 2s 6d to 50s

LAWN MOWERS ROLLERS
ENGINES HOSE AND REELS
CYCLES BABY CARRIAGES

CUSHIONS for LAWN or RIVER 2s 6d each
"GF" Illustrations of Useful Articles for Outdoor Use Post free "GF"

LONDON and PARIS
MAPLE & CO

AMUSEMENTS.

HAYMARKET THEATRE.
Sole Lessee, Mr. Frederick Harrison.
Managers, Mr. Frederick Harrison and Mr. Cyril Maude.
EVERY EVENING (except on Saturdays), at 8.30,
THE LITTLE MINISTER, by J. M. Barrie.
Miss WINIFRED EMERY and Mr. CYRIL MAUDE.
MATINEES EVERY WEDNESDAY and SATURDAY, at 2.30.

RICHTER. ST. JAMES'S HALL, at 8. LAST CONCERT.
MONDAY EVENING NEXT, at 8.
(Under the Direction of Mr. N. Vert).
Conductor—Dr. HANS RICHTER.
Orchestra of over 100 performers. Leader, Mr. Ernst Schiever.
Overture, "La Carnaval Romain..... Berlioz.
"Song of Destiny" (for Chorus and Orchestra)..... Brahms.
Vorspiel and Liebestod, "Tristan und Isolde"..... Wagner.
Choral Symphony in D minor (No. 9)..... Beethoven.
Miss Fillunger. | Mr. Edward Lloyd.
Miss Ada Crossley. | Mr. Andrew Black.
The Richter Choir.
Tickets, 15s., 10s. 6d., 5s., and 2s. 6d.; of usual Agents; Newman, Queen's Hall; Tree, St. James's Hall, and 304, Regent-street.—N. Vert, 6, Cork-street, W.

QUEEN'S HALL.
SUNDAY AFTERNOON CONCERTS.
EVERY SUNDAY, at 3 30.
Conductor, Mr. Henry J. Wood.
The Queen's Hall Grand Orchestra.
Admission free. Reserved seats, 2s., 3s., 1s., and 6d.

CRYSTAL PALACE.
GRAND FESTIVAL CONCERT,
SATURDAY, June 25th, at 3.
Solo-Vocalists:—
MADAME ADELINA PATTI
Her first appearance at the Crystal Palace since the Handel Festival of 1880).
Miss CLARA BUTT.
Mr. EDWARD LLOYD.
Mr. SANTLEY.
The London Contingent of the Handel Festival Choir.
Three Thousand Voices.
Grand Orchestra. Five Hundred Performers.
Organist, Mr. WALTER W. HEDGCOCK.
Accompanist, Mr. WILHELM GANZ.
Conductor, Mr. AUGUST MANNS.

Stalls numbered and reserved, £1 1s. and 10s. 6d.; unnumbered seats, 7s. 6d., all admitting to the Crystal Palace. Family ticket, to admit four persons to guinea seats, three guineas.
Tickets and full particulars may be obtained at the Crystal Palace, or from Novello, Ewer & Co., Berners-street, W., and 80 and 81, Queen-street, Cheapside, E.C.; and at all the usual libraries.

INTERNATIONAL UNIVERSAL EXHIBITION,
EARL'S COURT, S.W., 1898.
IMRE KIRALFY, Director-General.
Season Tickets, 10s. 6d., can be obtained at the Exhibition and Libraries.
Admission Daily, 1s. Open 11 a m. to 11 p.m.
BAND of the 1st GRENADIER GUARDS.
BAND of the HONOURABLE ARTILLERY COMPANY.
The LONDON EXHIBITIONS ORCHESTRAL BAND.
THE EMPRESS THEATRE.
GRAND PATRIOTIC NAVAL SPECTACLE.
Peace and War. Naval Manœuvres. The Fleet at Night.
Attack on the Enemy's Forts.
TWICE DAILY, at 3.30 and 9 p.m.
Thousands of Reserved Seats at 6d., 1s., 2s., and 3s.
THE FLORAL LOUNGE.
The Most Delightful Entertainment Hall in the World.
The Chamounix Minstrels and other Novel Attractions Daily, Free.
The Hungarian Minstrels. American Liliputian Troupe. Grand Hungarian Feszty Panorama. Royal Javanese Troupe. Hagenbeck's Zoological Kindergarten. Moorish Camp. Bella Napoli Troupe. Electric Theatre. Captive Balloon.
THE GREAT WHEEL, 300 ft. HIGH.
South Sea Islanders, "Astarte." Belvedere Tower. Electrophone. Switchback.

IMPERIAL INSTITUTE.
THE QUEEN'S DIAMOND JUBILEE PRESENTS,
On VIEW from 1 p.m. to 11 p.m.
CONCERTS DAILY, at 4 p.m. and 8.45 p.m.

IMPERIAL INSTITUTE.
EXHIBITION of ACETYLENE GAS, APPARATUS and PRODUCTION.
ILLUMINATION of GALLERY by ACETYLENE.

IMPERIAL INSTITUTE.
THE CONCERT ORCHESTRA,
FROM THE THEATRE LA SCALA, MILAN,
Director, LEANDRO CAMPANARI.
COVERED WAY COMMUNICATION with the SOUTH KENSINGTON SUBWAY.
Admission 1s., from 1 p.m. to 11 p.m., except Wednesdays (Fellows' Day), when admission is by ticket only, to be obtained from Fellows.

IMPERIAL INSTITUTE.
COLLECTIONS of PRODUCTS
FROM ALL PARTS of the EMPIRE.
OPEN FREE to the PUBLIC from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m.

IMPERIAL INSTITUTE.
DINNERS from 6.30 p.m. Luncheons, &c. Orders addressed to Superintendent, Catering Syndicate. Telephone No. 623 Kensington.

LONDON PAVILION.—Dan Leno, Vesta Tilley, Eugene Stratton, Bertoldi, Chirgwin, Brothers Griffiths, Geo. Robey, Rachael Walker, T.E. Dunville, Pat Rafferty, and many others, including a mile Bicycle Race for Ladies. Prices from 1s. to £3 3s. Manager, Mr. FRANK GLENISTER.

PALACE, Shaftesbury-avenue. — The HANDSOMEST THEATRE in EUROPE. The finest Variety Entertainment in London. Full Licence. Prices from 6d. Doors open 8.—Manager, Mr. CHARLES MORTON.

TIVOLI, Strand, London.—The Greatest Combination of Talent in London.—Open EVERY EVENING, at 7.30, and SATURDAY MATINEE, at 2.30, with a STAR PROGRAMME, embracing every Artiste of note.—Manager, Mr. VERNON DOWSETT.

AMUSEMENTS.

DRURY LANE THEATRE ROYAL.—Managing Director, ARTHUR COLLINS.
THE WHITE HEATHER.
Mrs. JOHN WOOD, Miss KATE RORKE, and powerful Company.
MATINEE of THE WHITE HEATHER, WEDNESDAY June 22, at 1.30.

ROYAL OPERA, COVENT GARDEN.
Lessees, THE GRAND OPERA SYNDICATE, LTD.
GRAND OPERA EVERY EVENING.
For full particulars see daily papers. Box-office now open.

LYCEUM.—THE MEDICINE MAN. Thursday Night, June 16, and Monday Night, June 20, at 8. MATINEE June 25, at 2.
HENRY IRVING. | Miss ELLEN TERRY.
LOUIS XI. Friday Night, June 17, and June 25, at 8. Matinée Next Saturday, June 18, at 2.—HENRY IRVING.
WATERLOO and THE BELLS. Next Saturday Night, June 18.
THE MERCHANT of VENICE. Tuesday, June 21.
MADAME SANS GENE. Wednesday, June 22.
NANCE OLDFIELD and THE LYONS MAIL. Thursday, June 23.
NANCE OLDFIELD and THE BELLS. Friday, June 24.
Box-office (Mr. J. Hurst) open 10 to 5, and 7.30 to 10. Seats also booked by letter or telegram.

HER MAJESTY'S THEATRE.
Proprietor and Manager, Mr. HERBERT BEERBOHM TREE.
TO-NIGHT and EVERY EVENING, at 8 (doors open 7.30), LAST NIGHTS,
JULIUS CÆSAR.
LAST MATINEE SATURDAY NEXT, at 2.
Box-office open 10 to 10. Seats booked from 2s. HER MAJESTY'S.

ADELPHI. A. & S. GATTI,
Sole Proprietors and Managers.
Business Manager, Mr. FRED. G. LATHAM.
EVERY EVENING at 8 o'clock.
A Drama in Four Acts, by David Belasco, entitled:
THE HEART OF MARYLAND,
Interpreted by Mr. Charles Frohman's entire New York Company.
Box Office open from 10 till 10.

SAVOY THEATRE.—Every Evening at 8, and Every Saturday Afternoon at 2.0, will be produced the New Romantic Musical Drama, THE BEAUTY STONE, by A. W. Pinero, J. Comyns Carr, and Arthur Sullivan. Box-office 9 a.m. to 11 p.m.—R. D'OYLY CARTE, Manager.

DALY'S THEATRE.—EVERY EVENING, at 8.15, Matinée June 18, and EVERY SATURDAY, at 2.30, Mr. George Edwardes' Company in a New Musical Play, A GREEK SLAVE. The Book by Owen Hall, with Lyrics by Harry Greenbank and Adrian Ross, the Music by Sidney Jones.

GARRICK.—Lessee and Manager, H. T. BRICKWELL. Every EVENING, at 9, WILLIAM GILLETTE—TOO MUCH JOHNSON.
At 8.15, DANGERFIELD 95.
MATINEE, WEDNESDAY NEXT, at 2.15.

LYRIC THEATRE.—SARAH BERNHARDT.
SHORT SEASON of positively TWO WEEKS ONLY (Twelve Nights and Four Matinées). FIRST PERFORMANCE of Madame SARAH BERNHARDT, MONDAY EVENING NEXT, June 20, supported by her entire Company, from the Théâtre de la Renaissance, Paris (under the direction of Mr. MAURICE GRAU). Box-office open 10 till 10, and of all the principal Librarians.

COURT THEATRE, Sloane Square.—Sole Lessee and Manager, Mr. ARTHUR CHUDLEIGH.—EVERY EVENING, at 9 p.m., a New and Original Farcical Romance, by R. Marshall, entitled HIS EXCELLENCY THE GOVERNOR, in which will appear Messrs. Paul Arthur, Allan Aynesworth, Bromley-Davenport, Dion Boucicault, James Erskine, R. Purdon, A. Fitzgerald; Misses Fanny Coleman, Nellie Thorne, Irene Vanbrugh. Preceded, at 8.30 by MRS. RAWDON'S REHEARSAL, a Monologue, by Cotsford Dick, in which Miss Lottie Venne will appear. Doors open 8. Box-office now open, 10 to 10. Telephone No. 3,031.

ST. JAMES'S.—Mr. GEORGE ALEXANDER,
Sole Lessee and Manager.
TO-NIGHT, and EVERY EVENING, at 8.30,
THE AMBASSADOR,
A Comedy, in Four Acts, by John Oliver Hobbes.
MATINEE EVERY WEDNESDAY and SATURDAY, at 2.
Box-office open 10 to 10. ST. JAMES'S THEATRE.

COMEDY THEATRE, Panton-street, Haymarket.
Sole Manager, Mr. CHARLES HAWTREY.
TO-NIGHT, and EVERY EVENING, at 8.30,
LORD AND LADY ALGY,
an Original Light Comedy, in Three Acts, by R. C. Carton.
Mr. CHARLES HAWTREY and Company.
At 8, a Duologue, entitled CONSTANCY, by Cyril Hallward.
MATINEES, SATURDAY NEXT, June 18, WEDNESDAYS, June 22 and 29, at 3:
Box-office open 10 to 10. COMEDY.

VAUDEVILLE.
Sole Lessees and Managers, A. & S. GATTI.
EVERY EVENING, at 8.20.
MATINEE EVERY WEDNESDAY, at 2.30,
THE FRENCH MAID,
With New Songs, Dances, and Dresses.
The very successful Musical Comedy by Basil Hood and Walter Slaughter.
Box-office open 10 to 10.

SHAFTESBURY THEATRE.
Directors, WILLIAMSON and MUSGROVE, Limited.
EVERY EVENING, at 8, Casino Theatre Company, of New York, in
THE BELLE OF NEW YORK.
"The subject of all the town talk."
Box-office now open at the Theatre from 10 till 10.
MATINEE WEDNESDAY and SATURDAY at 2.

CRITERION THEATRE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. CHARLES WYNDHAM.—EVERY EVENING at 8.15, THE LIARS, by Henry Arthur Jones. Mr. CHARLES WYNDHAM, Miss MARY MOORE, and Company. MATINEE EVERY SATURDAY, at 2.30.

EMPIRE THEATRE. — EVERY EVENING, New Ballet, THE PRESS, and Sporting Sketch, THE RACE. Grand VARIETIES. Doors open at 7.45.

"TRUTH" HOTEL LIST.

ABERYSTWITH.—The QUEEN'S HOTEL faces the sea, and is lighted by electricity. The late Sir Jas. Clarke, M.D., says: "A fortnight at Aberystwith is equal to a month at most watering-places." For tariffs, &c., apply to W. H. PALMER, Proprietor. Soft Atlantic breezes. Pure water from Plinlimmon, and excellent drainage.

BATH.—LANSDOWN GROVE HOTEL.—Desirable residence, in beautifully wooded grounds, 400 feet above sea level, facing south, and protected from north and east. Air dry and bracing. Assembly and Pump Rooms within easy distance. Omnibus free to and from Hot Mineral Baths. Billiards, Tennis Lawn

BONCHURCH HOTEL, Bonchurch, Isle of Wight, one mile from Ventnor Station.
A comfortable, quiet, and most beautifully-situated Hotel. Pretty garden. Good sea view.
H. RIBBANDS, Proprietor.

BOURNEMOUTH.—HOTEL MONT DORE.—South aspect. 150 rooms, electric light throughout, passenger lift, first-class cuisine, winter garden and lounge, covered tennis court. Turkish, sea-water, and medicated Baths. The Hotel is within two minutes' walk of the Golf Links.—For tariff, address W. KNEESE, Manager.

BOURNEMOUTH.—HIGHCLIFFE HOTEL. Unrivalled position, West Cliff, full south. Splendid sea view. Table d'hôte (separate tables). Supplies from Alderney Dairy Farm. Telephone 27.—J. KILNER, Proprietor.

BRIGHTON.—BEDFORD HOTEL.—Old-established. Unequalled in situation; opposite West Pier. Spacious coffee and reading rooms; sea-water service; unequalled cuisine; great variety of excellent wines. Moderate tariff. Electric light in all rooms. Passenger lift to all the floors.
GEO. HECKFORD, Manager.

BRIGHTON.—GRAND HOTEL.—Centre of sea front. Electric Light throughout. Lift to all floors. Bicycle room. Inclusive terms if desired from 10s. 6d. to 15s. per day.—For particulars apply to A. D. HOOK, Manager.

CARBIS BAY HOTEL, Cornwall. The very spot to obtain rest and quietude. Overlooking the finest bay in England. Mild yet bracing climate. Within easy distance of London by G. W. R. Splendid Golf Links. "A more beautiful spot for residence could hardly be imagined." —Truth.

EXMOUTH.—IMPERIAL HOTEL.—Private Gardens, facing Sea. Beautiful views. Faultless accommodation. Excellent cuisine. Good stabling. Perfect sanitation. Sea bathing Trout and sea fishing. Boating, yachting, steam launch, tennis, golf. Under entirely new management.

FOLKESTONE.—BATES' HOTEL, West Cliff Gardens, and LONGFORD PRIVATE HOTEL, The Leas. Oldest established and most select Family Hotels in Folkestone. Reduced terms during Winter and Spring months. Pension (new Coffee-room) at Bates' Hotel.—G. L. HART, Proprietor. Sanitation Certified.

FOLKESTONE.—The LEAS HOTEL.—Situated in private grounds. Adjoining fashionable promenade. Sea views. Refurnished throughout. Passenger lift. Certified sanitation. Excellent cuisine. Moderate tariff. Good golf links and tennis court.

GRAND CANARY.—The Newest and Best Hotel is The METROPOLE. Facing the sea. Delightful position. Terms most moderate.
Agents, ELDER, DEMPSTER & CO., 14, Castle-street, Liverpool, and 4, St. Mary Axe, London, E.C.

JERSEY.—GRAND HOTEL.—The only first-class modern Hotel facing the sea, and full south, the largest, the best appointed, and the up-to-date Hotel in the Channel Islands. Liberal Management.
D. DE LEIDI, Manager.

MALVERN—The IMPERIAL HOTEL occupies the best position, and receives visitors en pension. The golf-links (18 holes) are one of the best in England. Capital stabling for hunters. Droitwich Brine, Turkish and large Swimming Bath in separate buildings.—For tariff, apply to the Proprietor, F. MOERSCHELL.

SANDGATE.—ROYAL KENT HOTEL, a favourite resort of Ruskin. An ideal summer and winter residence, delightfully situated in its own grounds, facing the sea. Redecorated and refurnished. New Coffee-room, Smoking-room, and Conservatory have recently been added Fifteen minutes from Folkestone. Omnibus meets all trains Sandgate Station.—J. E. TANARE, Prop.

SOUTHSEA.—ROYAL BEACH MANSIONS HOTEL.—Largest in Southsea, splendidly situated on the beach; 300 yards nearer the sea than any other public hotel on the line of marine terraces. Passenger lift. Inclusive terms from £3. 13s. 6d. per week. Entirely under new management.—M. ECCLES, Manageress.

TORQUAY.—IMPERIAL HOTEL.—Under entirely New Management. New sanitary arrangements throughout. It is the largest and best-situated Hotel in Torquay, and the best winter residence on the South Coast. Visitors received en pension or à la carte. Terms moderate.
F. FISCHER Manager.

All applications for spaces in this List should be made to the ADVERTISEMENT MANAGER,
"TRUTH" BUILDINGS, CARTERET STREET
QUEEN ANNE'S GATE, S.W.

BUXTON

DERBYSHIRE.

Highest Town in England.
On the Mountain Limestone.
1,000 feet above sea level.

Centre of the picturesque Peak District. Pure Air. Charming Scenery.

HOT MINERAL-WATER BATHS FOR GOUT, RHEUMATISM, SCIATICA, &c.

NATURAL TEMPERATURE 82° FAHRENHEIT.

Finest Public Gardens at any Health Resort in Europe, with Pavilion, Theatre, Concert-Hall, Tennis, Bowls, etc. Golf Links (18 holes).

For ILLUSTRATED GUIDE, with Tariffs of the leading Hotels, Hydropathics, Boarding and Lodging Houses, send postage-stamp to THE CLERK, COUNCIL OFFICES, TOWN HALL, BUXTON, DERBYSHIRE.

AVONDALE HOTEL & RESTAURANT

(Corner of Dover-street and Piccadilly).
MAGNIFICENT SUITES of ROOMS, including Ladies' Reception-room.
KANDT'S ROYAL ORCHESTRA
plays nightly during Dinner and Supper.
LUNCHEON, 4s.; DINNER, 10s. 6d.; SUPPER, 4s.
A SPECIAL ROYAL ACADEMY LUNCHEON at 2s. 6d. served daily.
The Wines have been most carefully selected by connoisseurs.
Manager: Mons. GARIN. } late of the Savoy Hotel.
Chef de Cuisine: Mons. DUTRU. }

AND

HATCHETT'S RESTAURANT.

UNDER AVONDALE HOTEL.

Under entirely new management. First-class Cuisine and Unrivalled Cellar of Wines. Moderate Prices. Luncheons, Dinners, and Suppers, Table d'Hôte, Grill-room, and à la Carte. Arrangements are being made for a String Band to play nightly during Dinner and Supper.
Manager: Mons. EUGENE.

HASTINGS. Due South, Facing Sea.

QUEEN'S HOTEL,

LARGEST AND BEST APPOINTED.
Sunny, and most sheltered position in Hastings and St. Leonards.
ELECTRIC LIGHT. PASSENGER ELEVATOR.
Moderate Tariff. Hotel Flys attend the trains.
WILLIAM GLADE, Manager.

SAVOY HOTEL OVERLOOKING RIVER AND EMBANKMENT GARDENS.

By day the most beautiful garden and river view in Europe. By night a fairy scene. All charges for rooms include baths, lights, and attendance.

Savoy Restaurant.

Of Gastronomic Fame. Dinners à la Carte. Private Rooms for Parties.

The Savoy Dejeuner à prix fixe, 5s., served on the Balcony overlooking the Gardens and River from 12 to 3.

"The Opera Supper," 5s. The Orchestra plays during Dinner and Supper.

The Restaurant is under the direction of the famous Maître d'Hôtel, "Joseph," of the Restaurant Marivaux, Paris. Chef, Maître THOURAUD.

Prix Fixe Dinner (7s. 6d.) is served in the new Salle à Manger, on the Restaurant Floor, at Separate Tables, from 6 to 8.30.

The GRAND HOTEL, ROME, is under the same direction.

ILFRACOMBE.

ILFRACOMBE HOTEL.

Famous for its high-class Cuisine and general comfort.
The PRINCIPAL and ONLY HOTEL on the SEASHORE.

An ideal position. 250 rooms. Grounds five acres. Tennis, Croquet. Splendid Swimming Bath. Elegant Lounge Hall. Moderate tariff. Terms "en pension."
H. R. GROVER, Manager.

HOTELS, &c.

LONDON.—BRUNSWICK HOTEL, Jermyn-street, Piccadilly. New Sanitation and Redecoration by Warings. First-class cuisine. High-class Family Hotel. Moderate tariff. Under new management.

BUXTON, DERBYSHIRE.

THE PALACE HOTEL.

200 rooms. Finest position. Own grounds. American elevator. Tariff, with plan of rooms and sketch map of Buxton, on application. A. CROSS, Manager.

RAMSGATE.

THE GRANVILLE.

CLIFTON GRAND SPA HYDRO., BRISTOL.

Now open. The Premier Hydro Sumptuously equipped. Pump Room. Unrivalled Turkish, Russian, and other baths. Sea trips. Drives. Golf. Tennis. Resident Physician. Address Manager. Telegrams, "Spa, Bristol."

THE NEW FOREST: 90,000 acres of magnificent woodland scenery, intersected by good cycling roads. The CROWN HOTEL, rebuilt 1897, is situated on high ground in the best part of lovely LYNDHURST, the village capital of the NEW FOREST. Large gardens. Posting stables. Electric light. Nearest station, Lyndhurst-road.

CLARENDON HOTEL, Princes-street, Edinburgh.—First-class Family Hotel. Opposite Castle, and overlooking the gardens. Kitchen lately fitted up on top of Hotel. Recommended to American visitors. Under the personal management of the new Proprietor.

FOLKESTONE.—QUEEN'S HOTEL. Centrally situated, Within Two Minutes' Walk of THE LEAS. Inclusive Terms, 10s. 6d. Daily. Boulogne Return Boat Fare (Sundays) 6s. 6d.

MARGATE.—WHITE HART HOTEL. Sixty Bedrooms, many commanding magnificent sea views. Famous for its perfect English cooking and choice cellar. Most invigorating sea air in England. Under supervision of Proprietor—G. MARSHALL.

A FINE HOTEL] DOVER [IN DOVER BAY

Accommodates 400 guests. Is superbly appointed, with all the comforts of a well-arranged mansion at moderate cost. Perfect cuisine. The Dover Golf Links for use of Hotel Burlington visitors. The finest coast hotel in England. Brochure and Tariff free.

Facing the Pleasure Pier and in centre of Dover Bay.

HOTEL BURLINGTON

THE INTERNATIONAL PALACE HOTELS.

OSTEND ..... Hotel de la Plage.
ARDENNES..... Chateau d'Ardennes. (Palace of Leopold II.)
LISBON ..... The Avenida Palace.
THERAPIA ..... Bosphorus Summer Palace.
London Office, 14, Cockspur-street, S.W.

FURNESS ABBEY HOTEL

SPACIOUS COFFEE, DRAWING, AND SMOKE ROOMS. WELL-APPOINTED BILLIARD ROOM.

IN THE CENTRE OF LAKELAND.

ENTIRELY REFURNISHED AND REDECORATED.

SPIERS & POND, Ltd.

PITLOCHRY.

THE ATHOLL HYDROPATHIC (Macdonald's).

The ORIGINAL and very much the LARGEST.

500 feet above sea level. Pure, dry, bracing air. Extensive pleasure grounds (36 acres). Tennis—Croquet—Cycling—Golf—Archery—Fishing. Inclusive Terms from 2½ Guineas each per week. To prevent disappointment, address all communications "THE ATHOLL, PITLOCHRY." Telegraphic Address "ATHOLL." SEASON COMMENCES 26th MAY.

ALPINE HEALTH RESORT.

MALOJA, Upper Engadine, Switzerland.

The largest and most beautiful glacier mills in the World. Nature's wonders. Open from June to end of September. The splendid Palace Hotel, Maloja, offers to its patrons all home comforts, combined with the charm of a climatic Alpine station; first-class highland tours as well as easy walks. 6,000 feet above sea level. 350 beds, spacious reception rooms, concert and theatre halls, Milanese Scala Orchestral Concerts daily. Lift. Golf, cricket, lawn-tennis, riding and driving opportunities. Large cycle track. Sea sport, fishing. Oil motor boat on the delightful Maloja Lake as well as rowing and sailing boats. Dark room for photographs. Baths and excellent sanitary arrangements. English and Roman Catholic Church services. Post and Telegraph Offices. Resident English Physician. Highly recommended as a quiet resort early in the season, especially for families. Average temperature, 16 degrees C. Building heated throughout on cold days.

Further particulars may be obtained from the Director, J. F. WALTHERDENZ, MALOJA PALACE, ENGADINE, SWITZERLAND.

ROYAL MAIL ROUTE

VIA

HARWICH AND THE HOOK OF HOLLAND

Daily (Sundays included) Service to the Continent.

Send post-card to the Continental Manager, Great Eastern Railway, Liverpool Street Station, E.C., for descriptive illustrated Time Book (free).

QUICK CHEAP ROUTE to DENMARK, SWEDEN, and Norway, viâ Harwich and Esbjerg.—The steamers of the UNITED STEAMSHIP CO. of COPENHAGEN sail from HARWICH (Parkeston Quay) for ESBJERG every Monday, Thursday, and Saturday, after arrival of the train leaving London, Liverpool-street Station, at 7.15 p.m., returning from Esbjerg every Tuesday, Wednesday, and Saturday, after arrival of 9.5 a.m. train from Copenhagen. Return Fares: Esbjerg, 53s.; Copenhagen, 71s. 8d. The service will be performed (weather and other circumstances permitting) by the new S.S. N. J. Fjord and the S.S. Koldinghuus. These fast steamers have excellent accommodation for passengers and carry no cattle.—For further information address, TEGNER, PRICE & CO., 107, Fenchurch-street, London; or the Continental Manager, Liverpool-street Station, E.C.

GAZE'S UNIVERSAL TOURS.

DIRECT TRAVEL and Circular Tours. Tickets issued in advance throughout Great Britain, the Continent, and America.
HOTEL COUPONS for 1,000 Hotels.
CONDUCTED TOURS, Paris, Belgium, The Rhine, Switzerland, &c.
PLEASURE CRUISES: Scotland, Norway, &c.
BAGGAGE, Forwarding and Insurance.

GAZE'S TOURIST GAZETTE, Monthly, gives Summary of all Arrangements and facilities.

HENRY GAZE & SONS, Ltd.,
142, STRAND; 18, WESTBOURNE GROVE; and PICCADILLY CIRCUS,
London.

SIX GUINEAS.—GENEVA TOUR, nine days, extensions to Chamounix (Mont Blanc), Zermatt (Matterhorn), St. Gothard, Oberland, &c. Lecturers, Sir Robert Ball, Mr. Edward Whymper, Dr. Lunn. Departures weekly from May 10.—Details from Secretary, 5, Endsleigh-gardens, Euston, N.W.; 32, Piccadilly, W.; 47, St. Paul's-churchyard, E.C.; 3, Charing-cross, S.W.

JAPAN, CHINA, AUSTRALIA, HONOLULU, FIJI, NEW ZEALAND, and ROUND THE WORLD.
CANADIAN PACIFIC ROUTE.

For berths or descriptive pamphlets, apply CANADIAN PACIFIC RAILWAY, 67 and 68, King William-street, London Bridge, or 30, Cockspur-street, Trafalgar-square, S.W.

HOLIDAYS ABROAD.

DIEPPE.

AN IDEAL SEASIDE RESORT FOR ENGLISH VISITORS,
ONLY FIVE HOURS FROM LONDON.

Two English Churches. Superb cycling roads. Excellent Golf Links (Sunday play). Best Casino in Europe (June to October). Dancing, &c. Information free from L. BRAU, 140, Grand Rue, Dieppe, France.

ORIENT COMPANY'S PLEASURE CRUISES

by their

Steamship "LUSITANIA," 3,912 tons register.

For NORWAY FIORDS and the NORTH CAPE (for Midnight Sun), leaving London 15th June, Leith 17th June, and arriving back in London 11th July.
For COPENHAGEN, WISBY, STOCKHOLM, ST. PETERSBURG, BALTIC CANAL, &c., leaving London 17th August, returning 14th September.
For SICILY, CONSTANTINOPLE, the CRIMEA, GREECE, MALTA, ALGIERS, &c., leaving London 20th September, returning 8th November.
String Band, Electric Light, High-class Cuisine.

Managers { F. GREEN & CO. / ANDERSON, ANDERSON, & CO. } Head Offices: Fenchurch-avenue.

For passage apply to the latter firm at 5, Fenchurch-avenue, London, E.C.; or to the West End Branch Office, 16, Cockspur-street, S.W.

NORWAY AND BALTIC CRUISES.

The S.Y. VICTORIA sails JULY 2nd, for 25 days, to NORTH CAPE and NORWEGIAN FIORDS.
To be followed by other cruises on July 30th, and August 13th.
The only modern pleasure cruiser with large airy cabins.

For particulars, apply Manager, 4, Regent-street; GRINDLAY & CO., 55, Parliament-street; or any of THOS. COOK & SONS' Offices.

12 GUINEA NORWAY CRUISES from NEWCASTLE-ON-TYNE—FORTNIGHTLY.

"MIDNIGHT SUN," 3,178 Tons, 3,500 H.P.

Finest YACHTING STEAMER afloat. NO UPPER BERTHS.
Sailings:—May 28; June 11, 25; July 9, 23; and August 6, 20.
Special Cruises, September 3rd and 17th.
Fares from 12 Guineas, including first-class table.

For itinerary, &c., apply to the PASSENGER AGENT, ALBION S.S. Co., Ltd., Mercantile Chambers, Newcastle-on-Tyne.

HAVE YOU TRIED . .

CEPHALIA

For HAY FEVER, NEURALGIC PAINS, & COLDS in the HEAD, &c.?

If not, send 13½d. for a Box to

REECE & CO., Medical Hall, Piccadilly, London.

EFFECT SIMPLY MIRACULOUS.

HOSPITALS & APPEALS.

LONDON ORPHAN ASYLUM, Watford.—Established 1813. For the Maintenance and Education of respectable Fatherless Boys and Girls from every part of the United Kingdom.

The NEXT ELECTION occurs on the 27th JUNE, when EIGHT GIRLS and TWENTY-TWO BOYS will be ADMITTED.

500 Children are now in the School, 6,051 have been already benefited.

Annual Subscription for one Vote at each Half-yearly Election, 10s. 6d. Life Subscription for one Vote, £5 5s., the Votes increasing in proportion to the Subscription, and entitling to vote at the coming Election.

A. CAPEL CARNEGY ARBUTHNOTT, Treas.
E. H. BOUSFIELD, Chairman.
HENRY C. ARMIGER, Secretary.

GREAT NORTHERN CENTRAL HOSPITAL, Holloway. VERY POOR and DEPENDENT ENTIRELY UPON VOLUNTARY SUPPORT.

PATIENTS ADMITTED FREE, sickness and poverty the only qualifications for relief.

£10,000 needed annually to support the work of relieving 1,500 in-patients and 25,000 out-patients.

LEWIS H. GLENTON KERR, Secretary.

WEST LONDON HOSPITAL, Hammersmith-road, W. (97 beds).—Patron, H.R.H. The PRINCE of WALES, K.G. President The DUKE of DEVONSHIRE, K.G. Treasurer, The LORD ROTHSCHILD. FUNDS urgently NEEDED for Opening new Wards for 80 additional beds.

R. J. GILBERT, Secretary-Superintendent.

THE SURGICAL AID SOCIETY.

Chief Office—SALISBURY SQUARE, LONDON, E.C.

President—THE RIGHT HON. THE EARL OF ABERDEEN.

This SOCIETY supplies Trusses, Elastic Stockings, Crutches, Artificial Limbs, Artificial Eyes, &c., and every other description of mechanical support to the poor, without limit as to locality or disease.

Water Beds and Invalid Chairs and Couches are lent to the Afflicted upon the Recommendation of Subscribers.

22,247 Appliances given during the past year.

Over 280 Patients Relieved every week.

Annual Subscription of 10s. 6d., or Life Subscription of 5 Guineas entitles to Two Recommendations per Annum; the number of Letters increasing in proportion to amount of contribution.

SUBSCRIPTIONS and DONATIONS are earnestly solicited, and will be thankfully received by the Bankers, Messrs. Barclay & Co., Ltd., Lombard-street, or by the Secretary at the Office of the Society.

RICHARD C. TRESIDDER, Secretary.

CARTER 6A NEW CAVENDISH ST. PORTLAND PLACE, LONDON.

ONLY ADDRESS OF ORIGINAL CARTER
LITERARY MACHINE.

For holding book, lamp, meals, &c., in any position over an easychair, bed, or sofa. Deliciously luxurious. A most useful gift. Prices from 17/6

INVALID FURNITURE.
ADJUSTABLE COUCHES and BEDS from £1. 10/-

Bed Lift £3. 10/-
Reclining Boards, 25/-
Walking Machines
Portable W.C.'s.
Electric Bells, Urinals, &c.
Air & Water Beds.
Bed Rests 7/6
Leg Rests 10/-
Crutches 10/6
Bed Baths 12/6
Commodes, £1. 5/-

Carrying Chairs from £1.
Breakfast in Bed Tables from 30/-
Self-Propelling Chairs from £2

BATH CHAIRS FROM £1. 5/-

ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUES POST FREE.

JOHN CARTER, 6a, NEW CAVENDISH ST. Portland-pl. London, W.

USE ONLY
BLAISDELL PENCILS

SELF-POINTING.
ALL COLOURS. ALL GRADES.
NO WASTE. BEST LEADS.

Black Lead 1d. & 2d. Coloured Crayons 2d. & 3d.
SOLD EVERYWHERE.
Sample Box of 5 Pencils 1s., Free by Post in the U.K.
BLAISDELL PENCILS, Ltd., 46, Holborn Viaduct, London, E.C.

HEAL & SON'S
New Wood Bedsteads

With Iron Lath Bottoms or Wire Spring Bottoms.

HYGIENIC. ARTISTIC. INEXPENSIVE.

New Catalogue of Bedsteads, Bedding, & Bedroom Furniture post free.

195, 197, 196, 198, TOTTENHAM COURT RD. W.

For Longhand, Shorthand, Pen-and-Ink Drawing, Music-Writing, indeed, whenever a Pen is necessary, use only a "SWAN."

Adds immeasurably to Celerity and Comfort in writing. Of all Pens most famous.

Made in 3 sizes at
10s. 6d.
16s. 6d.
25s.
UP TO £18 18s.
POST FREE.

MABIE, TODD & BARD,
DEPT. C. I.
93, Cheapside, London, E.C.
95a, RECENT ST., W., and 3, EXCHANGE ST., MANCHESTER.

VINOLIA TOILET REQUISITES.

4d PREMIER VINOLIA SOAP
(For Family Use).

For Delicate, Sensitive, Irritable Skins.

The CHEMIST AND DRUGGIST reports:
"An ideal soap, delightfully perfumed."

1/- per box of 3 Tablets.

6d FLORAL VINOLIA SOAP
(For Private Use).

Keeps the Skin as soft as Velvet.

The MEDICAL NEWS reports:
"Beautifully emollient and softening to the skin."

1/6 per box of 3 Tablets.

10d TOILET VINOLIA SOAP
(OTTO)

Scented with Choice Otto of Rose Perfume.

Beautifies the Complexion.

The GENTLEWOMAN reports:
"Strongly recommended to keep the skin smooth and free from roughness."

2/6 per Box of 3 Tablets.

6d BLONDEAU PERFUMES
Concentrated, Delicate, Pure.

*Vinolia Bouquet,	Rondeletia,
*Marequil,	Hyacinth,
*Jequilla,	Ylang Ylang
*Losaria,	Stephanotis
Wood Violet,	Opoponax,
White Heliotrope,	Patchouli,
Ess. Bouquet,	Musk,
Frangipanni,	Ambergris,
Jockey Club,	Amaryllis,
Maréchal Niel,	White Lilac,
Millefleur,	Narcissus,
White Rose,	Chypre,
Jasmin,	Violette de Parme,
Musk Rose,	Mignonette,
Honeysuckle,	Clematis,
New Mown Hay,	Wallflower,
Lily of the Valley,

Violet, | *Rhine Violets, | Peau d'Espagne.

6d., 1/-, 2/-, 3/-, and 5/- per bottle.

*These perfumes are not supplied in the 6d. quality.

1/- VINOLIA HAIR WASH

DRY. Freshens and cleanses the Hair, and preserves it free from any oily moist appearance.

MOIST. Imparts a natural gloss to the Hair

1/- per Bottle.

Each in 3 odours: Portugal, Rose, and Violet.

1/1½ VINOLIA CREAM

For Itching, Face Spots, Sunburn, &c.

The LANCET reports:
"An emollient cream for the skin in eczema, rash, eruptions, &c."

1/1½, 1/9, 3/6, and 6/- per Box.

1/- VINOLIA POWDER

For Redness, Roughness, Toilet Nursery, &c.

The LADY'S PICTORIAL reports:
"Superseding the old-fashioned toilet powders which are apt to cause acne spots on the face by blocking up the pores of the skin."

In White, Pink, and Cream Tints.
1/-, 1/9, 3/6, and 6/- per Box.

VINOLIA SHAVING SOAP.
6d

(STICKS AND FLAT CAKES.)
Causes no Blotches.
STICKS: Premier 6d., Toilet 1/-, 1/6, 2/6, Vestal 2/-.
FLAT CAKES: Premier 1/-, Toilet 2/-, Vestal 2/6.

6d LYPSYL.

A Coralline Emollient for Dry, Rough, Cracked, or Pallid Lips.

In Rose-Red and White Tints, 6d. and 1/- a Tube.

6d VINOLIA LAVENDER WATER.

Natural and Very Lasting.

Contains the finest Essential Oils, Concentrated, therefore the Most Economical.

6d., 1/-, 2/-, and 3/6.

2/- VINOLIA TOILET WATER.

This is prepared with delicate, refreshing perfumes, and is a most exquisite and delightful preparation to use either clear or in water for the Toilet or in the bath.

2s. per Bottle.

6 PREMIER VINOLIA DENTIFRICE

Aromatic, Tonic, Refreshing, Preservative.
Keeps the Teeth Ivory White.
Premier in Round Box and Glass Bottle, 6d.
English—2/6.
American—1/6.

6d VINOLIA TOOTH SOAP.

An exquisite preparation for the Teeth. Delightfully perfumed and free from any injurious ingredients.

In Round Metal Box, 6d.

6d VINOLIA TOOTH PASTE.

Delicately Perfumed.

Whitens and Cleanses the Teeth, without in any way injuriously affecting the dental structures.

In Collapsable Tube, 6d.

6d BLONDEAU Inexhaustible Lavender SMELLING SALTS.

These Smelling Salts are of exceptional Strength and most Refreshing. They are agreeably scented, the pleasant odour of Lavender being very pronounced.

6d. and 9d. per Bottle.

6d VINOLIA EAU DE COLOGNE.

Fragrant. Refreshing.
As fine as can possibly be made.

The "Court Circular" reports:
"Vinolia Eau de Cologne we consider is absolutely unequalled for strength, purity, and delicacy of aroma."

6d., 1/-, 2/-, 3/3, and 5/6.

3d per 2-oz. Packet. VINOLIA VIOLET POWDER.

Sanitary. Antiseptic. Soothing.

Specially prepared for Toilet and Nursery use.

In 2-oz. and ¼-lb. Packets, 3d. & 6d.
In ¼-lb. Tins, 6d.
In ½-lb. Tins, 9d.

VINOLIA COMPANY, Ltd., MALDEN CRESCENT, LONDON, N.W.

The VICTORIA DATE CO., Ltd., Food and Condiment Specialists, beg to draw attention to the following preparations, for the purity and general excellence of which they have obtained numerous awards—Gold Medals, &c.

Victoria Date Vinegar. The New Vinegar. This condiment is prepared exclusively from dates. It is absolutely pure. Culinary experts pronounce it far superior for Cooking and Pickling purposes to Malt or White Wine Vinegars, as, though of a similar flavour to these, it is non-injurious, and can therefore be used with impunity by the most dyspeptic. It is far and away the best for table use. The leading Pickle and Sauce Manufacturers use it exclusively, among others, POTTER'S PERFECT PICKLES are prepared in Victoria Date Vinegar.

Derby Sauce. This new Sauce has rapidly taken the first place in popular favour. A trial is sufficient to give it a permanent place in the cruet. Prepared from a Persian recipe of wide reputation in the East, it is a delightful appetiser. It is intended for use with Cold Meats, Chops, Steaks, &c.

Worcester Sauce. This resembles other sauces of the same name in flavour, but possesses the unique quality of absolute purity.

The VICTORIA DATE CO., Ltd., will have much pleasure in forwarding tasting samples, post free, to applicants who will write to them, mentioning this paper, to Victoria Works, 112, Belvedere Road, Lambeth, London, S.E.

"Captol" SOMETHING NEW FOR THE HAIR BY A LEADING PHYSICIAN.

"CAPTOL" is the latest discovery by the well-known authority on skin diseases, Dr. J. Eichhoff. The fact that such a prominent physician allows his name to be associated with it is a guarantee that "CAPTOL" will not cause disappointment to those who give it a trial. "CAPTOL" removes the densest growth of scurf and dandruff with greater speed than any other preparation. It is, therefore, the safest preventive of falling hair yet discovered.

"CAPTOL" is made from vegetable ingredients; it is quite free from lead, mercury, and other poisons. Whilst imparting to the hair a glossy and pleasing appearance, it does not in the slightest degree affect the ORIGINAL SHADE, AS IT IS NOT A DYE, and, unlike other Hair Washes, it does not make the hair the least greasy or sticky.

Many preparations before the public are most dangerous. "CAPTOL" IS NON-EXPLOSIVE, and can be used with perfect safety.

3/9 per bottle, of most chemists and stores.

If you cannot obtain "CAPTOL" from your usual chemist, do not be put off with other kinds, which are recommended as "JUST AS GOOD," "CHEAPER," &c., &c., but write to Mulhens' 4711 Depot, 62, New Bond Street, London, who will either give you the name of the nearest dealer keeping it, or will send you a bottle post-free for 4/-

The Purest and the Nicest.

Hovis Bread

Perfectly Self Digestive.

Hovis Bread is baked and delivered daily by all good class Bakers in the British Isles; Hovis Biscuits are sold by most Grocers and Bakers; or 6d. and 1s. Samples of Bread and Biscuits will be sent on receipt of stamps by THE HOVIS-BREAD FLOUR Co., LTD., Millers, Macclesfield.

LEWIS & ALLENBY, LTD.

COSTUMES,
MANTLES,
MILLINERY,
BLOUSES,
TEA GOWNS,
LINGERIE,
SILKS, DRESSES,
ROBES,
WASHING FABRICS,
RIBBONS, TRIMMINGS,
LACES, HOSIERY,
GLOVES, PARASOLS.

THE LATEST
Novelties in all Departments.

REGENT-ST. & CONDUIT-ST. W.

A Cup of Chocolat Suchard

accurately prepared, contains all the delicious, soothing, and restorative properties known to exist in Cocoa. Cup for cup, "Chocolat Suchard" is noted for its superiority of flavour and aroma over all other like preparations.

Chocolat Suchard

owes these characteristics not only to the choice materials it is made of, but equally so, perhaps, to the clean and careful methods by which it is uniformly prepared. The recognition of these sterling qualities has led to a largely increased consumption of Chocolat Suchard all over the world.

BEWARE OF IMITATIONS

All Chocolates, Cocoas and Bonbons bearing the name of Suchard are of the highest quality only.
70 YEARS' REPUTATION.

A RECORD IN SAUCE.
OVER 8,000,000 BOTTLES SOLD IN ONE YEAR.

YORKSHIRE RELISH

THE MOST DELICIOUS SAUCE IN THE WORLD.
Makes the Plainest Viands Palatable, and the Daintiest Dishes more Delicious.
Enriches Soups, Stews, Chops, Steaks, Fish, etc.
Sold in Bottles, 6d, 1s., and 2s. each.
Sole Proprietors: GOODALL, BACKHOUSE, & CO., LEEDS.

THE MEXICAN HAIR RENEWER

Prevents the Hair from falling off.
Restores Grey or White Hair to its ORIGINAL COLOUR.
Being delicately perfumed it leaves no unpleasant odour.
IS NOT a dye, and therefore does not stain the skin or even white linen.
Should be in every house where a HAIR RENEWER is needed.
Ask your Chemist or Hairdresser for

THE MEXICAN HAIR RENEWER.

Price 3s. 6d. per large Bottle.
Prepared only by the
ANGLO-AMERICAN DRUG COMPANY, Ltd.,
33, FARRINGDON ROAD, LONDON, E.C.

FLORILINE

FOR THE TEETH AND BREATH.
IS THE BEST LIQUID DENTIFRICE IN THE WORLD.

Prevents the Decay of Teeth.
Renders the Teeth Pearly White.
Is perfectly Harmless and Delicious to the Taste.

Of all Chemists and Perfumers throughout the World
2s. 6d. per Bottle.

FLORILINE TOOTH POWDER.
Put up in Glass Jars, price 1s.

Bulmer's Cider

Guaranteed Pure Juice of the Apple.

Price Lists and Testimonials from

H. P. BULMER & CO., Hereford

or of Wine Merchants Everywhere.

IT TAKES LESS THAN A MINUTE TO MAKE

A GLASS OF BI-LEMONADE

JUST THE THING FOR GARDEN PARTIES.

WITH TALBOT'S FRUIT EXTRACTS

THE NEW HOUSEHOLD DRINK FOR ALL TIMES, ALL TROUBLE SAVED, ANY QUANTITY MADE INSTANTLY BY SIMPLY ADDING WATER. NO SUGAR REQUIRED.

6d. tin makes 1 to 2 gallons.

Ask your Grocer for 6d Tin Bi-Lemonade (Clock & Glass Brand) Take no substitute.

Sample Tin for 8 stamps of SOLE MAKERS TALBOT & Co GLOUCESTER.

21/- Post Free The "Osoezi" Saddle 21/- Post Free

Is at once hygienic, anatomically correct, and pressure upon the perineum is avoided. No Saddle-Soreness, even after the hardest and most continuous riding.

Suitable for Ladies or Gentlemen. Easily adaptable to any Machine.

A. W. GAMAGE, LTD.,

126 to 129, Holborn, E.C.

Goddard's Plate Powder

SIX GOLD MEDALS.

Non-Mercurial. THE BEST and SAFEST article for CLEANING SILVER and ELECTRO PLATE. Sold in Boxes, 1s., 2s. 6d., and 4s. 6d. each, by Grocers, Oilmen, Chemists, &c., everywhere.

Madame Marie Mathieu,

Who has been privately patronised by the highest ladies in England and abroad, begs to state that BY THEIR DESIRE she has now taken additional rooms at

23, CONDUIT STREET, W.

She wishes it to be known that she is the SOLE OWNER and IMPORTER of the OIL which she uses in her treatment for the removal of wrinkles and in all her preparatious for the skin.

Prices: Derma Paste, 10/6; Crême Roma, 5/-; Avoinine Powder, 3/6.

All these preparations are harmless, healthy, and most beneficial to the skin.

Hours: 11 a.m. to 6 p.m.

ALLAN'S ANTI-FAT

PURELY VEGETABLE, Perfectly Harmless. Will reduce from two to five pounds per week; acts on the food in the stomach, preventing its conversion into Fat. Sold by Chemists. Send stamp for pamphlet.

Botanic Medicine Co., 3, New Oxford-street, London, W.C.

FOR COMPLAINTS of the STOMACH, LIVER, etc., DRINK

VICHY CELESTINS Spring

Caution: See that each bottle has a neck label with VICHY-ÉTAT & the name of the Sole Importers: INGRAM & ROYLE, Ltd, 26, Upper Thames Street, LONDON, E.C.

PRUDENTIAL ASSURANCE COMPANY, LIMITED.—Holborn Bars, London.

EVERY DESCRIPTION OF LIFE ASSURANCE AND ANNUITY BUSINESS TRANSACTED.
REVERSIONS PURCHASED.

Invested Funds, £30,000,000.

The last Annual Report can be obtained on application to the Secretary.

SUN INSURANCE OFFICE

63, Threadneedle-street, London, E.C.

THE OLDEST PURELY FIRE OFFICE IN THE WORLD

SUN FIRE OFFICE FOUNDED 1710

SUM INSURED IN 1897 EXCEEDS £425,000,000.

SPECIAL ADVANTAGES TO PRIVATE INSURERS.

THE IMPERIAL INSURANCE COMPANY, LIMITED. FIRE. Est. 1803, 1, Old Broad-st., E.C., & 22, Pall Mall, S.W. Subd. Capital, £1,200,000. Paid-up, £300,000. Total funds, over £1,500,000.—E. COZENS SMITH, Gen. Man.

BIRKBECK BANK (Estab. 1851), Southampton-buildings, Chancery-lane, London. Two and a-half per cent. interest allowed on deposits, repayable on demand. Two per cent. on current accounts, on the minimum monthly balances when not below £100.

The BIRKBECK ALMANACK with particulars, post free.

FRANCIS RAVENSCROFT, Manager.

THE STOCK EXCHANGE.

NOTICE.

No Member of the Stock Exchange is allowed to advertise for business purposes, or to issue circulars to persons other than his own principals.

Persons who advertise as Brokers or Share Dealers are not Members of the Stock Exchange, or under the control of the Committee.

A List of Members of the Stock Exchange who are Stock and Share Brokers may be seen at the Bartholomew-lane Entrance to the Bank of England, or obtained on application to

EDWARD SATTERTHWAITE,
Secretary to the Committee of the Stock Exchange.

Committee Room, The Stock Exchange, London, E.C.

H. HALFORD and COMPANY,

70 and 71, Palmerston Buildings, Old Broad Street, London.

ESTABLISHED 1869.

Business in Stocks and Shares at close prices.

Dealings reported by wire if required.

Prompt Settlements.

Thousands of Testimonials from Clients.

Americans and Canadians a Speciality. Also Westralians and Kaffirs.

Lists of Closing Prices gratis.

Telegrams: "Monitor, London."

NO CONNECTION WITH ANY OTHER FIRM.

LOSS OF HAIR Now Ready, post free, 1s. "The Truth and Facts about the Causes and Cure of BALDNESS, GREYNESS, SUPERFLUOUS HAIR, &c." 60 pages. Illustrated. From the Author, O. E. HORN, D.Sc, Bournemouth.

PRESS OPINIONS.—"Dr. Horn is a wonderfully clever Hair Specialist."—Editor, St. Paul's, 3/7/97. "Remarkable success has attended Dr. Horn's plan of treatment."—Whitehall Review. "We are quite convinced of the soundness of his fundamental principles."—The Queen.

THE LATE EARL OF BEACONSFIELD,
SIR MORELL MACKENZIE,
OLIVER WENDELL HOLMES,
MISS EMILY FAITHFUL,
THE LATE GEN. W. T. SHERMAN,

and many other persons of distinction, have testified to the remarkable efficacy of Himrod's Cure for Asthma.

Established over a Quarter of a Century.

Prescribed by the Medical Faculty throughout the world. It is used as an Inhalation and without any after bad effects. A free Sample and detailed testimonials free by post. In tins, 4s. 3d. British Depôt—46, Holborn Viaduct, London; also of NEWBERY & SONS, BARCLAY & SONS, LYNCH & CO., J. SANGER & SONS, W. EDWARDS & SON, MAY, ROBERTS, & CO., BUTLER & CRISPE, JOHN THOMPSON, Liverpool, and all wholesale Houses.

"FOR THE BLOOD IS THE LIFE."

CLARKE'S

WORLD-FAMED

BLOOD MIXTURE

Warranted to cleanse the blood from all impurities from whatever cause arising. For Scrofula, Scurvy, Eczema, Bad Legs, Skin and Blood Diseases, Pimples and Sores of all kinds, its effects are marvellous. It is the only real specific for Gout and Rheumatic Pains, for it removes the cause from the blood and bones. Thousands of Wonderful Cures have been effected by it. In bottles, 2s. 9d. and 11s. each, of Chemists everywhere.

BEWARE OF WORTHLESS IMITATIONS.

The Lists will close on or before Four p.m. on Thursday, the 16th June, for Town, and on the following day for the Country.

VICTORIA-STREET PROPERTIES, LIMITED.

Incorporated under the Companies Acts, 1862 to 1893. Share Capital, £100,000, in 10,000 Five per Cent. Cumulative Preference and 10,000 Ordinary Shares, all of £5 each. 8,000 Preference and 8,000 Ordinary Shares are taken at par in part payment of the purchase consideration for the Properties; the balance is reserved for future issue.

ISSUE at par of £87,500 FOUR-AND-A-QUARTER PER CENT. FIRST MORTGAGE DEBENTURES of £100 each (part of a total authorised Debenture Issue of £120,000. The remaining £32,500 will only be issued for the purpose of adding to the Debenture-holders' security, in the manner stated in the Prospectus, and, if issued, will in the first instance be offered to existing Debenture-holders). The Interest is payable half-yearly on the 1st May and 1st November. The full Half-year's Interest on the Debentures now offered will be paid on the 1st November, 1898.

The Debentures are payable as follows:—

£20 on Application,	£25 one month after Allotment.
£30 on Allotment,	£25 two months after Allotment.

Payment in full may be made under rebate at the rate of 5 per cent. per annum. These First Mortgage Debentures are redeemable at par by means of a Sinking Fund as hereinafter mentioned. They will be secured by a First Mortgage over the whole of the property of the Company in favour of the Trustees for the Debenture-holders. The Debentures will be issued with half-yearly interest coupons attached, or, at the option of any Debenture-holder, the interest may be made payable by warrants.

TRUSTEES FOR THE DEBENTURE-HOLDERS.—The City Safe Deposit and Agency Company, Limited.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS.

Hon. Reginald Brougham, Chairman London United Laundries, Limited.
Lieut.-Colonel R. P. Hare, Director Grosvenor Mansions Company, Limited.
James Inman, Esq., 29, Stanley-Gardens, W.

BANKERS.—The Capital and Counties Bank, Limited, 39, Threadneedle-street, E.C., and Branches.

SOLICITORS.—Messrs. Ashurst, Morris, Crisp & Co., 17, Throgmorton-avenue, London, E.C.

SECRETARY and OFFICES (pro. tem.)—Mr. J. J. Truran, 183, Gresham House, Old Broad-street, London, E.C.

ABRIDGED DEBENTURE PROSPECTUS.

These Debentures will form the first and only Mortgage on the valuable and long Leasehold Properties, comprising a large number of sets of Flats and Offices, Business Premises, and Shops, known as Albert Mansions, Victoria-street, Westminster.

Albert Mansions occupy one of the most prominent positions in the above favourite locality, being in close proximity to Victoria Station, and having an imposing frontage of about 380 feet to Victoria-street, the total superficial area being 33,300 square feet, or about three-quarters of an acre. These Mansions, comprising 15 buildings, are numbered 96, 96A, 98, 100, 102, 104, 106, 108, 110, 112, 114, 116, 118, 120, and 122, and are held as follows:—Nos. 96 to 104 up to 25th December, 1984 (86 years unexpired); Nos. 106 to 112 up to 25th March, 1970 (71 years unexpired); and Nos. 114 to 122 up to 25th December, 1985 (87 years unexpired).

A portion of the Flats had been originally planned for the accommodation of large families, but, by subdividing them into smaller residences, far higher rentals can be obtained for a given area, and this course of subdivision of part of the vacant portions is being gradually carried out with the desired result. Thus large flats valued at £200 to £250, have not lately been offered for occupation in that condition, but are, at a small expenditure, being divided into three smaller flats readily letting at about £125 each. The ground floors not already let as business premises are altered for the latter purpose as occasion offers, commanding high rentals, there being a great and increasing demand for accommodation of this kind in that important thoroughfare. It is proposed to extend the frontages of the ground-floors to the extent of 5 ft.; this extension can be accomplished at a moderate outlay, and will largely increase their letting values.

It is contemplated hereafter to add two or three further floors to the existing buildings, which course is expected to meet with no difficulty, as Albert Mansions are substantially constructed edifices; by means of this addition a large further revenue may be expected to accrue, which has not been taken into consideration in the statement below. The cost of constructing the additional floor-space will probably not exceed £20,000 to £25,000. The £32,500 additional Debentures will only be issued hereafter with the object of providing the necessary funds for this purpose, and will in the first instance be offered to existing Debenture-holders in proportion to their holdings.

In nearly every case the rentals of the occupied tenancies, as they are falling in, are capable of being considerably raised, and no difficulty is expected in letting them at increased figures.

The properties have been valued at £128,000 by Messrs. Douglas, Young & Co. the well-known surveyors and valuers. Attention is drawn to their full Report which is annexed to the Prospectus, as is the certificate of Messrs. Jackson, Pixley, & Co., chartered accountants.

As will be seen from these two documents:—

The actual rentals from flats, offices, and shops, and value of unoccupied suites, now being prepared for letting, amount to	£12,860	7	0
The estimated increased rental value obtainable on termination of many of the existing tenancies is	4,489	13	0
Making a gross rental income of	£17,350	0	0

The total annual sum necessary for the service of the £87,600 Debentures now issued, including the fund for their redemption, is under £4,000.

There is probably no kind of Home Investment which, while yielding the comparatively high return of 4¼ per cent. per annum, can compare in safety with long leasehold property in the central part of the metropolis in which this Company's property is situated.

Attention is drawn to the present prices of similar Debentures, taken from the Official List of the 1st June, 1898:—

Name of Company.	Stock.	Present Price.
Ashley Gardens Properties, Ltd., Victoria-street, Westminster	4¼ p.c. Debenture Stock	112—115
City Offices Company, Limited	3½ p.c. Mortgage Debenture Stock	107—110
De Keyser's Royal Hotel, Limited	4 p.c. Mortgage Debenture Stock	109—111
Gordon Hotels Company, Limited	4 p.c. Debenture Stock	121—124
Middle Class Dwellings Company, Limited	4½ p.c. Mortgage Debenture Stock	118—123
Savoy Hotel, Limited	4 p.c. First Mortgage Stock	110—113

The Memorandum and Articles of Association, the Trust Deed securing the First Mortgage Debentures now offered, and the above-mentioned Reports, may be seen at the Offices of the Solicitors to the Company.

Where no allotment is made, the deposit will be returned in full; and in case of partial allotment, the balance of deposit will be applied towards payment of the first instalment. Any further surplus will be returned. If default be made in the payment of any instalment at the due date, the deposit and instalment previously paid will be liable to forfeiture.

Scrip will be issued in exchange for the letters of allotment and Bankers' receipt in due course, and notice will be given when the Debentures are ready for delivery.

Applications for Debentures, made on the form accompanying the Prospectus, are to be sent, together with the required deposit, to the Bankers, the Capital and Counties Bank, Limited, or to the Secretary of the Company.

Forms of application for Debentures can be obtained from the Bankers, Solicitors, and at the Offices of the Company.

Application for a quotation for the Debentures on the London Stock Exchange will be made in due course.

London, June 8th, 1898.

The List of Applications will be OPENED on MONDAY, the 13th, and CLOSED on or before WEDNESDAY, the 15th day of JUNE, 1898.

THE GILL McDOWELL JARRAH CO. LTD.

Incorporated under the Companies Acts, 1862 to 1893.

Freehold Depôt, Forests, Saw Mills, Railway, &c., Perth, Waigerup, and St. John's Brook, W.A.

CAPITAL - - £250,000,

divided into

125,000 Six per Cent. Cumulative Preference Shares of £1 each, and 125,000 Ordinary Shares of £1 each.

The Preference Shares are preferential both as to Capital and Dividend.

THERE ARE NOW OFFERED FOR SUBSCRIPTION, AT PAR:

83,334 Six per Cent. Cumulative Preference Shares, and 83,334 Ordinary Shares.

Payable:—2s. 6d. on Application; 7s. 6d. on Allotment; 5s. One Month after Allotment; and the Balance Two Months after Allotment.

WORKING CAPITAL.—50,000 Shares will be appropriated out of the above issue to provide working capital and funds for the purchase and erection of additional plant.

DIRECTORS,

The Right Hon. Lord Lurgan, D.L, J.P., 21, Lowndes-square, S.W. (Chairman of the Fish, Oil, and Guano Co.), Chairman.
The Hon. George E. Hill-Trevor, 14, Onslow-square, S.W.
Sir Roger T. Goldsworthy, K.C.M.G. (formerly Colonial Secretary for Western Australia, and late Governor of the Falkland Islands).
Percy Hoar (Messrs. Hoar & Brown, Timber Merchants, West India Docks, E.)
James Priestley, J.P., Huddersfield (Director of the Lancashire and Yorkshire Railway Co.)
Henry Ward, M.I.C.E., London County Council.

LOCAL DIRECTORS.

Frederick D. Good (Member of the firms of Messrs. Gill & Co. and Messrs. McDowell & Co.), Managing Director.
E. G. Lacey (formerly of Messrs. Gill & Co.)
The Hon. H. B. Lefroy, L.M.A., Minister of Education.
} Perth, Western Australia.

BANKERS.—Parr's Bank, Limited, Bartholomew-lane, London; the National Bank of Australasia, Limited, 123, Bishopsgate-street Within, E.C., and Perth, W.A.

BROKERS.—P. Buchan & Co., 15, Copthall-avenue, and Stock Exchange, London, E.C.; Oliver & Verity, 8, Mansfield Chambers, 17, St. Ann's-square, Manchester; W. & F. Cuthbert, 103, Colmore-row, Birmingham; Mellor & Wimpenny, 3, Cloth Hall-street, Huddersfield.

SOLICITORS.—Burn & Berridge, 11, Old Broad-street, London, E.C.

AUDITORS.—Ford, Rhodes, & Ford, Chartered Accountants, 81, Cannon-street, London, E.C.; Ford, Rhodes, Ford, & Co., Perth, Western Australia.

SECRETARY & OFFICES.—William E. McGowan, Cannon-st. House, London, E.C.

ABRIDGED PROSPECTUS.

This Company has been formed for the purpose of acquiring the extensive freehold and leasehold forest estates, freehold timber yard, railway, rolling stock, livestock, saw mills, &c., now held by Messrs. Gill & Co., and Messrs. McDowell & Co., at Perth, Sawyer's Valley, Mahogany Creek, Drake's Brook (Waigerup), and St. John's Brook (Vasse), Western Australia, and to take over as going concerns as from the 1st October, 1897, the timber businesses now carried on by them. This issue is intended to provide £50,000 working capital to increase the number of saw mills so as to meet the demand being experienced locally and for export, and generally to extend the businesses.

THE PROPERTIES AND ASSETS TO BE ACQUIRED.

Sawyer's Valley.—3,740 acres of well-timbered land.

Mahogany Creek.—2,560 acres of good jarrah forest land.

Drake's Brook.—20,860 acres of forest land, thickly covered with Jarrah of the best quality.

St. John's Brook and Balinup.—76,120 acres of forest lands, heavily timbered with jarrah of the finest quality.

Perth.—Freehold timber yard and premises in centre of City, abutting on Main Eastern Railway, and leasehold yard and premises in Wellington-street.

Timber Rights.—In all the company will acquire 1,144 acres of freehold land, timber rights over 103,280 acres of leasehold land, and exercise forestry rights of cutting timber over 50,000 acres.

Plant and Railway.—Four sawmills, with complete plant, machinery, workshops, cottages, stabling for 240 horses and bullocks, livestock, railway sidings, 43 timber trucks, &c.

Stock.—All the stock-in-trade and goodwill of established successful businesses, together with the benefit of all contracts held by them.

VALUATION.

Mr. Ednie-Brown, it will be seen from his cablegram, values the timber at the Drake's Brook, St. John's Brook, and Balinup Estates at over £2, 718,000.

Mr. Deakin's report shows a valuation of £59,800 for the existing mills, plant, railways, and all other property to be acquired; but exclusive of the timber, on which he estimates a profit of over £870,000, being at the rate of 20s. per load.

MANAGEMENT.

Arrangements have been made with Mr. F. D. Good, the managing partner of Messrs. Gill & Co., and partner in the firm of Messrs. McDowell & Co., under terms whereby his remuneration is partly fixed and partly dependent upon profits, to take over the management of the Company in Western Australia, and it is proposed to take over the existing staff there; the continuity of successful management being thereby secured.

PROFITS.

Messrs. Ford, Rhodes, Ford, & Co., accountants of Perth, Western Australia, have examined the accounts of the businesses, and have furnished, through their London house the following certificate:—

"81, Cannon-street, London, E.C., June 7th, 1898.

"To the Directors of the Gill McDowell Jarrah Company, Limited.

"Gentlemen—In accordance with instructions, we have examined the books of Messrs. Gill & Co., of Perth, Western Australia, for the three years ended July 31st, 1897, and after making allowance for depreciation, certify that the profits are as under.

"We have also examined the books of the timber business of Messrs. McDowell & Co., of Perth, Western Australia, for the 12 months ended 31st October last (the business having only been carried on by the existing partners since November 1st, 1896), and after making allowance for depreciation, certify that the profits for this period are as under:—

Gill & Co., 1895		£4,555
Gill & Co., 1896		£6,333
Gill & Co., 1897	£7,667
McDowell & Co., 1897 ...	£10,194
		£17,861

"We are, Gentlemen, yours faithfully, FORD, RHODES, FORD, & CO."

Inasmuch as the business of Messrs. McDowell & Co. has only been carried on by the existing partners since 1st November, 1896, the accounts of that business are limited to this period.

It will be seen from the foregoing certificate that the profits of the combined businesses for the last completed year are £17,861.

These profits are the result of the one mill working at Sawyer's Valley; one at Mahogany Creek; and three at Drake's Brook, of which two have been dismantled and replaced by one large mill, making two large mills now in full work there.

On the erection of the six additional mills as intended, at St. John's Brook and Balinup, and based on an output per mill considerably less than that referred to in Mr. Deakin's report, it is estimated that the total output will be at least 43,500 loads per annum.

The profit based upon the experience not only of these businesses, but of other West Australian timber businesses, viz., Messrs. C. & G. Millar and Messrs. M. C. Davies & Co., may be safely taken at 20s. per load after allowing for management of expenses. This would yield a profit on the estimate of output, of £43,500 per annum.

Prospectuses and Forms of Application for Shares may be obtained at the Offices of the Company, and of the Bankers, Brokers, Solicitors, and Auditors.

London, 9th June, 1898.

A Proposal to every Lady—

—to make delicious Custard with

BIRD'S CUSTARD POWDER

A DAILY LUXURY.

Numerous are the uses for BIRD'S Custard Powder :—Dainties in endless variety, the choicest Dishes, and the richest Custard.

NO EGGS! NO RISK! NO TROUBLE!

SINGER

MODÈLE DE LUXE

(Registered Trade Mark)

SEND TO-DAY FOR SPECIAL CLEARANCE LISTS, FREE.

CYCLES

SINGER CYCLE CO. LTD. COVENTRY
LONDON: 17, HOLBORN VIADUCT.

A MASTER KEY

of this SIZE

Can be made to open any number of Locks. Many Ladies and Gentlemen have the whole of their locks so arranged that a MASTER KEY, so small as to be worn in a finger-ring or locket, will open every lock they possess—from their Dressing Bags, Trunks, Jewel Cases, Despatch Boxes, &c., to the Front Door, Wine Cellar, Park Gates, &c. Just think of the Convenience! The locks are made in suites, each suite with its own key, so that the ladies' maid or valet can open the luggage, the butler the wine cellar, and so on, but the suite keys are of no use for any but their own series.

BRAMAH JEWEL SAFES,

BURGLAR AND FIRE RESISTING, SPECIALLY ADAPTED FOR BED AND DRESSING ROOMS.

Specialities in fitted Suite Cases and Dressing Bags, Jewel Cases, Despatch and Deed Boxes, Bramah Street Door Latches, with small keys, Bramah Padlocks for Bicycles, with Leather-covered Chains, &c. &c.

New Illustrated Catalogues Post Free.

For Prices and Particulars apply to

NEEDS & CO. Late

Bramah & Co.

Sole Manufacturers of the real Bramah Locks.

100, NEW BOND STREET,
LONDON, W.

A Master Key Signet Ring (Open).

PIPING THE PRAISES OF

PATTISONS' WHISKY.

SCOTLAND'S BEST.

SOLD EVERYWHERE.

Sole Proprietors, PATTISONS, LTD.
Highland Distillers,
LEITH, BALLINDALLOCH, LONDON.
Head Office—CONSTITUTION ST., LEITH.

OUR PUZZLES.

CONDENSED RULES.

All answers to the current Puzzle must be sent in on or before the morning of the Monday week following the date of that Puzzle's publication, to the PUZZLE EDITOR, TRUTH Buildings, Carteret-street, Queen Anne's-gate, London, S.W. The answers must be signed by a nom de plume of not more than twelve letters, and must not be sent on post-cards, nor by telegraph, nor by hand; whilst in the case of new competitors the real name and address must be forwarded with the first reply sent.

"TRUTH" PUZZLE, No. 1,006.

The best suggested word for expressing the offence of "Riding-in-a-superior-class-of-carriage-to-that-for-which-the-fare has-been-paid" is "Superclassing." It happens, however, that this word, or its equivalent, was suggested by no less than seven competitors, viz., Almaviva, Gingernut, Pad, Aldbarn, Ludwig B., Mallaby, and Davham. This would imply the division of the available Two Guineas into such small parts that it has occurred to me that the successful competitors would probably prefer to have a special competition of a somewhat similar kind arranged for them, to decide who shall have the Two Guineas. Should this suggestion meet their approval I shall be pleased to hear from them to that effect.

"TRUTH" PUZZLE, No. 1,007.

The result of this competition will be announced next week.

"TRUTH" PUZZLE, No. 1,008.

No competitor succeeded in identifying all the quotations taken from the Royal Academy Catalogue. But no less than five competitors were able to name the source of seven of them, and amongst these five competitors therefore the prize of Two Guineas will be divided. The names of the five are Harriet March, Knight's Pawn, Babs, Erin, and Chutney.

"TRUTH" PUZZLE, No. 1,012.

The usual Prize of Two Guineas is offered this week for

THE QUOTATION FROM SHAKESPEARE, NOT EXCEEDING FOUR LINES IN LENGTH, WHICH MIGHT BE MOST APPROPRIATELY PLACED OVER THE ENTRANCE TO THE ROYAL ENCLOSURE AT ASCOT.

Readers of TRUTH are well aware of the way in which the Master of the Royal Buckhounds is pestered with applications for tickets for the Royal Enclosure. They must have often read, too, the criticisms and comments made on the composition of the crowd that ultimately gains admission. In case a prose quotation is selected, it must not consist of more than thirty-six words. Competitors must not send in more than one quotation; and all answers should reach me at the latest by the morning of Monday, June 27.

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

MARAH.—Your "In Memoriam" verses exceed the prescribed limit of eight lines.

MAISON BLANC.—I regret to say that the available space had been exhausted before your lines reached me.

J. F. HALL.—Your lines arrived too late for the current competition.

NEMO.—The announcement is made this week.

THE PUZZLE EDITOR.

"TRUTH" PUZZLE, No. 1,009.—ASSORTED SPECIMENS—GOOD AND OTHERWISE.

"IN MEMORIAM" VERSES ON THE LATE MR. GLADSTONE.

'hrough Life's long battle, bravely to the fore,
He nobly played a manful Briton's part;
nd he is dead, yet lives for evermore
Enshrined in ev'ry honest British heart.
nd to the scroll of Fame, in letters bright,
His mighty name shall added lustre lend;
ritannia weeps, but dries her tears to write
Upon his tomb, "Here lies the people's friend!"
R. F.

ather rejoice, dear friends, nor waste a tear,
or one so great and good, so kind and dear;
eep for the base, the broken-hearted, they hat scarce pay back to earth her own poor clay.
eep not for him; to friend, and child, and wife,
e leaves the blessing of a blameless life;
o England leaves new freedom, power, fame,
nd to a grateful world his grand, immortal name.
W. Nevermore.

A nation's eyes with tears are dim
For silver speech to silence brought—
The noblest of her sons is nought,
And none comes after like to him.

Vain toil if one be diligent
To compass dirge or elegy!
Himself and his great life must be
His most enduring monument.
J. W.

e giant brain that forged such weighty thought,
The voice that held its hearers in a spell,
e dauntless spirit that for freedom fought,
Will ever live in memory. The mere shell at held within it such a spirit force, nks back once more unto its earthly source;
t, from the Nation's self till life departs,
adstone will "lie in State" in English hearts.
Henry IX.

e mark the man who climbs Fame's envied hill,
And proudly stands upon its glorious height,
mired by all beholding eyes until
Some other climber comes before our sight.
t he who climbs beyond the hill of fame
To that high mount, a nation's fervent love,
all never be forgotten, and his name
Shall be inscribed all other names above.
Chess Vale.

e loss is ours who stay. The gain is thine,
Who, single-eyed, trod where thy Master trod—
e earthly fades, but that which is divine
Is surely garnered in the stores of God
ll when at last, in earth's great golden year,
Thy Master shall begin His righteous reign,
ou, with all souls to whom the right was dear,
Shalt come with Him to rule this world again.
Buzzard.

ll and farewell! The tender accents break
Right from our hearts, that may do naught but weep;
r knowing till the last dread trump shall wake,
Our God hath given His belovéd sleep.
ough we should joy to know Thy suffering o'er,
Thy days of anguish and Thy nights of pain;
t, wailing children at a closéd door,
In selfish grief we cry, "Come back again!"
Criterion.

The voices hush—the music dies—
We feel the calm of Paradise.
Farewell! Thy guerdon more than fame!
The peace that changeth never.
Farewell! we breathe an hallowed name.
Grant us, O Lord, our trials past,
To share with him true peace at last,
Within thy courts for ever.
Scrivener.

Low lies the aged head, so calm, so grand,
Hushed is the voice that Death was loth to still;
Closed is the fearless eye, and cold the hand
That but obeyed the forces of his will.

Welded with all he wrought for England's weal,
His name and mem'ry will be held secure
In England's heart—as due to one whose zeal
Was never tiring, and whose life was pure.
Georgina.

Like lonely lighthouse 'mid the seething wave,
Majestic, towering, radiant, strong to save;
Firm planted on the rock, all steadfast, sure,
That storm-tossed men might to the end endure.

Quenched now that ray, to gleam on farther shore.
Who, worthy, left, its splendour to restore?
Man's need, incessant, urgent, calls for light.
God grant that like, if less, still rule our night!
Robert Martin.

A cloud is resting on our land this day,
For England's noblest son has passed away;
Where wrong would menace, tyranny enthrall,
His voice went ringing like a clarion's call.
Justice and truth he held in high control,
The master passions of his mighty soul;
He held them sacred, as a trust from God,
And duty led in every path he trod.
Daniel.

Through thundering storms of loud debate,
With right hand firm upon the helm,
A pilot steered the ship of state
O'er proud Britannia's realm.
Then, as a fairer shore he neared,
Left on her waves a trail of light,
That Britain's ships might o'er be steered
In safety through the night.
Chantry Owl.

Now, laid to rest with hymns and solemn roll
Of organ, sleeps among our mighty dead
The trumpet-tongued, the vehement strong soul,
That thro' long years his country served and led.

Victor in many a fight, the sound of fray
Is hushed; the world suspends its party strife,
While friend and foe, with one accord, to-day
Praise God for such a man—and such a life.
Norfolk.

What shall we say above his sacred grave?
What need of epitaph or dirge is there
To show our reverent sorrow, when we gave
A people's prayer?

How could we sing his worth, his wisdom, how
Record the splendid service of his years?
Enough the requiem that we hear even now,
A world in tears!
Penserosa.

The tears have risen to our eyes, and yet
Our hearts are kindled—death, that brings eclipse,
Is great as life! Never may we forget
This lasting memory. Eloquent lips
Are hushed—but noble service, done from youth,
Pleads eloquently still! The garnered years—
The "Record Life" of service—speak in truth,
And in high memories we forget our tears.
Addie.

Hushed though thy voice—ever "a thing of beauty"—
And closed the eyes that flashed at freedom's name;
"Champion of truth, love, liberty, and duty,"
Is deeply graven on the shield of fame.

No tears need fall, thy earthly work had ended,
Huge though the task, ceased was the restless strife,
Calmly and bravely, life with death had blended,
When death's awakening brought immortal life.
Bird, Swansea.

Who could forget who once had heard
That sweet-toned silver tongue.
Whose wondrous web of woven word
In faultless form was strung?
To stem the stream of strife he sought,
And free the toil-opprest;
Freedom and peace, his end and thought,
They shroud him in his rest.
Creran.

Lost though his form is we joy in the knowing
All cannot pass with his labouring breath;
Death slays the sower—the fruit of his sowing
Time will reveal to be stronger than Death.
Foremost of fighters, thy foemen have vanished,
Friends in thy death are the foes in thy life.
Here, where the echoes of battle are banished,
Sleep in the deep after-silence of strife.
Twins.

Our "Grand old Man" has slowly sunk to rest.
May peace be given her he loved the best!
And may the nation keep within its heart
The name of one who played so great a part;
God and the people loved him, for they knew
How he kept truth and righteousness in view,
Lover of peace, yet strong to brave the storm
The name of Gladstone echoes back "Reform!"
Risk.

The voice is still, the axe is laid aside,
Life's evil forests quake not as before:
The sweet mouth joins a nation's tears, the tide
Of Death moves soundless to the further shore.
Millions of men did in that soul confide,
And ever as it fadeth, more and more
A light grows stronger till it bursts in flame—
The unstained splendour of a noble name,
Felix.

Among the mighty, who, when life's brief fire
And force have failed them, then are mightiest;
Among the eloquent, who most inspire
When Death has touched their lips to final rest;
Among the loved, for whom, when the shades part,
Flows deeper love than when we saw their face;
He, too, at death new born in England's heart,
Has won him there an everlasting place.
Auita.

Fallen asleep, he is released from pain.
Those fiery eyes are closed, no more again
Will they flash forth, in wrath imperial,
Glorious magnificence of high disdain.
The deep pulsations of that mighty soul
Have ceased; no more the burning tears will roll,
Roused by the golden voice's trumpet call.
The race is run, and he has reached the goal.
H. E.

Not dead. He sleepeth in his well-earned rest,
And his great spirit doth ascend on high.
Though hushed that silver voice, it never will die,
But ever echo in a freeman's breast.

Mourn, then, in hope. Though taken from our sight,
His words and works through distant time will live.
What he has given his mem'ry still will give—
The will for truth and justice still to fight.
Mahmut.

"Requiescat in pace!" Thy great work accomplished,
"Friend of the People," and of all distrest;
Victor in many fights, thy last foe vanquished—
A glorious passing, now a quiet rest.

Yes, rest, true heart, and when thy life's grand story
Is told by those who watched thee in the strife,
It will be said, "This was his crowning glory—
He for the People lived a selfless life!"
Natal.

Not for the genius of the master mind,
Not for the eloquence that all might feel,
But for the heart that felt for all mankind,
That had no thought for self, and true as steel,
Is the world moved to hear that he is gone.
More lasting than its greatest warrior's fame?
Where'er in freedom's cause the sword is drawn,
Shall be the memory of Gladstone's name.

Marplot.

Should Britain from her giddy height
Ignore the weak oppress;
"Gladstone," the word of magic might,
Shall put her heart to test.
Above the nation's mighty cheer—
"Britannia rules the waves!"
A clarion voice will echo clear—
"Let Britons ne'er be slaves!"

Ora.

Now take thy rest with England's mighty great,
While hearts of friends and foes alike are rent;
Erst peerless helmsman of the ship of State,
The greatest pillar of our Parliament!

There is a deathless halo round thy name—
The glow of manly deeds in mortal strife;
And through the ages man in words of flame
Shall read the record of a noble life!

Felixicus.

There are tears on England's Rose, and her head is hanging low,
E'en Scotland's Thistle, strong and brave, is bending 'neath its woe;
But of all the three, the Shamrock, poor Erin's little flower,
Droops lowest far, for she has lost her friend in sorrow's hour.

Let the Rose and let the Thistle, the powerful and the strong,
Give freedom to their sister; O! let them right the wrong,
And rear to him who loved her the tomb he best would love—
Fair Freedom's flag, the Star of Hope, and Peace's heav'nly dove!

Scotswoman.

The dead are like the stars by day,
Withdrawn from mortal eye,
But, not extinct, they hold their way
In glory through the sky.
But now his radiant course is run—
For Gladstone's course was bright;
His soul was like the glorious sun,
A matchless, heavenly light.

Theology.

Near three-score years of pure wedded life,
Midst homely delights and party strife;
For well upon three score years and ten
His best he gave to his fellow men;
Four-score and ten, save one, when at last,
With mind undimmed, to the end he passed;
In years and honour excelled by few—
A Christian gentleman through and through.

Pyramid.

Answers have been received from J. H. Jackson, Stephanotis, Neak, Natal, William Jones, Georgina, H. E., Commoner, Mecca, Samos, Chanting Owl, Mahomet, Almaviva, Myrah, Addie, Chess Vale, Dreyfoo, Penserosa, Marplot, Pen, Pro Archia, Ivy Leaves, Toph, January, Felixleus, Theology, Ore Cross, Rugeley, Fide et Opera, Criterion, Vox, Nella, Snowdrop, O. P. Q., Taffy, Norfolk, Bird Swansea, Grimalkin, Homms, Effie, Salt, J. McGrigor Allan, Scotswoman, Oxoniensis, Rosetta, Lenten Lily, Zeua, Aidee, Quilp, Spook, Sol, Creran, Twins, Excelsior, Esperanza, Otter, Felsberg, A. E. L., Ivanhoe, Threnody, Risk, Miss Gourlay, Cuca, Dualwor, Job, Auntie, Felix, R. F., Nevermore, Tea Eye, Alastor, J. W., R. Martin, Buzzard, Minnyarrah, Alicia, Daniel, Scrivener, Pyramid, Béranger, Petruchio, Paddy, Scorpio, Edgeome.

WATER ABSOLUTELY FREE FROM DISEASE GERMS, BY USING THE

BERKEFELD FILTER.

Full Illustrated Price List and Testimonials free on application.

FILTER H. AS SKETCH, 42s.

SMALLER SIZE, 30s.

Extract from the Special Report to the British Medical Journal on "The Relative Efficiency of Water Filters," by Drs. Sims Woodhead and Cartwright Wood, Jan. 22nd, 1898. "Experiments were carried out with the Filter H., an exceedingly good model which seems to subserve the functions of a Filter better than any we have yet seen described. . . . The output is so large that there is no reason why such Filters should not supply sufficient water for all household requirements. These Berkefeld Filters afford complete protection against the communication of waterborne disease."—Offices and Showrooms:—

THE BERKEFELD FILTER CO., Ltd., 121, Oxford-street, London, W.

City Depot: W. SCHACHT & CO., 26, Finsbury-pavement, London, E.C.

Solid Silver, £4 4s.

Substantially made afternoon tea set on approval. If you decide within two weeks that you do not want it, the money will be returned. Every piece is the highest strength consistent with neatness, and will last a life-time. English Hall Marked.

Delivered safe and secure on receipt of

£4 4s.

WATCHMAKERS' ALLIANCE LTD.,

227, Regent-st., & 184, Oxford-st., London.

COLEMAN'S

WINCARNIS

Is a delicious beverage and tonic made from Port Wine, Liebig's Extract of Meat and Extract of Malt.

OVER FIVE THOUSAND

Unsolicited Testimonials have been received from Medical Men.

The following Important Testimonial has been received from Dr. FLETCHER.

Applecross, Rosshire, N.B., July 2nd, 1897.

Dear Sirs,—Please forward quarter of a dozen "Wincarnis" immediately as my patient's supply is about done.

I trust there will be no delay, as he takes no other nourishment, and has been sustained and gained strength by "Wincarnis" for twelve weeks. Yours faithfully, DUNCAN FLETCHER, L.R.C.P.

Sole Proprietors and Manufacturers of the above,

COLEMAN & CO., Ltd.,

NORWICH and LONDON.

Sample Bottle may be had, free of charge, on receipt of full postal address. Sold in Bottles, 2/9 and 4/6.

MELLIN'S FOOD

is known

Throughout the World

as a perfect diet for children, but

MELLIN'S COD LIVER OIL

EMULSION

is unknown to

Hundreds of Thousands

who are troubled with Coughs, Colds, Loss of Flesh, and General Malnutrition, and who would benefit by using it.

MELLIN'S FOOD WORKS, PECKHAM, S.E.

NOTICE. THE NEW

"CRICKLITE" LAMPS

FOR DINNER TABLES AND DRAWING ROOMS.

Can be SEEN and purchased ONLY at

75, REGENT STREET, next door to St. James's Hall, and

156, REGENT STREET, AND NOWHERE ELSE.

A Special Set of CRICKLITE LAMPS expressly made for HIS IMPERIAL MAJESTY the SULTAN of TURKEY is now on view.

N.B.—Please write for the new Book of Designs, Now Ready.

Genuine Old Welch Dressers

(Inlaid and Carved Oak), from £6. 10s.

ILLUSTRATED PRICED CATALOGUES POST FREE.
ALL GOODS CARRIAGE PAID TO ANY STATION IN GREAT BRITAIN.

ESTATE DEPARTMENT.
Auctions and Private Sales, Valuations, Lettings, Surveys, Repairs, and Decorations.

HEWETSONS,
TOTTENHAM COURT ROAD, London, W.

ATKINSON'S
EAU DE
COLOGNE

Is absolutely the finest made.
More fragrant, more lasting, and very much more refreshing than all others.
USE ONLY ATKINSON'S:
ONCE USED, ALWAYS USED.
Single Bottle 2/3 post free,
Case of 6 Bottles 11s. Carriage Paid.
OF ALL DEALERS.
J. & E. ATKINSON, Limited, 24, Old Bond Street, London,
INVENTORS OF THE CELEBRATED
"WHITE ROSE" PERFUME.
"A Charming Scent."—H.R.H. The Duchess of York.

JUNO CYCLES ARE THE VERY BEST
Any JUNO Twelve Monthly Payments.
JUNO Lady's or Gent's Safety, £12 12s., 21/- monthly; £14 14s., 24/6 monthly. JUNOS from £10, 16/8 monthly. Write for New Season's List of JUNO Cycles & Accessories, sent post free. Junos shipped to all parts of the world. Large discount.
METROPOLITAN MACHINISTS CO., LTD.
75, 76, Bishopsgate Without, E.C.; & at Piccadilly Circus, London, W.

LIQUEURS OF THE GRANDE CHARTREUSE.
These delicious Liqueurs, which have come so much into public favour on account of their wonderful properties of aiding Digestion and preventing Dyspepsia, can now be had of all the principal Wine and Spirit Merchants, and all good Hotels and Restaurants throughout the Kingdom.
Sole Consignee: W. DOYLE, 35, Crutched Friars, London, E.C.

Enormous Demand.

There can be no surer sign of popularity than the enormous demand all over the country for

LIPTONS' DELICIOUS TEAS

They are appreciated everywhere for their delicate flavour and exquisite aroma, and undoubtedly have attained the pinnacle of fame.

LIPTONS' DELICIOUS TEAS. Millions drink them daily.

Millions of people are daily drinking and enjoying these delicious Teas, fresh from the sweet-scented island of Ceylon. Liptons own some of the most famous estates in Ceylon, which cover thousands of acres of the best tea-growing land, including such well-known gardens as Dambattenne, Laymastotte, Monerakande, Mahadambatenne, Mousakelle, Pooprassie, Hanagalla, Gigranella, Karandagalla, Daminatenne, Oakfield, and Nahakettia, in connection with which several thousand natives are constantly employed.

LIPTONS CONTROL THE TEA MARKET.

LIPTONS' TEAS HAVE THE LARGEST SALE
IN THE WORLD

ROYAL APPOINTMENT
LIPTON,
Tea Merchant by Special Appointment To Her Majesty The Queen.

BUY FROM THE GROWERS.
The Finest Tea the World can produce.
PER 1/7 LB.
NO HIGHER PRICE.
RICH, PURE, AND FRAGRANT.
PER 1/- AND 1/4 LB.

LIPTON LTD.,
TEA, COFFEE, AND COCOA PLANTERS, CEYLON,
THE LARGEST TEA, COFFEE, AND PROVISION DEALERS IN THE WORLD.

Chief Offices: CITY ROAD, LONDON. Branches and Agencies throughout the World.
Ceylon Offices and Tea and Coffee Shipping Warehouses: PRINCE STREET, and MADDEMA MILLS, CINNAMON GARDENS, COLOMBO. Indian Offices and Shipping Warehouses: HARE STREET, CALCUTTA.

THE MUTUAL LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY OF NEW YORK.

RICHARD A. McCURDY, President.

Policy-holders in the "Mutual" enjoy the advantages of

SECURITY.—

Assets, 1897, exceed £52,000,000
Surplus, 1897, exceeds 7,250,000

ADAPTABILITY.—

LIFE INSURANCE.
INVESTMENT.
INCOME.

PROMPTITUDE.—

Claims paid in London immediately on receipt of satisfactory proof.

LIBERALITY.—

Bonuses have, in many cases, trebled the original sum.
Surrender values of unique liberality paid.

Detailed information supplied on application.

Head Office for the United Kingdom:
17 & 18, CORNHILL, LONDON, E.C.
D. C. HALDEMAN, General Manager.

"WORTH A GUINEA A BOX."

BEECHAM'S PILLS.

FOR ALL
BILIOUS & NERVOUS DISORDERS
SUCH AS
Sick Headache, Constipation,
Weak Stomach, Impaired Digestion,
Disordered Liver & Female Ailments.

SALE NOW OVER SIX MILLION BOXES YEARLY.
In boxes, 1/1½ and 2/9 each, with full directions.

Prepared only by the Proprietor.

THOMAS BEECHAM, St. Helens, Lancashire.

Sold by all Druggists and Patent Medicine Dealers everywhere.

SCHWEITZER'S

Cocoatina

"THE ROYAL COCOA."

Absolutely pure and full of nourishing and sustaining properties.

"THE QUEEN has a cup of Schweitzer's Cocoatina brought to her at 7.30 a.m., and two hours later uses the same beverage at the breakfast table."—SOCIETY.

BY ORDER OF THE CZAR.—"Send immediately to office of Marshal, Imperial Court, Petersburg Winter Palace, twenty half-pound tins Schweitzer's Cocoatina — Colonel Anitschkoff."—(TELEGRAM FROM ST. PETERSBURG).

QUEENBORO' AND FLUSHI ROUTE TO THE CONTINENT

ROYAL DUTCH MAIL
DAY AND NIGHT SERVICES.

Trains leave London (Victoria, Holborn Viaduct, St. Paul's, and Her Stations) for Queenboro' TWICE DAILY (Sundays included) in direct com with the large, fast, and powerful PADDLE Steamers to Flushing.

BEST, QUICKEST, AND SAFEST ROUTE TO HOLLAND, GERM SCANDINAVIA, AUSTRIA, SWITZERLAND, AND ITALY.

Passengers and Luggage booked through from and to London to and the principal Stations on the Continent.

Through Communications, AVOIDING PASSAGE ACROSS LONDON (or days only), between Liverpool, Manchester, Birmingham and Glasgo Queenboro', and vice versa, viâ Willesden Junction and Herne Hill.

Time Tables and full particulars gratis through the ZEELAND STEA COMPANY'S LONDON OFFICE: 44A, FORE-STREET, E.C.

ST. GALMIER MOUSSEUX

(AERATED).

No Table Water can compete with it; exhilarating and light, it gives to wines and spirits a piquant taste which is most refreshing.

ST. GALMIER in Claret Bottles (Aerated).

Quite different to German Springs, which are saline and soapy, and spoil wines and spirits.

ST. GALMIER, Eau sans Rivale (Aerated).

50 Claret Bottles	24/-
100 ,, ,, (pints)	38/-
Less allowance for empties returned carriage paid ... 50 quarts	3/-
,, ,, ,, 100 pints	5/-

RUBINAT (SOURCE LLORACH).

Physicians recommend this aperient water for its richness in sulphates. Active, painless, and requires only small doses. Most valuable in all gout, liver, or abdominal complaints. Sold in quart bottles.

E. GALLAIS & CO., 90, PICCADILLY, W.

FIRST SPECTACLES.—When these are required the advi very skilful optician should be tak unless the spectacles used in the first instance are exactly suited to th mischief is soon done which cannot afterwards be remedied.

BROWNING'S SYSTEM OF SUITING THE SIGHT
IS ALWAYS SUCCESSFUL.

Mr. JOHN BROWNING, President of The British Optical Assoc and Author of "Our Eyes," now in its 17th Edition, price 1s., 63, STR LONDON, W.C. May be consulted personally free of charge.

THE MOST NUTRITIOUS COCOA.

EPPS'S

GRATEFUL—COMFORTING.

COCOA

FOR BREAKFAST AND SUPPER.

Printed for the Proprietor by LOVE & WYMAN, Limited, Great Queen-st. W.C. and published at 10, Bolt-ct. Fleet-st. E.C. in the Parish of St. Dunstan's-in-the-W in the City of London. Cheques and Post Office Orders should be made payable to REGINALD E. BOOKER, "Truth" Buildings, Carteret-st. Queen Anne's gate. S.

• TRUTH •

"Cultores Veritatis Fraudis Inimici."—Cicero.

No. 1121. Vol. XLIII. Thursday, June 23, 1898. Price Sixpence.

NOTICE.

The terms of Subscription to Truth, which are payable in advance, are as follows:—To any address in the United Kingdom, for 3 months, 7s.; 6 months, 14s.; and for 12 months, 28s. The Thin Paper Edition is forwarded to countries within the Postal Union for 3 months for 7s. 8d.; 6 months, 15s. 4d.; and 12 months, 30s. 8d. Cheques and Post Office Orders should be made payable to the Manager, Truth, "Truth Building," Carteret-street, S.W.

ENTRE NOUS.

THE Queen returns to-day (Wednesday) to Windsor Castle from Balmoral, for a stay of between three and four weeks, before going to Osborne, where her Majesty will reside until August 22, and then the Court goes back to Scotland for nearly three months. It is probable that the Queen will visit Edinburgh on her way from Osborne to Balmoral, in which case her Majesty is to stay at Holyrood from Tuesday morning, August 23, until Wednesday night, the 24th, when she will proceed north.

The Royal yacht Osborne has completed a refit at Portsmouth, and her cabins have been re-decorated. The Prince of Wales is to join the Osborne at Portsmouth Harbour on Friday, July 29, and he will live on board the yacht during his few days' stay at Cowes. It is possible that the Princess of Wales, the Duke and Duchess of Fife, and Princess Victoria may go for a week's cruise in the Osborne next month, running down the coast to Mount's Bay, and paying a visit to the Channel Islands.

The Prince of Wales and the Duke of Cambridge are to be at Newmarket next week for the First July Meeting, arriving in time for the races on Tuesday. They all stay at the Jockey Club.

Sandringham is now closed for the summer, as the Prince and Princess are not expected to return to the Hall until quite the end of October, and York Cottage will also be deserted for several months to come.

The Prince leaves town this (Wednesday) morning for Sutton Coldfield, to visit the Show of the Royal Agricultural Society in Four Oaks Park. H.R.H. proceeds late in the afternoon to Warwick Castle, where he will be the guest of Lord and Lady Warwick until Friday morning, when he goes to Broughton Castle, near Banbury, to pay a short visit to Lord and Lady Algernon Gordon Lennox on his way back to town.

The Grand Duke and Grand Duchess of Hesse are to pay a visit to the Queen at Osborne towards the end of next month, and they will be the guests of her Majesty during the Cowes Regatta week. The Grand Duke Ernest will very likely accompany the Duke of Connaught from Osborne to Goodwood on the Cup Day.

The laws of Prussia provide that if an article is lost, the finder can claim one-tenth of its value when he restores it to the owner. The German Empress recently lost her insignia of the Royal Order of Victoria and Albert, which includes medallions of the Queen and Prince Albert, surrounded by brilliants. This jewel was found by a porter, who received a reward of a hundred marks, but he contends that the article is worth considerably more than a thousand marks (£50), and he has brought an action against the Cabinet of the Empress in order to obtain a larger sum.

With reference to the opera performance which is to take place in the Waterloo Gallery at Windsor Castle, next Monday night, by command of the Queen, I see in the daily papers a statement as to the arrangements of the Lord Chamberlain. As a matter of fact, the Lord Chamberlain is no more concerned with the affair than is the Archbishop of Canterbury. Everything in connection with the Queen's private entertainments is entirely managed by the Master of the Household, who also sends out the invitations, if any are issued.

Mr. March, who was just going to resign his office of Secretary to the Board of Green Cloth at Buckingham Palace (the Lord Steward's Department), died last week, after sixty-three years' service in the Household. In 1835 Mr. March was appointed to a clerkship in the Lord Chamberlain's Office, through the interest of his relative Sir Thomas March, who then held the place which Sir Spencer Ponsonby Fane has filled for more than forty years past. The Queen gets some good patronage by the death of Mr. March, who received over £1,000 a year as Secretary to the Board of Green Cloth, and he was also Receiver of Fees of Honour (a post with a considerable stipend), and a Serjeant-at-Arms, which means £70 a year for doing nothing whatever.

The Lord-Lieutenancy of Middlesex would have been given to a Tory Peer but for the vigorous, not to say furious, remonstrance of some of the Liberal Unionists, who are very savage about the appointment of the Duke of Portland to the Lieutenancy of Notts. I believe that the Duke of Bedford enjoys the distinction of being the only notable personage on the Ministerial side who refused a place in 1895, nor has he ever asked for anything. He declined to be Master of the Horse when the present Government was formed, and the Duke of Portland then snapped up that easy and lucrative post.

The Viceroyalty of Ireland is one of the most curious institutions that any State, outside the realms of romance, exhibits to a wondering world, or rather to a world that would inevitably wonder if it gave consideration to the subject. Unfortunately, the same clear light that beats upon a Royal Throne does not beat upon a Viceregal one. No wholesome public opinion has kept Dublin Castle in check under the long succession of English noblemen who have "reigned" there, and the most curious and wonderful of State institutions has been developed. Lord Cadogan's Viceroyalty most forcibly illustrates the incongruities of the place. Ireland, which gives the Legislature so much occupation, apparently allows very ample leisure to the nobleman who fills the Viceroy's place. A return of the number of days during which, of late years, the country was under the government of the Lords Justices, who are sworn in "Governors-General of Ireland" during the Lord-Lieutenant's absence, would be instructive and interesting.

It has brought very prominently before the public the rigorous exclusion of Catholics—in a country, too, which has no State Church, and where all religions are equal according to the law—from filling the posts of Governors-General. An oath which no Catholic can conscientiously take stands, or rather is deliberately placed, in the way of the Catholic Privy Councillors. It frequently happens—what does not happen at Dublin Castle?—that the Catholic Privy Councillors are called on to administer this oath which they could not themselves take. In the face of the assertion that Irish grievances are things of the past, this example of aggressive Protestant ascendency has been most noticeable during the Viceroyalty of Lord Cadogan, in whom the English nobleman rather than the Viceroy or Cabinet Minister is perhaps the predominant partner. Lord Cadogan has missed no London season since his reign at Dublin Castle began.

A very well-known figure in Irish society has passed away by the death of Lady Fanny Lambart at Beauparc, Co. Meath. Her husband, Mr. Gustavus Lambart, held a place for many years in the Viceregal household, and her son, Major Lambart, was Chamberlain during the Duke of Marlborough's Viceroyalty. Lady Fanny Lambart was very popular in Dublin society and in Meath, where, of late, she was a constant resident. She was the sister of Lady Churchill, so well known at the Royal Court, and the mother of many charming daughters, two of whom were appointed maids-of-honour to the Queen, one still holding the courtly post, the other having resigned on her marriage to Major Legge. Lady Fanny was a handsome woman, and, even of late years, she was slight, active, and young-looking.

The huge party which is usually given at the Foreign Office on the night of the Queen's Birthday, and which was postponed this year in consequence of the death of Mr. Gladstone, will not take place. Lord and Lady Salisbury are going to give a garden party at Hatfield House instead, at which there will be a large muster of Royalties, including the Prince and Princess of Wales, the Duke and Duchess of Connaught, and Prince and Princess Christian.

The Duke of Westminster was made a Duke by Mr. Gladstone, and on several occasions his modest income was augmented by a salary secured to him by Mr. Gladstone for performing certain useless functions in Court ceremonies. How did the Duke of Westminster show his gratitude? He deserted him, and went over, bag and baggage, to the Tory camp, and to mark his attitude he turned Mr. Gladstone's picture out of his house. Now that Mr. Gladstone is dead he puts himself at the head of a scheme to provide a national memorial to him, and Tories join him. That he and they should repent of their persistent abuse of this great man whilst he was alive is to their credit. But why should Liberals take part in this tardy reparation? They need no repentance.

A Liberal Memorial has been proposed, and a meeting was held on Monday last to consider the form that it should take. There was a strong opposition to any such recognition by Liberals of Mr. Gladstone's service to the Liberal cause, and the form that the memorial took was to adjourn the discussion for a fortnight.

What I should like to see is not a Liberal Memorial, but a People's Memorial. A statue should be erected to Mr. Gladstone by the People, and no subscriptions of more than a shilling should be accepted. What would such a memorial cost? About £2,000. And surely there are 40,000 Liberals ready each to subscribe a shilling to do honour to the memory of the man to whom they owe so much.

The death of Mr. Matthew Fowler is deeply lamented at Durham by all classes and parties, for he was universally beloved and esteemed. Mr. Fowler's father carried on a large business at Durham, and obtained great popularity in the north by giving credit for goods to all his customers during the great strike of 1845. Mr. Fowler and his son, the late member for Durham, were for many years the heart and soul of the Liberal Party in that city, and their munificence in all political affairs was as remarkable as their unbounded generosity to charities. They both took an active part in all local affairs, and the father was five times Mayor of Durham. Mr. Matthew Fowler was a staunch Liberal throughout his life, and he

---

For the TRUTH HOTEL LIST, see page 1598 in the present issue.
For HOSPITALS and APPEALS, see page 1597.
For AMUSEMENTS, see pages 1599-1600.
For OUR PUZZLES, see page 1613.

was certainly the only candidate who could have won the seat for Durham in 1895.

Two or three weeks back I received a letter from a relative of the late Rev. E. N. Pochin, taking exception to the statement that Mr. Pochin had led a disreputable life, and that he owed his wealth to the use of his wife's money. Speaking from personal knowledge, the writer asserted that Mr. Pochin led a perfectly blameless life in every respect, except that he was almost morbidly avaricious; and he also stated that he believed that the deceased gentleman, like most misers, had no appreciation of his own wealthy condition. Incidentally the writer remarked that it might be better to "let sleeping dogs lie,' and thinking this view most applicable to the case I excused myself from noticing the letter. I should be the last to desire to wrong the character of a dead man. On the other hand, I should desire still less to become involved in a controversy on such a subject—doubtless a controversy embittered by family quarrels. The original statement in TRUTH was made on good authority, and those who gave the information would doubtless be ready to support it if it were challenged. However, Mr. Pochin's relative now repeats his request that I will notice his communication, and I think I have no alternative but to record the fact that the imputations on the deceased gentleman have been absolutely contradicted by those who knew him. There, I think, the matter must drop. The only material question is whether Mr. Pochin's will was one which ought to be allowed by law, and the testator's private character has only an indirect bearing on that point.

I find that I was misinformed as to the intelligence in the papers respecting the doings and dresses of advertising beauties being purveyed for the benefit of suburban dinner-parties. A Suburban Matron, writing from the neighbourhood of the Crystal Palace, tells me, on the strength of twenty-three years' experience, that she has never heard anything but local scandal talked at a suburban dinner-party, and that the residents in the suburbs require something much more startling than the pattern of a gown to arouse their interest. "I have always understood," she says, "that the paragraphs you refer to are paid for either by 'Lady Jim So-and-so,' or the lady's maid, or the dressmaker." They are evidently not so ignorant of West End affairs out Sydenham way as this lady would wish me to believe.

The Westminster Gazette announced last week that Mr. Leiter is going to buy Tintern Abbey, which is described as "this ancient residence, which is one of the finest historical houses in the country." This is the most extraordinary nonsense. There is no "family residence" of any sort or kind at Tintern Abbey, which is merely a ruin, and there has not been a roof on it for centuries. Troy House, near Monmouth, is the Welsh seat of the Somerset family. The Westminster Gazette is also quite wrong in stating that Americans "are gradually buying up the historical family residences in this country." I should vastly like to know what places of this character have been "bought up" by Americans. Mr. Astor has bought Cliveden, but that is scarcely a "historical family residence," as the property has changed hands a dozen times, and the present house is less than fifty years old.

I suppose that young ladies in the upper classes have swains, and occasionally write to them in terms of affection. They may learn from servant maids. A swain was last week before a magistrate on a charge of stealing. On his lodgings being searched, much correspondence was discovered. The damsel who had secured his affections signed herself, "Ever your little piece of sweet-stuff."

There were sixteen Lords amongst the Directors of Mr. Hooley's Companies. With one or two exceptions, none of them seem to have been what in the ordinary acceptance of the term can be called men of business. The object of getting them on the Boards was obviously to use them as decoys. But how astounding is the nature of the snob, when the fact of an industrial Company having on its Board a Lord, serves as a means to extract money from the snob's pocket! Can any sane human being regret that the snob has lost his money?

What I should like to know is the aggregate amount that Mr. Hooley paid these Lords for the use of their noble names. This is as important as it is to know what newspapers blackmailed him, although I confess that, as a Pressman, I personally am more interested in the latter matter. A blackmailer is a greater scoundrel than a Lord who sells his name to attract subscriptions to a company with an excessive capital, but one is as mean as the other. I am no great believer in "noblesse oblige" as any security that noblemen have a higher standard of honour than other people. Translated from theory into practice, it means that noblesse—when not as rich as it would be—must be provided with the means to support its "dignity" at the expense either of the State, or of that portion of the inhabitants of the State which is prepared to fulfil this duty.

I have received a letter from a lady asking me to agitate in favour of female shop assistants being secured the facility to sit down when they are not serving a customer. My good lady, you do not really suppose that any man would object to the girls having seats? I have protested again and again against the cruelty of making them stand, as though they were Court flunkeys in the presence of Royalty. The question is one that concerns women, and they should establish some sort of league to boycott shops where seats are neither provided, nor, if provided, allowed to be used. No employer has ever yet explained why this standing order prevails.

A lady who had been making a purchase at a draper's shop in the suburbs the other day, noticed that, in the course of her walk home, she was an object of considerable interest, not to say amusement, to the crowd in the streets. She had observed on leaving the shop that her hat had come into contact with some object overhead, but did not take any further notice of the occurrence until she got before a looking-glass in her own house. She then discovered, to her joy, that she had walked home with a large card on her head bearing the announcement—"Very Special, 2s. 3½d." This story, unlike one or two others on similar lines, is historically accurate.

SCOTT ADIE, 115, Regent-street, London, for Shooting Gowns, Cawdor Capes, Travelling Ulsters, Jackets, Racing Coats, Carriage Rugs from 10/9, Shawls, and Scotch Tweeds. Catalogue post free.

A BEAUTIFUL HOTEL AT BOURNEMOUTH.—The "ROYAL BATH." "Hôtel de Luxe of the South." Sea frontage, 1,000 ft.; grounds, 5 acres. Due south. Only Hotel on East Cliff. Moderate fixed tariff.

If I were ill, and required a nurse to look after me, I certainly should prefer that she be fairly good-looking, because—all things else being equal—a good-looking young woman is a more pleasing object than one whose virtues are entirely internal. I, therefore, agree with the hospital committee-man, who observed, according to the statement of a matron at the recent Annual Conference of Matrons of Hospitals and Infirmaries, "For pity's sake let the nurses you choose be good-looking." The "New Woman," of course, will regard this as a monstrous suggestion. But I, like Sir William Harcourt, have no particular admiration of this new product. I hold fast by the low and degrading heresy, that looks go a long way in the appreciation of men for women.

Apropos of a recent note in TRUTH, a lady has presented me with a pair of gloves. They are housemaid's gloves, made of a well-advertised material, and the lady offers them with the suggestion that similar gloves might be most usefully worn by the underlings of the Royal Academy, whose rough handling of the gilt frames of rejected pictures—frames that are often more valuable than the pictures—adds injury to the insult of rejection. "I think," the lady ingenuously adds, "that all articles manufactured of ——— are excellent." Very likely, but as I am sure, my dear madam, that you do not desire, any more than I do, to puff this particular stuff, I think it best to suppress the name.

I am asked to mention that, by permission of the Duke and Duchess of Newcastle, a concert will be given at 11, Hill-street, Berkeley-square, on Tuesday afternoon, June 28, in aid of the Victoria Convalescent Home for Children, Margate. The entertainment is under the patronage of the Duchess of York and the Duchess of Fife, and among the artists will be Mme. Sarah Bernhardt, who has for this charitable purpose kindly given up her proposed matinée at Deptford.

The Trustees of the British Museum will shortly have to appoint a new Keeper of Printed Books, in the place of Dr. Garnett, who retires on a pension. This is the best and most important post in the Museum, excepting only the office of Principal Librarian and Secretary. The salary is £750 a year, which is certainly not an excessive sum, considering the vast amount of special knowledge which the Keeper of Printed Books at the British Museum must possess. The Trustees will presumably appoint Mr. Fortescue, who is now one of the Assistant Keepers of Printed Books, and he is widely known through his admirable and valuable "Subject Index to the Museum Library."

Mr. Philip Lyttelton Gell, of Balliol College, has resigned the office of General Secretary to the Clarendon Press, which he has filled most efficiently since he succeeded the present Master of Pembroke College in this post in 1884.

The late Mr. J. G. Allen has bequeathed £10,000 to Trinity College, Cambridge, for the purpose of founding a fellowship or some scholarship as a memorial of his grandfather, Bishop Allen, who held the See of Ely during the first eight years of the Queen's reign. Bishop Allen, who was translated from Bristol, replaced Bishop Sparke, who was the last occupant of the See of Ely who enjoyed the whole of its very large revenues, and he was also the last prelate who was ex officio Custos Rotulorum of the Isle of Ely. It is a pity that Mr. Allen did not leave the form of the memorial to the discretion of the authorities of Trinity College, which is in no need of additional fellowships or scholarships, but there are other excellent ways of employing the money if the testator had not been so precise in his directions.

I would suggest to schoolmasters that in their prospectuses they should definitely state the number of days per annum, or per term, for which their schools will be kept open. They might even with advantage go the length of guaranteeing that the fees paid for each term will cover a specified number of hours' instruction. In this way they would relieve themselves of the suspicion—too often incurred at present—of taking an unfair advantage of parents by granting their pupils unnecessary holidays. I offer this suggestion in view of a letter I received from a gentleman who is, not unnaturally, indignant that, without any notice, his children were given a Whitsuntide holiday extending from the Friday night to the following Thursday morning, which, after even allowing for the ordinary holiday on Whitsun Monday, and the two weekly half holidays included in the period, still left an extra stoppage of schooling for one whole and two half days. The aggrieved parent asks why, after paying his fees, and having his children returned on his hands without his consent, he should not have the same remedy against the schoolmaster as he would have against a tradesman who sells short measure. The two cases would be precisely parallel if the schoolmaster undertook to give a fixed amount of instruction for a fixed payment in cash. But, as a rule, he does not. I think he should.

The Home Secretary has now come to the conclusion that the state of affairs at the Church of St. George the Martyr, Southwark, constitutes a sanitary danger, and he has accordingly issued an order under the Burial Act for the removal from the crypt of the human remains which have given rise to so much controversy. The St. George's Vestry have hitherto ridiculed the idea that any danger existed from the presence of these remains in the crypt, and only a week or two ago they got a distinguished analyst to analyse a sample of the air in the church, and triumphantly produced a report from him to the effect that it was of "normal quality as compared with other metropolitan churches." In view of Sir Matthew Ridley's decision, one of two things seems certain. Either the verdict of the distinguished analyst was wrong, or else there must be other metropolitan churches in which the quality of the atmosphere is a sanitary danger. If the analyst abides by his opinion, he ought in fairness to the worshippers to let us know the names of the "other churches" to which he referred.

TRAINS DE LUXE.—LUCHON EXPRESS, every Tuesday and Thursday, direct to Luchon. ENGADINE EXPRESS, to Coire and Lucerne. CARLSBAD EXPRESS, daily to Bayreuth, Carlsbad, &c. Tickets and all particulars from INTERNATIONAL SLEEPING CAR Co., 14, Cockspur-street, London, S.W.

Both among the clergy and the laity in India there seems to prevail a strong dissatisfaction at the manner in which ecclesiastics from home are foisted upon the Church in India. I gather this from several letters received in reference to the recent appointment to the Bishopric of Bombay. Here is the clerical view of the matter:—

> You say that "Mr. MacArthur is an ecclesiastic who is absolutely unknown outside the boundaries of his own parish, and it cannot be pretended that he possesses any special qualifications for an Indian See, unless entire and absolute ignorance of India is a recommendation in the eyes of the Secretary of State." Those familiar with the facts know only too well that entire and absolute ignorance of India is the chief recommendation for such appointments. This is a crying scandal, and I have long wished that TRUTH would take it up. It is no more than the simple truth to say that a man applying from some curacy at home has a very much better chance of a Government appointment out here than one who has acquired a knowledge of the peculiar nature of the work by long experience in India. After years of hard work here, we are told that if we want to improve our position, we can go home. When we get home, we are told that we have no claim on the Church at home. "You choose to leave England for work abroad, your place is filled up, and you must be thankful if at your age you get anything at all." Thus, after good work for the Indian Church a man can only go home to begin life again at the bottom of the tree. This is not always the fault of the Secretary of State, but, as often as not, that of the Indian Bishops, who take no interest whatever in the welfare of any of the clergy in India, except those on the Government staff.

Expressions to much the same effect reach me from at least one well-known layman in India. I suppose there can be no doubt that Church work in India is of a very peculiar nature, and that it must take a cleric going fresh to the country a long time to familiarise himself with all the local conditions. It would seem, therefore, foolish and unpractical, as well as unfair to the local clergy, to fill up all the best appointments with men fresh from England. This grievance, however, is not confined to India; we see the same thing in the Colonies. It will only be stopped when Churchmen in India and the Colonies speak out loudly and forcibly on the subject.

The Children's Happy Evenings Association desires me to acknowledge, in accordance with the donor's request, its receipt of a cheque for £2 2s. from "Exile." It was one of the subscriptions sent to the Association in response to an appeal by my contributor "Madge."

I am also glad to acknowledge £1 1s. from D. W. G, and £20 from An Uitlander, towards the deficit of the Toy Fund.

The following amounts have reached me towards Lady Jeune's Fund:—H. D., £2; Mrs. S. Darling, £5; E. B. G., £2 2s.; A. V., £1 1s.; P. M., £3 3s.; L. C. M., £1; F. Gorringe, £10 10s.; Astræ, £1.

Some of my military friends are at issue with me as to the desirability of the Duke of Connaught becoming Commander-in-Chief. Their line of argument appears to be that, in view of the favouritism and jobbery that have marked the present régime, the appointment of the Duke of Connaught must be a change for the better. This is all very well, but I would point out to military men that there is no reason for supposing that the introduction of direct Court influence into the War Office would be fatal to jobbery—rather the reverse, though the jobs might be of a different character from those under which the Army is at present groaning.

Can this be true? I am told in a recent letter from India that Brigadier-General Spragge, C.R.A. with the Tirah Field Force, took with him as orderly officer Major Mercer, R.A., an officer who would be commanding a battery were he not Assistant Military Secretary to his father-in-law, General Nairne. In any case, the appointment of orderly officer is more in the nature of a subaltern's billet than a field officer's; but in this instance the anomaly was heightened by the fact that General Spragge's Brigade-Major was a captain, and therefore junior to his General's galloper. If this statement is authentic, and I can hardly suppose the officer from whom I have it has invented the facts, it may, I think, be taken as a record in the annals of medal-hunting. How can the Indian Government sanction such irregularities?

I have had a communication from India which suggests another possible origin for typhoid or enteric fever. The writer refers specially to the amount of enteric in the station hospital at Furzepore, and he notes as a significant circumstance that many men sent to hospital originally with one or other of the diseases peculiar to soldiers develop typhoid after two or three weeks in the hospital for no discoverable reason. He suggests that the source of the disease is to be found in the chatties, or earthenware drinking-water vessels, in the wards of the hospital. These vessels, having long narrow necks, cannot be cleaned. As a rule in India they are only kept in use for a few weeks, whereas in this particular hospital they have been unchanged for months, if not years, their age being sufficiently indicated by the fact that the outsides are overgrown with moss. It is a very remarkable thing that enteric fever does not prevail among civilians in India to anything like the extent that it does among soldiers.

The following letter from a non-commissioned officer in India seems worth quoting, apropos of what has been said lately on the dishonesty of natives attached in various capacities to British regiments in India:—

> A man goes up to our pay-sergeant for a "chit" for two shirts from the tailor's shop. Instead of the shirts the native tailor of the regiment gives him Rs. 5, at the same time entering a charge against the man of Rs. 7, the balance being the profit of the master-tailor. A man can get "chits" for kakhi, red, and other articles of clothing, but it is all the same to the master-tailor.
>
> Another thing he will do. A man goes to him and asks him to buy his kit. The master-tailor is always ready to deal, and generally buys at about a quarter the value of the article. Result: At kit inspection the man is found deficient in kit, and gets made a prisoner. This does not trouble him, as it is part of the price he pays for his cash. He also has to make good the deficiencies, which puts him in debt for a couple of months or more.

WHITEHALL COURT, S.W.—To Let, Bachelor and other Suites. Electric Light, Service, Bath-rooms. Meals in public or tenants' own rooms. Apply, Manager.

I should like to know why we have native tailors at all. There are men in this regiment who were tailors before enlisting, and men who enlisted as boys and have learnt the work in the Army. Why not give the work to them and throw the natives out of it altogether?

Why not, indeed? We are actually going to the expense now of providing technical instruction for soldiers, in order to fit them for employment on leaving the Army. Yet when a regiment goes to India, natives displace soldiers who might otherwise be working at their trades, and take advantage of their position to rob the regiment right and left. It is years ago since attention was first called in TRUTH to the practice of native tailors and others doing a money-lending business with soldiers under cover of bogus orders for clothing and other goods; but the above letter shows that, in spite of exposure, the trade still goes on as merrily as ever. It is high time that the Indian military authorities put a stop to it. Why should not kakhi, shirts, &c., be issued to the men from the quartermaster's stores?

How is it that the pay of the men who give the gymnastic display at the Military Tournament has been cut down this year? I understand that in former years it has been 28s. 6d. and 30s. per man per week. This year it was reduced to 25s. This represents about 1s. 4¾d. for each performance, and as the odd 4¾d. is all but swallowed up by the washing bill for each performance, the net profit each time is reduced to 1s. Again, the sergeants engaged in the pageant were paid 2s. 6d. for each performance. Why this distinction between the two? The Military Tournament, of course, is a charitable undertaking, but the charity ought not to come out of the pocket of Mr. Atkins.

My remarks upon Piper Findlater have greatly outraged a gentleman named Fletcher, who rebukes me thus from the Junior United Service Club:—

It is a pity that you should have indulged in remarks quite unworthy of any one claiming to be an "English gentleman." You are greatly mistaken in thinking that "others besides those who have won V.C.s or been mentioned in despatches might profit by Findlater's example." Such ideas are quite foreign to the feelings of the Army, I am happy to say.

I do not waste time by discussing the absurdity of your comparing the earnings of Findlater by appearing as he did on the variety stage with those of any officer acting as director of a company. Probably, judging by the article in question, you are incapable of feeling or entering into those principles of honour which actuate the Army!—Your obedient servant,

G. FLETCHER.

I hope that Mr. Fletcher will be happier in his mind after his feelings have been relieved by the publication of these remarks. I am sorry, however, that he did not explain in what way Findlater's conduct in turning his military exploits to account on the stage differs from that of retired officers who trade on their rank and titles by hiring themselves out as directors of companies. Primâ facie the two things are identical, although the comparison strikes Mr. Fletcher as an absurdity. Another point which Mr. Fletcher would have done well to explain, is why it is inconsistent with the honour of a soldier to appear at the Alhambra, while the military authorities themselves were not above obtaining the services of Findlater as an addition to their own show at the Agricultural Hall. It seems to me a pity that the traditions of the Army, feelings of honour, &c., &c., cannot be tempered with a little consistency and common sense.

That the spectacle of the winner of a Victoria Cross exhibiting himself as a raree show at a variety theatre is a pretty one, or likely to be pleasing to the Army, I have never suggested. But neither is the spectacle of a man who has been disabled in the service of his country entering a workhouse or begging his bread at a street corner. The point of my remarks, which the writer of the above silly effusion is unable to perceive, is that, if a poor man can earn a large sum of money in this way, and the "traditions of the Army" preclude his doing so, then the traditions of the Army ought also to provide him with some other equivalent in cash.

By the way, one of my military readers tells me that, shortly after Rorke's Drift, "more than one V.C. went round the country lecturing." I do not remember the circumstances, but, if it is true, such V.C. men were presumably trading upon their military distinctions. Was this contrary to "the traditions of the Army"?

In view of the attempts that have lately been made in some quarters to prove that the climate of Sierra Leone is not so black as it is painted, a correspondent gives me the experiences of the expeditionary force which has been engaged in the suppression of the hut tax disturbances in the Karene district. The force was a comparatively small one; but in the course of two months or so one officer died of malarial fever, five were invalided home for the same cause, and thirty or forty per cent. of the men of the West India Regiment were also stricken down with fever. My informant does not say what the mortality was among the men; but it is quite certain that the force found the climate a worse foe than the native insurgents. It is only necessary to add that Karene is looked upon as one of the healthiest districts in the Sierra Leone Protectorate.

Here is a case which points to rather sharp practice on the part of the Commissioners of Chelsea Hospital. Under the Royal Warrant for Pay, as my Service readers are aware, service on the West Coast of Africa is reckoned as double service for pension as well as other purposes. A man who recently took his discharge to pension after twenty-one years' service had ten years and four months' service as sergeant. Having served two years at Sierra Leone, he contended that he was entitled to credit for another two years' service as sergeant, or twelve years and four months altogether. Primâ facie this looks reasonable. The Chelsea Commissioners, however, reply that, as he could only have twenty-one years service altogether, and as he had ten years and eight months below the rank of sergeant, he could not possibly have more than ten years and four months in the higher rank, no matter where he had served. This contention seems to drive a coach-and-four through the Royal Warrant; for it amounts to this, that if a man has had twenty-one years' service altogether, he cannot have the benefit of a double allowance for his service on the West Coast. It may be technically and logically correct, but it is more worthy of a pettifogging attorney than of a public Department dealing with a soldier who has served his twenty-one years; and whether legally right or not, I think the Chelsea Commissioners ought to be ashamed to take refuge in such subtlety.

KINAHAN'S LL WHISKY.—"The Cream of Old Irish Whiskies." Kinahan's LL Whisky. Gold Medal Paris Exhibition, 1878. Kinahan's Glenisle Whisky. The Finest Scotch Whisky sold.

I have been much touched by a letter from a gallant N.C.O. at one of the Depots, who asks me to give vent to his strong disapproval of "that useless subject English History" as an item in the education of a soldier. Judging from his patronymic the complainant hails from the sister island, and he points out that not only is English History "far too spacious," and a subject presenting many intrinsic difficulties, but these difficulties are enhanced when you do not happen to be an Englishman yourself. "If you are not belonging to the country," he says, "you cannot seem to follow the various characters and to sympathise with their acts like those who have been brought up to think about these things during their juvenile days." This is very natural, and, perhaps, when they come to think about it, the authorities at Headquarters may see their way to let Irish soldiers take up Irish History in place of English. Failing that, it would not be a bad idea to reduce the "spaciousness" of the subject by limiting it to, say, the last 150 years. Surely that period covers every event which there is the slightest occasion to expect a soldier to know, whether he is English, Irish, or Scotch.

At the recent Dorchester Assizes, Mr. William Hall, late canteen steward in the R.A. Depot at Dorchester, recovered £5 damages for slander against Major Watkin, his late Commanding Officer, the slander complained of having been uttered in connection with his dismissal under circumstances which were noticed in TRUTH last December. The result seems to show that the jury took much the same view as I did of the incident in question. The chief point in Hall's case was that, having failed to make a profit of 7½ per cent. on every gallon of beer sold, which could only be done by selling short measure, he was virtually accused of dishonesty, and turned out of his appointment at a moment's notice. In connection with this case, several officers wrote to TRUTH, pointing out the advantages of the locked-till system, and it may be that they were right; but, at least, where this system is in force the canteen steward ought as a matter of justice to be present at the counting of the cash and the ganging of the beer, otherwise he has no protection against such mistakes as are now shown to have been made in Hall's case.

CHALLIS'S ROYAL HOTEL, Rupert-street, Piccadilly-circus.—The new Louis XV. Dining-room now open for Luncheons and Dinners. Table d'Hôte Luncheon, 2/-, from 12.30 to 3 p.m.; Table d'Hôte Dinner, 3/6, from 6.30 to 9 p.m., served at separate tables. Open to non-residents.

The Lord Chief Justice, who tried this action, seems to have been filled with amazement at the evidence given that a canteen steward is required to account not only for the retail price of the quantity of beer sold, but for a profit of 7½ per cent. in addition, it being admitted that this profit can only be made by selling short measure. Every one unfamiliar with the customs and traditions of the Army must share Lord Russell's astonishment. It is a system of legalised cheating, only palliated by the fact of the customers being interested in the canteen fund which profits by the fraud. Surely it is high time that this system was abandoned. If the quantity of beer drawn is properly ganged, and if men are forbidden to pay for beer except by putting their cash into a locked till, the steward ought to be required to sell full measure, and the customers ought to be allowed, and, indeed, encouraged, to complain if they do not get what they pay for. The canteen steward would be then under a system of checks all round, which it would be very difficult for him to break through. The only improvement on this arrangement which I can suggest would be the introduction of a penny-in-the-slot arrangement, by which the amount of beer paid for could be drawn automatically.

It would be interesting to learn why the Lords of the Admiralty have quietly raised the salary of the Director of Victualling from £1,000 a year to £1,200, and decided that, when the time arrives for this functionary to retire, he is to receive a pension of £800 a year. Only last year it was decided that the Director of Victualling should receive £850 a year, rising to £1,000, with a retiring pension of £666 13s. 4d.

Probably the majority of people who send articles by registered post overlook the fact that the Postmaster-General expressly disclaims any liability in respect of damage, unless the cover of the packet is marked with the words, "fragile—with care." A few days ago a plate for artificial teeth, despatched by registered post, packed in a wooden box, was broken in transit. In reply to an inquiry the Postmaster-General expressed his regret for the damage, and explained that it was done during the transfer of a mail bag from a train in motion, but stated that as the packet in question did not bear the caution prescribed by the regulations, he was unable to entertain any claim for compensation.

In the face of the condition laid down in the regulations I do not think that any exception can reasonably be taken to this decision. At the same time, it would be interesting to have the Post Office definition of fragility. In this instance, the wooden box that was smashed was one of a kind strong enough to bear the dead weight of a man of 10 st. 10 lb. To class it as a "fragile" packet seems therefore somewhat unfair.

Since the matter was last referred to in TRUTH, the case of the unqualified assistants to medical practitioners has been laid before the General Medical Council in an influential memorial, signed by upwards of one hundred general practitioners. The memorial pointed out that the recent action of the Council would deprive many practitioners of assistants whose places could not be readily supplied, and that qualified men could not, according to the experience of the memorialists, be found to undertake many of the duties which assistants have hitherto performed. Reference was also made to the uncertainty prevailing as to what duties may legitimately be entrusted to unqualified assistants; and a strong appeal was made on the grounds of the hardship which the recent decision of the Council inflicted upon a large number of men who have spent the best part of their lives in the position they have filled, and, although technically unqualified, are perfectly competent to perform the work in which they have been for the most part employed. The General Medical Council appointed a committee to inquire into the matter, and the committee made certain recommendations, which have now been adopted by the Council.

The result thus arrived at puts a somewhat new complexion on the matter, and I am not prepared to say that the decisions are unreasonable. The suggestion seems to have been made to the committee that special examinations should be instituted for the benefit of the unqualified assistant. This, the committee answer, there is no power to do. It was next suggested that the resolution of the Council of November last should be temporarily suspended, in order to give an opportunity of supplying the places of the unqualified assistants who would have to be discharged under that resolution. The committee answer to this, in substance, that if there is a difficulty in finding qualified men to act as assistants, the difficulty probably arises from the insufficiency of the pay, and they anticipate that it will be got over before very long under the influence of the economic law of supply and demand. The committee also considered the point whether any detailed definitions or explanations should be issued respecting the extent to which unqualified persons may be legitimately employed by registered practitioners; and their findings under this head are the most important part of the document.

I understand it to be now laid down that the employment of unqualified "dressers, midwives, dispensers, and surgery attendants" may be legitimate, provided that it is carried out "under the immediate personal supervision of a registered practitioner," and provided also: (a) that such unqualified persons are not allowed "to attend or treat patients in respect of matters requiring professional discretion or skill"; (b) that there is no "substitution of the services of an unqualified person" which is "in its nature fraudulent, and dangerous to the public health"; and (c) that no unqualified or unregistered person is enabled to treat a patient, procure or issue a certificate, or otherwise engage in practice as if he were duly registered. It comes really to this, that an assistant must be an assistant pure and simple. He or she may be employed as a dresser, midwife, or dispenser under the personal superintendence of his or her employer; but he or she must not take the employer's place in any matter requiring professional discretion or skill; that is to say, he or she must exercise no initiative of his or her own, and everything in the nature of "covering" is rigidly proscribed. In this I cannot see that there is much which either the general practitioner or the unqualified assistant has to complain of, and still less do I see that it would be to the interest of the public to endorse such a complaint. Assuming, as we must, that it is to the public interest that the practice of medicine and surgery should be limited to persons qualified in accordance with the Acts of Parliament, the employment of unqualified assistants clearly must be kept within certain well-understood limits. It is not clear how such employment could be extended beyond the limits indicated above without jeopardising the interests of the public and also of the profession.

AT LAST!

Six definite by-laws dealing with the suppression of certain street noises have been framed by the Local Government Committee of the London County Council. The by-laws are specially aimed against street newspaper vendors, showmen's roundabouts, and steam organs, crowing cocks, and yelping curs.—Evening Paper.

Can it be so? Is sweet relief
  At last within an easy distance?
Are Londoners, indeed, to get
  A chance of quieter existence?
Hope has, 'tis true, been long deferred,
  But now again for flight she poises,
And whispers we shall shortly lose
  Some few unnecessary noises.

The screeching newsboy is to go,
  And all his tribe whose lungs of leather
Emit those shrill, mendacious cries
  Whate'er the season or the weather;
The ragged urchin, innocent
  Of manners and of soap and water,
Will crack our tympanums no more
  With raucous yells of "Orful slaughter!"

The Showman, careless how he gains
  His almost always noisy living,
He, too, has reason to await
  The future with extreme misgiving;
For silence is to be decreed
  On his steam-organ and his shouting,
And by-laws have been framed to stop
  His roundabouts from "round-abouting!"

And better still, the crowing cock,
  Deaf hitherto to plea or warning,
That wakes whene'er a cab goes by,
  And all night long "salutes the morning—"
This baleful bird that has till now
  The gardens of Suburbia cumbered,
How many a Londoner will dance
  With joy to know its days are numbered!

The news, too, that the yelping cur
  Has also had its day—or nearly—
Will carry balm to many a home
  Where placid sleep is treasured dearly;
In short, a countless host of folks
  Who have for quietness contended,
Will welcome with a keen delight
  The by-laws new just recommended.

Then pass them! Pass them, L.C.C.!
  And see you act upon them quickly,
Lest Hope, revived in London's heart,
  Again deferred, again grow sickly.
Pass them! and then at once prepare,
  Since quiet one of life's chief joys is,
To deal with half a dozen more
  Unnecessary London noises!

British prejudices die hard. To this reason principally must be attributed the sustained opposition in this country to the universally-sanctioned custom abroad of mixed bathing. The objection had perhaps some foundation in bygone days when women were accustomed to prepare themselves for a dip in the sea by assuming an exaggerated description of night attire, and men reverted to the condition of our first parents when indulging in this recreation. But nowadays we have changed all that; the woman's costume for the water is becoming every day more elaborate, and, for public bathing, the men are quite as much clad as when taking part in athletic competitions on land, in the face of admiring crowds. Sensible people, therefore, will learn with much satisfaction that the Hastings Town Council have decided to instruct a committee to draw up by-laws providing for mixed bathing under proper regulations. Once established, the innovation will rapidly spread all round the coast, and we shall see whole families enjoying themselves together in the water, as in Continental seaside resorts.

The dismal croakings in reference to the water supply at Aldeburgh have lately been relieved by a truly comic episode—comic, at least to people viewing it from a distance. The quality of the water has long been very unsatisfactory, and a few weeks since, as noted in TRUTH at the time, it suddenly and mysteriously became so foul as to be absolutely undrinkable. This descent from bad to worse was, I now learn, the result of a well-meant but misguided experiment on the part of the Water Company. The water is derived from springs at the bottom of a tank about 12 ft. deep and about a quarter of a mile from the sea-shore. At its best, the water contains a considerable quantity of chlorine—something like 20 grains to the gallon—and is very hard. It seems to have occurred to the ingenious mind of a person in authority that the water would be rendered softer and more palatable if a cartload of quicklime was thrown into the tank, and this brilliant idea was actually carried out. The consequence was that the lime—it was not, by the way, pure lime from limestone, but lime made by burning chalk—settled in a putty-like mass on the bottom of the tank, and for a fortnight or more the taste of the water was positively atrocious. One curious chemical effect of the lime is said to have been the reduction of all the nitrates in the water to nitrites.

Droll as it may seem to outsiders, this egregious performance with the cartload of lime is, of course, anything but a laughing matter to the long-suffering customers of the Aldeburgh Water Company. The condition of the water has become a serious danger to the health and prosperity of the town; and this incident is a pretty conclusive proof of the hopelessness of looking to the present monopolists for its removal. Representations on the subject were recently made to the company by a property owner, who lost a tenant for a house through the appearance of a paragraph in these columns respecting the water supply. The reply of the company was that they had "come to the conclusion that it was better for them to keep quiet and out of the controversy." After the affair of the quicklime, the desire of the company to lie low and say nothing is natural enough. The ratepayers, however, ought to have a good deal to say, and they will be exceedingly ill-advised if they do not make their voices heard with a view to the deliverance of Aldeburgh from the hands of this muddy-minded company.

A further interesting proof has just come to hand of the prevalence of the practice of people in business dunning those with whom they deal for subscriptions to their employees' treats. A single firm forwards to me no less than three appeals of this kind received within a week or two, and they remark in regard to them that they are practically compelled to respond to the invitations, or their travellers would be unable to obtain orders, and their goods would be systematically boycotted. In another case a request for a contribution is made by a firm whose custom is only worth about £2 or £3 per annum. Of course, no employer can prevent his employees obtaining tips from those with whom he has dealings; but it is astonishing that any respectable employer should stoop to the practice of himself begging for such gratuities. If my tradespeople like to give my cook Christmas boxes, that is their affair, and I do not know that I have any right to object, although, when I know of the practice, I may feel suspicious of the tradesman who resorts to it. But what would be thought if I were to send round a circular at Christmas time to my tradesmen soliciting in my own name tips for my cook? If I did it, I should expect the amount given to be smuggled into the tradesmen's bills; and no one who resorts to such a practice can complain if the money is ultimately got out of his pocket in this way.

As another instance of the more or less impudent demands with which people in business are pestered nowadays, a London tradesman sends me a letter from the Midland Counties Hairdressers' Association, of Bilston, soliciting the gift of a prize for their "large annual prize draw." The association seem to think that this promiscuous cadging for prizes is justified by an offer to advertise the donor's name on the tickets. It has apparently not occurred to them that they thus propose to add injury to insult by making the donor particeps criminis in the illegal act of running a lottery. The latter aspect of the business is one upon which the local police might usefully give a word of advice to these Midland Figaros.

Given Away.—A high-grade New Hudson Gent's Cycle, fitted with "Ixion Tyres," for the best two or four lines of verse on the "Ixion Tyre." Lady's Cycle also given for lady competitors only. Five consolation prizes given in each competition. Further details of competition and "All about Ixion Tyres" sent, on application, free. Competition verses must be sent in before 31st July, with this advertisement attached, and must be marked "Competition" corner of envelope.—The New Ixion Tyre & Cycle Co., Ltd., 14, Holborn, London.

Gout Cure.—Bishop's Lithia Varalettes.—One of these Varalettes added to a little water, whisky and soda, or other liquid, immediately dissolves with effervescence. Is a most pleasant drink and effective remedy for the cure and prevention of this painful complaint. Easily prepared anywhere at a moment's notice. In vials and small boxes (sufficient for four days) to carry in the waistcoat pocket. Sold by all Chemists, at 1s., or, post free, 1s. 1d. —Alfred Bishop, Ltd., Manufacturing Chemists (discoverers of the Varalette form of preparation), Mile End New Town, London.

As one who is frequently compelled for his sins to pass a day in the Law Courts, I congratulate Mr. Justice Barnes on his decision to extend the luncheon interval by fifteen minutes, and to make up the time by rising a quarter of an hour later in the afternoon. I trust that before I next make an unwilling appearance in the Courts this example will have been followed in the Queen's Bench Division. There are so many inevitable annoyances connected with an appearance before a judge and jury, that at least they should not be added to where it can be avoided. The luncheon arrangements in the Courts are anything but satisfactory, and a suitor, witness, or a juryman can only run outside in search of lunch at his own peril. What is most important of all is that, even when he has swallowed a hasty snack, he has no time for the still necessary cigarette.

I feel so sure that Mr. Justice Barnes must be a cigarette smoker, and that his cigarette, rather than his chop, is at the bottom of his extension of the luncheon interval, that I should like to try and enlist him on my side in agitating for permission to smoke in the Central Hall. Many people have wondered why the architect planned the Central Hall of the Law Courts. It seems to me obvious that his intention was that those having business in the Courts might be able in all weathers to walk up and down and smoke a cigarette in comfort while waiting. This view of the matter could not possibly have been overlooked, but for the fact that all the Judges and Law Officers have private rooms, where, doubtless, they take their tobacco at their convenience. I would earnestly appeal to the Judges, in the name of that freemasonry which exists among smokers, to extend this privilege to all who have to appear before them.

The free-and-easy way in which the strange vanity of sporting a coat-of-arms is sometimes gratified has been amusingly shown by a case in the Court of Chancery. A worthy gentleman, named Colonel John Joicey, inserted in his will a clause requiring every tenant for life and the husband of any female tenant for life of his extensive estates in Northumberland to take the surname of "Joicey," and to quarter the arms of Joicey with his or her own family arms. The present tenant for life married Lord John Pakenham Cecil and they have adopted the surname of Joicey-Cecil. But a difficulty arose about the quartering of the arms, for it was found that those used by the testator did not belong to him. It seemed that they were conferred upon him by a seal engraver who got them from a book in which they were attributed to a family of the name of "Joice." On reference to the College of Arms, however, it turned out that no person of that name was entitled to bear these or any other arms, but that those assumed by Colonel Joicey really belonged to a family named "Ince." The name in the book was clearly a misprint.

In these singular circumstances the Court of Chancery was asked to say that the condition in the will as to quartering the arms of "Joicey" was incapable of taking effect; and the court did so. The testator was evidently proud of the arms which he fondly supposed to be his, and this decision is almost enough to make him turn in his grave. The case should, however, be a good stroke of business to the Heralds' College. It will show people who hanker after the luxury of a coat-of-arms that it may be, after all, better to go to the proper establishment for that article.

An old friend made his appearance in the Bankruptcy Court last week in the person of Mr. "Charles Montague," alias "Napoleon Hirschfeld," alias "Charles Ashley," "specialist in rheumatism." So far back as February, 1893, I had the honour of first introducing this individual to the notice of the public, he being engaged at that time in vending his rheumatic specialties by means of the familiar bogus advertisement of a party who has experienced a wonderful cure, and is desirous of communicating the particulars to a suffering world on receipt of a stamped envelope. His correspondence at that date showed Montague to be an impudent humbug, and he does not seem to have changed for the better since, for he had absconded and committed other offences under the Debtors Act, and in spite of his urgent entreaties, the Registrar absolutely refused him his discharge. As this will suspend indefinitely the trade in Montague's specialties, there seems reason to hope that the specialist's loss may be the public's gain.

At Machynlleth the other day the proprietors of a local hotel applied to two magistrates at the Police-court for an extension of an hour on the occasion of a public banquet. The police raised the objection that the time appointed for the feast, from seven till ten o'clock, was "long enough for any reasonable purpose," and the magistrates, agreeing with the police, refused the application. But the magistrates themselves were present at the banquet—one of them being, indeed, in the chair—and amid the genial influences of the festive board the time seemed shorter than it had done in the cold light of the judgment-place—at any rate, when ten o'clock arrived their worships hastily constituted a licensing court and granted the hour's extension. In doing this, they were fortified with the approval of a couple of M.P.s, who were, perhaps, anxious to get rid of speeches which, without the extension, would have had to remain undelivered. Still, the precedent is a somewhat dangerous one. There is no knowing what would happen if magistrates took to revising over the dinner table the decisions which they give on the Bench.

There was another example at the Thames Police-court last week of the horrible cruelty that goes on in connection with the traffic in old and broken-down horses for the Continent. One of three worn-out animals which were being driven to the docks for shipment to Rotterdam was found to be suffering from a dislocated leg, and the lad in charge of them was summoned by the R.S.P.C.A. The penalty of 5s. which the magistrate imposed seems ridiculously inadequate, but no doubt his worship considered that it would be unfair to punish heavily a mere youthful servant of the real offender. The latter was the lad's employer, a knacker at Enfield, and if he had been before the Court a sentence of imprisonment without the option of a fine might have been rightly passed.

This detestable traffic calls, however, for something more than the prosecution of such of the animal-torturers as the R.S.P.C.A. is able to catch on the road to the docks. There ought to be an official inspection of the animals before they are shipped, and regulations to ensure proper accommodation and treatment on the voyage for those that can be exported without cruelty. The atrocities that occur at present are a disgrace to a civilised country, and it is trifling with the matter to suggest, as the President of the Board of Agriculture has done, that the evil should be dealt with by the authorities of the foreign ports to which these wretched, broken-down horses are sent. It is on this country that the responsibility rests and the shame falls.

A laugh was caused in the case at the Thames Police-court by the defendant's statement that the horses were going abroad to be made into sausages. It is a fact that the horses shipped from British ports to Holland and Belgium are largely used for human consumption; and, what is more, it is by no means clear that the benighted foreigners are the only consumers—indeed, Sir Howard Vincent, who has lately been making inquiries in Antwerp and Rotterdam, says there is no doubt that many of the horses that are shipped from this country come back to us in the shape of Belgian and Dutch made "Bologna" and "Lyons" sausages, "German" smoked meat, &c. Our insular prejudice on the subject is so strong that this information will probably cause a shock of disgust to lovers of the dainties in question. But, after all, they may console themselves with the reflection that there are often worse things than horseflesh in home-made sausages.

By the way, the use of horseflesh as an article of diet is increasingly popular in Paris. To such an extent has the demand for this food grown, that last year no less than 15,137 animals—including 257 donkeys—were killed for human consumption, and it has become necessary to take steps for providing a special abattoir for the purpose. Horse-meat is, of course, cheap, and is principally purchased by the poor; and it is said to be fairly nourishing, notwithstanding the fact that the animals from which the flesh is obtained are ancient and worn-out hacks. In this country, however, few people would eat horseflesh, knowing it to be horseflesh, even if it were given away.

A man charged with being a wandering lunatic was set at liberty by the Huddersfield Bench the other day under somewhat peculiar circumstances. The medical officer at the workhouse, who had had the prisoner under observation for a week, said he had come to the conclusion that the man was insane, and that he ought to be detained under supervision; but he added that he was not prepared to give a certificate to that effect "as he had been intimidated by the prisoner's brother, who threatened him with an action at law." The Bench considered that it was "an outrageous thing" to threaten the medical officer; but nevertheless they discharged the prisoner. A more extraordinary farce in a magistrate's court I never heard of. What seems to be an utterly empty threat deters this public officer from fulfilling the duty laid upon him by the law, and in deference to his childish terrors the Bench allow the lunatic to be let loose on society! After this nobody, however insane, need fear committal to an asylum from Huddersfield, so long as he can count upon a pugnacious relative or friend to frighten the doctor and the justices with the bogey of "an action at law."

It is always gratifying to see a biter like Isaac Gordon bitten, as he was in a case before Mr. Justice Ridley last week. The evidence showed that, in answer to a circular from one of Isaac's London offices, a tradesman at Bishop Auckland wrote asking his terms for an advance of £100 for six months. The application was sent on to the head usury-shop, 6, Livery-street, Birmingham, and the blood-sucker, scenting a likely victim, at once forwarded to the tradesman £100 in Bank of England notes, and a promissory note for that amount and interest at about 300 per cent. per annum, together with a letter requesting either the return of the money or the execution of the security for the loan. Gordon, however, got back neither the promissory note nor the bank notes, and accordingly he sued the tradesman to recover the £100.

As the bank notes were sent without any request from the defendant, it was clear that they were at the plaintiff's own risk till he traced them into the hands of the defendant. This Gordon was unable to do. The registered packet containing the bank notes was delivered at the defendant's shop, and the receipt was signed by a lad in his employ, but the defendant himself was not there at the time, and he denied that the letter ever came into his possession, and the theory of the defence was that the precious envelope had been accidentally thrown into the fire. There was certainly no trace whatever of the notes after the delivery of the letter, and in these circumstances judgment was given for the defendant with costs against Gordon. Unfortunately, however, an occasional reverse like this is of no importance to him. He frequently practises this trick of remitting cash without waiting for the usual preliminary formalities, and the gains far outweigh the losses, the handling of the money impelling many borrowers to assent to terms which they would otherwise reject.

It came out in the above case that a worthy named Solomon Aarons is the manager of the nefarious business which Gordon carries on in the names of "George J. Addison," at 3, Holles-street, W., and "William Wallis," at 66, Great Russell-street, W.C. Isaac himself was a witness, and he was asked in cross-examination whether he thought it fair to charge a man 300 per cent. for a loan. "Oh yes," he replied, "why not?" This rapacious rascal would in fact charge 1,300 per cent. if he thought there was any chance of getting it—indeed, he has sometimes managed by most unscrupulous means to obtain as much, or more.

The sentence for sleeping out at Bilston which figures in my Legal Pillory this week was the subject of a question in the House of Commons on Thursday, and in reply the Home Secretary expressed the opinion that it was not a case in which his intervention would be desirable, inasmuch as there were some thirty convictions against the prisoner for such offences as being drunk and disorderly and assaulting the police. This is the sort of reasoning one would expect from the shallowest of Shallows. In the mouth of the Home Secretary, it is surprising and disappointing. The prisoner had previously committed sundry offences, and he had been punished for them. But how in the name of common sense can this justify his committal to gaol for a month simply because he indulges in a nap on the steps of the Town Hall at Bilston? That such a heavy sentence, or any sentence at all, should be passed on such a preposterous charge, no matter what the character of the accused may be, is to my mind a monstrous travesty of justice; and the cruelty and absurdity of it are heightened by the fact that if the man had chanced to have a few pence in his pocket, it would have been out of the power of the magistrates to convict him. With regard to the rest of the following list, the contrasts between the sentences speak for themselves:—

Ashbourn Petty Sessions. Before Messrs. R. Knowles and W. Davenport. Joseph Sellers, convicted of assaulting Wm. Wood by striking him in the face, knocking him down, and kicking him. Fined £1 2s. 6d., including costs.

Ashbourn Petty Sessions. Before the same magistrates. John Edwin Shaw, charged with sleeping in a railway carriage and being without visible means of subsistence. Fourteen days.

Southampton Police-court. Before the Mayor and other Justices. John Calendar, a powerfully-built negro, charged with assaulting Edwin M'Donald. The assault was of a brutal character, and entirely unprovoked. Fined 10s. and costs.

Wymondham Petty Sessions. Before Messrs. H. W. Edwards and E. W. R. Clarke. Henry Elvin, labourer, charged with being in possession of four partridge's eggs. Fined £1 10s., or twenty-one days.

Folkestone Borough Police-court. James Rumsey, charged with cruelty to a mare by working her whilst in an unfit state. The animal was in an emaciated condition, suffering from raw wounds, and totally unfit for work. Fined 10s. and costs.

Bourne Police-court. Before Messrs. W. E. Welby and R. A. Gardner. Richard Bland, a drover, charged with sleeping out and having no visible means of subsistence. He was found asleep in a cab in a public-house yard. One month.

Bradford West Riding Police-court. Before Mr. E. P. Arnold Forster and other magistrates. Hartley Richmond, charged with cruelty to a horse. The animal was unable to pull a cart owing to the wheels having become embedded in a heap of sand, and defendant then beat it unmercifully about the head and the legs with the butt end of his whip. There were several wounds on the animal and it was in an emaciated condition, being really unfit for work. Fined 20s. and costs.

Swansea County Police-court. Before Messrs. W. Walters, D. Owen, J. E. Round, and R. Woollscott. Frank Loworthy, an elderly seaman, charged with stealing a piece of wood valued at 2s., from a railway yard. He said that he had an invalid wife and was himself half-starved. A police-inspector said he had known the man for twenty years and he bore a good character. The prisoner, who was penniless, was fined £2; in default, one month.

Mansfield Petty Sessions. Before the Mayor, Messrs. R. M. E. W. Dodsley, and W. M. Oates. Charles Watts, charged with assaulting his father-in-law, John Freeman, an aged man. On being requested to leave his father-in-law's house defendant picked up a fender and struck the old man with it, and afterwards kicked him. Fined 40s.

Bilston Police-court. Isaac Doughty, charged with sleeping out and being without visible means of subsistence. He was found sleeping on the steps of the Town Hall. One month.

Wellingborough Divisional Petty Sessions. Before Mr. C. J. K. Woolston and other magistrates. Mary Crane, charged with stealing a piece of pork value 1s. 4d. Three weeks.

Dunfermline Sheriff-court. Three men, named Muir, Miller, and Adamson, pleaded guilty to assaulting a cyclist on the highway. They seized the cyclist, caused him to dismount, and took his machine from him, and one of them struck him a blow on the face. Adamson fined 50s.; the others 30s. each.

St. Ives Police-court. Before Messrs. H. Goodman, C. P. Tebbutt, F. Warren, R. J. Lindsell, and W. W. Warner. James Wheaton, charged with stealing some food, value fourpence. One month.

Liverpool Police-court. Before Messrs. T. O. Easton and A. S. Hanway. Patrick Moran, charged with assaulting John Bartle by throwing him down and kicking him. The Bench said it was a very brutal assault. Fined 40s. and costs.

Derby Police-court. Abraham Woodhouse and John Allen, charged under the Poaching Prevention Act with being found in possession of a net and four rabbits. Fined £3 each and costs.

Even persons who believe most firmly in the virtues of corporal punishment for school children would hesitate, I should think, to approve of such an outrageous application of the cane as was revealed in a case before the Mistley Bench last week. The victim was a little girl, six years of age, and the mistress of the Horsley Cross Schools had caned her so severely that her back and legs were "one mass of dark weals," and more than a fortnight afterwards some twenty marks of ill-treatment were still visible. Magistrates are usually indisposed to convict in cases of this kind, but the chastisement of this poor little mite of six was too cruel and excessive to be passed over, and the school mistress was very properly fined, and admonished to be more careful. The lady was, I see, given an excellent character for her treatment of the children, and it was stated that no previous complaint had been made against her during her fifteen years' work as a teacher. I can only say that if after fifteen years' experience she has not learnt to apply the rod more sparingly than she did on this occasion she would do better to abandon its use altogether.

Mr. Campbell, of 1, Tennyson-avenue, East Ham, proprietor of the matrimonial agency which came under notice in TRUTH a fortnight ago, has favoured me with a letter complaining of certain inaccuracies in the statement of facts. The number of letters he had written on behalf of "M.D.," he states, was twenty-one not twenty-six, and he denies that in any of them he asked for a railway fare. He is right. I had twenty-six letters in my possession from parties who responded to the second advertisement, but on closer examination it appears that five of them were written by parties who had not responded to the original "M.D." advertisement, and one of these was the gentleman who had been asked to pay the railway fare for an interview. Mr. Campbell, therefore, stands absolved from the imputation of having asked for a railway fare. On the other hand, he stands guilty on his own admission of having asked twenty-one gentlemen each to pay him a fee of twenty-five shillings for an introduction to one lady, and whether it was twenty-one or twenty-six makes no difference whatever to the character of that proceeding.

A more important question still, which Mr. Campbell has so far failed to satisfy me about, is whether this one lady, to whom all the twenty-one clients were to be introduced, ever had any real existence. As it turned out that Mr. Campbell's address at 18a, London-street, was simply an "accommodation" address, I sent a representative down to look into the agency itself at 1, Tennyson-avenue. Here, in one of a diminutive row of new cottages, Mr. George Campbell was found. He told my representative a cock-and-bull story in explanation of the first "Spinster" advertisement, the gist of it being that a lady, previously unknown to him, had called on him, bringing with her letters received in answer to an advertisement she had inserted in the People; that she instructed him to negotiate a marriage for her with one or other of the writers; that she had paid him £2 10s in cash for his services; and that, after bringing and sending more letters, she wrote dispensing with his services, and that he has never seen or heard of her since. Having found that she too had used an accommodation address, he has been unable to trace her; and that was how it was that he responded when a bogus advertisement in the lady's name appeared in the same paper.

Subscriptions greatly needed by THE ROYAL SOCIETY FOR PREVENTION OF CRUELTY TO ANIMALS.—2,876 convictions this year; 7,545 last year. Address complaints of cruelty, contributions, letters, &c., to SECRETARY, 105, Jermyn-st., London.

SUPPERS, DINNERS, LUNCHEONS. — HÔTEL CONTINENTAL 1, Regent-street (Waterloo-place), Elegant Suites of Apartments and Single Bedrooms. Telephone: "3686 Gerrard."

Not wishing to do Mr. Campbell any injustice, I give this "explanation," on the chance that among the readers of TRUTH there may be individuals who will believe it. With the best intentions, I cannot quite swallow it myself, and the difficulty I feel is enhanced by the fact that while he gave my representative (in confidence) a name purporting to belong to the Vanishing Lady, together with a description of her personal appearance, Mr. Campbell absolutely declined to show, even in confidence, the letter she had written to him. That, he said, would be a breach of professional etiquette which no matrimonial agent dare commit. It is unfortunate that "the arbitrary rule of etiquette" prevents Mr. Campbell giving the public the only conclusive piece of evidence he could possibly have offered that the Vanishing Lady ever had a real existence. He complains that the previous paragraphs in TRUTH have injured the business. I fear that this endeavour to mend matters may only make matters worse, for the knowledge that Campbell's agency is apt to be haunted by a ghostly spinster of such eccentric habits is hardly likely to restore confidence in amatory bachelors, or to induce them to pay their twenty-five shillings for an introduction to this fleeting phantom.

In reference to the article "A Klondyke Prospector's Prospects" in last week's TRUTH, Mr. Ernest H. Wasser writes to me from Warwick House, Warwick-place, N.W., that, although he consented to join the board in the first instance, he sent in his resignation almost directly after, and the same was duly accepted. Mr. Wasser states that he never met any of the directors or attended a meeting, and knows nothing of the business of the company, and he asks me to make this fact known, which I have much pleasure in doing. From what I can make out, the history of the company is not a creditable one to anybody concerned, and I am making inquiries in the hope of being able to throw some further light upon its doings at a future date.

There has been a good deal of correspondence in the Bradford Observer in reference to the case of Mr. Stephen Holroyd, whose dismissal from the service of Messrs. John Foster & Son, Limited, of the Black Dike Mills, Queensbury, was referred to in TRUTH a fortnight ago. Mr. Holroyd was the head of the weaving department at the mills, he worked there for forty-nine years, and he was dismissed, together with his two sons, immediately after he had voted against the election of Mr. Herbert A. Foster, the managing director of the firm, to the chairmanship of the Queensbury District Council. Mr. H. A. Foster has contributed two letters to the correspondence in the Observer, but he says he does not consider it necessary to give any explanation as to the reasons for the dismissal—indeed, he considers any allusion to the question "a gross abuse of the powers of the Press."

Mr. Foster must, of course, judge for himself; but if his firm have any regard for the opinion of their neighbours and the public at large it is a pity they adopt this high-and-mighty tone towards the Press. It may possibly cause a wrong impression to be formed in reference to the merits of the case. Since the question has been discussed in the Press, John Foster & Son, Limited, might surely, without any serious loss of dignity and self-respect, condescend to explain whether there were any other reasons for the dismissal of Mr. Holroyd beyond the reason that has been pretty plainly suggested.

I am asked to mention that Lewis Appleton, whose career was noticed in last week's TRUTH, was never secretary of the Peace Society. The post he held was that of a collector. During the whole period of his connection with the Peace Society Mr. Henry Richard was the secretary.

It is perfectly true, as Mr. Ritchie informed a questioner last week, that "there is nothing in the Light Railways Act to prevent the consideration of light railways in Urban Districts." It may also be true that the Board of Trade and the Light Railway Commissioners have power to impose on promoters of such lines the terms of the Tramways Act. But the Tramways Act is now reduced to the position of an Act which tramway promoters need not avail themselves of unless they choose, and the provisions of which can be dispensed with or enforced absolutely at the discretion of the Board of Trade and the Light Railway Commissioners. This result can hardly have been intended when the Light Railways Act was passed, and the Act ought to be amended so as to exclude urban and suburban districts from its operation. The Richmond and Hampton Court scheme has now been withdrawn in

For Mosquito Bites nothing allays the irritation so quickly as SCRUBB'S CLOUDY FLUID AMMONIA, and it is an immediate remedy for Wasp or Bee Stings.

H. L. SAVORY & Co.'s CIGARETTES.—By Special Warrants of Appointments to H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, H.R.H. the Duke of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha, H.S.H. the Duke of Teck, and the Houses of Lords and Commons. To be obtained of all the leading Houses in the trade.—Sole address, 59, Piccadilly, London, W. Specimen case of samples, containing all sizes, 2s. 6d., with price list.

deference to the protests of the residents along the proposed line, but others remain, and others are likely to make their appearance.

Mr. Arthur Chamberlain has come forward to the aid of Mr. Joseph Chamberlain in the war between the Cecils and the Chamberlains. Lord Salisbury consigned the speech of Mr. Joseph to the waste-paper basket without reading it. I fear that the same basket will receive the speech of Mr. Arthur, who plaintively complains that the Premier is "nothing if not sarcastic." The grievance of Mr. Arthur, as the chairman of Kynochs, Limited, is that Lord Salisbury is hindering the firm from selling guns to foreign Powers, and thus its shareholders have to put up with a beggarly 10 per cent. What a pair! The one tries to drag us into war with foreign Powers, the other wants to sell guns to them in order that they may be in a position to fight us. Fraternal union is always a pleasing sight. But whether the country will benefit by this touching accord is not quite so clear.

It is hardly fair to look too closely into the strict accuracy of a well-turned generalisation in a complimentary speech, and of such speeches Lord Rosebery is a past master, otherwise I should venture to contest Lord Rosebery's dictum that hard work is the road to success, to happiness, and to long life. This can only be asserted, even of the first, in the sense that a man is not likely to win a race unless he exercises the muscles of his legs. There is a good deal of haphazard in success or failure. But I should say that the former is mainly due, if achieved, to tenacity of purpose, subordination of everything else to the one aim, quickness and resolution in seizing every opportunity, and—I am afraid that I must add—a determination to walk over all who stand in the way, and who cannot be flattered or cajoled into getting out of it. Whether happiness is the result of this perpetual contest to attain and to retain is doubtful, nor should I imagine that, as a rule, it is conducive to long life.

I have always held that we are engaged in a ruinous contest in seeking to outbuild any two naval Powers, because outbuilding is followed by other Powers, with the result that, although we and they may have more warships, the relative proportion of the two competitors remains the same. The event proves that I have been correct, if we look into figures. All ships built before 1880 may be regarded as valueless. The figures of the ships launched and to be launched between 1881 and 1900 stand thus:—England, forty-five battleships, fifty-four cruisers; France and Russia, fifty battleships and thirty-one cruisers; France, Russia, and Germany, fifty-nine battleships and thirty-seven cruisers. We, therefore, have ninety-nine battleships and cruisers; France and Russia eighty-one; and France, Russia, and Germany, ninety-six. But against this numerical superiority, France and Russia have five battleships more than us, and France, Russia, and Germany fourteen more, as against our superiority in the number of cruisers.

Now, supposing that we were at war with France and Russia, it is by no means clear that we could blockade all their ports, and thus sweep the seas of their fleets. Certainly, we could not so hermetically seal the ports that our commerce would pursue its avocations as though there were no war. Yet this is our avowed aim. The entire scheme, therefore, of absolute maritime supremacy in all parts of the world as against any two great naval Powers has broken down, so far as it is dependent on having a force so much larger than those of these two Powers that we can treat them as almost non-existent.

But, assuming the doctrine to be sound, I have never yet understood why we should limit our object to a supremacy over two Powers, for this would make any third Power possessed of a Fleet the arbiter of victory. The truth is that this idea of a numerical superiority of ships over two Powers is one to which we never can attain. It is much as though France, Russia, and Germany were each to endeavour to have an army that would be equal to those of the other two combined. No sooner do we build more ships than other Powers do the same.

France and Russia are for the nonce allies. Mr. Chamberlain, therefore, suggests that we should secure our naval supremacy against them by entering into an alliance with Germany. But Germany is by no means disposed to abet us in this aim. From her standpoint, she would be foolish if she did. She would expose herself to a joint attack by the armies of France and Russia, in order that we might become absolute masters of the seas, whereas her interest seems to lie rather in hindering this supremacy on the part of any one Power.

Mr. Goschen announces that he intends to ask for money to build more ships than he deemed necessary when the Naval Estimates were prepared for the current year. This, I gather, is because he has learnt that Russia is building more ships than he then supposed. But supposing that this be met by Russia or France again increasing their naval outlay, are we again to increase ours? A Tory newspaper expresses a hope that this Supplementary Estimate will be a large one, in order to convince all other Powers how hopeless it is to compete with us. But will it have this effect? I doubt it.

In the last few years our expenditure on the Army and Navy has increased by 70 per cent. During this period of expansion in spending, the value of our export trade has remained practically stationary; and our import trade has increased by 30 per cent. But of what advantage is this latter increase to our workers? It neither provides them with work, nor does it augment their wages, nor does it reduce the cost of necessaries.

For Truth, and all other Newspapers, Magazines, and Periodicals, send your Subscriptions to WM. DAWSON & SONS, Ltd., Cannon House, Bream's-bldngs., London. (Estab. 1809.) Catalogue gratis.

HOTEL ALBEMARLE, Piccadilly, London. Private Suite, Bath, Electric Light, Lift. VERMERSCH, Proprietor. Paris: Imperial Hotel, Champs Elysées. Boulogne S/M: Imperial Pavilion Hotel.

The Spaniards seem to be in a yielding mood, having realised that their fleet is no match for that of the United States. Under these circumstances, it is a pity that the latter, as the stronger Power, does not take some unofficial means to indicate to Spain on what terms peace might be made. What would be reasonable would be that Cuba and, if it be deemed by the United States desirable, Porto Rico should cease to be connected with Spain, and that a coaling station—should this be considered desirable—in the Philippines should be given to the United States, the question of annexation of Cuba and Porto Rico to the latter country, or their independence, being left to future consideration, as it must be indifferent to Spain, should she lose these islands, which alternative is the outcome. Thus the United States would secure the object for which she went to war without further outlay of blood and money.

But if the war is to be continued, the United States should act with more energy, for in wars it is cruel to be kind. I should have thought it doubtful policy to land an Army in Cuba at the very moment when the yellow fever makes the island unfit for such an operation. But if an Army is to be landed, why at Santiago? The western portion of Cuba, in which Santiago is the chief town, is not the point to strike at. The Army should be landed at some place near to Havana, and it should advance at once on the capital. If Havana falls, the Spanish rule on the island is, for all practical purposes, at an end.

TO THE AMERICAN "YELLOW JOURNAL" WAR SPECIAL:

A WARNING.

Mr. "Special," Mr. "Special," has it not occurred to you,
As you daily overdo your gassy mission,
That, if a big engagement were to presently ensue,
You'd be in a very difficult position?
For of adjectives and adverbs of a laudatory kind,
Suggesting brilliant dash or courage steady,
There's not one that we are able in our "Ogilvie" to find
That you haven't used repeatedly already.

You've transformed into "a fearful and a furious fusillade"
A mere affair of outposts' rifle-rattle;
You have cabled us descriptions of a futile cannonade
As a terrible and splendid naval battle.
The very smallest skirmish has appeared to you to lead
To colossal loss of life and awful panic;
And a hurried reconnaisance, if your telegrams we read,
Becomes an operation quite Titanic.

You, in fact, have dealt so freely with such adjectives as "grand,"
And "appalling," and "heroic," and "stupendous,"
That you will not find it easy graphic phrases to command,
Should the war assume proportions more tremendous;
And it very well may happen, should fierce fighting come to pass,
Of coherence you will find it has bereft you,
And for speech you will be gasping with no epithets, alas!
Of any special force or fitness left you.

SCRUTATOR.

EDUCATION AND EMPIRE.

WHAT is the use, observes Sir John Gorst, of opening doors for our commerce abroad, if our system of public education at home is the negation of common sense? Candid, indeed, are the criticisms of Sir John on this system. The present Government has sought to foster the Voluntary Schools at the expense of the Board Schools. The former, both in town and country, are far inferior to the latter. In country districts any excuse is allowed by the school local authorities for the boys not attending, whilst by the general rule in regard to the years that a child must attend, he is taken away before he has arrived at an age when he can retain the little that he has learnt. On this precious system the State spends eleven millions and a half annually. Not only a more efficient system, but more money to render it possible is needed. This money is not forthcoming, because it all goes in battleships, and in raising our army to a sufficient strength to enable us to send expeditions here, there, and everywhere, to force naked savages to buy our cotton and German spirits.

That the Conservative Party, under the teaching of a Radical renegade, should foster the delusion that this is how the Empire is to hold its own against the world is not surprising, for this Party well knows that the first thing that an educated England would do, would be to emancipate itself from the class Government, with its injustices and its privileges, which is dear to the Conservative heart. What I protest against, and have always protested against, is that the Liberals should be so lost to all their principles as to aid and abet the Conservatives. In Hertfordshire, there is an election going on. A Liberal placard, apparently issued by the wirepullers of Parliament-street who are conducting the Liberal campaign, calls on the electors to "avenge England's dishonour, and to remember Lord Salisbury's surrender of territory and sacrifice of British interests in every part of the world." If this means anything, it means that the Liberal Party supports Mr. Chamberlain against Lord Salisbury, and would have our policy still more "spirited" and our armaments still greater in order to render this possible.

For "all parts of the world," presumably "China" is to be read. Sir William Harcourt, Mr. Morley, and Lord Kimberley, all of whom may be supposed to know something of what has been going on, and to have some weight on the Liberal councils, have, whilst criticising some of Lord Salisbury's utterances, declared that the outcome of his China policy has been all that could be desired, except in respect to the annexation of Wei-hai-wei, which they deem useless and impolitic, but which, according to the Hertfordshire placard, is the only one bright spot in Lord Salisbury's foreign policy. Is there a

---

"TRUTH" will be sent weekly to any address in the United Kingdom for 7s. for 3 months; 14s. for 6 months; or 28s. for 12 months. The subscription for all Countries included in the Postal Union is, 3 months, 7s. 8d.; 6 months, 15s. 4d.; 12 months, £1 10s. 8d. All subscriptions are payable in advance, and cheques and P.O.O.'s should be made payable to the MANAGER, "Truth" Buildings, Carteret-street, S.W.

more clear proof that the Party, as represented not only by its leaders, but by the great mass of Radicals, is at odds with its wirepullers? The latter regard the only aim of the Party to be to get back into office. They see that the Jingo craze has assumed large proportions. They therefore seek to curry a momentary favour by out-Jingoing their opponents, and by sacrificing every principle for which the Party under Mr. Gladstone fought. I do not believe that these silly tactics will succeed, for electors see through this masquerading in Tory clothes, and Radicals—except those of the baser sort—are not prepared to sacrifice principle to opportunism. But, were it to succeed, I see no advantage to the Party, except that a few self-seeking politicians would enjoy for a brief period the spoils of office.

It is clear to me that a desperate effort is being made by the Whigs or Moderates—or whatever the gentlemen may call themselves who are with us, but not of us—to trick the Radicals out of all influence in the Party. They oppose alike the men in whom the Party has confidence, and the aspirations of the Radical rank and file throughout the country. Lord Rosebery is their figure-head, and their plan just now is to gain adherents by assuring M.P.s that, whoever may be the Leader in the Lords or the Commons, as the Queen will send for Lord Rosebery in the event of the Liberals securing a majority at the next General Election, he will be the dispenser of office and able to reward those who come over to him. I really care very little who is Leader, provided that he be a thorough Radical, and that he be in the House of Commons. But I protest against this use of the Sovereign's name. With all respect to her Majesty, she cannot make our Leader; nor, indeed, do I believe that any such assurance has been given. To do Lord Rosebery justice, he does not seem to have any part in this intrigue. His friends probably are more anxious for the loaves and fishes than he is. They wish to establish a personal claim on him, whilst they are ready to grasp at any straw to stave off the advent of a democratic Government.

One of the reasons why I have always urged that we should have a definite electoral programme—short and drastic—for the next General Election is, that the absence of one leaves the field open to the intrigues of Whigs and wirepullers. If the Liberal Party declines to pin itself to such a programme, then it is full time that the Radicals should themselves organise, and impose it on all who desire their support. I am a Gladstonian, and if the Liberal Party, whilst professing admiration and respect for that great man, really intends to throw over every Gladstonian principle, then I am not one of these new-fangled Liberals. I prefer democratic reform to a route from the Cape to Cairo. I want our money to be spent in properly educating our children at home, instead of introducing Christianity amongst African savages by robbing and slaying them. Instead of building battleships, with the result of forcing other countries to build them, I would concentrate our attack on that citadel of Toryism, the House of Lords. To end it will be of more advantage to the country than to acquire swamps and jungles in Africa.

Individual human nature is much the same as it always was. Speaking broadly, a person who goes into Parliament, although he may sincerely desire to secure what he believes would be to the good of the community, also has his own axe to grind. If he wants office, he tries to get it. If he wants a title, he angles for it. If he wants social recognition, he aims to secure it. So long as his Party is in Opposition, he knows that his aspirations cannot be realised. The tendency of his mind is, therefore, to make electoral success the primary object. Should he consider that the active profession of any particular opinion militates against this success, it becomes a mere pious opinion. Hence it is that no great reform has ever been carried by a Party in Parliament, unless those out of Parliament have insisted on it. Parliamentary Liberals want to convert themselves from the "outs" into the "ins," and so to manage matters that, if this be effected, they may be in the gang amongst which the spoil is distributed. But this is not precisely the object for which a Party ought to exist.

No doubt there are many Liberals in Parliament who are prepared to stand or fall on the principles that they have professed. But there are men to whom the arts of intrigue are unknown. The intriguers, therefore, have it all their way. This always has been so when there has been no man at the head of the Party sufficiently popular to ignore them, or no great issue before the electorate. In default of the man, then, let us rally to an issue. Fads that command the support of one portion of Radicals and not of all Radicals, mere geographical reforms that one section of the country would push to the forefront, divide but do not unite. They hand us over bound hand and foot to the intriguers. What, then, is the issue on which we might unite? I say—and have said so in season and out of season—that it is to be found in a reform which would make Parliament the Representative Council of the entire nation, and would put an end once and for all to any person having a right to vote in Parliament without having been elected thereto. Without this reform, the Liberal Party has as much chance to carry any real democratic reforms as a cat without claws to catch mice. We are attempting to make bricks without straw, and speculating upon the kind of edifices we shall build of these bricks when they are made.

THE STORY OF A NEW ZEALAND ESTATE.

In the beginning of 1893 there came to London a gentleman who had rendered invaluable services to the Colony of New Zealand, and had been rewarded by the Colony with a Parliamentary grant of rights over a rich estate, comprising upwards of 50,000 acres. His object in coming to England was to get rid of certain small encumbrances, and realise the property by floating companies or otherwise. For this purpose he placed himself in the hands of a most respectable firm of London solicitors. Within three months the whole of his estate passed into the hands of the senior partner in that firm, in conjunction with a gentleman who had joined him in advancing money to pay off the aforesaid encumbrances; and in the hands of these gentlemen it has remained to this day. In the following year the gentleman from New Zealand was made a bankrupt. From bankruptcy he passed into Chancery. From Chancery he passed to the Old Bailey, where he was tried and found guilty of defaming the new owners of his property. From the Old Bailey he passed into one of the London hospitals, and from the hospital he passed out, penniless and hopeless, into the streets of London. In all this time he had contributed nothing to his own misfortunes, beyond one solitary error of judgment. In all this time he had received from the new owners not one penny in respect of his property beyond a sum of £76 advanced to him on paying off the first mortgage. These statements may be received with incredulity. They are, however, but a concise summary of an authentic story, resting at every point upon documentary evidence. The story is so extraordinary in itself, and it involves so monstrous a wrong to the gentleman concerned in it, that I shall offer no apology for now telling it at full length.

The Hotel Cecil Restaurant.—Orchestra daily. M. François, Chef de Restaurant, from the Grand Hotel, Monte Carlo. The new Grill Room is now open.

How the Estate was Acquired.

The hero of this story is Mr. Joshua Jones. With his history and antecedents we are not here much concerned, but for the due appreciation of what follows it should be understood at the outset that Mr. Jones is a man who has spent the best part of his life in the rough work of colonisation at the Antipodes—essentially a pioneer and a frontier-man, and one, therefore, who would hardly be in his element in lawyers' offices and financial circles in the City of London. He is a man well known both in Australia and New Zealand. The property on which the story turns is an estate of upwards of 50,000 acres, situated near Taranaki, New Zealand, having a frontage of about thirty-five miles to the Mokau and Mohakatino Rivers, and popularly described as the Mokau Estate.

The property has a history both interesting in itself and bearing to some extent upon the story of Mr. Joshua Jones' adventures in London. At the conclusion of the Maori War, 1862-8, an area of about fourteen million acres in the North Island, known as the King Country, and lying between the settled districts of Wellington and Taranaki on the south, and Auckland on the north, remained in the possession of the natives, who absolutely closed it, and allowed no white men to cross the boundary. Various Europeans who attempted to penetrate into this region during the years 1869-70, were immediately shot. The Colonial Government were extremely anxious to have this territority opened up without further bloodshed, but all efforts in that direction were frustrated by the resolute attitude of the natives, and their refusal to hold any communication with the Government. In 1875, Mr. Joshua Jones, acting with the knowledge and approval of the Government, chartered a steamer at New Plymouth at his own risk and expense, and steamed up the Mokau River into the King Country, with the view of establishing friendly relations with the Maories. He took with him nothing but a cargo of flour, tea, sugar, blankets, and other similar articles of commerce, spirits and gunpowder being excluded, and by means of presents of these he proceeded to cultivate the goodwill and confidence of the natives. He was so far successful that in 1877 he induced the head chiefs to come in and meet the Government of Sir George Grey in New Plymouth. The result of the negotiation was most satisfactory. The Maories laid down their arms, and gave permission to the Government and to Europeans to enter their country. Settlers quickly entered; roads, railways, and trade followed; and the whole of the vast area was in the course of a few years converted, without further fighting or bloodshed, into a peaceful and civilised portion of her Majesty's dominions. Mr. Jones' services in bringing about this result were publicly and cordially acknowledged by Sir George Grey and other leading statesmen in New Zealand. The Maories, on their side, had granted him a lease of the district now known as the Mokau Estate. In recognition of his services, the Government waived their pre-emptive right over the property, and Mr. Jones' title was recognised and regulated by a special Act of the New Zealand Parliament, passed in August, 1888.

Mr. Jones comes to London.

About four years later Mr. Jones came to London for the purpose of making arrangements for the development of the property. He had every reason to believe (and there can be no doubt that he was right) that it was of the greatest value, containing extensive deposits of coal and other minerals. He had, in fact, refused an offer of £160,000, made by an Australian company, for the coal only, his chief reason for the refusal being that he wished to let the working of the coal upon royalties for the benefit of his children. Before coming to London, he had raised certain amounts upon two mortgages of the property, the first for £7,600, and the other for £1,550. The second mortgagee was pressing for payment, and Mr. Jones had been endeavouring to raise money in Australia, but found it impossible, owing to the severe financial crisis prevailing in the Colonies at that time. The Mokau property being advertised for sale by the second mortgagee while Mr. Jones was in Sydney, he determined to come to London to raise money there. He arrived in London early in January, 1893, with an introduction from his solicitor at Wellington, Mr. Travers, to a firm of London solicitors, Messrs. Flower & Nussey, of 1, Great Winchester-street, E.C., who were Mr. Travers' London agents. To Flower & Nussey he accordingly went, as soon as he arrived in London, to obtain assistance in raising the money he required. It would appear that, independently of Mr. Jones, Messrs. Flower & Nussey had had information about the Mokau property from Mr. Travers. The firm consisted at that time of two partners, the senior, Mr. Wickham Flower, being the one with whom Jones had dealings. Mr. Nussey appears to have taken no personal part in any of the transactions which follow. The terms on which the firm undertook Jones' business are clearly set forth in the following letter, written to them on January 26, 1893:—

To Messrs. W. and J. Flower & Nussey,
1, Great Winchester-street, London.
Solicitors.

[Stamp, 6d.]

GENTLEMEN,—In consideration of your having undertaken either to form a company or get a company formed, or find a purchaser or lessee, if possible, for the purpose of taking over and working my property in New Zealand, known as the Mokau property, upon terms of royalties to be paid to me, I hereby undertake and agree that out of any royalties I may receive from any company or purchaser, or lessee who may take over and work my said property, I will pay you the sum of one thousand and fifty pounds, as a bonus for your services, in addition to your reasonable and proper charges as between solicitor and client for any business that may be transacted by you for me in connection with the said property or the sale or letting thereof.—I am, yours faithfully,

JOSHUA JONES.

This agreement applies to the coal measures only.

It will be generally agreed, I think, that the terms of remuneration here fixed are sufficiently reasonable. Now let us see how Messrs. Flower & Nussey proceeded to discharge the duty which they thus undertook.

How the Estate was Sold.

In the first instance, Mr. Flower arranged with a Mr. C. C. Hopkinson, a financier carrying on business in Regent-street, to advance to Mr. Jones, on the security of a second charge on the estate, a sum of £1,800 to pay off the second mortgage. The balance left after providing for the mortgage debt and interest, and Mr. Hopkinson's charges, was handed over to Messrs. Flower & Nussey for Mr. Jones' private use. No sooner was the money paid, however, than the first mortgagee began to agitate for his money, and shortly after he, too, took steps to enforce his power of sale. It consequently became necessary for Messrs. Flower & Nussey, who were at this time in negotiation with various parties for the formation of companies, to raise the amount necessary to satisfy the first mortgagee. The sale being advertised for April 8, and none of the negotiations with third parties being near completion at that date, it was agreed, after various verbal discussions between Jones and his solicitors, that Mr. Flower should bid for the estate in his own name up to £10,000. Instructions to this effect were telegraphed to Travers in New Zealand on April 6. Mr. Flower would then seem to have asked Mr. Hopkinson to provide a portion of the purchase money, and to this Mr. Hopkinson assented on April 7 in the following letter :—

SAVOY HOTEL, Savoy Restaurant, London. Large reception-rooms for fashionable réunions. Orchestra plays daily during dinner and opera supper.

MORTLOCK'S (Oxford-st.), Estd. A.D. 1746.—The collection of China and Glass now on view in their Galleries fully maintains the high reputation and pre-eminence enjoyed by "MORTLOCK'S" for the last century and a half, and well repays a visit of inspection.

3, Regent-street,
April 7, 1893.

MOKAU PROPERTY, NEW ZEALAND.

DEAR SIR,—I hereby agree that, inasmuch as my firm has advanced eighteen hundred pounds (£1,800) on second mortgage of this property, I will agree to join with you in protecting the property at public auction up to £10,000, on condition that I do not advance for that purpose more than £4,100.

It is understood that, in the event of the property being bought for less than £10,000, then Messrs. C. Hopkinson & Son's mortgage for £1,800, or the balance of it, remains as a first charge on the property.

The property so bought to be held in equal shares by you and me.—I am, dear sir, yours faithfully, C. C. HOPKINSON.

Wickham Flower, Esq.

The sale took place on April 8, and, in accordance with the instructions telegraphed to Travers, the property was bought in the name of Mr. Wickham Flower for the sum of £7,600. The low figure at which it was bought is explained by the fact that it was generally understood in the colony that Mr. Travers, in bidding for Mr. Flower, was acting for Mr. Jones, whose solicitor he was known to have been, and there was consequently no opposition bidding.

In this way the legal estate in the Mokau property passed from Mr. Jones to Mr. Flower, in whose hands, conjointly with Mr. Hopkinson, it has remained to this day. Mr. Hopkinson's interest appears to have been secured by a declaration of trust executed in his favour by Mr. Flower. It is contended by Mr. Jones that this transaction was carried through by Mr. Flower as his solicitor, solely for the purpose of protecting the property from the mortgagee, pending the completion of the other arrangements which Mr. Flower's firm were then negotiating, and that, consequently, Mr. Flower could merely hold the property as a trustee for him (Jones), or as a mortgagee, subject to Jones' equity of redemption. Mr. Jones asserts that a verbal agreement to this effect was concluded between them before the sale, and that Mr. Flower promised to re-convey the property to him upon repayment by Jones of the advances, together with the costs of the firm, and the agreed bonus. Not only is any such promise denied by Mr. Flower, but he asserts, if I understand his position correctly, that in the transactions relating to the purchase of the estate on April 8, he was not acting as Jones' solicitor at all, but as an independent speculator, buying on his own account and for his own sole benefit.

FLOWER & NUSSEY'S POSITION AT THE TIME OF THE SALE.

Upon this question depend to a great extent the merits of all the subsequent proceedings, and the position as between the various parties at the present day. It may, therefore, be convenient at this point to look briefly at the evidence on each side. To begin with, the fact is undeniable that Jones had retained Flower & Nussey as his solicitors for the purpose of raising money to develop his property, and that Flower & Nussey had been in negotiation with parties for that purpose up to the date of the sale. Not only this, but it is equally certain that they continued to carry on such negotiations in the express character of Jones' solicitors after the date of the sale. In their correspondence with various parties in reference to loans on the property after that date they speak of their "client," Mr. Joshua Jones, and refer to instructions which they have received from him. In one letter written to Mr. Hopkinson's firm on June 16, 1893, they actually speak of the formation of a syndicate to which Mr. Jones is "to contract to grant a lease if called upon to do so," and in another they allude to him as the "mortgagor"—expressions extremely difficult to explain if, as has since been alleged by the firm, all Jones' interest in the property had at this time ceased. But there is more than correspondence to establish the facts. Messrs. Flower & Nussey have delivered in the course of subsequent proceedings a very handsome bill of costs. The bill is in a somewhat unusual form, the individual items not being priced in the ordinary way, but a round sum of £1,000 being stated by way of total on the last page. In this bill of costs there are actually entered items having relation to the sale of the Mokau property on April 8. If the purchase was effected purely as an independent speculation on Mr. Flower's part, how comes it that the firm did not charge Mr. Flower with the costs? If, on the other hand, they have debited all the expenses to Jones, how can it be open to the firm to contend that in the matter of the purchase they were not acting as Jones' solicitors? If the contention is untenable as regards the firm, it must, I presume, be equally untenable as regards every individual member of the firm. The proposition that while a firm collectively are acting as solicitors to one particular client, each individual partner is not also that client's solicitor, is one which can hardly be argued seriously—though in the witness-box, in certain proceedings hereafter to be described, Mr. Flower gave an account of his position which seems almost to go to this length.

Nor is this all the evidence upon the point. On April 14—after receiving by cable intimation that the estate had been purchased—Flower & Nussey write as follows to Mr. Travers :—

As regards Mr. Jones, we have told him that though the property has been purchased in Mr. Flower's name, it is not Mr. Flower's intention, nor Mr. Hopkinson's, that he should be deprived of his property; but that some arrangement will have to be made for the development and realisation of the property upon terms which will secure to him a very substantial interest in the property. At the moment we hardly know what to propose to him, as we are still in uncertainty upon many points that will require most careful consideration; but we shall endeavour to draw up a working agreement with Mr. Jones as soon as possible. We will forward you a copy of any agreement, if an agreement is come to, as soon as it is made.

We need hardly say that we shall wait with much anxiety your reply to this letter . . .—We are, dear sir,

W. & J. FLOWER & NUSSEY.

W. T. L. Travers, Esq., solicitor, Wellington, New Zealand.

P.S.—Mr. Jones appears to think that the property has been bought by you on his behalf, but we have little doubt that our instructions were acted on, and that the transaction has been carried out in accordance with our cable of 6th inst., and the property purchased in the name of Mr. W. Flower.

We sent you a further cable to-day on the subject, a copy of which is included in the copy cablegrams sent herewith. It is not the intention of the purchasers to deprive Mr. Jones of his property, and an arrangement is now in course of consideration by Mr. Jones, Mr. Hopkinson, and Mr. Flower.

This letter—written, mark, within a week of the sale—puts the true position of affairs beyond all question. If, as here stated, Mr. Flower purchased the estate without any intention of depriving Mr. Jones of his property, it is clearly not open to him to contend that he purchased, like any ordinary purchaser, with the intention of transferring the property to himself. But now, setting aside all question of the original intention, let us see how the purchasers of the Mokau property proceeded to deal with Mr. Jones.

MR. JONES EDGED OUT.

It will be noted that in the postscript to their letter to Travers, of April 14, Flower & Nussey speak of an arrangement then "in course of consideration." There is in existence a draft "Memorandum of Proposed Arrangement" which no doubt embodies the terms referred to in the letter to Travers. The agreement was never executed, but it was drawn up in Messrs. Flower & Nussey's office, and transmitted to Mr. Jones, and is therefore conclusive evidence of the terms which Mr. Flower and Mr. Hopkinson were offering to Jones at this time. The date Mr. Jones assigns to it is April 16, two days after the above letter to Travers. The reason it was not signed was simply that Mr. Jones declined to assent to the proposed terms. What were those terms? The first clause is as follows:—

(1) If Mr. Joshua Jones elects to pay Messrs. Flower & Hopkinson £10,000 within one calendar month from April 8 inst., together with a bonus of £1,000 each, for protecting his property, and 10 per cent. interest for one month on the £10,000, Messrs. Flower & Hopkinson will reconvey the entire property to Mr. Jones absolutely—he paying Messrs. Flower & Nussey's costs and charges for work done with reference to his property and affairs since January, 1893, and all costs and expenses of and in connection with the sale by Plimmer and the subsequent conveyance and reconveyance of the property.

Clause 2 provides that in the event of the payments not being made within one calendar month from April 8, but being made one clear week before the completion of the purchase (June 8) Flower & Nussey will re-convey on payment of an additional bonus of £1,000 each—i.e., £4,000 altogether. Clause 3 provides that failing payment as provided by the last clause, the property shall be "developed and realised on the joint account and for the joint benefit of Messrs. Joshua Jones, Charles Hopkinson, and Wickham Flower," Jones giving his personal assistance and receiving a third part of the net profits of realisation.

I invite special attention to this document, which is the starting-point in a long series of negotiations. At the time when the document was drawn up, only a deposit of £1,950 had been paid by Messrs. Flower & Hopkinson on the purchase of the estate, about a week previously. The balance of £5,700 had to be paid two months later (June 8). The bonus, therefore, which Messrs. Flower & Hopkinson asked for as the terms of re-conveyance of the property to Jones, within one month from April 8, is a bonus of £2,000 for the advance of £1,950 for that period. The alternative bonus, which they asked for as the price of reconveyance by June 8, is a bonus of £4,000 for the same advance for two months, and this bonus is in addition to interest at the rate of 10 per cent.

Now, what is to be thought of this proposal? Not only are the terms monstrously extortionate, but they acquire an altogether exceptional character from the fact that they are proposed to Mr. Jones by his own solicitors. Here is a gentleman who comes to Messrs. Flower & Nussey for the purpose of raising money through them to pay off a comparatively trifling mortgage and develop a property of immense value. At the end of three months he finds that his solicitors, under an arrangement for temporarily "protecting" the property against the existing mortgagees, have got the whole estate into their hands; that they are actually calling upon him to redeem it from them within a couple of months by paying this huge bonus in addition to the purchase-money; and that, failing this, they propose to realise the property themselves, allowing him only a one-third interest in it. I think it will be agreed that Mr. Flower's notions of "protecting" a client's property for him are, to say the least, peculiar. It will surprise no one to hear that Mr. Jones absolutely declined to accept this proposal. Even if he had been in a position to find the money elsewhere at a few weeks' notice, he would have been justified in his refusal. But as a point of fact, in the position in which he had now been placed, he had little or no chance of finding the money, except with the co-operation of Messrs. Flower and Hopkinson; and by signing the agreement he would have placed himself utterly at the mercy of these gentlemen, for he would virtually have signed away for ever two-thirds of his interest in the Mokau property, unless Flower & Nussey provided him within two months with funds of £14,000 for the purpose of redeeming, and paying the bonus, interest, and costs.

Side by side with this agreement it is interesting to read the following letter from Mr. Hopkinson to Mr. Flower, written apparently the day before the draft memorandum was dispatched to Jones for his signature. It would seem that a copy of Flower & Nussey's letter to Travers of April 14 (quoted above) had been sent to Mr. Hopkinson, who replies thus:—

3, Regent-street, St. James', London, S.W.,
April 15, 1893.

MOKAU PROPERTY.

DEAR SIR,—I have this morning received from your firm copy of a letter written to Mr. Travers dated 14th instant.

I regret to say that I consider one part of it very injudicious, and I think you will, on reflection, agree with me. We may have very good intentions towards Joshua Jones, but circumstances are very likely to arise which may compel us to part with the property at a sacrifice of his interest, and I think it most unwise on our part to have practically undertaken to his solicitor not to do so.

I have no desire to obtain half of his property, but I object to binding myself not to dispose of my interest in such a way as I may think fit, it being mine, and obtained by me at great personal inconvenience and sorely against my will, and the same thing applies to you. I send you the copy referred to with the parts referred to marked in pencil.—I am, dear sir, yours truly,

C. C. HOPKINSON.

P.S.—My name is Charles Cæsar Hopkinson, not Charles only.

Wickham Flower, Esq.

This letter, passing between the two other parties behind Mr. Jones' back, is decidedly significant. Mr. Hopkinson "may have"—like Mr. Flower—the best of intentions towards Mr. Jones; but he thinks it "very injudicious" to commit these good intentions to writing. He recognises that Jones has interests in the property. But he anticipates that circumstances may arise which will necessitate the interests of Charles Cæsar Hopkinson taking precedence of the interests of Joshua Jones, and he hints ingenuously to his correspondent that the same argument may apply to the interests of Wickham Flower.

Whether it was in consequence of this very straight hint that Flower & Nussey drew up and transmitted to Jones the "memorandum of arrangement" already described, is a matter for conjecture; but it is clear enough that Mr. Flower was not long in coming round to Mr. Hopkinson's view as to the desirability of providing for the possible necessity of disposing of the property at a sacrifice of Jones' interest. On June 5, apparently after some marked difference of opinion had developed between Jones and his solicitors, Flower & Nussey wrote him a letter defining their position clearly. This letter recites the history of the relations of the firm with Jones from the beginning, but seems to leave something to be desired as an accurate narrative of what had passed. After giving their version of the facts, Flower & Nussey express themselves thus:—

In these circumstances the purchasers wish it to be clearly understood between you and them that after the completion of the purchase they must be looked upon as the absolute owners of the property, and that they have the undoubted right to realise and dispose of the property in such manner as they and their advisers in the colony may think best. And they propose shortly to send out to Mr. Travers at Wellington a general power of attorney to act for them in the management and realisation of the property. They wish us to add, however, that in the event of the property realising hereafter more than sufficient money to repay the money which has been advanced, and the £1,800, and any past and future interest and expenses connected with the property, they will be willing to share such profits with you in such proportion as may be mutually agreed upon hereafter, if and so long as you give them and their agent such assistance as may be requisite for making the best of the property; and they would be glad to meet you, so soon as a meeting can be arranged, for the purpose of considering this point with you and coming to some definite understanding upon it. It must, of course, be considered that what we have been authorised to suggest as to a division of profits will not entitle you to any legal claim, but is a matter of concession by the owners. And the suggestion must be considered as wholly without prejudice to legal rights, unless and until a binding agreement in writing is come to on the subject.—We are, dear Sir, Yours truly,

W. and J. FLOWER & NUSSEY.

Joshua Jones, Esq., &c.

It will be noted that there is here no suggestion that after the completion of the purchase by Flower and Hopkinson, Jones has any rights whatever, legal or equitable, in the property. There is no admission that the purchasers' rights were limited to the extent of their advances, costs, and reasonable profits, or that Jones had any equity of redemption upon a payment of these amounts. The most that is suggested—"suggestion" is their own word—is that in the event of the property realising more than the amount of the advances, interest, and expenses, the purchasers will be willing on certain conditions to share the profits in a proportion to be subsequently agreed upon, this "suggestion" being thrown out "without prejudice," and with an express proviso that it is not to create any legal claim, but merely to be looked upon as a gratuitous concession. This position, taken up in June, 1893, is the one to which Mr. Flower, though he has on at least two occasions temporarily withdrawn from it, has practically adhered down to the present moment, except that the talk of a gratuitous concession to Mr. Jones has never come to anything at all. It seems to me, therefore, an accurate description of the transaction to say that Mr. Jones has been "edged out."

WHAT PASSED BETWEEN MESSRS. HOPKINSON AND FLOWER.

Before going to the next stage in Mr. Jones' career, I will refer to one or two other letters which passed at this period behind his back. The first of them is interesting, not only as illustrating the private sentiments of the purchasers, but also as showing that Jones was already seriously straitened for want of money, and was almost dependent upon the benevolence of Messrs. Hopkinson and Flower for the means of subsistence—certainly not a position in which a man is at an advantage in fighting a battle. The Mr. Fellowes herein referred to was originally managing clerk to Flower & Nussey, and in that capacity conducted a great deal of the business connected with the Mokau property. A characteristic incident in the case is that, within a few days of his first introduction to Flower & Nussey's office, Mr. Jones wrote Mr. Fellowes a letter thanking him for services rendered, and promising to give him £500 when the estate was realised, which letter Mr. Fellowes, with business-like promptitude, immediately had stamped. Shortly after the conclusion of the sale Mr. Fellowes was taken into partnership, and the firm became Flower, Nussey, & Fellowes :—

Junior Carlton Club,
June 7, 1893.

MY DEAR SIR,—I have seen Mr. Fellowes this evening, who says that you think it advisable to pay a small sum to Jones to enable him to pay his hotel bill (£16 odd), and to remain in London beyond the 16th for the purpose of giving assistance in raising a loan on the property. For my part I do not believe in raising the said loan in London, and I think that, if it were possible, it could be done better without Jones' presence than with it. I do not feel disposed to pay any part of Jones' passage out, as I feel sure he could get that advance elsewhere, but he will not try so long as he thinks he can get money from your firm. If you think it necessary to advance more money to him I will pay one moiety up to £20, and no more; but I feel sure that the sooner he is off the better, and we must get out by gradual sales of parts of the property.—Yours truly, C. C. HOPKINSON.

W. Flower, Esq.

The desire here expressed to get Jones out of the way was no doubt a prudent one. In the language, however, which he uses in this letter, and the next, respecting Jones' applications for funds, Mr. Hopkinson shows himself ignorant, or oblivious, of important facts. As mentioned above, when Hopkinson made his first advance of £1,800, a handsome sum—upwards of £100—not required for immediate use, was handed over to Messrs. Flower & Co. to meet Jones' future necessities, and all that Mr. Jones ever applied for or received in cash was by way of advances out of this fund. So far as I can find, the most that has ever been alleged to have been paid to Jones personally in cash by the new owners of his estate from beginning to end of the transaction is about seventy-six pounds, and that money actually came out of Hopkinson's first advance! To represent Mr. Jones, therefore, as sponging on his kind friends, Flower & Co., merely to save himself the trouble of getting money elsewhere, looks, to put it mildly, a little unfair on the part of Mr. Hopkinson.

Another month elapses, and we come to another proposal from Mr. Hopkinson to Mr. Flower for dealing with the property :—

3, Regent-street,
July 8, 1893.

DEAR MR. FLOWER,—Fellowes tells me that Jones is asking for £15 more, and also that he is remaining here because he does not trust us.

I wish to inform you that I am firmly resolved not to pay any more money to Jones, as I disapprove of his remaining here, especially as he is doing so in my opinion against our interests.

We have given Fellowes a short memo. of our idea of what we ought to have, now that the two months have elapsed during which we would have taken £1,000 each bonus, plus 10 per cent. interest.

It is roughly, first, that £10,500 or thereabouts, which consists of mortgage £1,800 and £8,400 paid by you and me, sundry sums to Jones, and interest having been repaid us, we shall take £5,000 (£2,500 each), cash bonus and one-sixteenth each of profit, or one-third between us, giving Jones the other two-thirds; that all rents, royalties, shall go towards interest on £1,800 mortgage and on, say, £8,500 or thereabouts which you and I have paid, before Jones gets anything.—Yours truly,
C. C. HOPKINSON.

W. Flower, Esq.

To do Mr. Hopkinson justice, this proposal is a modest one by comparison with that embodied in the draft memorandum of April. That provided that unless Jones redeemed by June 8, and paid a bonus of £4,000, he was only to retain an interest of one-third. Now, although the bonus is raised to £5,000, Jones is to be allowed a two-thirds share in the estate. Look now at Mr. Wickham Flower's reply to this proposal—one of the most edifying documents in the case. For its due appreciation, it must be remembered that at the time it was written Mr. Flower's firm were still, by their own statements and admissions, acting as Mr. Jones' solicitors. This is the letter :—

1, Great Winchester-street, London,
July 10, 1893.

DEAR MR. HOPKINSON,—I received your letter at Tangley yesterday, and Mr. Fellowes has shown me the draft memo. you gave him.

I entirely agree with you that there is no use in Mr. Jones remaining in England any longer, and I shall do my best to get him off to New Zealand as soon as possible. I think that Mr. Fellowes now agrees with us as to the desirability of this. At the same time I think we should first come to a definite understanding with Mr. Jones, if possible, upon the matters referred to in your letter, and that the arrangement should be reduced into writing and signed before he leaves; but this need not occupy many days, and I will do my best to get it through as quickly as possible.

I have considered your suggestion, and considering the large amount at stake and the risk we run, and the great personal trouble and uncertainty that attaches to the business, and the bother we shall in all probability have with it for some time to come, and considering also that if either Plimmer or Johnson had bought the property they would in all probability not have allowed Mr. Jones any portion of the profits, if any were made ultimately, I really do not think that Mr. Jones has any claim on us for more than, say, one-third of any net profits that may ultimately be realised. It seems to me that he ought to consider any such allowance as that as a very handsome one under the circumstances; but I shall be guided very much by your views and opinion. . . .—I am, yours very truly, W. FLOWER.

C. C. Hopkinson, Esq.

Rarely has the mutability of human resolutions—especially good resolutions—been more strikingly displayed than here. On April 14 neither Mr. Flower nor his co-purchaser has the slightest intention of depriving Mr. Jones of his property. By April 16 they will not deprive him of it, provided he can repurchase it from them, and pay them the aforesaid bonus and interest within a couple of months. On June 6 they notify him that on completion of the purchase, they will recognise no rights on his part at all, but will, as a favour, give him some undefined share of the profits, if any are realised. On July 8 Hopkinson thinks that two-thirds of any such profits would be a fair share for Jones. Mr. Flower, on his side, is of opinion that this would be extravagant generosity, and that Jones ought to consider himself handsomely treated if he gets one-third.

THE NEXT TERMS OFFERED.

Matters remained very much as above described, no arrangement being arrived at, Flower & Co. failing to raise money on the property, and Jones' distrust of their intentions daily deepening, until some time in August, 1893, when the two parties seem to have come to an open breach. Mr. Jones was now in a position of great difficulty, for whatever his rights might be, he was without means to assert them, and until they were asserted he was hardly in a position to raise money upon them. Messrs. Flower and Hopkinson were in the meantime engaged in forming a syndicate to deal with the property, as will be shown presently. On his side, Mr. Jones found at least one party who was willing to take it over. This was Mr. C. G. Jellicoe, a New Zealand barrister, who knew both Mr. Jones and the Mokau property. He was in England in the summer of 1894, and was prepared to come to Mr. Jones' rescue by advancing a sum of £12,000 to pay off the advances, costs, and charges of Messrs. Hopkinson & Flower. He made the offer, and it was refused. In order that there might be no mistake about it, he put the offer to Mr. Flower in writing, and the following correspondence records all that passed :—

The Langland Bay Hotel, Langland, near Swansea,
August 10, 1894.

Re Joshua Jones.

DEAR SIR,—There seems to be some misunderstanding on the part of Mr. Jones's advisers as to the position you took up regarding this matter. At the interview I had the pleasure of having with you last week I told Mr. Jones that you denied that he has any interest whatever in the Mokau property, but that, without prejudice, you were willing to reconvey on payment of £30,000, and that it was useless to offer you anything less than that sum, as you had definitely stated you would not accept it. Kindly let me hear whether I am correct in my recollection of the position, and whether you will accept a sum equal to the amount you have actually paid plus your costs, if I tender it. I have said that I am certain you will waive a tender of the latter sum if Mr. Jones can establish a right to a transfer, as I am prepared to pay a sum not exceeding £12,000 for the property at any moment.—Yours truly, (Signed) C. G. JELLICOE.

1, Great Winchester-street,
London, E.C.
August 13, 1894.

Re J. JONES.

DEAR SIR,—In reply to your letter of 10th instant, we beg to say that there can be no real misunderstanding on the part of Mr. Jones's advisers as to the position we have taken up if they have read the correspondence in which the position is clearly explained.

Since the sale by auction in New Zealand in April, 1893, Mr. Jones has had no interest whatever in the Mokau property, which was conveyed by his mortgagees, acting under the direction of the Court, to our clients, and so became their absolute property, and all that has happened since then has been that our clients have, at Mr. Jones's request, on various occasions offered to resell the entire property to him on certain conditions which he has never been able to carry out, and these negociations came entirely to an end in November last, when our clients entered into an agreement for the disposal of their entire interest in a great bulk of the property to a syndicate formed by Messrs. Scrimgeour.

As matters now stand, our clients will certainly not accept any such sum as £12,000, which would not nearly cover our clients' outlay and expenses for their interest in the property and the expenses they have incurred.

If Mr. Jones or his friends are prepared to offer £30,000 cash down, or half that amount with ample security for the balance, it is not improbable that we might be able to arrange a sale of the property on these terms; but the matter cannot long remain open, as already arrangements are under consideration for surveying and lotting out the entire property for sale in New Zealand, under the direction of Mr. Travers, of Wellington, and certain parties who are acting there with him, and the completion of this arrangement is not likely to be much longer delayed.

Under this arrangement, if carried out, the whole of the surface lands will be disposed of, leaving the question as to the minerals to be dealt with later on.—We are, yours faithfully, (Signed) FLOWER, NUSSEY, & FELLOWES.

C. G. Jellicoe, Esq., Langland Bay Hotel, near Swansea.

It will be seen that Messrs. Flower and Hopkinson's valuation of their own rights was advancing by leaps and bounds. In July, 1893, they were disposed to settle with Jones on the basis of repayment of their advances plus a bonus of £5,000 in cash, and a share of the profits of realisation. In August, 1894, they will not reconvey for anything under £30,000 in cash. The terms were virtually prohibitive. Mr. Jellicoe was not prepared to bid that amount, and the negotiation collapsed.

MR. JONES MADE BANKRUPT.

After this attempt, Mr. Jones had recourse to other measures. He placed himself in the hands of Messrs. Lewis & Lewis, and in September, 1894, he commenced a Chancery action against Messrs. Flower & Hopkinson to assert his equitable claim to the property. Then followed a very curious development, in order to understand which it is necessary to retrace the story a little.

During the twelve months succeeding his breach with Flower, Mr. Jones had to raise money as best he could, in order to meet his personal necessities, and it appears that in March, 1894, he gave to a Mr. Robert Colley a bill of exchange for £450, representing various advances and interest. He also gave to the same gentleman a few weeks later, by way, I presume, of collateral security, an equitable charge for £450 upon the Mokau property, subject to two prior charges, which were expressly stated as amounting to not more than £12,000, thus clearly pointing to Messrs. Flower and Hopkinson's claim on the estate. It may be mentioned, as further showing the perfect bona-fides of Mr. Jones' conduct in this matter, that he acted under the advice of his new solicitors, Messrs. Lewis & Lewis. Notice of this charge in favour of Mr. Colley was given to Messrs. Flower, Nussey, & Fellowes by Mr. Colley's solicitor, Mr. J. M. R. Todd. Letters then passed between Mr. Todd and Messrs. Flower, Nussey, & Fellowes. In one of them, dated May 15, 1894, Mr. Flower's firm wrote as follows :—

Mr. Jones has purported to charge in your client's favour property in which he has no interest whatever, as the property was sold by his New Zealand mortgagees to our clients under their powers of sale. . . . It seems to us that it now merely remains for your client to consider whether or not it is worth his while to prosecute Mr. Jones for obtaining money under false pretences.

An amiable suggestion this! True, on the view which the firm had already put forward, that Jones had ceased to have any interest, legal or equitable, in the property, Jones had nothing on which he could give a charge. But no one knew better than Mr. Flower's firm that Jones did not accept that view, and as lawyers they must have known that it was a view open to question. Knowing that, however, they charge Mr. Jones behind his back with a criminal intention, and gratuitously suggest to a third party the desirability of prosecuting him.

This disinterested attempt of Messrs. Flower & Co. to instigate a criminal prosecution against Mr. Jones did not succeed; and Mr. Colley's claims were still outstanding (the bill having been dishonoured) at the time when Mr. Jones, as already mentioned, commenced his Chancery action against Messrs. Flower and Hopkinson. By an unexplained coincidence, within a few days of the issue of the writ in that action, Mr. Colley presented a bankruptcy petition on the dishonoured bill, and very shortly afterwards the unfortunate Jones was adjudicated bankrupt. About the time of the commencement of the bankruptcy proceedings, or very shortly after, the defendants in the Chancery application applied for and obtained an order for security for costs, or, in default of that, a stay of proceedings. In Jones' position, the effect of this was, of course, to put a stop for the time to the Chancery action, and to all further attempts on Jones' part to assert his claims against Flower and Hopkinson. He did not obtain his discharge until November, 1895, but the order for his discharge was then made with the assent of the whole of the London creditors, and without conditions.

MR. JONES IN CHANCERY.

In the meantime, Messrs. Flower and Hopkinson were making every effort to realise the Mokau property, with the result that it was once more announced for sale in New Zealand on July 17, 1895. Mr. Jones, on his side, had found a friend in Mr. G. T. Bean, a gentleman who had known him in the colonies, and who had advised and consulted with him on previous occasions in regard to the Mokau estate. On July 9, 1895, Mr. Bean purchased from the Official Receiver in Bankruptcy for the sum of £50 all Jones' rights against Messrs. Flower and Hopkinson. An action was then commenced in the Chancery Division by Mr. Bean against Messrs. Flower and Hopkinson, and immediately after the issue of the writ a motion was made for an injunction to stop the sale. On the other side an application was made to dismiss the action as frivolous and vexatious. These two motions were disposed of in the Court of Appeal on July 15, 1895, when the Court refused to stay the action as frivolous and vexatious, but also refused to grant the injunction. The view of the case taken by the Court at this stage, though not a final judgment in the action, and only based, apparently, upon a very cursory examination of the facts, is of considerable importance, for it seems to bear out entirely Mr. Jones' view of his own rights, and it negatives in the most direct and emphatic manner the contention put forward by Mr. Flower and his firm, that all Jones' rights and interest in the property had absolutely ceased when the purchase was completed. The judgment was delivered by the present Master of the Rolls, then Lord Justice Lindley, who summed up the legal position thus:—

> Messrs. Flower and Hopkinson, under some arrangement between them, seem to have bought it (the property) for something like £10,000, and the property has been conveyed to them, or one of them. The legal estate is in them, or one of them. The plaintiff talks about their having this [? his] property. What are the plaintiff's rights? His rights are simply that he has an equitable interest in the estate, subject to the payment to the defendants of what is due to them for their large outlays. Those are his rights, and nothing more, and nothing less.

That seems to put the rights of the parties clearly enough. As I understand it, Flower and Hopkinson are held to be virtually in the position of mortgagees, holding the legal estate subject to Jones' equity of redemption on paying what is due to them for their advances.

In spite of the refusal of an injunction to stop the sale, the Mokau property never was sold on July 17, 1895. This was probably due to an advertisement published by Jones in the local newspapers, warning all whom it might concern that an action was proceeding between him and Messrs. Flower & Hopkinson, and that purchasers from them would buy at their own risk. The notice had the desired effect of preventing any one from bidding at the sale. I may remark here that the New Zealand Act which settled Jones' title appears to make his consent necessary to the registration of any subsequent title to the property. This is a strong point in Mr. Jones' position, and probably goes far to explain the fact that down to the present day the estate never has been disposed of, in spite of all the efforts made by Messrs. Flower and Hopkinson and their agents in the colony.

To return to Mr. Bean's Chancery action, which, of course, had not been finally terminated by the abortive application for an injunction in July. After the Long Vacation of 1895 the case seems to have dragged on in the usual course of such cases, voluminous pleadings being delivered, the plaintiff claiming the right to redeem the property, and the defendants, notwithstanding the interlocutory judgment of the Court of Appeal in July, boldly denying once more that Jones had any right or interest whatever in the property. By the end of the year the case was ready to be set down for trial, when the defendants suddenly executed a very striking change of front. After discovery of documents had been obtained, an intimation was given to Messrs. Lewis & Lewis, that the defendants had no desire to retain the property, and were willing to give it up on payment of their advances and charges. In other words, they absolutely abandoned the position taken up in Flower & Co.'s letter to Jones of June 5, 1893, and maintained in the letter to Jellicoe in August, 1894, as well as in their suggestion that Jones had committed a criminal offence in giving a further charge on his interest in the property, and generally throughout their proceedings down to the delivery of the pleadings in the Chancery action. This change of attitude left nothing in issue but the amount due from Jones. An agreement on every point was arrived at between Messrs. Lewis & Lewis and Messrs. Flower & Co., except as to the amount of the bonus to be paid, and this point was referred to the counsel who had been instructed on each side. Eventually the total amount due to Messrs. Flower and Hopkinson was settled at £14,500, and the terms were embodied by consent in an order of Court, under which Jones was declared to be entitled to a re-conveyance of the estate to him on payment of the £14,500, £5,000 to be paid on June 16, 1896, and the balance of £9,500 in January, 1897.

For the moment this made things look very much better for Mr. Jones. It is true that the amount found due from him seems somewhat excessive, especially in view of the fact that the defendants now admitted that they had taken up an unjustifiable attitude towards Jones, and that, consequently, it was primarily their fault that the advance had been outstanding so long. Mr. Jones contends that the lawyers, in assessing the amount, charged against him an item of upwards of £3,000 expended by the defendants in surveying and lotting out the property for sale; and as this expenditure seems to have been incurred after the refusal of Jellicoe's offer of £12,000 in August, 1894, it would not appear to be justly chargeable to Mr. Jones. However, though the result might not be everything that could be desired, it yet opened to Mr. Jones a way out of his troubles.

An Order of Foreclosure.

A means of providing the money required for redemption under the Chancery order at once presented itself. Mr. Bean, the nominal plaintiff in the Chancery action, was the Chairman of a company called the West Australian Mining Company. In that capacity he had already introduced the Mokau property to the notice of his Board. The company's solicitor, Mr. Williams, had reported favourably upon it, and before the compromise of the Chancery action the Board had actually passed a resolution to purchase the property, provided that Mr. Jones could give a good title. Accordingly, after the amount required to free the property had been fixed by the order in the Chancery action, it was settled that this amount would be found by the West Australian Mining Company.

Then followed another of the many remarkable incidents in this remarkable case. Some time in 1896, before the date fixed for the payment of the first instalment, Mr. C. C. Hopkinson communicated to Mr. Williams, solicitor to the West Australian Mining Company, who had referred to him on the subject, a report of a most damaging character upon the Mokau property. This report was one prepared by a gentleman named Wales, and it figures conspicuously at later stages of this case. For the present I will only say that this report is now admitted, even by Messrs. Flower and Hopkinson themselves, to have been an utterly untrustworthy and misleading one. That one of the vendors of the property should have communicated such a report to intending purchasers is certainly curious, and points either to an affectionate regard on Mr. Hopkinson's part for the interests of the West Australian Mining Company, or to a generally philanthropic disposition not usually met with in business transactions. The result of the communication was what might have been expected. Mr. Williams promptly advised the Board of the West Australian Mining Company that in the face of this report he must withdraw his recommendation of the Mokau property, the resolution of the Board was dropped, the £5,000 was not forthcoming by June 16, and Mr. Jones was prevented from complying with the terms of the award in Chancery. After the time had elapsed for the payment of the first instalment of £5,000, application was made to the Court by Messrs. Flower and Hopkinson for an order of foreclosure, which was obtained on June 23, 1896. The order was subsequently published in the New Zealand papers, and the door was once more shut against poor Mr. Jones.

Before leaving the foreclosure, it will be convenient to state the history of Mr. Wales' report, which played such an important part in bringing about this unexpected catastrophe. In the autumn of 1893, soon after Jones had quarrelled with Flower & Nussey, a syndicate seems to have been formed under the auspices of Mr. Flower for the purpose of acquiring the Mokau property, on which it obtained an option for one year. The syndicate is referred to in the case as "the Scrimgeour Syndicate," from the fact that a Stock Exchange firm of that name took a part in it. It may be mentioned that negotiations with Messrs. Scrimgeour were originally opened by Mr. Jones himself. There were seven members of the syndicate, one of them being Mr. Wickham Flower. It was this syndicate which sent out Mr. Wales to report. He went out in November, 1893, and returned in May, 1894. His report, which will be referred to more in detail later on, was entirely unfavourable, the coal in particular being condemned. The Scrimgeour Syndicate naturally did nothing more, and no more is heard of the report until it reappears in the hands of Mr. Hopkinson in 1896, just in time to defeat the proposed offer of the West Australian Mining Company. In considering the part which this report plays in the case, it is not immaterial to note that although Wales came back with his report in May, 1894, and although this report has at least twice been used by Messrs. Flower and Hopkinson for the purpose of showing that the property was comparatively worthless, yet three months after Wales' return, namely, in August, 1894, Messrs. Flower & Co. flatly refused Mr. Jellicoe's offer of £12,000, and replied that they would not re-convey to Jones for anything under £30,000. It would appear that Mr. Wales was only on the property for something under ten days, an obviously inadequate period for ascertaining the value of an estate of 50,000 acres, the wealth of which lies chiefly in minerals; and the fee paid to him was certainly modest in comparison with what highly-skilled experts are accustomed to demand for such work.

Mr. Jones Tries the Incorporated Law Society.

The Chancery order in his favour having been thus frustrated, Mr. Jones next tried a remedy in a new direction. He is fortunate in the possession of several influential friends, and from one of these he obtained an introduction to the Attorney-General, Sir Richard Webster, with whom he had interviews in October, 1896. Sir Richard Webster seems to have taken an interest in the case, and had all the papers before him. The result was that he advised Jones to lay the papers before the Incorporated Law Society, with an affidavit in support of them, and it would appear that he subsequently communicated to the Society a written intimation of his opinion that the case was one calling for inquiry.

At an earlier stage of the case Mr. Jones had made an application to the Incorporated Law Society, but had been met with the reply that as litigation was pending, the Society could not move in the matter. He now acted at once on Sir Richard Webster's advice, and the papers were laid before the Incorporated Law Society (November, 1896). In January of 1897 they were returned with an intimation that the Law Society did not consider the case one in which an inquiry by them was called for. From this it will be seen that no formal inquiry into the facts was undertaken by the Law Society. As this is a matter on which I shall have to comment in detail hereafter, I will only remark upon it here that the opinion thus formed, primâ facie, by the officers of the Law Society was obviously opposed diametrically to the opinion formed, primâ facie, by the Attorney-General.

Mr. Jones at the Old Bailey.

It may be that the failure of his application to the Law Society rendered Mr. Jones desperate. No one could be surprised if it were so. From what I have myself seen of him, I conclude that Mr. Jones is by nature a man of somewhat excitable temperament, and he had gone through during four years in London enough to exhaust the patience of the most self-possessed mortal. At any rate, shortly after the Law Society incident, he committed the only serious mistake which can, I think, be imputed to him in the whole course of his long and desperate fight. He penned in March, 1897, a violent and uncompromising attack on Mr. Flower, Mr. Fellowes, and Mr. Hopkinson, and had two or three copies of it made, one of which he imprudently communicated to a third party, who, in his turn, kindly communicated it to Mr. Hopkinson. It was a reckless libel, for it made unequivocal charges of fraud and conspiracy which Mr. Jones had no means of proving; and it was as foolish as it was reckless, for it put for the time a man who had hitherto had right on his side hopelessly in the wrong. The parties attacked were not slow to seize the advantage thus given them. Mr. Jones was at once brought before a magistrate, and committed for trial on charges of criminal libel.

The story of the trial at the Old Bailey, which followed, is soon told. After having been adjourned from the April Sessions, the case was to have come on in May before Mr. Justice Grantham. The prosecution at first assented to a further adjournment for the convenience of Mr. Carson, Q.C., who was leading for the defence, but the consent was subsequently withdrawn, with the double result that Mr. Carson had to hand his brief, at very short notice to Mr. Darling, Q.C.—now Mr. Justice Darling—and that the case came before the Common Serjeant. This learned Judge seems to have taken anything but an unfavourable view of the conduct of Mr. Jones' first solicitors, and he certainly was not unduly impressed with the wrongs of Mr. Jones himself. The trial extended over four days. For the defence a justification was pleaded. The general line taken by the prosecution was that Messrs. Flower and Hopkinson had never desired more than to recoup themselves for their outlay, risk, and services; that they had never been able to obtain this; and that the property was not worth anything like the value put upon it by Mr. Jones. In support of this case the prosecutors and various other gentlemen connected with the transactions went into the box, and Mr. Wales himself was called in support of his report, his evidence being to the effect that the coal was valueless either for steam or house purposes; that the workings were liable to be flooded by the river; and that, so far as Mr. Wales had seen, there was no "magnetic sand"—a deposit carrying large quantities of iron. Mr. Jones gave evidence in his defence at considerable length. He was then cross-examined by Sir Edward Clarke, who very speedily induced him to withdraw some of the most reckless expressions in the libel, such as that the prosecutors were capable of committing any fraud and swearing any false oath. As the cross-examination proceeded, Mr. Jones was also induced to withdraw an allegation which had been put on the plea, but does not appear in the libel, that the prosecutors had conspired with Messrs. Scrimgeour to obtain a false report as to the value of the property. Thereupon Mr. Darling was obliged to admit that in the face of these withdrawals, it being necessary for the purpose of an acquittal to justify the whole of the libel, he could not carry the case further. The Judge then told the jury that, as the defendant had to prove the whole of his justification, it was for them to say whether they wished, after the withdrawals, to hear any more evidence. The jury on their side showed some hesitation, remarking that the withdrawal of the charges had taken them by surprise, and that they would like to recommend the prisoner to mercy; to which the Judge replied that any recommendation they made could be dealt with after the verdict. A verdict of guilty was then returned, accompanied by a strong and unanimous recommendation to mercy, and the Common Serjeant discharged Mr. Jones upon his own recognisances to come up for judgment when called upon.

Seeing that Mr. Jones had been compelled to withdraw the more reckless of his expressions after only a few minutes' cross-examination, it is obvious that the charges which he had formulated were unjustifiable from the first, and that a conviction was inevitable. At the same time, the fact that in the face of the seriousness of the libel, and the complete failure of the defence, the verdict was accompanied by a unanimous recommendation to mercy, is a clear proof that the jury to a man sympathised with Mr. Jones, though obliged to find that he had said more than he could prove. The only ground, indeed, which I can see for a recommendation to mercy in such a case is that the defendant had acted under strong provocation.

While, therefore, the result of this trial is to show that the prosecutors certainly could not be charged with fraud and conspiracy, it certainly does not show that the jury thought that Mr. Jones had no ground for complaining of the way he had been treated by these gentlemen—rather the reverse.

There is only one other point to be noted in connection with the case. In cross-examination Mr. Flower declared that he was then ready to take for the property whatever he and Mr. Hopkinson were out of pocket over the business, and that he would be "very glad to get it." He estimated the amount which they were out of pocket at £17,000 or £18,000. Considering that in the previous year the amount due to him and Mr. Hopkinson had been fixed, by a consent order in Chancery, at £14,500, it would be interesting to know how the amount had risen to £17,000 or £18,000 in another twelve months; and equally interesting would it be to know why, if Mr. Flower only wanted £17,000 or £18,000 in May, 1897, he had mentioned £30,000 as the lowest offer that would be entertained in August, 1894—after he had received Wales' report. He was pressed in the witness-box as to the time within which he would accept the amount he had named, and replied that he would take it within a week or a month, or a reasonable time, but would not give six months.

The Mokau Property to-day.

The libel trial is the last incident of note in Mr. Jones' history down to the present day. Shortly after it was over, the unfortunate gentleman had a serious and protracted illness, which incapacitated him for further action for some months; and on his recovery his next step was to obtain an introduction to me, through certain influential people who had known him in Australia, in the hope that the full publication of the facts may yet assist his cause. What delay has taken place since then is simply due to the time which it has taken me to get to the bottom of this long and complicated series of transactions.

So much for the history of Mr. Jones' adventures. It only remains to deal with one other matter of fact, namely, the actual value of the Mokau property—the only point on which a doubt may possibly have arisen in the mind of the reader in perusing the foregoing narrative. It appears that during the last few months Messrs. Hopkinson and Flower have been negotiating in more than one direction for the realisation of the estate. To one party with whom he was in correspondence Mr. Hopkinson gave, on April 7 last, the following particulars of the property:—

1. 55,000 acres or thereabouts lying between the Mokau and Mohakatino Rivers in the Province of Taranaki, North Island, about forty miles from Port of New Plymouth, New Zealand.

2. 30,000 acres or thereabouts of coal; a brown, rather soft coal, good for household but not for steam purposes. Possible that lower levels will show hard coal.

3. Our Wellington agent thinks highly of the limestone. Not sufficiently expert to say whether it is hydraulic. Have let a few acres to people commencing lime-burning.

4. Am not aware whether there is iron ore, but understand that there is any amount of magnetic sand on seashore belonging to us.

5. Abundance of timber, but cannot say whether it is valuable for sale, but it is suitable for local purposes.

6. Coal lies principally along banks of Mokau. That worked on opposite bank is taken down the river.

7. Land held under leases for about forty years from natives, confirmed by New Zealand Government.

This estimate would be sufficient in itself to dispose of the expert's report on which Messrs. Flower and Hopkinson relied to prove the worthlessness of the property at the Old Bailey trial twelve months ago. Every material statement in that report is here repudiated by Mr. Hopkinson; and not only does he contradict his own expert as to the value of the coal and the presence of magnetic sand, but he adds that there is valuable limestone and abundance of timber. Mr. Hopkinson may fairly be asked what fresh advice he has received which has caused him to change his opinion so completely since the trial in 1897. I cannot find that any fresh survey or valuation of the Mokau property has been made by any expert in the interval. On what ground, then, does Mr. Hopkinson repudiate to-day the evidence of Mr. Wales, which he offered to the Court on the prosecution of Mr. Jones? Again, in a recent interview with the vendors, another intending purchaser was informed that the evidence given at the Old Bailey trial was incorrect, and had been made without a sufficient examination. Further, in the course of negotiations which have been in progress within the last few weeks, Messrs. Flower and Hopkinson have been treating on the basis of a sale for £25,000 in cash, plus one-fifth of the share capital of any companies formed to work the property. I do not impute to Messrs. Flower and Hopkinson that they are now misrepresenting the value of the property, but I ask them both, assuming that they believed the evidence which they used at the Old Bailey against Jones, what causes them to disbelieve it now?

All accessible evidence goes to show that the property is of immense value. The Government surveys estimate the area of coal at 30,000 acres, with over 35,000 tons to the acre. The outcrop of the seams is visible in the river banks, from which the coal can be worked by adits, and discharged directly on to the decks of vessels lying in the stream, thus avoiding sinking, winding, and pumping; and the coal can be put on the markets of Wellington, Auckland, and other neighbouring towns within twenty-four hours. From this it will be seen that Mr. Jones did not over-estimate the value of his property when in 1890 he refused an offer of £160,000 for the coal alone; and in further confirmation of this I may add that in August, 1894, he obtained an offer for working the coal on a royalty basis, with the right of future purchase at £180,000. In addition to this coal there is a vast quantity of limestone, deposits of magnetic sand of almost unlimited extent, and a large area of timber. It will be seen that Mr. Hopkinson states that a few acres of limestone have been let. The lessees are working on a royalty of eightpence per yard. The limestone in question lies in cliffs many hundred feet high, and on the basis of the above royalty the capital value of the limestone alone must work out at a very high figure. Further, apart altogether from the minerals, the surface value of the land is considerable. Let the reader who knows anything of such matters calculate for himself the figure at which the capital value of a property such as this would be put, even by a modest and conscientious company promoter, and he will be able to estimate the probable profits of Messrs. Flower and Hopkinson should they succeed in disposing of the estate for £25,000 in cash, and one-fifth of the share capital of every company to be hereafter floated out of the property.

The Merits of the Case.

Such being the value of the Mokau property, what is to be thought of the series of transactions by which this property passed into and has remained in the possession of Messrs. Hopkinson and Flower? This is a matter upon which every reader can form an opinion for himself, but there are certain aspects of the case on which I think it a duty to express my own judgment. In doing so I would draw a clear distinction between the position of Mr. Hopkinson and that of Mr. Flower. Mr. Hopkinson is a financier advancing money in the ordinary course of business; and he is entitled in the ordinary course of business to make the best bargain he can for himself. If a gentleman in this line of business by advancing four or five thousand pounds at a critical moment can obtain a substantial share in a property worth fifty or a hundred times that amount, he is within his legal rights, and is doing no more than men do every day, whatever prejudice there may be in some quarters against this method of acquiring wealth. It has been pointed out in the course of the foregoing narrative that, in the earlier stages of their dealings with Mr. Jones, Mr. Hopkinson seems to have been disposed to offer more favourable terms than Mr. Flower, his partner in the transaction. There is, however, one incident in the case which has an unfortunate appearance so far as Mr. Hopkinson is concerned, and that is the use made of Wales' report in 1896 to frustrate the proposed advance by the West Australian Mining Company and thereby to prevent the estate being redeemed from Messrs. Flower and Hopkinson within the time allowed by the Chancery order. It has already been pointed out that, three months after Wales' report had been delivered, Messrs. Flower & Co., on behalf of Mr. Wickham Flower and Mr. Hopkinson, rejected an offer of £12,000 for the property, and declined to entertain anything less than an offer of £30,000. In the witness-box at the Old Bailey, Mr. Hopkinson denied any knowledge of this offer of £12,000, but it can hardly be supposed that Flower & Co. would have named £30,000 as the lowest price that would be accepted, without having some knowledge of Mr. Hopkinson's views on that point; nor is it credible that if Mr. Flower, or his firm, had at this time good reasons for believing Wales' report to be erroneous, those reasons would not have been communicated to Mr. Hopkinson. Under these circumstances, the communication of Wales' report to the West Australian Mining Company is certainly an incident calling for explanation on Mr. Hopkinson's part.

The position, however, of the firm of solicitors to whom Mr. Jones entrusted his interests when he came to London is a totally different one from Mr. Hopkinson's; and the way in which the solicitors have acted in this case raises questions of great public importance, quite apart from the personal interest of Mr. Jones in the matter. The public importance of the case is only enhanced by the fact that the papers have been laid before the Incorporated Law Society, and that the Law Society have decided that it is not a case even calling for investigation by them. It is of the very utmost consequence to all who may place themselves in the hands of solicitors for the purpose of raising money that the full effect and significance of this decision of the Law Society should be made known. It has hitherto been understood by the public that a solicitor is bound to consider the interests of his client before all others. His remuneration for his services is regulated by a fixed scale, and, beyond the remuneration so fixed, he can have no right whatever to payment. If he even incurs unnecessary costs for his own benefit at his client's expense, the client can have the bill taxed down by the prescribed authority. That a solicitor should indirectly make, or seek to make, profits for himself out of his client's estate, or that he should place himself in a position where his interest is directly antagonistic to that of his client, is irreconcilable with the first principles that should govern the relations of the two. The relation is a fiduciary one, and the man who stands in a fiduciary relation to another should be precluded from accepting any interest, whether for himself or a third party, which may by any possibility conflict with his fiduciary duty.

That is the ordinarily accepted view of the relation of solicitor and client. Is it or is it not the legal view? I ask, because not only is the conduct of Messrs. Flower & Co. at variance with that view, but Mr. Wickham Flower himself has openly and expressly repudiated it. Take the acts of the firm first. They originally came upon the scene as Mr. Jones' solicitors. In that capacity, they undertook to act for him, on terms reduced to writing, in realising his estate by promoting a company or otherwise. They clearly occupied the position of his solicitors at the time of the purchase of the property and for some months afterwards. Their own letters and their bill of costs against Mr. Jones leave no doubt whatever on this point. Mr. Wickham Flower, the senior partner in the firm, purchases the client's estate in his own name, for the avowed purpose of "protecting it," which, on the principles laid down above, could only mean protecting his client's interest in it. His firm state in writing that arrangements are to be made for adequately securing all their client's interests—the plain duty of the firm. Yet within a few days of the sale what do we find? In the name of Mr. Flower, his solicitor, and Mr. Hopkinson, Flower's partner in the transaction, Mr. Jones is called upon by his own solicitors to redeem his estate within two months by payment of a bonus double what Flower & Co. had previously agreed to accept as remuneration, and failing such redemption, he is to be allowed to retain nothing more than an interest of one-third in any profits which Flower and Hopkinson may make out of his property. In other words, Mr. Flower has suddenly taken up a position totally adverse to that of his client, and is actually dictating terms to that client on behalf of himself and a third party. This attitude is presently accentuated. On the eve of completing the purchase, Mr. Flower, through his firm, informs his client that, the property not having been redeemed within the time which has been allowed him for the purpose, the purchasers will, on completion, recognise no further right whatever on Jones' part in the property, although they will ("without prejudice") make him a present of some share undefined in the profits, as an act of grace or charity. Are we to take it that, in the opinion of the Incorporated Law Society, this attitude is consistent with the professional duty of a solicitor towards a client who has come to him for assistance in raising money?

Again, look at the position a few weeks later in the story. The purchase has been completed by Messrs. Flower and Hopkinson, and these gentlemen are considering between themselves the amount of the charitable donation which they shall make to Mr. Jones, as promised in Flower & Co.'s letter of June 5. Mr. Hopkinson thinks that it would be only fair to allow Jones two-thirds of any profits that are made out of the estate after satisfying their own claims for advances, interest, costs, and bonus. What says Mr. Flower to this? He deprecates any such excessive generosity. He reminds his partner in the transaction that they have between them rescued Jones from his mortgagees (that being, in point of fact, the very purpose for which Jones had placed himself in the hands of a solicitor), and contends that Jones ought to think himself uncommonly lucky if he is allowed to retain one-third of the profits arising out of this salvage operation. Alike by their bill of costs and their communications with third parties, Mr. Flower's firm are shown to have regarded Jones as their client at the time when this letter to Mr. Hopkinson was written (July 10). Are we to take it that, in the opinion of the Incorporated Law Society, this letter of Flower to Hopkinson is fully consistent with the duty of a solicitor towards his firm's client?

Let it be clearly understood that this is no academic question which I am raising. Mr. Wickham Flower, as already stated, has expressly admitted that he occupied during these negotiations a position adverse to that of his client, and apparently he considers that he was entitled to do so. His account of the matter is that he had "two capacities," and the inference is that he was entitled to have these two capacities. The question arose at the Old Bailey trial of last year, in cross-examination upon some of the correspondence which passed between Mr. Flower and Mr. Hopkinson in 1893, immediately after the sale. Mr. Darling asks Mr. Flower whether, as Jones' solicitor, he sent Jones a copy of Hopkinson's letter of April 15. The evidence proceeds thus:—

> Mr. Flower: I do not suppose so. I do not think it is likely.
>
> Mr. Darling: You were his solicitor.
>
> Sir Edward Clarke: Not in that matter.
>
> Mr. Darling: Were you or not Mr. Jones' solicitor at that time?
>
> Mr. Flower: Not at that time.
>
> Sir Edward Clarke: Surely my friend is wrong. You were his solicitor in one sense, but not in respect of the purchase, and it is inconceivable why he should send a copy of Mr. Hopkinson's letter to Mr. Jones.

This is a characteristic interruption. Sir Edward Clarke does not quite like Mr. Flower's answer that he was not Jones' solicitor at that time (April 16). He interposes with the remark, "Surely my friend is wrong," meaning that his client is wrong; and then he suggests to the witness that he was Jones's solicitor "in one sense," but not in another. Note how Mr. Flower at once adopts this suggestion:—

> Mr. Darling: You were his solicitor at that time?
>
> Mr. Flower: I did not receive that letter as his solicitor. It was written to me in another capacity altogether, obviously.

So Mr. Flower, in his dealings with Jones and Hopkinson has two capacities—"obviously." A little further on the idea is elaborated even more frankly. Mr. Darling again asks whether Mr. Flower ought not to have sent the same letter to his "client":—

Mr. Flower: It was certainly not written to me in my capacity as Mr. Jones' solicitor at that time.

Mr. Darling: Am I to understand you had then two capacities?

A.: Certainly.

Q.: And in the one, as Mr. Jones' solicitor, you would take the greatest care of Mr. Jones' interests?

A.: Yes.

Q.: And in another, in which you were not Mr. Jones' solicitor, you were entitled to view the matter in a light absolutely against his interest?

A.: Certainly.

Q.: Can you refer me to any authority which entitles a solicitor to act in these two capacities?

Sir Edward Clarke: My lord, I object.

The Common Serjeant: I think you cannot ask that question. How is it relevant to the inquiry upon the plea? That is a question of law.

Mr. Darling: I thought as a lawyer he might be so indulgent as to answer it.

Mr. Darling might not be entitled to ask the question at the Old Bailey, but I think I am entitled to ask it here, and I think that any member of the public is entitled to ask it. Mr. Flower may say that in his capacity of Mr. Jones' solicitor he would take the best care of Mr. Jones' interests; but it is perfectly clear upon the facts that the other interests which he considered himself equally entitled to take care of (including Mr. Wickham Flower's), prevailed over the interests of Mr. Jones; and there is abundant room for doubt whether they would so have prevailed had not Mr. Flower accepted those divided and conflicting duties. It should be remembered in this connection that, when Mr. Jones was in the hands of another firm, who only acted in the one capacity of his solicitors, all difficulty about adjusting the conflicting interests very quickly disappeared; Mr. Flower consented, under the gentle pressure of a Chancery action, to withdraw everything but the claim for advances, costs, and bonus; and the proposal to appropriate two-thirds of Mr. Jones' interest in the estate over and above these costs and charges, disappeared altogether. This shows very forcibly the advantage of having a solicitor who only acts in one capacity. On the face of it this contention of Mr. Flower's strikes at the very root of the relation of solicitor and client. I should have scouted it as preposterous, but for the fact that it passed without notice or repudiation from the Bench, and that the Common Serjeant never indicated, from beginning to end, the slightest disapproval of the conduct of Mr. Flower or his firm. In view of this startling state of things, I ask again the question which Sir Edward Clarke objected to when put by Mr. Darling: What authority is there for Mr. Flower's contention that a solicitor is entitled to act in two capacities, one favourable to his client and one adverse? I ask the Incorporated Law Society whether they endorse that proposition; and whether they approve of the conduct of Mr. Flower in his two capacities in this instance, having regard to the admitted fact that the interest adverse to his client which he assumed was in a great measure his own personal interest; and that the result of the conflict of interests has been that Mr. Jones was reduced to bankruptcy, while his property remained in the hands of his solicitor and a third party.

Let us look at one other point in the case. The formal relation of solicitor and client terminates, as has already been pointed out, some time in August, 1893. We next find Flower & Co. suggesting to a third party in May, 1894, that Jones should be prosecuted for having given a charge upon his interest in the property. It is true that they contended at the time that all Jones' interest in the property had ceased and determined. But a firm of solicitors must know well enough that this was a very questionable contention, and, as a matter of fact, after having raised this contention on the pleadings in the Chancery action, Mr. Flower decided not to go into Court to uphold it, but abandoned all claim to the estate on condition of being paid his advances and charges. Bearing all this in mind, can any justification or excuse be pleaded for the action of Flower, Nussey, & Fellowes in suggesting to Mr. Colley's solicitor that he should prosecute Jones for giving a charge on his equity of redemption? I should like to know whether the Incorporated Law Society hold that this act was a proper and becoming one on the part of any firm of professional gentlemen, under all the circumstances of the case, and especially in view of the fact that the alleged criminal was a former client of their own whose property had passed into the hands of one of the partners in the firm.

Finally, I would ask, does not the very conduct of these gentlemen show a consciousness that Mr. Flower has gone beyond his professional and equitable rights in his dealings with Mr. Jones? Is it not obvious that their attitude has varied at different periods? Have they not themselves virtually admitted that the pretensions which they advanced immediately after the sale in 1893, and which first placed Mr. Flower in antagonism to his client, are untenable pretensions? Look first at the draft terms submitted to Jones after the purchase, and then at the letter of June 5, 1893, informing Jones that after the completion of the purchase Flower and Hopkinson will consider all his interest in the estate at an end, and that anything further allowed him must be looked upon as a gratuitous concession. Note the same attitude in the suggestion that Jones has committed a fraud in giving a further charge upon his interest, and again in the letter to Jellicoe a few months later. With all this compare the surprising change of front when the Chancery action is ready for trial, and Flower and Hopkinson suddenly declare their readiness to give up the estate subject to a friendly agreement as to what sum is due to them from Jones. How can this be explained, if Messrs. Flower and Hopkinson believed themselves entitled to all that they had previously asked for, even down to the time when they delivered their defence in the Chancery action? Or look again at the declaration of Mr. Flower in the witness-box at the Old Bailey, that all that he and Hopkinson wanted to get was their "expenses out of pocket." Extravagant as was his estimate then of these out-of-pocket expenses, it obviously falls far short of what had been asked for in 1893 and 1894, and in the Chancery pleadings of 1895, and even of what Mr. Flower agreed to accept in the final order in the Chancery action. How can anybody, in the face of the documents, credit that all that Mr. Flower was trying to get in the three months succeeding the purchase was his "expenses out of pocket?" or who can doubt that had his original demands been limited to this, the estate would very speedily have been re-conveyed to Mr. Jones? It is impossible to avoid the conclusion that, although these gentlemen have, in correspondence and private negotiations, and even in the pleadings in a law suit, claimed the absolute and unlimited ownership of the property, and have denied that Mr. Jones retains any right or interest in it, legal or equitable, yet they have receded from that position when there has been a question of maintaining it in a Court of Justice. If that is so, then the contention that they have never desired to obtain more than their advances and a reasonable return upon them is not true, and was only put forward to disguise the fact that they have endeavoured to obtain what they would never have been allowed in a Court of Equity. At any rate, this much is certain, that if this contention is put forward on behalf of Messrs. Flower and Hopkinson to-day, then it will speedily be the duty of these gentlemen to hand over to Mr. Jones all but a small portion of the price which they have recently been asking for the Mokau property. If they have any intention of doing that, I would suggest that no time should be lost in communicating the intention to Mr. Jones and the public.

At the outset of this article I said that a great wrong has been done to Mr. Jones. To that view I adhere. The extent of the wrong is but inadequately measured by the money value of the estate which he has lost. His home has been broken up; his large family has been scattered: his daughters have had to earn their bread by any drudgery they can find. He himself has passed through five years of incalculable anxiety and suffering, with the result that he is to-day impaired in health as well as bankrupt in fortune. Whatever the future may have in store for him, the experience of those five years must embitter and poison the rest of his life; while, unless the wrong can be redressed, he is left to end his days in hardship and penury. In the meantime, those into whose hands his property has passed—a property bestowed on him by the State, in acknowledgment of valuable services to one of the greatest Colonies of the Empire—are on the eve of realising from it a magnificent fortune. That he should have been thus beggared without contributing in any degree towards his misfortune, would be deplorable enough in any case. But that the chief instrument in bringing about his ruin should be the members of a firm of honourable professional men in the City of London, to whose guidance and control he entrusted his fortunes, seems to me a reproach to the profession to which those gentlemen belong. I publish this statement of his case in the hope that, by one means or another, that reproach may be wiped out. In 1897 the twelve Englishmen who had heard the story of Mr. Jones' misfortunes, strongly and unanimously recommended him to mercy. What I would ask for now on his behalf is not mercy but justice.

MILLIONAIRES AND MILLINERS AT ASCOT.

I asked a French journalist to tell me his general impressions of Ascot. He said he found the course very dirty. He could not understand why the ground on which the horses ran should be absolutely uncared for. It was not that there was insufficient herbage, or that the racecourse had been neglected up to the beginning of the week, but he wondered at and lamented that when once the saddling bell had sounded for the first race everything was given over to the mob, to the detriment of the horses. By the second day the whole course was littered with scraps of paper, disused baskets, bits of rag—in fact, everything that betokened picnic and stood in the way of racing. He pointed out that in France the holiday folk are looked after quite as well as they are in England, but that upon a racecourse, racing is regarded as the first consideration. If people desired to cross from one side to another, a bridge of boards or of matting is laid down; on no account are the crowds allowed to assemble to tread down the grass and turn the course into the consistency of a turnpike road. Yet at Ascot by Thursday afternoon the course was as smooth as a glass skating-rink, and that no serious accidents occurred to valuable horses was the result of luck, not management. This is, of course, merely the opinion of a Frenchman, and as such not likely at all to influence our insular magnates who manage Newmarket for horses and Ascot for dressmakers.

Having approached our visitor, who, with many confrères, had come over to see the victory of the French horse, he seemed to feel that I was henceforth to be his expositor, to show him the ropes, and explain the "whys and wherefores" of a Royal meeting.

I am not a vain man. I do not swagger about our colonial possessions, nor do I boast of our Navy, or believe that one Englishman can thrash twenty foreigners. But still I must admit a feeling of pride, a conscious, high-souled patriotic sentiment, when I was able to point out to an inquisitive Frenchman the glories of a Royal Procession. As the thin, red line broadened itself into a row of landaus adorned with scarlet and purple-coated postilions; as some of the spectators discontinued their luncheons; as the servants seized the opportunity and helped themselves to their masters' champagne; as others picked pockets and stole scarf pins; as many raised their hats and most shouted "Hooray," my heart beat fast for love of country, and I said, as calmly as I could, "Voilà le Prince de Galles!" "Ah oui," replied my friend, as unconcernedly as though they had all these things abroad; "mais où est le Lord Maire?" It was a shock; but with, I venture to think, commendable self-possession, I evaded the question and pointed out the Master of the Buckhounds, whose green livery distinguished him from the grooms and outriders.

But my difficulties were only commencing. To explain to a foreigner the raison d'être of a Master of the Buckhounds was beyond me. For years I myself have been wondering what he was used for, and now I was forced from honest patriotism to find some solid excuse for his existence. I did not like to give away our national secret about hunting tame deer; my French friend might be a rabid humanitarian, and write a sneering letter on the subject to L'Etoile when he returned to Paris. Nor dared I admit that Lord Coventry received every year a considerable income from the British public merely for riding in front of the Prince's carriages at Ascot racecourse. It was a dilemma, and I sought deliverance by referring to the Royal Enclosure. My ignorant friend, hailing from a Republican country, had some difficulty in appreciating the state of affairs. "Why not," said he, "employ policemen to keep undesirable people away from that hallowed enclosure? It was not nice work for a Milord." And with my heart sinking in my bosom as I surveyed the heterogeneous crowd within the rails, I had to admit the paradoxical position. It is the business of a Master of the Buckhounds to invite undesirable people to desirable places.

How otherwise could I account for the "off-coloured" mob who, neither of Society nor in Society, had this year successfully schemed to appear in public under Society's shadow? An enclosure such as we have at Kempton Park and Sandown, and even now at Alexandra Park, is a boon to be participated in practically by all who pay. But at Ascot the enclosure is termed "Royal," and admissions should be as sparingly granted as they are eagerly sought after. On previous occasions I have been delighted to see Society's iceberg thaw under the melting sun of the bogus millionaire. So many nobodies derive exquisite pleasure from being "within the rails," that it would be churlish to deny them the privilege. But on previous occasions I have not had to explain to a foreigner the whys and wherefores of a Royal Enclosure. For the sake of our aristocracy, of whom we Britons are so justly proud,

Major Howe & Co., Ltd.—Fashionable Boots and Shoes.—16, Coventry-st., W.; 60, Strand, W.C.; 81, Gracechurch-st.; and 13, Queen Victoria-st., London. "Note Addresses." (Repairs)

I would not reveal the fact that my Lady Clothesbasket let her cottage near the course for a thousand guineas for the week on condition that she obtained for her tenant a Royal Enclosure ticket. Nor did I tell that a certain lady dressmaker was running an unremunerative business at the expense of a wealthy stockbroker, who, instead of security for capital and interest on investments, was content with a presentation at Court for his wife and Royal Enclosure tickets as a makeweight. My French pupil would not have understood why financial journalism was honoured in the sainted circle, and the higher grades of literature left to languish outside. How could he appreciate the niceties of class which enabled impoverished scions of noble houses to bask in luxury at the expense of stockbrokers, with the concurrent admission of stockbrokers to an enclosure called "Royal"? Even Royalty's well-known partiality for the German nation seemed a little too conspicuous this year, when the teutonic Max hailed his compatriot Ludwig from one side of the place to the other, and the nasal "Na, na's" and gutteral "Hochs" of Frankfort betokened the satisfaction or otherwise as this horse or that "came in alone." I can imagine the gratification of the Master of the Buckhounds when he witnessed the success of his work. He has provided for months to come for the wants of many an extravagant lady and of many a penniless good fellow of good family. We live in a world of compensation. Some give, others take. And what is the advantage of having a cousin who is related to some one in authority, if you don't utilise the relationship, by pandering to a millionaire's vanity and giving him what he most wants—an admission to the Royal Enclosure at Ascot?

To have pointed out all the celebrities to the Sandford or Merton to whom I was playing Barlow would have confused him and distressed me. Great judges were hemmed in with great swindlers; great and good ladies jogged shoulder to shoulder with those who were neither; financiers who had found the distance between Petticoat-lane and Park-lane a short and easy road hobnobbed with eminent politicians, and all the Courts of Europe, including the Bankruptcy Court, had their representative. It was a grand and instructive assembly. From Princes of the Blood to prisoners from the Old Bailey, no class was without its delegate. It savoured of Republicanism, and spoke well for the equality which reigns on the Turf; it was the apotheosis of sporting England. But it should not have been a Royal Enclosure.

I think my friend from France enjoyed the paddock walk more than anything. Here he felt as comfortable as at Longchamps. Here the Royal Enclosure ticket-holders, abandoning for the time their pride of place, condescended to acknowledge their less favoured acquaintances. Here they saluted jockeys and asked stable-boys for tips. Here the ladies criticised each other's gowns, and generally remarked that the upper circles had given up the old-fashioned style of over-dressing at Ascot. The gowns which are ball dresses with high bodies were conspicuous by their absence, and were worn only by actresses and those who dine persistently at public restaurants. Brocade was voted bad style, and gaudy attire was out of season. But my gallant Gaul admired them all, remarking, "In England you have most beautiful women, but our French horses are better than yours." And so it proved to be.

That visitors to racecourses like betting is a fact pretty well ignored at Ascot. Even the Anti-Gambling League must approve of the difficulties in the way of would-be punters. To get from the paddock to Tattersall's ring is a feat worthy of Mr. Nansen. You must be not only a traveller with the bump of location strongly developed, but you want a smart secretary as well to sort your tickets and present them at the right gates. In France one ticket admits everywhere. At Ascot you want half a dozen and a good temper besides unless you care for a fight with insolent janitors and thirsty policemen. Still, I am told that unless the system adopted were persevered with, all sorts and conditions of robbers would gain admission without payment. Frenchmen all bet when they go racing, and the fact that he was persistently cheated by the bookmaker, who returned him his winnings and adhered to the stake, did not deter my friend from competing with the Ring.

A great boon is the new "Geisha" tea-room, but there is not sufficient accommodation for lunch. The removal of the tables from the lawn still rankles with those who used to entertain there, and the Household Brigade complain bitterly that whereas they find in their club tents half the visitors to the Royal Enclosure, Lord Coventry is terribly sparing of his tickets to the officers. A few less millionaires and a few more soldiers would be welcome and just. But it can't be helped. Soldiers we have always with us; millionaires, even those who live but short financial lives, are scarce.

SARAH BERNHARDT.

The first burst of summer has brought with it Sarah Bernhardt. The play which we witnessed on Monday evening was written especially for the great actress by M. Romain Coolus, and shows us that it is still summer with her, in spite of her terrible illness and operation, and of the heavy hand of the years. We find her, in the play, the adored mother of a son whose wife also feels for her that strange attraction she has now wielded for so many years, both on and off the stage.

Gaudrey is an adventurer, who wooes her, not only on account of her great charm, but also for the riches which she possesses. We are led to believe that despite her son's and daughter-in-law's protecting affection, Lysiane (Sarah Bernhardt) will fall a victim to the lure of Gaudrey's love, when suddenly enters Sylvain Brière. Sylvain (admirably played by M. Lucien Guitry) has loved and lost, and has passed three years travelling round the world, hoping to leave his sorrow behind in some port of forgetfulness. He is an old friend of Lysiane's family, and to him her son appeals to save his mother. Through an accident, very clearly set forth in the play, Sylvain has obtained command of some papers which enable him to force Gaudrey to leave Paris and desist from his suit. The great act of the play is the third, where, Gaudrey having departed, and the feelings of Lysiane having been worked upon by his friends, Sylvain refuses to give her an explanation, having pledged his honour to complete silence as to the causes of Gaudrey's sudden desertion. He tells her simply that Gaudrey is not worthy of her love. But this does not satisfy the imperious Lysiane. She accuses him of wantonly interfering with her destiny, and says that she will meet Gaudrey in Vienna. Here M. Guitry as Sylvain and Madame Sarah Bernhardt are at their best. Sylvain declares that if she does so, she will never see him again. She persists, and the curtain falls on her calling, "Sylvain!" But he has already departed. In the last act we are on Sylvain's yacht. Lysiane is won over by the love of Sylvain, of her son and of her daughter-in-law, and as soon as they are alone reads aloud to the former a beautiful letter of farewell to Gaudrey. Sylvain was its inspiration and to him belongs her future.

Rather than discuss in detail the merits and disadvantages of this play by M. Romain Coolus (certainly not one of his best), it may perhaps be more profitable to ask again, and again attempt to answer, that difficult question, What is the peculiar power through which for more than a generation Sarah Bernhardt has fascinated the world? And, without stopping to discuss the point of view of the setters-up of Duse and other admirable artists, there can be no doubt that among the hundreds of thousands of men and women of all degrees of intelligence who have seen her act, for the immense majority (and that majority includes the extremes of intelligence and simplicity) Sarah Bernhardt remains a supreme revelation. That she seizes and renders with the utmost histrionic skill all the indications afforded by the author whose thought she is interpreting is a faculty which, perhaps, she shares in some degree with other great actresses. But she gives us more than that, gives more than that to all who contemplate her with sincerity and attention. What, then, does she give? I should say, at the risk of any protest, that it was the sensation which the great monuments of the other arts—painting, literature, and music—convey in their best moments: the sensation of the beyond, of the veil raised. Yes, consciously or unconsciously she raises the veil, becomes an interpretess of "things unseen;" and this independently of the amount of original thought in the lines she may be reciting. They serve her but as a spring-board to the infinite. By their means she penetrates into the recesses of human nature, and gets into harmony with the mysteries that lie beyond those visible mysteries of character and will. To have heard her give that line of Phèdre for instance (which, by the way, she will do at the matinée on Saturday, June 25) "On ne voit pas deux fois le rivage des morts" is for some more than a "liberal education," and would have taught Racine.

For this reason, then, I should counsel those who have the opportunity of seeing Sarah Bernhardt in any of her parts, by no means to miss making use of it. And an imperfect knowledge of French should not be allowed to act as a deterrent; for, as I have attempted to suggest in these few lines, it is not only by speech, but also by gesture, by intonation, by silence, that she is an "evidence of things unseen" as well as a bestower of supreme sensations and the mirror of the visible world.

NOTES FROM PARIS.

THE PRODIGAL PRINCESS.

ENDLESS stones have been thrown at the Prodigal Princess. But are there not endless extenuating circumstances to be pleaded for her? She was married at eighteen, without any experience of life. What is more, the husband they chose for her was a double first cousin. Can you conceive anything more flat than such a marriage? It kept the young wife in the same old groove. What could she do but mope? How glad we all are to enjoy a complete change of scene and society! What a delightful experience is that of a young girl who goes from home on a visit, and finds herself among utter strangers! It is so stimulating to see faces that do not remind her of those she has been always seeing, to hear new notions, new turns of speech, new ways of looking at familiar subjects, and, in short, novelty sur toute la ligne. The visitor appears quite a new being. In marrying a double first cousin one is condemned for the rest of one's life to the same humdrum one has passed through. As the mother in-law is an aunt, one has no good reason for hating her. There can be no healthy antagonism, no conflict of opposing prejudices, no sharply picturesque contrasts. Life becomes too material for ideas not to flag. The babies, though twenty of them come in succession, are as like as peas. The monotony of their faces would depress the fondest mother. They cannot be standing puzzles to her, for she knows too well about those whom they must take after. The chains of original sin are so riveted as to leave them no free will. Being so much alike, they break out in the same place. Those double first cousins' marriages are more dismal perhaps in Courts than in cottages. The Church of Rome gave dispensations for them; but in the interest of the race, she winked at the frailty of the wife. Anne of Austria, in spite of her affairs with Buckingham and Mazarin, was almost regarded by Mme. de Motteville as a saint. And Mme. de Motteville respected all the proprieties, and was on the best terms with her confessor.

The unfortunate Princess Philip of Saxe-Coburg can now go back to live in Belgium. Her husband has paid all the bills drawn in the name of the Archduchess Stéphanie and repudiated by her. Why did he not do so sooner? His fortune is a great one. A settlement with his wife's creditors would not have materially reduced it. The Croatian officer with whose name hers was bandied is still in durance. The French papers say he tried to commit suicide.

The Ministry for Foreign Affairs has been a bone of contention during the Cabinet crisis. M. Faure had learned that the head of the State in monarchical countries makes foreign affairs the peculiar object of his care. The example was not thrown away on him. He has become attached to Hanotaux, who is a young bachelor, and may become a son-in-law. It was through Presidential patronage that Hanotaux entered the Academy. The President also wants to have young men in the foremost places during the fêtes of 1900. This is to give brilliancy to the Elysée, and a good deal to please the Empress of Russia. It is supposed that she would feel ennuyée if surrounded by grey beards and bald heads. When it was found that M. Ribot thought of returning to the Foreign Office as Prime Minister, spokes were put in his wheels. The papers who have been receiving secret service funds at once tackled M. Ribot about Dreyfus. They charged him with being a Dreyfusard, and with black designs on certain secret papers at the War Office. Joseph Reinach is the head of the "syndicate." Used not the eminent statesman above-named go to shoot with the late Baron von Reinach? Mme. Ribot was not a Jewess, but she was a Protestant, and that was as bad. She used to subscribe to English mission funds to evangelise Madagascar. M. Ribot is sensitive. This mode of warfare disgusted him. Being unable to obtain the support of Bourgeois and his friends without going a long way to meet them, he determined to stop short. I am very sorry. He looked thoroughly in his place at the Foreign Office. Mme. Ribot was an admirable hostess there.

WALKING, CYCLING, SHOOTING, YACHTING DRESSES, &c.—JOHN BUSVINE & CO., Tailors and Riding Habit Makers to H.R.H. the Princess of Wales, the Princess Victoria of Wales, the Duchess of Fife, the Princess Charles of Denmark, the Marchioness of Lorne, the Princess Henry of Battenberg, the Duchess of Connaught, the Duchess of Albany, the Empress of Austria, the Empress of Russia, the Empress of Germany, the Princess Henry of Prussia, the Princess Victoria of Prussia, the Infanta Eulalia of Spain, the Countess de Paris, the Duchess d'Aosta.—4, Brook-street, London, W.

The Comtesse de Montebello presented the Empress of Russia with the Chantilly scarf M. Hanotaux sent her. It was embroidered in coloured silks, three yards long, and of great beauty. But is it not a little risky for a bachelor Foreign Minister to be sending lovely presents to a young Empress?

A double or cross suit for divorce has been an interesting topic on the Boulevards. The suitors were M. Porel and Mme. Réjane, his wife. Porel is a self-made man. He knows a play that will take, from hearing it read. Nobody understands stage upholstery better. He is a little rough-and-ready, and his speech shows him to have risen from the people. As he keeps a secretary, his want of scholarship hardly matters. The wife has found him an excellent Barnum; but she thought that he took the lion's share of profits. There were also mutual jealousies and reproaches. Réjane likes handsome surroundings. M. Porel hardly saw their use. They have two children, in whom each of them is wrapped up. A number of distinguished Press friends grieved at the quarrel. They agreed to earn the peace-maker's blessing, and succeeded. The cross suits are withdrawn, and Réjane and Porel seem to have renewed their honeymoon. Porel was in love with Sarah Bernhardt before he devoted himself to the actress who is now his wife. He proposed for Sarah, who turned her back on him and wondered at his impudence. The way in which she met his proposal mortified Réjane deeply, when, not long ago, all the circumstances came to her knowledge.

Another daughter has been added to the Rothschild clan. The infant has received the name of Nathalie, after her great-grandfather, the late Baron Nathaniel de Rothschild. She will be called Nadine, as a concession to modern taste. The naming of her was left to Baroness Nathaniel. It was thought that her father, Baron Henri de Rothschild, would have preferred the name of Louise, which was that of the Frankfort great-grandmother on the maternal side. The French Rothschilds observe the old-fashioned Jewish rule of calling their children after deceased ancestors only.

The name of Louise is dear to Baroness James de Rothschild, mother of Baron Henri. It is that of her own mother, whom she passionately loved. The two great affections of her life, before her marriage, were for her mother and eldest sister, now Lady Rothschild. As she is a person of strong and warm character, she remains devoted to her sister and her mother's memory. Baroness Alphonse is said to be the best-looking of the Rothschilds, and the Baroness James the best-natured. She is one of the rare women filling a great situation who are satisfied to live out seriously their own lives. It is really a noble and a beneficent life. Her friends are well chosen, and rather for their eminent personal qualities than for position or wealth. She brought up her children to value the things of the mind, to be deferential, and to cultivate elevating tastes. Baron Henri is a doctor by profession, and a bibliophile by taste. M. Picou of the Institute advises him as to the purchases of books he ought to make. He put him a short time ago on a most valuable track. The Abbé Bossuet, collateral descendant of the famous Bishop of Meaux, had died. His library was for sale. It contained the Bishop's books, manuscripts, in his own handwriting, of his celebrated sermons, and his first editions. This treasure was at once bought. The sum paid was heavy, but it was a mere trifle compared with the conventional worth of the papers and books. Baron Henri started a review a few years ago. He took up the work of editorship with enthusiasm. He and his only sister, Baroness Leonine, were brought up by their mother in an English way.

LETTER FROM THE LINKMAN.

A CRIMINAL, dear Lady Betty, was condemned to be hanged. The chaplain of the gaol contrived to obtain a reprieve, and the sentence was commuted. "The gratitude of the man," said the clergyman, "knew no bounds. He called me his deliverer, and 'Here,' said he, as he grasped my hand, 'here is your Bible. I may as well return it to you, for I hope I shall never want it again.'"

The gratitude of the Conservatives to their Liberal Unionist allies knows no bounds; nevertheless, they are anxious to return the Liberal Unionist leaders to the Opposition. These leaders, however, refuse to separate themselves from their new allies, and this is not surprising, for they perceive that they can easily subdue them. The struggle between the superfluous and supercilious Salisbury, and the ideal commercial traveller, the "What-is-the-next-article?" politician, Mr. Joseph Chamberlain, is especially entertaining.

. . . . .

The courage of Americans is beyond dispute. Already in the present war the intrepid attack made by Admiral Dewey upon the Spanish fleet, and the sinking of the Merrimac at the mouth of the harbour of Santiago, have excited general admiration. But the progress of the war, so far, has betrayed the amazing weakness of the United States as regards organisation, naval and military administration, and fighting power. When Mme. de Staël was asked whether she believed in ghosts, she replied, "No, I do not; but I am afraid of them." The Great Powers no longer "believe" in the United States, but they are nevertheless afraid of them. It is obvious that it is only a matter of time for America to become an enormously strong naval and even military Power, and the experiences of the present war must inevitably hasten the development in these directions.

* * * *

Mr. William Haggard, the British Minister at Caracas, has rendered an important service to this country by the exercise of courage and determination at a critical moment. Some weeks ago the Royal Mail steamer called at La Guayra, and, on her arrival, the British Consul boarded the vessel to receive the mail-bag of the Legation. A Custom House official, however, seized the bag, which was conveyed to the Post Office, where the Foreign Office seals were broken and the contents were inspected. The moment that Mr. Haggard was informed of this outrageous proceeding he applied to the Minister for Foreign Affairs and demanded the immediate delivery of the mail-bag and the dismissal of the Postmaster at La Guayra. Dr. Calcano Mathieu, the Minister for Foreign Affairs, acted with the utmost promptitude—his action being supported by his colleagues—the bag was handed over to Mr. Haggard without delay, and the Postmaster of La Guayra was instantly dismissed. When Mr. Haggard was appointed British Minister at Caracas, it was to resume diplomatic relations between Great Britain and Venezuela, which had for several years been interrupted, and it is the more gratifying, therefore, as showing the success which our Minister has achieved, to learn that the prompt action of the Minister for Foreign Affairs in the matter has given general satisfaction in Venezuela.

For some inscrutable reason the Foreign Office has neglected for over a year to appoint a First Secretary to the British Embassy at Madrid. This is especially unfair, as it delays promotion; and besides, it would appear that, at a critical period such as this is, it is especially important that the Embassy at Madrid should not be under-manned, the more so as the Ambassador, Sir Henry Drummond Wolff, is not in the best of health. It is to be hoped that Mr. Curzon will be asked in the House to explain the conduct of the Foreign Office in the matter.

* * * * *

Sir Alfred Jephson has resigned the post of assistant-secretary to the Imperial Institute, and the Executive Council announces that his retirement is due to ill health. It may be, and it may not. Sir Alfred was the right man in the right place, and it is to be regretted that he has been compelled to resign. It would have been better for the Institute had other members of the staff been "compelled" to resign instead of Sir Alfred Jephson. It is an open secret that many people are opposed to the very existence of the Imperial Institute. On the other hand, there are many who are prepared to support it did those who are immediately responsible for its management show the slightest capacity for securing its success. As it is, the gloom of failure pervades the dreary galleries of the Institute and its dismal asphalted courts. There is little vitality in the concern, and the little that there is appears to be diminishing rapidly. If the Imperial Institute is to be saved, a resolute effort to do this should be made at once; if the Institute is to be permitted to die, the less money that is wasted upon it the better it will be for all concerned, except for those few who have their own selfish interests to serve. In the latter event the immense block of buildings might be utilised by the Science and Art Department while the alterations sanctioned by Parliament are being carried out at the South Kensington Museum.

* * * * *

Many years ago Mr. Strickland Constable published an admirable volume entitled "Our Medicine Men." In this volume occurs the following passage: "A man in one of the colonies was driving a thousand sheep through a covered bridge over a river that ran 400 ft. below. When two-thirds across, the leading sheep saw light through a small open window on one side. It jumped through it and fell into the river below. The next sheep did the same, and the next, and the next. The downpour of sheep lasted an hour. Nothing could stop them. They went over every one of them." This "sheep spirit" prevails in London Society. The Royal Enclosure at Ascot is little better than a miniature sheep-pen, and it cannot be correctly considered as "Royal," for the members of the Royal Family do not control the issue of vouchers for admission. Nevertheless, the vast majority of those who have any pretensions to be included in that elastic and undefinable body, Society, insist upon claiming admission into this enclosure. Indeed, only comparatively few are strong-minded enough to attend Ascot Races unless fortified with the much-prized voucher. If the Royal Enclosure is to be continued, regulations should be framed controlling the issue of vouchers, and these regulations should be strictly adhered to. Let the vouchers be issued only to bankers, brewers, and brokers, and their families; or only to company promoters and their friends; or exclusively to those who have distinguished themselves in the Bankruptcy Court, Divorce Court, or Criminal Court. Let there be some method in the distribution of these vouchers. As it is, every year the Master of the Buckhounds is compelled to make several personal enemies by his inability to comply with the requests for admission through want of space; the Party which is in power loses numerous supporters; the Royal Family acquires considerable and unmerited unpopularity; and a vast amount of irritation is generated which could easily be avoided. This is the time to act decisively in the matter. —Believe me to be, very truly yours,

MARMADUKE.

SPORTING NOTES.

About two months ago the fact was announced in Truth that Elf II. would be sent over from France to run at Ascot, and that he would be a dangerous candidate for the Gold Cup. Writing a fortnight ago, I expressed the opinion that M. de Bremond's horse would be the winner of the Cup. Why the sporting papers persisted in "going for" The Rush with such confidence it is impossible to understand, for Elf II. has won nearly all the most important long-distance races in France, and his public form is much better than that of Mr. Dobell's horse, whose victory in the Vase, however, was predicted by me, and he won very cleverly. Elf II. was bred by the Comte de Berteux, in whose colours he ran so badly that he was "weeded" for a small sum, when M. de Bremond was so fortunate as to buy him. This is the first victory of a French horse in the Cup for twenty years, their last success having been achieved when Verneuil won for Count Lagrange, defeating a great favourite in Silvio, who had no pretensions to stay the course. Elf II., as I wrote on the 9th, "is a really good stayer, and with fair speed besides," and I then gave him a plumper.

M. de Bremond's horse was not so much liked in the paddock as Masque II., who carried far more money than the winner, and for some time he was a decidedly better favourite than The Rush, M. E. Blanc having taken £7,500 to £3,000 in a bet. Mr. Brassey would have done better to reserve Bay Ronald for the Hardwicke Stakes, for the idea that he would stay the Cup course in a fast run race was utterly chimerical. The Rush ran a good horse, and the race was run from start to finish at an excellent pace. Masque II. ran badly, and is probably out of form, as he made no show in the Alexandra Plate on Friday, for which event he was again very heavily backed; but Piety won in a common trot. I plumped for this horse for the Ascot Stakes, but he could only get second to Herminius, over whom a very large stake was won. Lord Ellesmere made a grievous blunder when he let Herminius go out of his stable for the paltry price of 240 gs., after he had won a selling race. It is now the insane practice to regard horses as worthless if they are beaten in short distance races. Mr. Hammond wisely tried Herminius over two miles, and found he had got a thorough stayer.

I failed to appreciate the reasoning of the plungers on Batt for the Prince of Wales' Stakes, for it seemed to me that, Wantage being out of the way, Jeddah must win with only 6 lb. the worst of the weights. Mr. Larnach's horse certainly had 6 lb. in hand when he won the Derby, and it was highly probable that the extra distance would suit Jeddah better than Batt, who did not look so well as at Epsom, although he was supposed to have "come on" during the last three weeks. That this latter theory was a complete delusion was decisively proved on Wednesday, when he again brought backers to dire grief in the Ascot Derby, but people who were so infatuated as again to trust the Duke of Westminster's colt deserved to lose their money, for he had manifestly done quite enough work for some time to come, and looked a truly lamentable object after his severe race on Tuesday. Batt is something of a rogue in all probability. I gave a plumper for Lowood for the Coronation Stakes, and she won easily. Nun Nicer was the general selection of the papers, but she could not be reasonably expected to give the Duke of Westminster's filly 14 lb., for Lowood ran well in the One Thousand when very backward. Lowood, indeed, is the best-looking filly of the season taken all round, and now that she has got into form she will be hard to beat for the £1,500 race at Lingfield on July 9, where she will meet Nun Nicer with 5 lb. the best of the weights. Dieudonné was regarded as a real good thing for the St. James's Palace Stakes, the Duke of Devonshire having decided to reserve his colt for this race directly after the Derby. I wrote last week that "Cap Martin has done well in a trial, and he will most likely win the Ascot Derby this afternoon, while Dieudonné will have to do his best in order to beat Mr. Baird's colt for the St. James's Palace Stakes. Cap Martin is now probably in much better form than ever he was as a two-year-old." Cap Martin would certainly have won the Ascot Derby if he had started, but Mr. Baird decided to keep him for the St. James's Palace Stakes, and he won in a common canter. It is now clear that Dieudonné cannot stay a yard beyond six furlongs, and if the rational course had been adopted of galloping the colt over the Derby distance before Epsom, all the money that was there lost on him would have been saved. Indeed, a large stake would have been won over Jeddah, who would have lost the Duke of Devonshire's colt over a mile and a half. Why will owners and trainers persist in the asinine practice of having trials over shorter distances than the horses have to run in their races? Can anything be more abjectly idiotic than to gallop a horse over a mile, and then back it freely for a race over a mile and a half? Nevertheless, this fatuity takes place every week of the season. Dieudonné was palpably third best in the Derby, and it may be justifiably concluded that the field was composed of non-stayers.

As to the two-year-old races, Desmond won the Coventry Stakes easily, Blackwing collapsing in a most ignominious fashion. Captain Machell's colt was stated to have improved vastly since his successful début at Gatwick, but he did not look well, and this running may be ignored, as he was dead amiss, and has been seriously ill since his return to Newmarket. Sir Hercules, who was made a great favourite for the Biennial, ran very badly, and Simonside won for Lord Carnarvon. This colt had been well tried by Captain Machell, and he was a great Newmarket tip, and was heavily backed, but Stage Villain was the general selection of the papers. Simonside, like Desmond, is a son of St. Simon, and he was bred by Lord Londonderry and cost 2,000 gs. as a yearling. He is a grand colt, and capable of much improvement. I stated last week that Flying Fox would be the Duke of Westminster's best two-year-old for Ascot, "and he is very likely to win the New Stakes." Flying Fox had been well tried with Ameer, and he was made a great favourite, and won very easily from Musa, while Boniface was behind them. Mr. Brassey's colt has clearly been overrated, or else he cannot stay beyond five furlongs. Flying Fox is no beauty, but he is evidently a very useful colt indeed, and racing-like in the greatest degree. His next appearance will be at Stockbridge. Dalby is a fine colt, and will win a race before long. The Adornment colt ought not to have been raced so soon, for he is backward in condition, and he wants a lot of time, while he is so big an animal that he may never stand a thorough preparation, especially if his legs are to be tested by his being knocked about on hard ground. There was a desperate plunge at ruinous odds on Amurath for the Windsor Castle Stakes, but the result was a crash, for he could not move on the hard ground, and Galopin Lassie won in a canter, the generous odds of 20 to 1 having been offered against her in a field of seven. A great deal of money was lost on Peoria, who will do better another time. This filly is grandly bred, being by Bona Vista out of Distant Shore.

Kilcock won the Queen's Stand Plate in accordance with my prediction. The horse was a great "pot" for the Trial Stakes, but he cannot really stay a mile, and Collar won easily, while on Friday the Duke of Westminster's colt carried off the Hardwicke Stakes, which was not "the richest race of the week," as stated by several papers. It was surpassed in value by the Coronation Stakes (which was worth £3,500) and by the Gold Cup. I mentioned Collar long ago as a colt to be remembered whenever he ran.

Knight of the Thistle and Hermiston were both recklessly backed for the Hunt Cup, but Jaquemart, who had been well tried over the B.M. at Newmarket, won very cleverly. Minstrel, who cannot stay, and who is a very uncertain beast, compensated the Duke of Devonshire for recent disappointments by winning the Wokingham Handicap on Friday. Tartar and Foston were great favourites, and the result was most disastrous to backers. Minstrel was given a bottle of whisky just before the start, and he ran in blinkers.

The Prince of Wales's colt Sandringham, who was to have made his début at Ascot, has met with a serious accident, and it is very unlikely that he will be in a condition to run this season, while it is quite probable that he will never stand a preparation. This is a most vexatious disappointment, as Sandringham was thought to be an even finer colt than was Persimmon at the same age, and he is very heavily engaged, having been entered for nearly forty races, including all the heavy stakes. If Sandringham cannot be trained, there will be some £600 to pay for his forfeits. Twenty of this colt's engagements are for next year and 1900.

The Newmarket Cup may be challenged for on Tuesday next, Lord Rosebery being the present holder. He challenged Prince Soltykoff last year with a sealed nomination, and the cup was surrendered. There have been only two races for the cup since 1773, and these took place in 1856, when the late Lord Zetland won with Fandango, and in 1886, when the Duke of Beaufort carried it off with Forio, and he retained it for nine years.

The Seaton Delaval Plate of £1,200 at Newcastle, which is run to-morrow, should be won by either Simonside or Mintstalk.

At Sandown Park, on Friday, there are forty-seven three-year-olds left in for the Sandringham Foal Stakes of £2,000. Disraeli will not run. Cauliflower has such an immense pull in the weights that she ought to be able to win if she is worth keeping in training. The Duke of Westminster's filly Orpah will be very dangerous if she is fancied by the Kingsclere people. Forty-nine two-year-olds have accepted for the British Dominion Plate of £1,000. Neither Desmond nor Amurath is likely to run, and Sir Hercules or Victoria May may be successful.

Messrs. Tattersall are to hold no fewer than eight sales at Newmarket next week, and their catalogue fills sixteen columns of the "Racing Calendar." Where purchasers are to come from for half the lots it is impossible to conjecture, especially as there are to be five more sales during the Second July Meeting.

The great race at Newmarket next week will be the Princess of Wales's Stakes of £10,000, on Thursday, which is run over the B.M., but I fear there is but a poor prospect of a repetition of the splendid finishes between Isinglass and Bullingdon in 1894 and between St. Frusquin and Persimmon in 1896. There were originally 250 entries for this race when it closed in September, 1895, and when the last forfeit was declared on January 4 more than forty horses were left in, which is a number considerably above the average, and the Jockey Club are not likely to lose anything by this race, for the subscription will more than cover its advertised value. Each horse now left in pays a subscription of £105. Lord Rosebery has reserved Velasquez (10 st.) for this race, which he won last year. The next best four-year-old—longo intervallo—is St. Cloud II., but he does not seem to have much chance of defeating Velasquez after his bad running in the Hunt Cup, although he will have a considerable advantage in the weights. St. Cloud II. will no doubt carry off a good handicap before the season is over. Neither Minstrel nor Berzak can have any chance. Of the three-year-olds, Wantage (8 st. 2 lb.) ought to prove the best, and if the Duke of Portland's colt comes to the post fit and well he will be the most dangerous opponent of Velasquez. The Wyvern (8 st. 2 lb.) has repeatedly disappointed his stable when heavily backed, while Brio and Heir Male are non-stayers, and Ninus has a penalty of 6 lb., which puts him out of the race. Dieudonné also has 6 lb. extra, and I should doubt whether the Duke of Devonshire's colt can stay this course, as the finish is decidedly severe. Velasquez ought to win, and, if beaten, it will be by Wantage.

There are forty-nine entries for the July Stakes, and the continued success of this race is truly remarkable, inasmuch as not a farthing is added, and the liability on each entry is £30. The best public form is represented by Desmond, Boniface, Victoria May, and Eventail. There are no penalties for previous winners, and Desmond ought to be able to beat Boniface, who, however, will be well suited by this course, and Lord Dunraven's colt had a very moderate lot behind him at Ascot. There is a huge entry for the Stud Produce Stakes on Wednesday, and Mr. Rose's Santa Casa, winner of the Ascot Triennial, ought to be successful, as her penalty is more than removed by a 7 lb. breeding allowance. The Exeter Stakes, which will be worth about £800, looks well for Musa, or Dalby if Mr. Baird's filly does not run. Trident may be able to win the Fulbourne Stakes on Friday.

There are twenty-two entries for the July Cup of £300, which is run over an easy six furlongs. Several very speedy animals are engaged, and Kilcock or Eager may win.

It is said that the English turf career of Newhaven II. has terminated, and it has been a most inglorious campaign. The jobbing rhapsodies about the Australian horses with which one or two of the sporting papers have nauseated their unlucky readers appear to have utterly bewildered many fatheads, who were actually gulled into believing that Newhaven II. would win the Gold Cup, and he was extensively selected for that event. This horse showed good form in the City and Suburban, but his recent displays have been entirely beneath contempt, and it would appear that now he can neither stay nor go fast. His Ascot running was dreadfully bad in both races.

Referring to the comments I made last week on the downfall of the Trinity Hall Boat Club in the May Races, a correspondent points out that it is not the T.H.B.C., but the T.J.B.C. that is unpopular at the University. He is, no doubt, not altogether incorrect in his statement.

The German oarsmen will after all not be seen at Henley. The Mayence four and the Hellas pair have both been badly beaten at the Berlin Regatta. It is not likely under the circumstances that they would prove very dangerous at Henley. The Hall boat is going for the Grand, when they will, no doubt, have a chance of meeting First again. With proper coaching the former club should make amends for its disaster at Cambridge.

The University sports will be held next Wednesday, June 29, at the Queen's Club. Last week a fair opportunity was given of seeing what the two teams could do. Oxford met the London Athletic Club, and judging by the form shown Vassall and Adair have the long and high jump at their mercy. Garnier is simply a flier over the hurdles. He is going in beautiful style, and there is very little doubt that he will beat Maundrell. Then Fremantle is pretty sure of the three miles. Workman, the Cantab, could do nothing with the veteran Munro, who had also beaten the Oxford President easily in the two miles race. This gives four events to Oxford. The Cambridge team met a team of Old Blues from both Universities. Hunter, in the mile, was rather disappointing, but then Lutyens did a much faster time than he has done this year, and practically ran his own race from start to finish. It was gratifying to find Carter, the Cambridge President, quite back to form. He let Fitzherbert get too far away, but nearly caught him in the quarter. He should get inside 51 sec. In the hundred he ran well, while Harrison, who won in the Lent term, did not stay. With a good start, Carter will stand a fair chance of winning this event for Cambridge. Bulloch was not up for the weight, and the hammer was not good, but still Baines' 96 ft. has before now won the sports. Cambridge has only one certainty, in the mile, and so there seems every likelihood of the Oxford team winning the sports this year. At the same time, the finishes in several of the events promise to be so close that an upset of the favourites would be quite on the cards. By the way, I am asked to mention that tickets issued for the sports on March 25, when a postponement was found necessary, will not be available next Wednesday. Such tickets should be at once returned to the Secretary of the Queen's Club to be exchanged for new ones.

After the sports at Oxford, the L.A.C. were entertained at the Randolph, but where was Mr. Jackson? He was not even to be seen at the sports. The Scottish gathering was held at Stamford Bridge, where men purporting to come from the far side of the Tweed piped, danced, and tossed cabers to their hearts' content. In the sprint handicap, Wadsley, with a strong wind behind him, went very well. The Kildare A.C. is no longer one of the chief meetings in the metropolis. This year it was held in a quiet way at Acton, and the mile inter-club challenge cup was won by the Holborn-circus A.C.

The Northern Lawn Tennis Championships at Liverpool ended successfully last week. Owing to the absence of the Baddeleys, who held the Singles and Doubles Championships, the winners of the open events had a walk-over in the champion round. The event again fell to brothers. H. L. Doherty beat the American visitor, Hobart, in the Singles by three sets to love. In each of the first sets Hobart only scored a game, but then he played a stronger game, and advantage was played. In the Doubles the Dohertys beat Hillyard and Smith. After a hard tussle, Miss Martin, from Dublin, beat Miss C. Cooper, the holder of the Ladies' Championship. The entries for the Open Championships at Wimbledon are excellent, and, so far as one can judge, it does not look as though the game is losing popularity. C. Martin, the old Cambridge and Chiswick Park player, has just left England to take up an appointment in India.

The last wickets of the Yorkshire team are becoming a regular bugbear to county players. Against Kent the Northerners were doing none too well until Hunter and Lord Hawke came together, and then the score was doubled. Kent played a plucky uphill game, and Bannon showed such form that he ought to be certain of his blue for Oxford. Against Middlesex at Lord's they played in a similar way, and Rhodes showed great promise as a bat. The home team looked thoroughly fagged out after a long day's fielding. Subsequently Ford played a simply superb innings, and he and Warner nearly averted an innings defeat. Certainly Yorkshire looks like being the only county in the running for the headship. Poor Surrey is in a bad way. The fielding against Lancashire was anything but good. However, a brilliant stand by Abel and Holland saved them from disaster, and some good work at the finish enabled them to head the Northern total, and then rain stopped play. Grace and Murdoch have been showing excellent form with the bat, and the latter's century for Sussex against Notts was one of the best displays of recent years. Hampshire gained a well-deserved victory over Leicester. Heavy scoring by Quaife and Lilley gave Warwick all the best of a draw against Derbyshire.

No real interest was aroused by the Gentlemen and Players match at the Oval. There were plenty of good players, but the teams were not in any sense representative. The Gentlemen's bowling was very weak, and the only members of the team to do anything with the ball were Turner and Stocks, who is likely to prove very dangerous in the University match. The Cambridge team wound up their home games by beating Hampshire, after allowing Jessop to do pretty nearly all the batting and bowling. It is very satisfactory to find him in form again. The Players seem still to have an unaccountable aversion to catching the ball. If they will only improve in this respect they ought to do well at Lord's.

MAMMON.

FROM MOSES MOSS TO BENJAMIN BOSS.

Sunday.

MY DEAR BEN,—Ascot week generally is a very dull one in the Stock Markets, and the past week was not an exception. The average stockbroker loves Ascot and likes to be seen there, especially if he is able to scrape acquaintance with some of the members of the aristocracy. There was, moreover, nothing in the general outlook to induce active business, and with the exception of some buying of Southern railway stocks, the public did very little.

STOCK EXCHANGE PROSPECTS—PROMISING CONDITIONS.

It must be admitted, however, that the outlook on the Stock Exchange is by no means unfavourable. To begin with, cheap money is assured for some months to come at least, and rates of deposit are so low that they must in the near future induce capitalists to invest some of their surplus funds. The political horizon has cleared altogether, and the news that the Niger Convention has been signed and sealed fully confirms the views which I have all along expressed. When it is considered that the rumours of possible grave complications between this country and France concerning the West African question caused quite a slump on the Stock Exchange only a month or two ago, it is surprising that a complete settlement of the vexed question should have been received with indifference; but the markets are in a state of transition, and whenever the time for action comes, the great improvement in the political position will doubtless be one of the "Bull" factors. There seems to be nothing to alarm business men in the present position in the Far East, where this country is evidently fully holding its own, even though all the wishes of the British community in China—which are very far-reaching—are not being fulfilled. The only important trouble which has still an unfavourable bearing upon the markets is the Spanish-American war, but there are indications that it is entering a phase which should bring decisive action. The American department has been drooping, and Wall-street operators have partly gone on the "Bear" tack, but important interests are watching their chance of raising values again, and it may be taken for granted that any favourable event near Santiago will at once be seized upon by the "Bulls." A relapse in Grand Trunks will not have surprised readers of TRUTH, as I practically foreshadowed this for some time. In the Foreign section Spanish Fours are rallying, but Paris generally has been ill at ease, partly owing to the Ministerial crisis. In South Americans the feature has been a sharp set-back in Brazilian Government and Railway stocks, owing to the great opposition which the funding scheme is meeting with, and to a fresh decline in the Rio exchange. Most other South American Government stocks have, on the other hand, displayed strength. There have been no further unpleasant pronouncements by President Kruger, and South African politics are considered more satisfactory. While there has been an absence of business in the Kaffir Circus, a very strong undercurrent is noticeable, and a somewhat sudden advance would not be at all surprising. A good many transactions have taken place in the West Australian department, more especially in the shares of the high-class mines, and although there has been a reaction, I anticipate a good deal of activity in this market for some time to come. There has been little animation in the Industrial section, but prices have been fairly well maintained.

MONEY AND GILT-EDGED INVESTMENTS—WILL MONEY REMAIN CHEAP?

Although the Directors of the Bank of England have not decreed a further reduction in the official minimum, which remains at 3 per cent., rates of discount in the open market have kept very low, and even the advent of a number of American bills has not put up the rate for three months' bills beyond 1½ per cent. Of these American bills further batches are expected here, partly drawn against produce shipped to Europe, and partly in connection with the war loan issued in the United States. This, combined with the usual demands at the end of the half-year, may cause a temporary rise in rates; but as soon as June is turned, interest and dividend payments will again become a weakening factor, and unless gold shipments to America should be made, or an important demand for the precious metal should arise in other quarters, we may look for continued ease for some months to come. Hence there is every prospect of gilt-edged investments at least maintaining present values. Consols have been unusually steady during the week, and show hardly any change at 111$\frac{3}{16}$ for the account. There has been an improvement in the price of silver, which is quoted 27⅛d. Rupee Paper is steady at 62½, but British Corporation stocks and Colonial Government bonds have been well supported. The last Four-and-a-Half per Cent. Chinese Gold Loan is about unaltered at 88¼, the Seven per Cent. Silver Loan at 98½.

HOME RAILS—SOUTH EASTERN AND CHATHAM AFFAIRS—INCREASED ACTIVITY.

Notwithstanding the weakening effect of Ascot Races, more business has been transacted in Home Rails than for some time past. The fact is that investors are realising that the dividend-period is drawing near, and some of the surplus funds still available are undoubtedly finding their way into these securities. Again, the influential purchases of South Eastern and Chatham stocks have produced a more hopeful feeling as regards a resurrection in the Home Railway department generally. That negotiations are going on between the two Southern Railway Companies already referred to is certain, but I fancy that the arrangement will stop short of an actual fusion, and that a closer working arrangement is chiefly contemplated, partly also in view of the coming Paris Exhibition. For years I have strongly urged such an agreement, and it is to be hoped that personal interests will not be allowed to prevent so useful a scheme from being passed. It is also highly desirable that some official announcement should be made as soon as possible. Concerning Dover "A" I have held a favourable opinion for a long time, owing to the progressiveness of the line, and I am not surprised to see the quotation up at 113¼, after having touched 115. Again, Chathams are rather easier after their recent improvement, the Ordinary at 22, the Arbitration Prefs. at 137½, the Second Prefs. at 98. Brighton "A" show little variation at 176¾, and movements in this stock, which is now quite an investment security, have been slight. A feature has been a revival of the investment demand for the Heavy stocks, which are generally firmer. The most important improvement occurred in London and North-Western to 199½. This is still 6½ below the figure of 206 touched a year ago, and as there is a traffic increase so far of £121,838, since January 1, a disposition is shown to discount an improved dividend, the only doubtful point being the possibility of a further increase in the working expenses. But it is more than likely that a rise of a few points in "Brums" will take place in the near future. Little interest has been shown in Great Eastern; but Great Centrals have been fairly firm, and the report has again cropped up that an alliance between this Company and the Great Western may be expected, which would undoubtedly prove of advantage to both lines. Great Central 1894 Ordinary at 41 are still attracting attention as a ver promising lock-up. It is now officially stated that the new line to London will be opened for coal traffic on July 25 next. It has been suggested, now that the South-Eastern and Chatham Companies are drawing near to each other, that the Metropolitan and District Companies must be animated by similar sentiments. This, however, appears to be going in advance of events, and however desirable such an alliance may be, I do not anticipate any important steps in the near future. Districts were at one time put up to 29½ on the rumours, and reacted to 28½ on their contradiction. In the Scotch section Caledonian Deferred Ordinary (Coras) have not maintained their recent advance, having reacted to 57¾, and North British Deferred have receded to 44⅜. In view of the good business falling to both these lines, a renewed rise, especially in Coras, is expected. The stock of the various London electric companies have shown increased weakness on the non-success of the issue of the Great Northern and City Railway. It appears that the public response was so small that the subscriptions are to be returned. Personally, I think that it would be just as well if the new schemes were not rushed out so precipitately. There are now at present two electric railways in active construction in the Metropolis, one of which—the Waterloo and City—will be opened next month, while another—the Central London Railway—a much more important undertaking, is expected to be completed in June next year. There is no such urgent need of a line from the Great Northern to the City, and the promoters of the same may fairly wait until the Central London is in operation, as if—as is expected—the Central London proves highly successful, it will not be difficult then to obtain the necessary capital from the public for the Great Northern scheme. In the meantime, the non-success of the latter issue has caused a fall in Waterloo and City to 118½, and Central London fully-paid shares have been dull at 10.

YANKEE RAILS—WAITING FOR THE TROOPS TO ATTACK SANTIAGO—THE WHEAT COLLAPSE.

A moderate decline in the American market is chiefly traceable to the effects of the Leiter collapse, which has caused considerable losses in wheat, and has apparently brought about some realisations of other American securities to pay for the same. Temporarily, too, the attention of investors in the States has been diverted to the War Loan, but according to latest advices this has been many times over-subscribed, and thus the millions intended for the purchase of Government bonds will be available for Yankee Rails. Both the circumstances mentioned are in any case merely temporary influences, and should presently pass away as far as the Stock Markets are concerned. There remains the position of the Spanish-American war. Preparations for the landing of large bodies of troops near Santiago de Cuba have taken much longer than had been anticipated, and thus the American public are somewhat disappointed by the absence of any important results. The latter, however, may be looked for during the next few days, and any decisive victory of the American arms will cause a sharp advance in Yankee Rails, which have been pretty heavily sold by the "Bears" in Wall-street. The capture of Manila by the United States troops is also an event which should occur in the near future, and thus our American cousins have several pleasant sensations to come. As regards the collapse of the wheat corner, it should prove a blessing in the end. Such daring manipulations always represent a danger which may burst upon the market at any time, and it was far preferable that the price of wheat should at once find its natural level than that the position should be rendered yet more unsound by continued inflation. The movement of grain in the States should, moreover, be stimulated by the occurrence, as it will be easier now for America to compete with other wheat-producing countries. There can be no doubt that the United States wheat crop will be a splendid one, and that it will bring large traffics to the railroads, so that the future of the Granger roads should be in every way assured. According to travellers from the West, such lines as the Milwaukee, Rock Island, and Atchison have to expect such large quantities of wheat, maize, and oats to carry, that all previous records will be surpassed. The farmers, of course, have now plenty of money, and cash is accumulating throughout the West at the banks. While Milwaukee have not maintained the highest point touched, there are indications that any upward movement will be led by this stock. Louisville appears to have pretty well touched bottom, and very little is heard now of the yellow fever scare. A sharp rally in this stock is, therefore, quite on the cards. Union Pacifics, after a decline, have shown a firm front on favourable dividend rumours. This is what the Wall-street Daily News has to say on the subject: "From sources we consider authoritative we learn that it is not the intention of the management to declare a dividend on the Preferred until next October. Then, undoubtedly, the distribution of profits will begin at the rate of 4 per cent. per annum, and the outlook certainly warrants the belief that they will be continued indefinitely. The 'Bull' talk on the stock is as strong as ever, and it is expected that the shares will discount in price the declaration of the dividend long before the Board of Directors takes official action on the matter." The talk about a dividend on the common stock of the Northern Pacific is somewhat premature. Even if, as is stated, the Company is earning a small dividend on this stock, it is not likely that anything will be paid during the present year. Cable advices are to the effect that the Baltimore and Ohio reorganisation will shortly become an accomplished fact. This is what the same contemporary has to say on this subject:—

> The idea of withholding the reorganisation plan of the Company until the cessation of the war has evidently been abandoned. It comes from good sources that, inasmuch as practically all questions relating to the rehabilitation of the property have been amicably and satisfactorily adjusted, the scheme will be launched within a week or two. It is claimed the selling prices of the bonds and stock have already adjusted themselves to the conditions of the plan, and it is expected that when the terms are made public all the Baltimore and Ohio securities will appreciate in value. It is still generally believed that the assessment on the stock will be $20 a share, but in view of the fact that new Preferred stock, estimated to be worth 50 at least, will be given for one-half of the assessment, it materially cuts down the amount to be paid, and correspondingly improves the value of the present stock. The issuance of the reorganisation plan is expected to inaugurate lively speculation in Baltimore and Ohio shares, and already they are being bought and held in anticipation of a sharp rise in price in the near future.

The Denver and Rio Grande has just announced a dividend of 1½ per cent. on the Preferred, making, with the 1 per cent. paid in December, 2½ per cent. for the year. This will leave more than $300,000 surplus, and the conservative action of the Directors has created some disappointment, but there would appear to be every prospect of the December dividend being larger than last year, and the outlook is upon the whole satisfactory. The position of the Reading Company, and especially of the First Prefs., is a promising one, as is explained by the following extract from the Wall-street Journal:—

> A number of prominent houses, often identified with interests in the coal stocks, are bullish on Reading First Preferred. They argue that in a general revival of business the anthracite coal trade cannot continue to suffer, and be the only branch of general business to go backwards. Some of them claim that the price of coal will go up $1 or more per ton this year, because of increased demand. The Reading Company has, so far in 1898, marketed more coal than it did in 1897. There are others who believe that the anthracite coal trade has seen its best days and that substitution of soft coal and gas will increase more rapidly to the detriment of hard coal interests; but in spite of this it is a recognised fact that in a great "Bull" market it is practically impossible to separate one group from the "Bull" market and carry on a "Bear" campaign in it. It is a great deal easier to ignore bearish developments and keep the unfortunate group in the "Bull" ranks. So far as Reading First Preferred is concerned, there is reason for higher prices. Before the Maine was blown up, the stock sold up to 55 on buying, which seemed to come direct from Jersey Central interests. If the Company does no better in May and June than it did last year it will show 3½ per cent. earned on the First Preferred stock, after deducting $400,000 coal royalty from the surplus earnings. A dividend of 2 per cent. could be declared on the stock and be justified in every way. The First Preferred should sell much higher than it does now, if the common stock is worth anything like what it is selling for.

In the London market Reading First Prefs. are quoted at 23¾ for the $50 share, and, upon the whole, the reasoning in my contemporary's paragraph seems to be fully justified. Any one who wishes to take a hand in Yankee Rails would do well to spread his operations, say, over Milwaukee, Louisville, Union Pacific Common, Atchison Prefs., and Reading First Prefs. It will be preferable to go for short turns, buying on declines and selling on improvements. Some of my American contemporaries are discounting the control of Cuba with a vengeance. Thus I find from the New York Journal of Finance that Maine lumbermen are already speculating upon the prospects of extending commerce with Cuba as a result of the war. A Bangor firm has received from a New York house having large interests in the island an inquiry as to the prices at which certain kinds of building materials could be delivered at Havana, where it is proposed to erect two large factories. The Lumberman's Review goes so far as to speculate already on the timber to be obtained from Cuba, and explains the position as follows:—"Cuba still possesses 16,000,000 acres of virgin forest abounding in valuable timber, none of which is useful as coarse construction lumber, while nearly every foot would be saleable in the United States and bring high prices. Cuban mahogany and cedar are particularly well known in the United States. The mahogany is very hard and shows a handsome grain, and is preferred by many to any other variety in common use. The moment Spain drops the reins of government in Cuba, and trade relations are re-established with the States, there will be a movement, both inward and outward, of forest products which will have a beneficial effect upon the industry in both countries," to which I have to remark that you must not count your chickens before they are hatched, and that the hatching of these schemes will take a good deal of fighting first, although the final result cannot for a moment be doubted. I am asked to state that the London Committee of shareholders of the Central Pacific Railroad Company have called a meeting of the holders of the certificates issued by them for Tuesday, 28th inst., at 2 p.m., at Winchester House. They are pulling very long faces in the Grand Trunk market, in which the overflow of jobbers from all the other sections has of late collected. The last traffic returns, showing an increase of only £553, has proved very disappointing, and knocked down the first Prefs. to 71⅝, the Guaranteed to 76⅜. This is an occurrence which I have been foreshadowing for some time, and until the "Bull" account has been further reduced these stocks had better be left alone. The Canadian Pacific Railway has also treated its shareholders to an unfavourable traffic return for the second week of June, the increase being only $3,000, while previous increases had generally not been below $40,000, but investors in this road cannot really complain at a temporary falling-off when it is considered that the aggregate gross traffic from January 1 is $10,414,000 against $8,647,000 for the corresponding period of 1897, this being an increase of $1,767,000, and the present price of Canadian Pacifics of about 85 is upon the whole lower in proportion than the quotations of Grand Trunks, and leaves a considerable margin for a rise.

Foreigners and South Americans—Ministerial Crises—Will the Coulisse be Spared?

It would, indeed, be curious if the Coulisse of the Paris Bourse were to be spared in consequence of the Ministerial crisis which has just broken out in the French capital. There is a talk of a postponement of the action recently decided upon for six months, and if this should come about, affairs in Paris are likely to become exceedingly lively. Six months is a lifetime from the Bourse point of view, and would furnish opportunities for plenty of deals. In any case the Coulisse may be expected to die hard, and the migration to Brussels will probably be carried out all the same, so as to provide against eventualities. A Ministerial crisis has also broken out in Rome. Thus there are several disturbing features, as far as interbourse securities are concerned, and quotations have eased off, Italians to 92⅜, and Turks (Group II.) to 45¼. Spanish dropped at one time to 33⅜, but have since recovered to 34¼. With regard to the last-mentioned stock, there has been a good deal of "Bear" selling on the expected success of the American troops in Cuba, but, after all, an overwhelming success should bring peace within measurable distance, and nothing would be better for Spanish Fours than peace, be the terms what they may. A heavy fall has taken place in Brazilians, on the strong opposition which has been organised against the funding scheme, particulars of which have now been made public. It appears that the Council of Foreign Bondholders has refused its consent, and the Rio exchange—which had improved—has again fallen away on the attacks on the scheme. Assurances are now given by the coming President that everything will be done to safeguard the financial position in the future, and to effect large economies, but it is more than doubtful whether any Brazilian President will be powerful enough to achieve this object. At all events, Brazilians of 1889 dropped at one time to 50½, Western of Minas to 53, recovering on inside support to 51½ and 53½ respectively. Chilians, on the other hand, have hardened, the 1892 Loan to 83, the 1886 Loan to 74, the Chilian Government having to some extent disavowed the issue of the Treasury Bills. Argentine Government stocks have displayed a firm front, the 1886 Loan at 90, the Funding Loan at 87½. It is again stated that the negotiations with Chili concerning the boundary question are proceeding satisfactorily. Argentine Railway stocks have not been in demand, and prices are slightly easier, Buenos Ayres Great Southern at 139, Buenos Ayres and Rosario at 72, Central Argentine at 80. A heavy decline has taken place in Cordoba Central (Central Northern Section) Income Debenture stock to 48, which was due to the publication of the directors' report. The line has done very badly last year, the decrease in net earnings on the Central Northern Section being as much as £77,356. This was chiefly owing to the great depression in the sugar industry, which is the chief source of income of the line. The traffic decreases are unfortunately still going on, and for some time I have pointed out to my readers that even in view of the settlement effected with regard to the railway guarantee, no improvement can be looked for in the quotation of the debentures until these decreases disappear. For the week ending June 12 the decrease on the Central Northern Section was again $17,320, making an aggregate decrease from January 1 to date of as much as $376,100. Mexican Sixes have shown a strong tone, and Peruvian Corporation stocks are distinctly firmer, advices from Lima pointing to a disposition on the part of the Government to come to some arrangement.

A Mexican Railway Comparison—Inter-Oceanic v. Vera Cruz.

On June 9 I discussed the promising position of Inter-Oceanic of Mexico "A" Debentures, in view of the important improvement shown in the traffics of the line, and of the excellent prospects of further progress in Mexico, the resources of which country are being developed in a masterly manner under the wise government of President Diaz. At the time I pointed out that Inter-Oceanic of Mexico "A" Debentures in the neighbourhood of 70, earning a dividend at the rate of 4⅝ per cent., were far more promising than Mexican Railway (Vera Cruz Line), then quoted 74½. I have now received a communication from a correspondent, who is usually well-informed on Mexican Railway matters, in which he contrasts the position of Mexican Railway securities and those of the Inter-Oceanic of Mexico:—

I.—Mexican Railway (Vera Cruz Line).

The present net earnings of the Mexican Railway amount to about £170,000 per annum, of which the interest on the Debenture stock requires £120,000 per annum, leaving about £50,000 per annum for the First Preference stock. The full interest on the £2,554,000 Eight per Cent. First Preference stock requires £204,000, and that on the £1,012,000 Six per Cent. Second Preference stock requires £60,000, so that the earnings must increase by about £154,000 before the Second Preference stock can earn any dividend, and by about £214,000 before the Ordinary stock can receive any dividend. Price of Second Preference stock, 34 per cent.; price of Ordinary stock, 21¼ per cent. Length of line, 321 miles.

II.—INTER-OCEANIC OF MEXICO RAILWAY.

The present net earnings of the Inter-Oceanic Railway of Mexico amount to about £70,000 per annum, of which the interest on the Four per Cent. Prior Lien bonds requires £20,000, and that on the Four per Cent. First Debenture stock £24,000—£44,000 per annum, leaving about £26,000 per annum for the Seven per Cent. "A" Debenture stock. The full interest on this stock requires £51,500, and that on the £470,000 Seven per Cent. "B" Debenture stock requires £33,000, so that the net earnings must increase by about £25,500 before the "B" Debenture stock can receive a dividend, and by about £58,500 before the Preference shares can receive a dividend. Price of the Seven per Cent. "B" Debenture stock 30 per cent.: Seven per Cent. Preference shares £1⅝ per £10 share, equal to 16½ per cent. Length of line 555 miles.

These figures speak for themselves, but while my correspondent has drawn attention more particularly to the comparison between the junior securities, I maintain that a far better purchase is that of the Inter-Oceanic of Mexico Seven per Cent. "A" Debenture stock, because it is less speculative and equally progressive. This stock is already earning over half the dividend, and should next year earn the whole dividend of 7 per cent. It is surprising, therefore, that it has not yet reached a higher price than 70.

THE KAFFIR CIRCUS—INVESTORS NIBBLING—A STRONG UNDERTONE.

The Kaffir Circus has been in a very puzzling condition during the past week. Business has been very much restricted, and the few buying orders which came upon the market were for investors, who are picking up dividend-paying shares. The Kaffir Circus was exceptionally well represented at Ascot, and the Stock Exchange was altogether deserted by this contingent. There would, therefore, have been an excellent opportunity for a "Bear" raid, and the fact that the ursine party refrained from any attack would appear to show that they are afraid to commit themselves any farther. As a matter of fact, the signing of the West African arrangement was a most favourable influence, and the position in the Transvaal as regards politics has improved, while the low rates in the Money Market are also promising. Quotations are more or less nominal in so far that is very difficult to buy at them, and the moment any large orders were to come on the market they would at once advance. While movements have therefore been very slight, the undertone has been strong, and, barring accidents, an early rise is on the tapis. No further progress has been made with the Transvaal loan, and Dr. Leyds is hardly likely to obtain any advance either here or on the continent, unless some concessions are made to the mining industry. In Paris the Ministerial crisis and a temporary fall in Spanish have been adverse features. Yet no sales of South African shares have been pressed, while on the contrary Mozambiques have been in demand. It appears that a debenture issue by the Mozambique Company of £250,000, to carry 5 per cent. interest, is on the tapis. The speculative leader has again been Rand Mines, Limited, which have fluctuated between 29⅛ and 29½. East Rands have been firm at 4$\frac{9}{16}$, Consolidated Goldfields Deferred at 4. Chartered have been quiet at 2$\frac{5}{16}$. The various Deep Level shares have been steady, the following being the latest quotations:—Goldfields Deep 8⅜, Crown Deep 11½, Robinson Deep 9⅝, Geldenhuis Deep 7¾, Rose Deep 6⅛, Henry Nourse Deep 5, Durban Roodepoort Deep 3$\frac{9}{16}$, Knight's Deep 1$\frac{15}{16}$, Roodepoort Central Deep 1¼, Nigel Deep $\frac{15}{16}$. Randfontein have been inclined to firmness at 1¼, but in the Barnato group unaccountable weakness has been shown by Johannesburg Consolidated Investment at 1$\frac{1}{16}$. Simmer and Jack have been steady at 3$\frac{7}{16}$. According to the South African Mining Journal the East Rand projects the flotation of another subsidiary Company, which is to include the Caisson Block and part of the Cinderella, and is to extend over one hundred reef claims with the necessary dip. The Transvaal Exploring Company have issued a circular to the shareholders, in which a scheme of reconstruction to produce £15,000 of fresh working capital is proposed. Diamond shares have been dull, De Beers being quoted 27⅛, New Jagersfontein 7¼ x.d.

LONDON AND PARIS EXCHANGE, LTD., 21, Throgmorton-street, London, E.C. This Corporation is prepared to make Advances on Mining Shares, at 6 per cent. per annum, subject to a deposit of 20 per cent. Clients by this system save the heavy contangoes usually charged.

GOLDEN WEST AUSTRALIA—A STEADY BUSINESS—ADELAIDE STILL A BUYER.

Apart from some unfavourable rumours which have been spread concerning the Golden Horseshoe Company's mine, the news from Western Australia has in every instance been of a favourable character. Crushings are satisfactory, and fresh discoveries are being made on the high-class mines, the reputation of which has already been established. What could be more satisfactory than the news from the Ivanhoe, which, according to a British Australasian cablegram, is opening up splendidly, while at the 200 ft. level, near the Great Boulder boundary, the lode is described as 7 ft. wide, worth 3 oz. to the ton. It is further stated that at the 100 ft. level the lode has opened out to a width of 40 ft. of fair-grade ore, while at the 300 ft. level the lode shows rich telluride. Ivanhoe shares have been firm at 6$\frac{9}{16}$, and Lake View Consols are quoted 9$\frac{3}{16}$. A "Bear" attack has been made on London and Globe Finance shares, which at one time fell to 22s. 6d., from which there has been a recovery. As far as can be ascertained, the rumour that the final dividend will be passed by this Company is without foundation, but all manner of reports are nowadays circulated by interested parties, which ought to be disregarded. It is expected that the Standard Exploration Company, which, as my readers are aware, comprises the amalgamation of the sub-Companies, will shortly be issued now, all the Companies concerned having given their assent. Satisfactory crushings are announced by the Associated Gold Mines, as stated in my usual list for the week:—

—	Tons of Ore Crushed.	Oz. of Gold.	Assay of Tailings per ton.
Associated Gold Mines	2,300	1,838	—
Do.	500	2,250	—
Mount Charlotte	300	120	—
Central Boulder	135	151	—
Princess Royal (Cue)	260	176	—
Lady Evelyn	93	65	—
Weld-Hercules	233	140	—
Menzies Alpha Leases	44	228	—
North Boulder	390	366	—
Star of the East	564	508¼	—
Do.	800	784¼	—
Menzies Crusoe	80	184	20 dwt.
Florence (from plates)	—	131	—

Golden Horseshoe have fluctuated between 9½ and 9¾, and now stand at 9$\frac{11}{16}$. According to a British Australasian cablegram, the reported application for the forfeiture of the Golden Horseshoe lease was absolutely frivolous, as work at the mine has been uninterrupted. Verily, one does not know nowadays what to believe, and manipulators go to great lengths in spreading false news. I do not for a moment think that there is any fear of forfeiture, but at the same time, even granting that the property is a valuable one, the present price is quite high enough. A vigorous discussion is still going on with regard to the Great Boulder Proprietary and the new Milling Company, but if the shareholders in the Great Boulder Proprietary are satisfied, I do not quite see who has to complain. These shares are now quoted 18s. From the Hannan's Brownhill comes the news that they have commenced crushing with the new machinery erected by the London and Hamburg Gold Recovery Company, and that the buildings will be completed while it is working. This is important news, and if satisfactory results are reported, another marked advance on the present price of 8$\frac{9}{16}$ may be looked for. The news from the Belle Vue Proprietary and Hannan's Crœsus is satisfactory, and from the Lady Shenton further satisfactory advices have been received. Mr. Rayfield, the consulting engineer, reports as follows:—"Reef level No. 4 South leaves no doubt at all main ore body has been struck. The vein is fully 2 ft. in width, very rich. Additional 5 stamp-mill has been ordered to-day." After a temporary reaction, due to a false impression created by a law suit which has nothing to do with the merits of the mine, Lady Shentons have improved to $2\frac{7}{16}$, and as the action in question has been decided in favour of those who have a large interest in the mine, an early improvement in the value of the shares is expected. Florence shares have been firm at $\frac{9}{16}$. From the Lady Loch a promising strike is reported, and the shares have hardened to 2s. 6d. In the Hannan's Oroya a strike of telluride sulphide is reported, assaying 1 oz. 10 dwt. per ton. The Golden Pike is concentrating attention on the 600 ft. level, and good work is being done in sinking. Improvements are marked in Peak Hill, Bayley's United, and Brownhill Central, while Sons of Gwalia have been steady at $1\frac{7}{8}$. In the West Australian Market Trust group business has been on a small scale pending the carrying out of the new arrangement. Market Trust shares are quoted 2s. $1\frac{1}{2}$d., Northern Territories $\frac{7}{8}$, West Australian Joint Stock Trust and West Australian Loan and General $\frac{11}{16}$, while West Australian Joint Stock Founders are firm at $\frac{3}{8}$. On Saturday the W.A. Market Trust held its confirmatory meeting, Mr. Horatio Bottomley, the chairman, presiding. The scheme of reconstruction was unanimously confirmed, and the chairman mentioned on this occasion that responsible and substantial guarantees for the underwriting of the whole of the new capital had been obtained. It was also stated that the underwriting commission would not exceed 6d. per share, and that the shareholders would be given the opportunity of applying for any shares not taken up by others. Mr. Bottomley further remarked that no danger surrounded the W.A. Joint Stock Trust or the W.A. Loan and General Finance Company, and that any claims they may have against the Market Trust would be satisfactorily adjusted in the reconstruction. Mr. Bottomley wound up with the characteristic remark that "the shareholders must exercise their own judgment as to the probable effect upon the quotations of the various shares of the group once the Market Trust was prepared to re-enter the market and prevent the shares being played with like cricket balls, as had been the case during the last few months." West Australian Gold Fields have been dull at $1\frac{1}{4}$, while Hampton Plains have been fairly steady at $\frac{11}{16}$, but business has been almost nominal, further advices from the properties being awaited. The reconstruction movement is still in full swing, and I understand that the next Company to undergo this process is the Hannan's Reward.

Indian, Australasian and British Columbian Mines—Progress of the British America Corporation.

The activity in the Indian section has been followed by dulness, and prices are easier, with the exception chiefly of Mysore Gold which are firm at $5\frac{9}{16}$, and of Ooregum Ordinary and Prefs. which have also moved up. The Mysore dividend, at the rate of 4s. 6d. per share, compares with 3s. per share last year, both being interim distributions. The news from the Coromandel mine has been satisfactory, although it has not helped the shares much. In Australian mines, other than West Australian, Broken Hill Proprietary have improved to $2\frac{1}{4}$, and Mount Morgan are firmer; but there has again been a heavy decline in Mount Lyell to $9\frac{5}{16}$ on rumours that an unfavourable report had been made by an expert connected with a leading London firm. Now we are promised a contradiction of the same, and so it goes on. In New Zealand mines business has again been very small. Woodstock and Komata Reefs are lower; but Taitapu have improved. Amongst British Columbian mines there has been a moderate improvement in New Goldfields of British Columbia and in Klondyke and Columbian Goldfields; but other shares in this section have hardly moved. British America Corporation shares have been very actively dealt in up to 19s. It appears that the Le Roi Gold Mining Company has now been registered with a capital of £1,000,000, and that it will acquire the Le Roi mine which was purchased at the price of £600,000 some time ago. But I gather from the objects stated that power is taken to search for gold and other metals in various districts. Another Company registered, apparently in the same interests, is the Alconquin Gold Mining Company, Limited. From a correspondence from Rossland (B.C.), published in the Colonial Goldfields Gazette, I gather that the Le Roi may largely increase the recent output of 200 tons of ore per day. The ore body in the mine is stated to have maintained its dimensions of 7 ft. of solid high-grade ore, with 15 ft. to 17 ft. of second-class ore to a depth of 750 ft. About 60,000 tons of ore are reported to be on the dump. On the Centre Star, located on the same lead as the Le Roi, the continuance of the Le Roi lead has been proved to a depth of 500 ft. The shaft on the Nickel Plate, now down to 200 ft., is reported in good ore, assays of which are stated to have gone as high as $300. The developments also on the Columbia and Kootenay, which is probably on the same lead as the Le Roi and Great Western, are all stated as promising. Altogether, it is evident that very energetic development is being prosecuted on all the properties of the British America Corporation. Mexican mines have been steady, Grand Central at $1\frac{13}{16}$, Consolidated Goldfields of Mexico at $\frac{7}{8}$-1.

More about the Syndicate Touts.

In view of the strong attempts which are being made by a new crop of syndicate touts to ensnare the public, it is necessary, to again remind my readers of the misdeeds of the older series of these touts, who were brought to justice through the interference of the City Solicitor. Of these the man Thomas Tarrant, trading under the name of Frank Tarrant & Co., was one of the most mischievous and daring. Last week a public inquiry was commenced at the London Bankruptcy Court into the formation of the swindling Commemoration Syndicates, in which Tarrant was also the moving spirit; but it appears now that he has found several imitators in his rôle as syndicate tout. I have already commented upon the extraordinary touting circulars which are being issued by George Armstrong & Co., of 106, High Holborn, W.C., and last week I mentioned that a new firm was on the warpath under the name of Wilkinson, Jones, & Co., of 10, Featherstone-buildings, High Holborn, W.C., that neighbourhood apparently being just now the favourite abode of these gentry. My contemporary, the Financial Times, has discovered an extraordinary similarity in the circulars of George Armstrong & Co., and those issued last year by Frank Tarrant & Co., and again the curious family likeness of both to Galbraith, Young & Co.'s. The last-mentioned firm flourished some time in July last year, but has since disappeared. Some of the paragraphs seem to have been transferred bodily from the documents elaborated by Frank Tarrant & Co. into those issued by the other firms mentioned, which certainly shows that there is not much originality in the later effusions. What is still more curious is that Galbraith, Young & Co., in July, 1897, boasted precisely of the same results of six deals which I recently mentioned as having been put forward in a circular dated June, 1898, by George Armstrong & Co. This document gives the profits in six deals as from 300 to 520 per cent., the only difference being that the profit on No. 6 deal is given as 375 per cent. in one case, instead of 450 per cent. in the other. It is quite clear that both George Armstrong & Co. and Wilkinson, Jones, & Co. are treading the same path as that pursued by Frank Tarrant & Co., and it is a thousand pities that their offices are not situated within the City boundaries, in which case the City Solicitor would doubtless have again directed his attention to them. I, however, strongly advise those of my readers who may have suffered any loss through these gentry to at once communicate with me, when I will use my best endeavours to help them to their own again, as I have been able to do in so many instances in the past, or to bring about the punishment of the offenders. Finally, one cannot help asking where are the police, and where is the Public Prosecutor?

For the Decorating and Furnishing in best modern manner, or in any of the traditional styles, of a single room or an entire house, Hampton & Sons, Ltd., prepare, free of charge, suggestive schemes and competitive estimates.—Pall Mall East, S.W.

NEW ENTERPRISES AND ISSUES.

The prospectuses of the following new enterprises and issues have been placed before the public during the week:—

The Hydro-Incandescent Gas Light Company, Limited.—This Company has been formed for the purpose of acquiring the whole of the British, Indian, Australasian, South African, and Canadian patent rights, and all other rights incidental thereto, of the Hydro-Incandescent Gas Light, with the benefits of a licence with the Welsbach Incandescent Gas Light Company, whereby the latter undertakes for a minimum period of five years to manufacture and sell the apparatus, paying to this Company 50 per cent. of the gross profits. The capital is £200,000 in shares of £1 each.

Dominion of Canada, City of Quebec.—Messrs. Coates, Son, & Co. are authorised by the City of Quebec to invite holders of the outstanding Six, Five, and Four and a Half per Cent. Debenture issues to exchange their present holdings either for new Three and a Half per Cent. Consolidated Registered stock of the City of Quebec or for cash upon terms stated in the prospectus, which can be obtained, together with the forms for listing the debentures, from Messrs. Glyn, Mills, Currie, & Co., the Clydesdale Bank, or Messrs. Coates, Son, & Co.

Tyne Improvement Commission.—This is an issue of £500,000 Three and a Half per Cent. Tyne Improvement Redeemable stock at par, issued by the authority of the Tyne Improvement Acts 1850 to 1898. The stock is redeemable at par in July, 1952, or at the option of the Commissioners at any time after July, 1918. Messrs. Barclay & Company, Limited, of 54, Lombard-street, will receive tenders for the above stock at the head office or any of its branches.

United States of Brazil Funding Scheme.—The Government of Brazil having decided to fund for three years from July, 1898, to June, 1901, the interest on the external debt, and also on the Four and a Half Internal Gold Loan of 1879, as well as certain amounts payable annually for railway guarantees, Messrs. Rothschild & Sons are authorised by the Finance Minister to issue an amount not exceeding £10,000,000 nominal capital Five per Cent. Funding Bonds specially secured by the Customs Revenues. The bonds will be redeemable by an accumulative sinking fund which will commence at the end of ten years from June, 1901, but the Government reserves the right to pay off the loan at par at any time.

The Venice Hotels, Limited.—This Company is formed to acquire the Hotel Royal, Danieli, and the Grand Hotel, Venice. It is also intended to take over the Hotel Beau Rivage and the Victoria Hotel, for the purpose of serving as dependencies or annexes to the first-named hotels. It is also proposed to acquire other hotels in Venice, as opportunity offers, and negotiations are now in progress for the acquisition of the Hotel de Rome and Pension Suisse. The capital is £200,000, divided into 28,000 Six per Cent. Preference shares of £5 each, and 60,000 Ordinary shares of £1 each.

The Hotel and Club Investment Company, Limited.—This is an issue of £150,000 Four and a Half per Cent. First Mortgage debentures at par. The debentures are issued in amounts of £50 each and interest will be payable half-yearly. The debentures will be redeemable after December, 1908, at the price of £52 10s. each on six months' notice, at the option of the Company. The debentures will be secured by a specific mortgage to the trustees of the freehold properties and by a floating charge on the furniture, plant, stores, effects, goodwill and all the other assets of the Company. The Ordinary share capital is fixed at £100,000 in £1 shares, none of which is offered, and it is not proposed to offer any, for public subscription.

MY LETTER BOX.

The following are replies to inquiries from various correspondents:—

GOVERNMENT, &C., BONDS.

Colonel.—Chinese bonds cannot be called "safe," but the loan in question is a fair investment of the kind, and, of course, returns a good yield. Eltham.—I see no reason why you should not place the sum of £2,000 in question in India Two and a Half per Cent. stock. S. A. L., Dublin.—Upon inquiry, I find that none of the various Panama bonds, Ottoman bonds, Canal Maritime de Suez bonds, Ville de Paris 1865 bonds, Ville de Paris 1871 bonds, or Exposition Universelle 1889 bonds, the numbers of which you mention, have yet been drawn.

BANKS, TRUSTS, AND FINANCIAL.

Constant Reader, Sheffield, and Excelsior.—I advise you to have nothing whatever to do with this insurance concern. Bap.—With reference to your proposed investment of £6,000, to yield 3½ to 4 per cent., you must really tell me what kind of investment you require—American railroad bonds, Canadian Railway debentures, South American debentures, or Industrial debentures. As you are aware, you cannot obtain anything like this return in connection with English Government securities or in British Corporation stocks and Colonial Government bonds. Miss A. D.—Under the circumstances I strongly advise your sister to be satisfied with the P.O. Annuities, as she ought not to run any risks. Rector.—I cannot see that you can do better with safety, and should advise you to leave the money where it is. E. K. P.—I am doing my utmost to carry on a campaign against the foreign betting and lottery touts, but unless the Postmaster-General assists me, I am afraid I shall be unable to achieve much. P. A. H.—All the German and other lottery circulars should be consigned to the waste-paper basket. Tota.—You cannot be a regular reader of TRUTH, or else you would know that Frank Tarrant & Co. have collapsed long ago, and that the men who carried on the concern are now in gaol. I warned my readers quite sufficiently beforehand against these rascals.

HOME RAILS.

R. I. M.—According to my information the statement is absolutely correct, but you can easily confirm it by writing to the Secretary of the Great Central Railway. F. O.—Yes, North Western stock is a good investment at present price.

AMERICAN AND FOREIGN RAILS.

Medicus, Walsall.—Apply to Messrs. Brown, Shipley, & Co. for information. The Company is about to be reorganised. L. P. C.—1. Grand Trunks have been pushed up a little too fast, and will probably be a choppy market for some time to come, although eventually they will doubtless fully maintain their values. 2. The best Mexican railway stock to buy at present is the Seven per Cent. "A" Debenture stock of the Inter-Oceanic of Mexico at 70, concerning which I am publishing a full statement in my letter. 3. Yes, the reorganisation is coming on, and the present is a good time to buy. Katharine.—If you really bought them at this high price they will have cost you 43¾, and you should certainly hold for a considerable advance, although you cannot expect to get your money back just now. Erie Prefs. should be held for a rise, and there is no reason to sell Northern Pacific Prefs. yet. Hastings.—Grand Trunk Guaranteed have not received a dividend since May, 1894, but it is expected that dividends will be resumed in the course of the present year.

MINING SHARES.

W. C. W.—No option but to hold all these various South African shares for a recovery. Avon.—1. Yes, it is a fair opportunity to average now. 2. No. 3. Yes. S. R.—All the South African mining shares mentioned by you, Nos. 1–3, have practically touched bottom, and I think you might act upon the advice to average. Bey.—No option but to hold the shares Nos. 1–5 for an improvement. They have practically touched bottom. You should average Lady Shenton (4) and Florence (5) now. G. L. H.—1. Yes; I think the present time is a favourable one to buy Kaffirs, and you might buy more of East Rands and Randfontein to average. One of the best South African shares to buy as likely to move up sharply is Rand Mines, Limited. 2. Yes. They are convertible into shares on your giving the necessary notice. The address of the Graskop Company is 16A, Token-house-yard, E.C. Grand.—There seems to be a fair prospect of a further improvement. 2. Not yet. A "Truth" Reader.—A fair venture amongst the Deep Level shares; but I have already given full particulars of the most desirable Deep Levels, amongst which Goldfields Deep ranks first in my opinion. Josephus.—Write to the Secretary, at 15 and 16, George-street, Mansion House, E.C. Universal.—I should not like to take the responsibility of advising you to join the reconstruction of the Universal Corporation of Western Australia. I have never expressed a favourable opinion of this concern, and you must take your own course. The documents are returned. J. F.—I have not a favourable opinion of this Bulawayo concern, and the Westralian mine in question is not at present in a promising position. M. G.—You really must act upon your own responsibility. I have never recommended these West Australian shares, and do not think much of the property. Nemo.—There should be a prospect of this South African Company coming to the front again, but before averaging you had better await a turn in affairs. E. C. V.—You should certainly hold the West Australian mining shares mentioned, as there is every prospect of an improvement. The second mentioned is, of course, about to join the amalgamation of the Standard Exploration Company. J. McI.—1. No particular reason for selling Ivanhoes now. 2. Impossible to tell yet. 3. A dividend is expected, but nothing definite is known about this yet. Mixture.—1. In view of the position of the mine the price of the shares is low, but, apparently, those chiefly interested in the Company are allowing matters to slide. 2. I would not average yet. 3. No; these West Australian shares should be held now for a rise. 4. Ditto; see remarks made by the Chairman at Saturday's meeting of the West Australian Market Trust. 5. East Murchison United at anything like 1 are certainly very cheap, and in view of the dividends already paid they ought to stand much higher. 6. Yes. Hotspur.—1. Probably. 2. Lady Shentons were only temporarily depressed, and are now up again at 2$\frac{5}{16}$. 3. The two Burbank's Companies mentioned are separate undertakings, viz., the Burbank's Birthday Gift and the Burbank's Grand Junction. J. P.—I quite agree with you that the fluctuations in London and Globes have been extraordinary, but the shares seem to be a favourite speculation just now, and the "Bears" have been particularly active. There is every reason to suppose still that the news which will shortly be published will prove favourable. Tipperary.—No; I should not buy these Australian shares yet, and the South African concern mentioned may in time succeed.

MERRYWEATHERS' HIGH-CLASS GARDEN HOSE is the Hose of the day. Write for samples and Lists. "Hoses bought ten years ago still in use."—MERRYWEATHERS, 63, Long-acre, London, W.C.

INDUSTRIAL SHARES.

Circle.—I suppose the reason is because the Prefs. were not well placed. J. H. C.—1. No; I do not advise purchase of Electric Cab shares. 2. No catch. 3. Leave it alone; you can do much better in the shares mentioned in my letter. Pique.—1. Cable property is no longer progressive. 2. One of the best hotel companies. 3. No catch. 4. A fair investment of the kind. 5. No catch. S. R.—Yes, Welsbach Ordinary are a good purchase for an early rise. Beaumont.—Yes, this promises to be a satisfactory amalgamation. W. F., Junior Constitutional Club.—Yes, the shares are of a substantial kind, but the Ordinary are obviously speculative. Walpole.—I do not like the investments Nos. 1, 2, and 4. As to No. 3, it is doing well, but the price is quite high enough. Dovorian.—The Debentures are good value and should be held. Harrogate.—The shares of this local company are not known in this market, and in the absence of definite information I cannot advise you.

MIXED INVESTMENTS.

Anxious, Rugby.—I have repeatedly stated that New Zealand First Mortgage Debentures are a bad investment, and I am afraid it is not much use holding them any longer. 2. There is no fund for depreciation. Usk.—South African Mining shares have pretty well touched bottom, and I should certainly advise you to keep No. 6 and 7. The Industrial stocks, Nos. 1-3, 5, and 8 may also be held, but I am not so sure about No. 4 and 9. W. W., Prescot.—1. The issue of new stock is already discounted in the present price of Great Western, and there is no reason to sell. 2. A fair purchase. 3. Yes. 3a. As regards the Cycle Company mentioned by you, it is quite possible that it is still doing a good business, but it is difficult to ascertain particulars; yet there seems no reason to sell in a fright. 4. Quite so. Lewis.—Amongst the Heavy lines North Western is the best purchase for an investment. The industrial debentures, No. I., are safe enough. II. No particular catch. You can practically get four per cent. in Brighton "A." Why not put the money into them, and into North Western? Tyro.—It is advisable to hold both A and B, and there should even be a chance for C with some patience.

MY CHAPTER ON INDUSTRIAL STOCKS.

Transactions in the Industrial department have not yet attained larger dimensions. Ascot, of course, interfered with this section as with most others; but there is every prospect of renewed animation in view of the cheapness of money and the comparatively small extent of the speculative account. New companies, too, are on the board, and one of the most important coming amalgamations is one in the brewery world, viz., Watney, Coombe, Reid & Co., the capital being fixed at something like nine millions sterling in preferred and deferred stock. A debenture issue is, moreover, being made by the Hotel and Club Investment Company. Apollinaris shares are easier, the Ordinary at 10½, the Directors' report not being considered satisfactory. Welsbach have fluctuated within narrow limits. The Ordinary stock is easier at 110, but for no particular reason, as the position of the Company is most promising. The Preferred have remained at 98, and the Deferred at 17s. 6d. were easier. English Sewing Cottons have given way to 1$\frac{7}{16}$, Coats Ordinary to 60; but Salmon & Gluckstein have again improved to 33s. 9d. Lyons are easier at 3⅞, and Russian Oil have declined to 2⅜, Schibaieff being quoted $\frac{3}{16}$ premium. The statement which I made on June 9 concerning the holding of the Fish Oil and Guano Syndicate, Limited, in the Volenite Company, viz., that the former held 25,000 Volenite shares, which then stood at £4, has brought me the following communication from the secretary of the Fish Oil Syndicate:—

> The attention of my Directors has been called to a paragraph appearing in your issue of the 9th inst. in regard to the number of shares in Volenite, Limited, held by the Fish Oil & Guano Company, Limited, and I am instructed by my directors to inform you that the Fish Oil Company owns 40,000 shares in the Company above referred to. In other words, the Fish Oil Company holds one-half of the total capital of Volenite, Limited, as an investment.

I am glad to make this correction, which will no doubt interest many of my readers. Fish Oils, by the way, are quoted 3⅝, Volenite at 4½. Quite a strong tone has prevailed for Bovril shares, and it looks as if this Company would bear out the favourable opinion which I have of late expressed. The Prefs. have risen to 1$\frac{1}{16}$, the Ordinary to 19s. 6d., the Deferred to 14s. Quite a rush to get out of electric light shares followed upon the passing of the second reading of the Vestries' Electric Lighting Bill, and City of London Ordinary are down to 25, Charing Cross to 12, County of London Ordinary to 12½. Westminsters to 13½. Investors in such shares might with advantage turn their attention to companies like the Welsbach, concerning which there is no fear of competition by vestries or others. The Hydro-Incandescent Gas Light Company, which has been on the tapis for some weeks, has finally been issued. It is not exactly a sub-Company of the Welsbach, but has an arrangement with the same, which at all events appears to be favourable to the Welsbach as the new enterprise has entered into a contract with the older Company, in which it is stipulated that the latter shall manufacture and sell the article paying over to the Hydro Company 50 per cent. of the gross profits. Sir William Robinson is to act as Chairman of the new Company, and Mr. Augspurg (lately connected with the Welsbach) will be the general manager. Schweppes have been steady, the Ordinary at 1⅛, the Deferred at ⅜. Movements in cycle shares have been irregular. At one time an improvement was marked, more particularly in Dunlops and Humbers, but prices have again eased off, and close somewhat below last week's level. Amongst Dunlops, the Ordinary at 15s. show no change, but the Deferred are lower at 8s., and Humbers have also given way, the Preferred to 13s., the Ordinary to 10s. Cycle Components are about unchanged at 1$\frac{7}{32}$, and Singer Ordinary have reacted to 8s. x.d.; Swifts being unaltered at 10s.—Your affectionate Uncle, MOSES.

All Rights Reserved.]

QUEER STORY.

SPOILING THE EGYPTIANS.

IN a certain part of England—I will not say what part—lies a certain well-known town, which I will designate Spaminster. And I may add, perhaps—without giving the town's identity away—that it was once a famous health-resort, to which all and sundry fashionables, whether whole or sick, used to deem it needful to repair (before the opening up of Continental Spas) for the benefit of their systems, in the spring and autumn of every year; and that it still has a pump-room, and waters of great efficacy, but unquestionable loathsomeness, which have been described to me by a famous London doctor as "the best but beastliest stomachic that ever bubbled up out of the bowels of the earth." While I remember that another acquaintance of mine, who has taken these waters often enough to be very intimately acquainted with them, delivered himself thus on the subject:—

"Take," he said, "the shoppiest shop egg that ever sent you shuddering from your breakfast table; keep it in a hot room for a month; then multiply its flavour by ten, and you'll have some idea of Spaminster waters."

Few invalids resort thither nowadays, when you can do your cure not much more expensively, and far more gaily, at Aix or Baden. But it has a large resident population, who have taken up their abode there rather for their wealth than their health—Spaminster being a cheap place to live in, and (as provincial towns go) of uncommon social respectability. There is a noticeable point about this population. It contains much more than its due proportion of the fair sex. Only about every fourth person in Spaminster is masculine. A social function in Spaminster is almost entirely a function of petticoats. Any decent looking bachelor under fifty can become a lion there. I was a lion myself once—in the days of my youth, when I was living at Spaminster. I should have been an even greater lion than I was, only I was to a certain extent eclipsed by our new Vicar.

The Vicar was a young man, not more than a few years older than I was. He was unmarried. He was handsome. He was High Church. Also he was well-connected and well-bred, besides being clever, pleasant, and agreeable. No wonder, then, the ladies ran after him. No wonder they worshipped, almost to a woman, under his auspices and at his church. He preached every Sunday morning to the largest and best assortment of millinery in all Spaminster. Not many uncovered heads, however, sat under him. His pulpit oratory was not of the sort to appeal to the stolid male intelligence. I remember once being dragged to church by my sister to hear him, and remarking to her on coming out, "Well! of all the gush and twaddle and tommy rot!" (which was my truthful opinion of the sermon). It was bravely, but not wisely, spoken. My sister flew at me fiercely.

"Of course," she cried. "You are too worldly, too wise in your own conceit, to be able to appreciate such touching and beautiful simplicity."

And then she proceeded to harangue me all the way home on the exaltation of intellectual pride, which came direct from the Devil, and would infallibly take me back to the same source, unless I exchanged it, without delay, for the spirit of a little child.

I could hardly blame my sister for being so absurd a devotee of the Vicar's. She was only doing what almost every other woman in Spaminster did. And, while their devotion confined itself to immaterial matters, I did not feel called upon to enter any serious protest. But when it came to cadging for money on behalf of the reverend gentleman, I was really obliged to expostulate. One day a young (by courtesy) lady of my acquaintance, a Miss Milliford, called upon me with a collecting card.

"I have come to ask you for a subscription," she said, with her most bewitching smile. "I am sure you will not refuse me."

"It would be hard to refuse you anything," I replied, being a polite man and always ready to say what is expected of me. "But may I venture to inquire for what object you are collecting?"

"Your sister is on our committee. Has she not told you of our scheme?"

"Not that I am aware of."

"Hem!" said my fair dun, "the fact is this. The dear Vicar——"

(I groaned in spirit at that. My constitutional good nature, which is always too much at the mercy of the importunate, had already let me in for contributing to a fund for sending the pastor to the sea for change of air—quite against my better judgment. For why shouldn't vicars pay for their own change of air like other people? And I wondered what was coming now. I was soon enlightened.)

"The dear Vicar," pursued Miss Milliford, "is at present obliged, as you are aware, to live in an extremely incommodious and inadequate vicarage, and——"

"It's small, of course," I interposed; "but I should have thought it contained ample accommodation for a bachelor."

"It is not to be supposed—hem—that he will always remain—hem—a bachelor," replied the lady, fixing her maiden eyes modestly upon the floor; "and, in any case, he ought to have a vicarage suitable to his position—in fact, we—that is to say, the ladies of the congregation—have decided that he shall have a vicarage suitable to his position. And—and——"

"You wish me, then, I presume, to subscribe to such an object. If so, I am very sorry, but I really——"

"Now, don't say No! Don't be such a cruel man as to say No! Here, let me show you the plans. We have been to an architect, and he has drawn us plans for the sweetest vicarage. See!" (as she spread out a roll of tracing paper upon my table) "isn't it quite too charming?"

"H—m! Seems rather elaborate," I said, glancing at the plan. "I don't know much about building. But I should imagine that a house of that style and description would cost a pretty penny to erect."

"Only two thousand five hundred," answered Miss Milliford.

"Only two thousand five hundred!" I ejaculated. "Don't you think that rather a tall order?"

"Dear me, no! Considering the wealth of the congregation and the object in view, we think it extremely moderate. I may add that we have already more than a thousand subscribed towards it, and a lady of the congregation has promised us an admirable site. Now what may I put you down for?"

"Really," I protested. "I'm extremely sorry, but I cannot afford——"

"Come, now; I won't take No! I positively refuse to take No! If you can't afford a big cheque, we shan't turn up our nose at a small one. Some people have already given us as little as ten guineas."

"You call ten guineas a little subscription?"

"Well, taking into account the object, you could not call it a big one, could you?"

"But why should I contribute towards building a house for another man?"

"Really, Mr. Pettiver; what a curious question? Do we not read that 'They which minister to the sacrifice must live by the altar'?"

"We do not read that we are expected to build them superfluous vicarages at a cost of two thousand five hundred pounds."

"Oh, come! I know you are only joking. And you said you couldn't refuse me—didn't you?"

I sighed, and pulled out my cheque-book. I saw I should have to pay ten guineas as the price of peace and quietness. And I did so. I wished she had been a male collector, in order that I might have expressed myself in language adequate to the occasion. As it was, I had to content myself with writing "Damn," in red ink, on the counterfoil, and underlining it twice.

The above is a good sample of the cadging that was indulged in by the ladies of the congregation during the next few months; by the end of which time they had collected the required amount; and then the work of building the new vicarage commenced. It was completed before the year was out; and a fine showy residence it made. They had an opening ceremony and a service, at which the key of the new abode was formally handed over to the Vicar by the chairwoman of the ladies' committee which had promoted the scheme; and the Vicar made a beautiful speech in reply—at least, so said my sister Blanche, who attended the interesting function, and came home perfectly enchanted with all that had happened thereat. Indeed, I had seldom seen her so excited and so radiant. She kissed me quite affectionately twice, and called me "Dear old Charlie!" from which unprecedented circumstance I felt sure that something was up. What this something was I learnt a few weeks later.

"Charlie," said my sister, suddenly, fumbling nervously with her handkerchief and looking out of the window. "Should—should you be surprised to—to hear something?"

"I believe," I replied, "that I have lived long enough in the world not to be surprised at hearing anything. What is it, my dear girl?"

"Well, Charlie, you see—I mean—we—that is—we can't—I mean we aren't likely always to live together like this—are we? That is—one—or—or both of us m-might some day—change our estate—mightn't we?"

"My dear Blanche, what do you mean? I have no intention of changing my estate. Do you think of changing yours?"

"It—it—might happen, Charlie," murmured my sister, in evident confusion.

"So ho, little puss! The wind blows that way, does it? Who is he, Blanche?"

"I—I—perhaps I oughtn't to say anything about it. He—he hasn't actually sp-spoken yet. But we understand one another. In fact, I have—have known from his manner for a long time that—that he means to propose to me?"

"But to whom are you referring, my dear sis?"

"Oh, Charlie, can't you guess?"

AMERICAN SHOES of every description. Large consignment of newest designs and make of Summer goods just to hand. A visit solicited.—AMERICAN SHOE CO., 169, Regent-street, W.

"Not to the Vicar?" I exclaimed.

Blanche's murmured reply was inaudible. But the colour that mounted to her face at my question was a sufficiently plain affirmative."

"But I have just heard," I said, "that the Vicar is engaged to Miss Milliford.

"Miss Milliford? That made-up, simpering, old-young thing? What will people say next?" my sister laughed mockingly.

"Well, the rumour is all over the town," I said. "And I understand that Miss Milliford herself makes no secret of the fact that, when the plans of the new vicarage were submitted to the Vicar, he consulted her, in the most marked manner, as to what she thought of the arrangement of the rooms."

"What a canard! What a ridiculous canard!" scoffed Blanche. "Miss Milliford wants to catch the Vicar, of course. Every one has seen that for ages. And no doubt she has set this story afloat on purpose to try and compromise him—the artful old minx. Little does she guess that he really did consult some one else—in a most marked manner, as you say—about the proposed arrangements at the new vicarage—and——"

"He consulted you?" I queried.

"Yes, Charlie, he did. It was then I—I—first knew that he—well, cared for me. His manner, when he asked me how I liked the arrangements, said as—as—plainly as—as possible, that he—wished me some day to become its mistress."

"If he wished that, so many months ago, it is a wonder he has not said so explicitly before this."

"There—there has been no need for him to speak. We—we understand each, other as I told you, Charlie."

"Hm!" I replied. "I should have thought that in a matter of such importance——"

"There, that will do," my sister interrupted. "You have—have—never loved and been—loved, Charlie. You are incapable of comprehending the—subtle power of communication which——"

"Rather too subtle for me," I ejaculated, grimly. "I hope the Vicar is not playing fast and loose with you, Blanche. These High Church parsons are as slippery as the Old Man!"

"How dare you say that of him?" Blanche flashed out, furiously. "It's all because you hate him and are jealous of him—yes, jealous! And I won't listen to another word!"

Thereupon, with an imperious toss of her head and a fine colour flaming in her cheeks, my sister sailed majestically from the room.

The same afternoon I happened to go up to the club. Half-a-dozen members were gossiping in the smoke room. I joined myself to them as a seventh, and we had a real good tittle-tattle. It was not long before some one turned the conversation upon the Vicar.

"Heard about Jerry?" he said (I don't think I have remarked that the Vicar's christian name was Jerome; and we generally alluded to him at the Club by this abbreviation).

"What about him?"

"He's going to be matrimonified."

"Psha!" said some one else. "I have heard the rumour so often, and in relation to so many damsels, that I've ceased to pay much attention to it."

"Ah, my dear fellow, but I have this on unquestionable authority. The lady herself has confided the fact to my wife."

"What lady?"

"That charming but uncertain-aged and, I venture to think, uncertain-tempered widow, relict of the late Chasemate."

"What? The chairwoman of that confounded Vicarage building scheme?"

"Of course. It appears that when the plans were first submitted to the Reverend Jerry, he consulted the widow, in a very pointed manner, as to her approval of the arrangements. And ever since then, though he has not actually proposed point blank, he has——"

"What's that you're saying?" struck in a retired General, throwing down the paper he had been perusing and strolling up to our group, "were you discussing the Vicar's engagement to Miss Berryman?"

"Miss Berryman! No! To the widow Chasemate."

"The widow Chasemate! Pish! That's quite an exploded myth. The fact is, Miss Berryman herself has made a confidante of my daughter. And she told her only this morning that when the plans of the new vicarage were submitted to his reverence, he consulted her, in the most unmistakable manner, as to her approval of the proposed arrangements. And though he hasn't yet asked her to marry him in so many words, yet his demeanour has made his intentions so abundantly obvious that——"

"I say, you fellows!" exclaimed a new comer, bursting into the room at that minute, with an excited expression on his face, "Have you heard the latest? Jerry's been cotched!"

"Younger daughter of James II.—funeral obsequies!" murmured the wag of the party.

"You've heard it then?" said the other, evidently disappointed. "How devilish quick these things do get about! Miss Pringle had never breathed the secret to a soul until she told my mother, only last night."

"Miss Pringle!" we all exclaimed.

"Yes, Miss Pringle. Didn't you know it was Miss Pringle?" he cried, perking up again to find that he was a purveyor of news, after all. "She told my mother that when the plans of the new vicarage were submitted to Jerry, he consulted her so very pointedly about the arrangements that——"

"He hasn't actually proposed yet, has he?" I interrupted him.

"Now, how the devil did you know that? He has not, it is true, made Miss P. an offer in so many words. But he has shown his intentions so very plainly by his manner——"

The shout of our united laughter drowned the rest of his sentence.

"It's my belief," pronounced the General, when silence was restored, "that every member of the Building Committee is confident that Jerry means to make her the mistress of his new Vicarage!"

"And it's my belief," added I, "that he doesn't mean to confer that proud position on any one of 'em."

I was right. He didn't. But that wasn't the worst of his conduct. About a year later, when preferment to a better living caused his retirement from Spaminster, he dealt the cruellest and meanest blow to his lady admirers who had done so much for him. By a silly bungle (such as might have been expected from a parcel of foolish women, who would go their own way and do their own business for themselves), they had made over the fine, new house to the Vicar personally, not in his official capacity; and thus—there was no doubt on this score—it had legally become his own property. Of this he was cad enough to take advantage. He stuck to that house. Protests, reproaches, public obloquy could not move him. And he put the finishing touch to his scandalous behaviour, soon afterwards, when he married an outsider, sold the house, and settled the proceeds upon her. Even to this day, there are women in Spaminster who cannot hear the subject referred to without hot tears of indignation.

Of course, the Reverend Jerry had his own version of the affair. He asserted that the Spaminster ladies did mean to give him the house for his own, and that their extraordinary change of attitude, after making him the present, was simply the old story of spretæ injuria formæ over again. And as for his having affected tenderness for any of these damsels, the statement was grossly and ridiculously untrue. Credat Judæus, non ego! I myself have no doubt that he did artfully stimulate each lady member of the Building Committee to collect big subscriptions for the vicarage scheme by encouraging her to believe that he would make her its mistress; and while I would not go so far as to say that he had meant all along to have the house conveyed to him personally (for such a result he could scarcely have controlled), I do assert that he knew he had to deal with a parcel of infatuated women, and that he kept his eyes wide open to take any advantage of them that their folly might offer.

Gillow & Company.—The largest Stock of Furniture, of exclusively the best quality, although widely varying in cost. Designs and estimates free of cost.—406, Oxford-street, London. W.

This is a hard thing to say of a parson. But I am backed up in my opinion by one who is a distinguished wearer of the cloth himself—no less a person, indeed, than an Archbishop.

'Twas he who, at a Convocation lunch, made Jerry squirm with the retort, which has since become historic, and has earned for his Grace the undying gratitude of the ladies of Spaminster.

Jerry, happening to sit opposite the Archbishop, had been foolish enough to start abusing his former congregation at Spaminster with all the venom of one who had done them a great wrong. In the course of his remarks, he likened his departure from that place to the escape of the Israelites from Egypt.

This gave the Archbishop his opportunity.

"An apt comparison," said his Grace, with a bland smile. "For truly, like Israel of old, you—spoiled the Egyptians."

ART NOTES.

It happens that a portion of the Continental Gallery is occupied just now by a collection of pictures by M. Eugène Carrière, a French artist as unconventional and full of modernity in his way as his much talked about compatriot, M. Rodin, the sculptor. This has resulted in much bewilderment to many of the visitors to the exhibition of Mr. Gould's, of which I wrote last week. Entering the gallery whither they had gone to see "F.C.G.'s" good-humoured and laughable caricatures, they had found themselves surrounded by what at first appeared to be pictorial representations of grey mist and a fog of a rather lighter tint than we are accustomed to note in London. Could these hazy mysteries be the political skits they had come to inspect? Fortunately a reference to their catalogues served to dispel their bewilderment. Mr. Gould's drawings were at the further end of the gallery, whilst the enigmatic canvases they had come upon as they entered were the works of the M. Carrière already mentioned. Those who had time enough to linger amongst the hazy emanations of M. Carrière's genius found that in due course they began to take vague form and shape. To those who had leisure to calmly and patiently sit down in front of them and wait, uncanny eyes gradually became visible, staring out of colourless, corpse-like faces, and what had appeared to be impressionistic studies of mist resolved themselves into wraith-like portraits, suggesting spirit photographs rather than the presentment of sitters with material flesh and blood.

It will be gathered from what I have said that the style in which M. Carrière paints is eccentric and decadent enough to move his admirers to an almost incoherent superlative of eulogy. The average individual with sufficient mental balance and common-sense to refuse to bow the knee to this newest artistic Baal is, as usual, denounced as the blindest and densest of Philistines. He is upbraided for failing to see that M. Carrière is a transcendent genius. He is derided for not appreciating a painter who "draws like a sculptor"; though why a painter who draws like a sculptor is better than a sculptor who sculpts like a painter, or a novelist who writes like an architect, or a musician who composes like a civil engineer, I, for one, utterly fail to see. He is reproached for daring to think that it matters one jot in what form an artist seeks to convey to us the thought that it is in his mind to express. In short, he is exposed to the most violent verbal vituperation, for which, however, he is fortunately not a penny the worse; and he has the satisfaction, morever, of knowing that the canons of art in which he believes will remain in force long after the heresies of Mr. Carrière and his disciples are forgotten.

For my own part, I by no means deny that M. Carrière has talent of a certain order. But I do maintain that he wilfully does his utmost to obscure what is best in his method by his straining after sensational originality of technique. Thus skill which, properly directed, might command unqualified admiration, degenerates into an aggressive mannerism which is positively irritating. It is little to the purpose for his apologists to assure us that he models his portraits out of the fog of his background just as a sculptor creates his forms out of a shapeless block of marble or a lump of clay. In that case it seems to me that without doubt M. Carrière has mistaken his carrière, and that he should be working with a hammer and chisel rather than with a paint-brush. That he cannot be accepted as a wholly satisfactory painter may be seen by comparing his two portraits of E. de Goncourt at the Continental Gallery. The first of them was painted by him when this well-known French writer was alive and well, the last after he was dead, and yet, in both cases, the flesh is treated in the same manner. One of his sitters has put it on record that "he seemed to pump out my very life as he fixed me with his penetrating glance." Coleridge's "Ancient Mariner" was able to do a great deal with his "glittering" eye, as the Wedding-Guest found to his sorrow, but clearly M. Carrière is able to go one better than that loquacious old salt. I doubt if a portrait-painter with a glance of such exceptional dynamic power would ever be the rage in fashionable London Society. Smart ladies, especially those with a past, would hardly care to have their lives pumped out when they have their portraits painted. It would be unfair not to admit that M. Carrière paints hands with wonderful skill. He is said to have a passion for drawing them, and it will be noticed that in most of his portraits he insists on the expression of the hand as much as on that of the face of his subject. He prides himself, however, chiefly on being a painter of the mind, and it is not surprising, perhaps, that in striving to be too metaphysical an artist he sometimes makes himself unintelligibly misty.

MUSIC.

THE BOGUS "REGISTERED" TEACHER SQUELCHED.

I AM happy to say that the bogus "Registered Teacher R.A.M. and R.C.M." is no more. Three weeks ago I directed attention to the unscrupulous manner in which certain impostors in the provinces were misusing the word "Registered" in connection with the examinations of the Associated Board of the Royal Academy and Royal College of Music. Their little span has now run, and last Tuesday by a resolution of the Board they were abolished. I heartily wish every other Board of honest men were as straightforward and as speedy.

The facts, it may be recollected, briefly, were these. The Associated Board was formed by the leaders of the Royal Academy and Royal College of Music, with the Prince of Wales at their head, for the purpose of offering schools and others a proper examination in music, in place of the "diplomas" sold by the mushroom and "Limited Liability" enterprises. Examinations are held in the Metropolis and at various provincial centres; but it frequently happens that it is inconvenient for school pupils to go long distances to the county town, and accordingly, in such instances, the Associated Board have been in the habit of sending down special examiners. The cost necessarily is thereby increased, for sometimes long distances have to be traversed and railway and other expenses have to be incurred to examine, perhaps, only four or five pupils. One example will suffice. An eminent musician (Sir George Martin, if I recollect rightly) was sent from Exeter to Oakhampton by train, and thence fifteen miles to a school and back by road. He examined one 15s. candidate and a singing-class, and the fees received were £1 16s. The travelling expenses were more, and as the examiner could not return till the afternoon, the transaction was a dead loss. Accordingly, where special examiners are sent to examine fewer than twelve candidates from schools or private pupils in the country, it has hitherto been the custom to demand a "registration" fee of a guinea a year.

The best intentioned of schemes are liable to misuse at the hands of unscrupulous people. The word "Registered" was at once seized upon as a very convenient advertisement by certain teachers and others in the provinces, who had passed no examination by the Associated Board, or by any one else, and who very possibly were charlatans and humbugs. Primarily, as I pointed out on June 2, the mistake arose in the use of the word "Registered." The guinea subscription clearly did not confer any diploma upon the registered school or teacher, but unprincipled persons found in this very innocent system an excuse for placing after their names "Registered R.A.M. and R.C.M." I believed, and plainly expressed my belief, that, as soon as the scandal was brought to the notice of the Associated Board, it would be stopped. I am happy to say this has been done. Men like Sir Arthur Sullivan, Sir Alexander Mackenzie, Sir Charles Parry, Sir George Grove, Professor Dewar, Mr. Charles Morley, and the rest of the Board, would be the last in the world to tolerate such an abuse of a system, honestly conceived, but put by scamps to wrong uses. It is, indeed, only fair it should be known that the question had been brought before the Associated Board by its energetic hon. secretary, Mr. Samuel Aitken, a week or two before my article appeared. Nothing practical, however, was then done, and it is more than possible that the attention drawn to the matter in TRUTH may have expedited matters. At any rate, at the meeting of the Board on Tuesday last week the resolution was passed that "registration" should be absolutely abolished, and also that the registration fee should no longer be imposed. As, of course, the expenses must be covered, a slight extra charge will be made for each pupil examined at small schools, an increase which will hardly be felt, but which will enable the Associated Board to do away with a practice which had become a source of scandal. Accordingly, any person who, on the faith that he once belonged to an affiliated school, now advertises himself as "Registered Teacher R.A.M. and R.C.M." may be known as a fraud, and can be treated accordingly.

I may here point out that the local representatives of the Associated Board all work without fee. It is, also, I think, the only institution of its sort where teachers who send up pupils do not share in the swag. I am credibly informed that Trinity College, London, allows its members 6s. out of each guinea, and the Incorporated Society of Musicians and the London College of Music 20 per cent. of the fees paid by the unfortunate pupils. To this system, the objections to which are obvious, I may again refer on a future occasion.

Although the point only incidentally arose in the course of the discussion concerning the alleged "Registered" teachers, it is perhaps only fair to say that the Associated Board does not make the large profits it is popularly supposed to do. The authorities, as is usually the case where honorable men are concerned, offered me every facility to investigate matters for myself. As a matter of fact, down to two or three years ago, when Mr. Aitken became honorary secretary, the accounts did not fairly show the annual profits, as certain expenses for printing, and so forth, did not appear amongst the figures, and were, indeed, merely carried over from year to year. Recently, however, Mr. Aitken has adopted a far more satisfactory method, and the expenses of each year are balanced against the profits. Accordingly, last year the net profit was only about £500 each, and as during the first three years, from 1889 to 1891, there were no profits at all, the total, as I understand, for nine years for each institution was £3,650, or an average of a little over £400 a year for each. Prior, however, to 1889 the Royal Academy of Music had local examinations of its own, and these for the three years 1886 to 1888 averaged a profit of £1,100 a year. Consequently the Royal Academy actually loses part of its income by these Associated Board examinations. As to the Royal College, it had no local examinations at all before the Associated Board was formed. Also, as I am informed, the "registration," now abolished, mounted from £190 in 1891 to £883 during the present year, so that this loss of income must be covered by increased fees. Among other reforms and improvements instituted by Mr. Aitken since he first joined the Board are that details of the marks gained are now furnished to each candidate free (instead of at a half-a-crown fee), at a cost of nearly £250 a year, while the Board has instituted a general school examination and a singing-class examination; the local examination fees for harmony and counterpoint have been reduced from two to one guinea, and an elementary examination at a fee of half-a-guinea has been instituted. Colonial examinations have also been organised at a loss of £700; two free exhibitions at the Royal Academy or Royal College were last year given to certain candidates who showed special aptitude for music, and this year these exhibitions have been increased to six; while, finally, and, to my mind, best of all, the objectionable word "Registered" has definitely been abolished. Mr. Aitken, I may add, is a gentleman of means and of undoubted business capacity, and being an enthusiast in such matters, he generously devotes a large amount of time and labour gratuitously to the cause of musical education. I had, a few weeks ago, to criticise one of Mr. Aitken's letters to a provincial newspaper, and with the opinions I then expressed I still thoroughly agree. It was, I think, not a wise letter, but as the object I aimed at has been gained, there is no need to say anything more about it. It is, however, only just to acknowledge the extreme value of the work Mr. Aitken has done for the Associated Board, and not the least valuable of his successes has, I am sure, been the abolition of the bogus "registered" teacher.

As I anticipated, the Carl Rosa Company, at their meeting last Wednesday, resolved to go into voluntary liquidation. An unwise notice has since been issued that contracts have been entered into for the autumn tour. I am quite certain that any one who does buy the goodwill will not require many of these contracts, and will, indeed, prefer to cut himself loose at once from the present system of management, thanks to which something like £10,000 has been lost since January last year. That there is a chance of the business being transferred to a more successful direction will of course be welcome news to everybody.

I mentioned some time ago that a subscription was to be organised for Mr. Sims Reeves, and, under the auspices of four dukes and numerous knights and persons of lower degree, it has now been floated. These well-intentioned gentlemen propose to purchase the aged tenor an annuity, which, as Mr. Reeves will on September 26th next be eighty years of age, ought not to cost much. It would, however, be interesting to know whether the class which he threw up at the Guildhall School of Music, on the ground that it did not pay him, is still open to him. He then had special fees, so that his class was small, but he would, if he wanted work, doubtless readily get the 15s. an hour which the senior professors receive. Some provision, also, will, I suppose, be expected for his young wife, whom he married three years ago, and by whom the veteran tenor has two infant children.

There will be a change of management at the opera next year. The Syndicate, after a couple of successful seasons, will go out, and Mr. George Faber, the wealthy heir of Mr. Montague, and ground lessee of the theatre will take the whole of the risks and profits upon his own shoulders. Mr. Maurice Grau will still be general manager, but there will be an important change of policy and our leading opera house will thenceforward not be exclusively given up to the works of Richard Wagner. During the recent "dashed tomfoolery" of opera in the dark, there has been much grumbling, while at any rate at "Das Rheingold" and "Die Walküre" last week, many of the boxes have remained empty pretty well all the evening. The ladies clearly did not care to sport jewels and costly frocks in a tomb-like house where they could not see or be seen. People do not pay large subscriptions for a darkened theatre and a dismal entertainment "without cuts," and the present régime, profitable as it may be from a commercial point of view, is almost as tiresome as the policy of old, which relied mainly upon the trivialities of Bellini and Donizetti.

If you want to entirely Furnish your House or select any article of Furniture or Carpet, &c., send for HEWETSONS' Illustrated Priced Catalogue.—HEWETSONS, Tottenham Court-road, London.

Next year, accordingly, Italian opera is not to be wholly neglected, and I should not be surprised to hear Tamagno, and perhaps even Masini, in some of the old and modern works of the genuine Italian repertory. Wagner will not be entirely dispensed with, but will take its turn with the rest of the repertory. At present Covent Garden is given up almost exclusively to the Germans and the Frenchmen.

M. Jean de Reszke will not be a member of the opera company next season. This, of course, is a pity, but the great Polish tenor is bitten by the Wagner fever, or, perhaps, as Count Tolstoi would say, he has been hypnotised by "mole" opera played in the dark. If the war allows, he will sing Wagner roles in the United States with Mr. Maurice Grau in the winter, returning to Europe at the end of April. May and a portion of June he will devote to the final studies of the part of Parsifal, the rehearsals for which will start at the end of June. M. Jean will play Parsifal and perhaps Siegfried, at Bayreuth in the late summer. M. Edouard de Reszke will be a member of the Covent Garden troupe, as the baritone's views, unlike those of his elder brother, do not extend to the complete elimination of all operas save Wagner.

The difficulty with M. Jean and the "cuts" was rectified by the capitulation of the eminent tenor. M. Jean, in point of fact, relearnt Siegfried without cuts, and the Elect are, I hope, duly satisfied. By a curious freak, however, last Thursday Mr. Schultz-Curtius and Herr Mottl gave a "Parsifal" selection at Queen's Hall with numerous cuts, "in deference," they officially stated, "to a desire emanating from Bayreuth." So what is sauce for the operatic goose is not sauce for the concert gander. Last week, also, Mme. Wagner heard M. Jean in the shortened version of "Tristan," and expressed her high approval of it. M. Jean de Reszke was to play Siegfried in its entirety on Tuesday, too late for notice this week, and on Friday he will sing for the first time in "Götterdämmerung." M. Edouard, who either is not so rapid a study or not so great an enthusiast, preferred to take things more leisurely, and accordingly the Wanderer on Tuesday was assigned to Herr Van Rooy.

Mme. Wagner has been strongly in evidence during the week. She has attended a Mottl and a Richter concert, besides three of the performances of the "Ring" at the opera. The daughter of Liszt is, however, by no means a one-sided woman, and she takes great interest in concert work and even in pictorial art. She has, I understand, been the round of some of our galleries, and I believe she will also attend the banquet to be given to-night (Wednesday) by the Wagner party to Herr Mottl. Whether she is able to stop for "Götterdämmerung" on Friday is not yet certain, but after that, at any rate, she will return to Bayreuth.

Mme. Calvé has at last added Gounod's Marguerite to her repertory, and on Wednesday of this week she proposes also to sing for the first time Ophelia in Thomas's "Hamlet." Every part she undertakes is made more or less interesting by many an original touch, although no character in the ordinary repertory suits her so well as her own peculiar line of parts, such as Santuzza, Carmen, and the Navarraise. Nevertheless, her Marguerite was full of interest, as the reading was entirely new. From a vocal point of view, perhaps, it left something to be desired, for Mme. Calvé dragged the tempi and indulged in the rubato to such an extent as to recall Mme. Melba's famous saying, that "The orchestra follows the conductor, and the conductor follows us." But her pretty by-play when she first sees the jewels, and the girlishness of her acting in the love business in the garden scene, were in striking contrast to the dramatic reading of the scene in the church (where the ridiculous prie-dieu was dispensed with), the deep tragedy of the death of Valentine, and the prison scene.

Mme. Melba comes next Tuesday. The Australian prima donna, at any rate, has discarded Wagner. A couple of years ago she had one shot at Brünnhilde in America, but the music, of course, did not suit her, and she has now cast in her lot with the melodious school. Accordingly, on Tuesday she will sing our old friend the consumptive heroine in "La Traviata;" on July 7, the even more welcome part of Rosina in the merry "Barber," and on July 15 the thoroughly sympathetic rôle of Juliette, of which she is now perhaps the best interpretress. Whether M. Jean de Reszke will sing Romeo this season is not yet certain. It is, however, very significant that for the Royal performance before the Queen at Windsor Castle, M. Jean, the typical lover of the operatic stage, has, by the Queen's special wish, selected Romeo, instead of the more heroic Wagnerian characters.

The scheme for building a Wagner theatre on Richmond Hill seems to have been dropped, and the newest suggestion is that a special theatre shall be designed for the Wagner party in the grounds of the Crystal Palace. In England, of course, we should not permit a wooden erection for public performances, at any rate, anywhere outside the Imperial Institute. The Crystal Palace Wagner theatre would have to be of a more substantial character, and the estimate of £25,000 for its erection and furnishing is grotesquely inadequate. It would probably cost thrice that amount, and how it is to be made to pay after the present passing fever is at an end remains to be considered. The theatre, "far from the madding crowd," would, of course, be useless except for Wagner performances, unless, indeed, it was afterwards converted into a stable for the Wagner menagerie.

The concerts of the week have been more important than usual. The final Richter and Mottl concerts have been given, both with strong programmes. Mottl offered a splendid performance of the C minor symphony, and the prelude to the second act of Mr. D'Albert's opera "Gernot," dull music enough, was also performed. Richter interpolated in his programme "Les Preludes" by Liszt, out of compliment to Liszt's daughter, Frau Cosima Wagner, who was present. The chief item of Richter's programme was, however, Beethoven's Choral Symphony and the Prelude and closing scene from "Tristan." There have also been some capital chamber concerts. On Friday, for example, for a charity, Lady Randolph Churchill, John Oliver Hobbes (Mrs. Craigie), and Miss Janotha played Bach's triple concerto in the presence of a brilliant audience, which included the Princess of Wales. Miss Janotha is, of course, well known as a distinguished pianist, and although her two associates were amateurs, yet both Lady Randolph Churchill and Mrs. Cragie have already proved their capacity as executants. The Countess Valda Gleichen, Mme. Ella Russell, and M. Wolff took part as vocalists. At Mr. Bispham's concert on Thursday, some of Mr. Kipling's poems, set to music by American composers, were sung, and the two recently-discovered songs by Beethoven were given for the first time. The "Hedge Rose" was less interesting than the "Erl King," of which Beethoven himself left a sketch for the accompaniment. M. de Pachmann, still one of the greatest Chopin players of his time, gave a Chopin recital on Saturday; and on Monday at St. George's Hall there was a Beethoven concert followed by a performance of an Anglo-German drama, entitled "Adelaïde," a curious mixture of anachronisms, for the period is 1815, whereas "Adelaïde" was produced some twenty years earlier, and Beethoven is supposed in the play to be composing one of Clärchen's songs which had been produced five years before. Mr. Bispham had nothing to sing; but in the part of Beethoven he again proved himself a capital actor.

The luxury of a bath is incomplete without the addition of SCRUBB'S CLOUDY FLUID AMMONIA, which refreshes and invigorates. Sold everywhere, but avoid injurious imitations.

CHINA AND GLASS. — Messrs. GOODE, Artists and Designers, solicit an inspection of their collection in their recently-extended South Audley-street premises, now by far the largest and most important in Europe. Messrs. Goode guarantee the excellence of all their productions, and invite a comparison of their prices with those of any co-operative stores.

GIRLS' GOSSIP.

DEAREST AMY,—What a wonderful Ascot we have had! On Tuesday every one was in furs and velvets, and on Wednesday Redferns were the order of the day. Then the temperature gradually went up, so that on Friday, the last day of the meeting, the heat was almost torrid. We reserved ourselves for the finest day, as it turned out. Never again will I visit Ascot on Cup day, as we did in previous years. The crowd and heat are generally most trying. On the Friday there is usually the best racing, and the company is what the daily papers call "select," meaning scanty. It could be hardly described as exactly scanty last Friday; but the Royal Enclosure was not inconveniently full, there was no rush for the trains, and at luncheon time no one had to wait. These things go far to make a day pleasant, do they not?

It was curious to notice how very lucky yellow was on the course. Almost, if not quite, every horse that won was ridden by a jockey in a yellow jacket. Some of the races were extremely pretty, the field keeping well together, and the riders' orange, yellow, and vermilion jackets shining in the sun. Ascot is a wonderful sight, even on an off day. It is pretty to see the ladies stream down the paddock between the races, their sunshades looking like sea anemones, as a poetically-minded young man put it. As to the dresses, I never saw anything like it in previous seasons. The lightness of the lace, embroideried net, and silk muslins sewn with Chantilly, were the predominant characteristics. Though all this would have been reserved for evening dress until a season or two ago, the toilettes looked well suited to the weather of Friday, for the heat of the sun was intense, though tempered by a cool breeze.

We went by Slough, the Clubland brakes meeting the trains there, and taking passengers through the Windsor Home Park and Eton and Windsor, a delightful drive of an hour or so. It is much the pleasantest way of getting to Ascot, and we should not think of trying the other route again.

Of all the gowns we saw, I think the very prettiest was a beige muslin, all softly falling and trimmed with rows of creamy lace. It was worn with a toque trimmed with shaded pink and damask roses. The greater number of the dresses were black and white, chiefly carried out in lace and muslin. Black lace over white muslin, either in rows going straight round or slanting upwards, or in bands from the waist downwards, ending under a flounce also of lace, was certainly the favourite, but the two negative colours appeared also in a silk. Pure white silk was trimmed with narrow bands of black lace insertion, all of which met at the waist, radiating outwards as they descended. A lady who lunched at the table next to ours in the Clubland tent wore white satin with a demi-train, a little black lace introduced at the waist having the effect of making the wearer look slim. We afterwards saw this gown in the Royal Enclosure. A rather funny thing happened, though probably the sufferer did not view the incident from the funny side. A beautifully dressed girl was walking along, when her silk underskirt suddenly came down, all pink silk and flounces. In her horror at this catastrophe she sat down, probably thinking it would be wise to accompany her petticoat in its descent. But as gentlemen flew from every side to pick her up, she saw the error of this course of conduct, and swiftly rising to her feet and "scrabbling," as Charlie described it, her skirts together, she made a dart for shelter in the ladies' tent. We were very sorry for her, but could not help being amused at her face of utter dismay.

By the way, Mr. Chauncey N. Depew was lunching at Clubland. I was so glad of the opportunity of seeing him. He has such a nice face, just the sort one would expect him to have. It is so horrid to be disappointed in a man whose books or speeches one admires. Is it not?

Do you know, dear, I am quite tired of the shaped skirt. It was so well represented at Ascot that it became simply a livery. I refer to the apron sort of trimming, defined by bands of trimming, or frills, or flounces. I prophesy its speedy demise, for it has been completely overdone. There were lovely cream-coloured muslin gowns, with embroidered designs carried high up the skirts in meandering lines, and all deliciously soft. In one or two instances I suspected a crinolette, so ample was the outward sweep of the skirt from the waist at the back. All the dresses were long enough to trail on the ground for some inches. We saw the Princess of Wales at Paddington station on Thursday, our hansom being stopped by the police to allow the Royal carriage to set her down. As she sauntered, in her usual quiet way, from the carriage to the platform, we had an opportunity of seeing her dress and of noticing that it had a train. It was palest mauve glacé silk, striped with narrow lines of black, and trimmed with cream-coloured lace. Her toque was yellowish straw, trimmed with mauve flowers and a few plumes. We could not see how the bodice of her gown was done, for she wore a sweet little cape, all frills, alternately beige and cream colour. The Prince wore a black frock-coat, and looked very genial and jolly.

So you see, dear, the demi-train is an established fact. I am sorry, for it is an uncleanly fashion. It is all very well for princesses, who have red carpet laid down for them when they have to walk a few steps from their carriage; but as their gowns are copied by meaner folk, who have to walk about their daily business, it is regrettable.

The Princess of Wales would be the very last to don a long gown for a walk! Her tailor-mades are most workmanlike and are cut with an eye to the practical. Neither she nor her daughters would ever be likely to transgress the canons of dress so far as to wear long skirts in the street. It is the human butterflies who do that sort of thing, and it is weary business to think of the thousands of little folk who will foolishly copy them and have their gowns, to be worn in every kind of weather, cut long enough to trail on the doubtful pavements.

Next to black and white, the favourite dress at Ascot was all white or cream colour. Most of these were very pleasing, but there were exceptions. One especially was made with a very tight yoke of lace or embroidery round the hips, caught up in apron fashion from the front. All below this arrangement was frills, far too many. Overcrowding any trimming completely destroys its effect, and most of this season's dresses suffer from this fault. It was refreshing to see the masterly simplicity of some of those at Ascot, the silk muslin falling in perfect folds from waist to feet, unfretted by any futility of mistaken trimming. We compared them, with much relief of feeling, with others on which miles of frilling and ruching were lavished. We heard that one gown had eighty yards of ruching on it. I call that simply wicked! Think of the hours of drudgery for some poor girl involved in preparing such a quantity of niggling little trimming.

I have completely failed to give you any idea of the dress at Ascot. It is beyond my power. Looking across from Clubland coach, the paddock and Enclosure were radiant in soft colour, the tints being so faint and pale, as a rule, that a very bright pink or blue or rather vivid green quite jarred upon the eye. There were one or two successful yellow gowns. Georgina Lady Dudley looked about twenty-five in a soft yellow, relieved and subdued with black. I fancy Lady Granby was in yellow, and a very tall, handsome girl wore muslin of that colour. The muslin dresses had evidently one or two muslin underskirts under them, so softly did they hang, quite differently from the satin slips gleaming through to which we were accustomed a year ago.

There were hardly any picture hats, though many of the Leghorns were fairly large. Some of these might have walked out of an old Sir Joshua portrait. One in particular, quite flat in crown and trimmed with cottage garden flowers, was very sweet. Every possible shape seemed to be represented, from the bonnet proper to the round brim crowded with flowers and ruching. One of the latter had so bright a pink in the blossoms that they completely extinguished the fair colouring of its wearer. Toques were the general wear, rather wide above the brow and almost all made of satin straw or crinoline or drawn tulle or chiffon. Cherries appeared on many of them, and strawberries on one or two. Periwinkle colour is dying out, and soon will be no more. We noticed a great deal of grey, but not so much as there has been of late. One or two gowns in dove colour were pretty.

FRANCES MOORE has now on view the latest Models from Paris in Hats, Bonnets, &c. Special and exclusive designs in Toques.—8, Maddox-street, Regent-street, W.

SPORTS.—By having recourse to a scientific Corsetière a graceful and becoming figure is the result, for the proportions are harmoniously delineated. Mesdames SYKES, JOSEPHINE, & Co., The Celebrated Anatomical Corsetières, 280, Regent-st., Oxford-circus, London.

The Press Bazaar is going to be a great affair. About seven-and-twenty of the London papers are to be represented at it, and the London Hospital, in whose interests it has been undertaken, will certainly largely benefit by it. The Princess of Wales is to open it at 2.30 on the afternoon of June 28 at the Hôtel Cecil, accompanied by the Duchess of York. An exhibition of objects in connection with press work is to be on view in the Oak-room. Many great ladies are giving their services. The Duchess of Bedford is to assist at the Artist stall, where lace, pottery, and pictures are to be the articles vended. The Duchesses of Abercorn and Sutherland will assist at the Gentlewoman stall in the sale of Irish and Scotch industries, and a number of artists' wives will sell pictures, original drawings, sketches, and etchings at the sign of the Graphic. Original drawings are also to be the staple commodity at the Lady's Pictorial stall, where the Duchess of Somerset, the Countess of Dudley, and Lady Warwick will help in the gentle cause of charity. Lady Rothschild and a great gatheringof Jewish ladieswill sell in the name of the Jewish Chronicle. Chiffons, fichus, and French hats are the attractive wares to be disposed of at the sign of the Lady, by the Duchesses of Leeds and Portland, Lady Annesley and Lady Westmorland, and Countess Cadogan. Lady Newnes has secured the co-operation of the Duchess of Newcastle, the Marchioness of Zetland, Lady Jersey, and Lady Iddesleigh in disposing of fancy leather goods and Persian kittens on behalf of the Ladies' Field, the Strand, and Country Life. The Duchesses of Roxburghe and Westminster, with the Marchioness of Lansdowne and Lady Granby will sell flowers for the Morning Post. Autograph-books and tooled bindings are to be the wares sold for the Daily Mail and Evening News by the Misses Harmsworth, Lady Bective, and Miss Marion Terry. Mrs. Arthur A'Beckett and the Lady Mayoress are to sell, very appropriately, Service knicknacks and Wellingtonian relics for the Naval and Military Magazine. Original drawings, by Punch artists, will be sold under the auspices of that paper by the wives and daughters of gentlemen connected with the staff. Princess Edward of Saxe-Weimar and the Duchess of Rutland, with many other ladies of high rank, will serve at the Queen stall, where old silver and glass are to be among the tempting wares. Gloves and ties are to be the attractions at the Stage stall, in addition to Miss Ellen Terry, Miss Nellie Farren and all the best-known actresses in London. They are to be vendeuses. TRUTH stall is to be devoted to cigarettes and cases for holding them. Mrs. Dunlop Best will be among the ladies assisting. Original sketches by "Spy" are to engage the attention of the Duchess of Marlborough, Georgina Lady Dudley and others for Vanity Fair, and Mr. Carruthers Gould's cartoons and caricatures with "political d'oyleys and menus" will be sure to attract custom to the Westminster Gazette in the able hands of Lily Duchess of Marlborough, Mrs. Asquith, and Miss Cissy Loftus. Mrs. Aria is to dispose of French fashions of all kinds for the World of Dress, assisted by Miss Irene Vanbrugh, Miss Gertrude Kingston, &c.

I need scarcely add that there is a long list of names of members of the dramatic profession, who have kindly volunteered to assist in the entertainments. It is the most generous profession in the world.

Being curious to find out what the marriage rite of the Theistic Church is we went to see the Rev. Ellison Annesley Voysey married to Miss Rachel Enthoven on Wednesday last at the little building in Swallow-street, where the bridegroom's father has been preaching and conducting the services for so many years. The air of the building is ascetic, and along one wall a number of urns on brackets probably contained the ashes of persons who had been cremated. Cremation certainly effects a wonderful saving of space in the disposal of mortal remains.

There is no altar, no chancel, no rail, no step, in the Theistic Church, and the contracting parties simply knelt before a small table, the father of the bridegroom standing on the other side. The ritual is taken from that of the Jewish Church, which I have always thought most beautiful. The "covenant of affection" was duly entered upon, and with a simple undertaking to take each other for man and wife, the short ceremony concluded. There was the inevitable baby, which seems to haunt weddings, pointing the vows and priestly adjurations with its cries and irrelevant observations. I pitied its nurse, who made frantic efforts to keep it from making remarks. I wonder why mothers take babies to church when weddings are going on? It must remind the atoms of their christening, and arouse fearsome anticipations of a cold-water douche. Small wonder that they howl.

Have you heard of the Ladies' Needlework Society? It is a development of the Theatrical Ladies' Guild, of which I have written you several times. Its object is to help poor mothers of the dramatic profession by giving or lending them baby clothes, and affording them other aid at times when it is sadly needed. The Needlework Society asks each of its members to send two baby garments in every year—as many more as they like, of course, but the minimum is two. Do you feel inclined to join? There is no subscription. All you have to do is to send in to the Hon. Sec., Miss Willows, Lansdowne House, Hull, the two little garments you make.

There is a bazaar going on this week at the Imperial Institute in aid of the Norwood Orphanage for Girls, which is burdened with a heavy debt. It has sheltered 3,000 orphans during the fifty years of its existence. The debt has been incurred chiefly through persons who have engaged to pay for orphans neglecting to do so. There are now eighty-five children for whom no payments are being made, but they will be kept till they are able to enter service. The Princess of Wales is to open the fancy fair on Wednesday forenoon, and H.R.H. has commanded the presence of the orphans on that occasion. They are to line the approach from the roadway to the door of the Imperial Institute.

I have several times told you about the lovely work done by the Decorative Needlework Society, at 17, Sloane-street. There is to be a special sale also this week of their beautiful screens, stools, chairs, boxes, coffers, portières, piano-covers, table-centres, &c. It begins on Wednesday and continues till Saturday, July 2. The embroideries are very high-class, and the work done is of a high standard.

We are going to settle down in town after another week of the country cottage. The country gets a very rusty, secondhand look soon after the longest day, and we are a little tired of living a mile and a half from a potato, a postage stamp, or a hair-pin. It is novel and amusing for a short time, but when the novelty wears off the amusement vanishes too.

We are due in town for the Ladies' Kennel Dog Show, having to take our turns in keeping Lilla's dogs company during their incarceration, as I told you. We are providing ourselves with novels for the occasion, good long ones. I have selected Mrs. C. N. Williamson's "Woman in Grey," as I've peeped into it and it looks so thrilling. I

LÉRINA.—Finest Liqueur. Made by the monks at the Abbey of St. Lérins, Isle St. Honorat, nr. Cannes, and well known to all visitors to the Riviera. From all Stores and Wine Merchants.

COSTUMES FOR HENLEY REGATTA.—Messrs. REDFERN have now on view in their Showrooms some very pretty and effective Costumes for Henley, to which a visit of inspection is invited. Very moderate in price.—REDFERN, 26, Conduit-street, W.

read "Tom Ossington's Ghost" the other night, and was afraid to go upstairs in the dark after it. There's a laugh in it that churns up all one's latent terrors in the most remarkable manner.

Do try this "Salmon Pie," it is a charming dish for a cold collation :—

Cut 2 lb. of salmon into fillets, and put the bones and skin, with any other fish trimmings, on to boil to make the gravy. Arrange the fillets alternately with the meat of a lobster, cut in scallops, in a game-pie or an ordinary pie dish. Fill the interstices with the yolks of hard-boiled eggs, sprinkle all with salt, pepper, chopped parsley, chives, capers, and lobster coral. Fill the pie with fish stock, cover it with flour and water paste and bake for two hours. When the pie is done, remove the paste, fill up with the strained stock, to which a little dissolved gelatine has been added. Place a saucer with a small weight on the top to press the meat, and put it into a cold place until quite firm. Pour dissolved butter on the top, and garnish with blocks of aspic jelly and sprigs of parsley or chervil.

This is a novel way of dressing ducklings with olives :—

Remove the breast bone from a couple of ducklings, fill the aperture with forcemeat and truss them into shape. Cover the breasts with slices of fat bacon, then with a layer of sliced onion and carrot, tie well-greased paper over them, and roast them three-quarters of an hour, basting them very frequently with butter. Meanwhile, fry a couple of minced shalots with an ounce of butter in a stewpan, mix in a dessertspoonful of potato flour and a pint and a half of bone stock, stir all till it boils, strain it, and return it to the stewpan ; add an ounce of glaze, a teaspoonful of sugar and about 24 turned olives. Withdraw the string from the birds, brush them over with warm glaze, pour the sauce round them, and group the olives at the corners.

To make the forcemeat :—Pound ½ lb. of white veal for ten minutes, add 6 oz. of scraped fat bacon, 4 oz. of butter, the yolks of four eggs, and pepper and salt to taste. Pound the whole until it is thoroughly amalgamated.

Ever, dear, your loving cousin, MADGE.

CIGARES DE JOY cure ASTHMA AND HAY FEVER

Chemists & Stores, Box of 35, 2/6, or Post-free from WILCOX & CO., 83, Mortimer-st., London, W.
SAMPLE FREE FOR PENNY STAMP.

WORKMEN'S COMPENSATION ACT.
Liability under this Act is underwritten by the
RAILWAY PASSENGERS ASSURANCE CO.,
Established 1849. Capital £1,000,000.
ACCIDENT ASSURANCE. FIDELITY GUARANTEE.
64, CORNHILL, LONDON. A. VIAN, Secretary.

THE TRIENNIAL OLD SALOPIAN DINNER will be held at the MONICO RESTAURANT, London, W., on WEDNESDAY, June 29, The RIGHT HON. SIR JOHN T. HIBBERT, K.C.B., in the Chair.—Apply to PHILIP SCRATCHLEY, Hon. Sec., 17, Victoria-street, London, S.W.

WHY DRINK INFERIOR TEA?
UNITED KINGDOM TEA COMPANY'S TEAS
DIRECT FROM THE GROWERS.
1/-, 1/3, 1/4, 1/6, 1/7, 1/9, & 2/- per lb., DELIVERED CARRIAGE PAID.
Write for Samples, sent free, taste them, and judge for yourselves. Amazing superiority in Quality! Great Economy in prices.
Offices: 21, MINCING LANE, LONDON, E.C.

GIVEN AWAY with every 6d. & 1/- Bottle of
John Bond's Crystal Palace Marking Ink
Awarded. Forty-four Gold Medals, Diplomas and Royal Appointments. GOLD MEDAL
A voucher entitling purchasers to their Name or Monogram Rubber Stamp for marking linen or stamping paper. The name is elegantly mounted on a Nickel Silver Pen and Pencil Case, with enlarged 1s. size.
Works: 75, Southgate-road, London, N.

RARE CHINA.
Old Chimney Pieces in Carved Wood & Marble
STATUARY CLEANED AND REPAIRED.
The Sinclair Galleries,
55, 57, 59, SHAFTESBURY AVENUE, LONDON, W.
FREDERICK LITCHFIELD, Proprietor.

NATIONAL For Mutual Life Assurance. PROVIDENT INSTITUTION.
Claims Paid exceed...£10,000,000
Invested Funds exceed £5,000,000
Profits divided..... £5,400,000
ENDOWMENT-ASSURANCE POLICIES ARE ISSUED COMBINING LIFE ASSURANCE AT MINIMUM COST, WITH PROVISION FOR OLD AGE. The practical effect of these Policies in the National Provident Institution is that the Member's life is assured until he reaches the age agreed upon, and on his reaching that age the whole of the Premiums paid are returned to him, and a considerable sum in addition, representing a by no means insignificant rate of interest on his payments.
48, Gracechurch Street, London, E.C. Applications for Agencies invited

A Feature of the Metropolis. SPIERS & POND's
CRITERION RESTAURANT, Piccadilly Circus, London, W.
EAST ROOM. Finest Cuisine, unsurpassed by the most renowned Parisian Restaurants. Luncheons, Dinners, and Suppers, à la carte and prix fixe. Viennese Band.
GRAND HALL. Musical Dinner 3/6 per head. Accompanied by the Imperial Austrian Band.
WEST ROOM. Academy Luncheon 2/6 Diner Parisien 5/-, during both of which the renowned Mandolin Quartette performs.
BUFFET & GRILL ROOM. Quick service à la carte and moderate prices. Joints in each room fresh from the Spit every half-hour.
AMERICAN BAR. Service of special American Dishes, Grills, &c.
Splendid Suites of Rooms for Military and other Dinners.

CURES

SLEEPLESSNESS, NEURALGIA, ANÆMIA, INFLUENZA, NERVOUS DEBILITY, PHYSICAL BREAKDOWN, WHOOPING COUGH WEAKNESS FOLLOWING ILLNESS.

In fact, it is the most wonderful Tonic of the Age: it contains sustaining properties which are truly marvellous. None should ever be without it. All that is claimed for it has been abundantly proved, as thousands can testify.

☞ A trial is solicited, and we will forward to any address on receipt of Six penny stamps, to defray cost of postage and packing, a TASTING SAMPLE which will prove its wonderful value.

To be obtained of licensed grocers, etc., or post free from the proprietors:

STEPHEN SMITH & CO., Ltd.,
BOW, LONDON, E.
73, Kaiser Strasse, Frankfort-on-Maine.

FOR INFANTS AND INVALIDS

MELLIN'S FOOD

When prepared is similar to Breast Milk.

SAMPLES POST FREE FROM

MELLIN'S FOOD WORKS, PECKHAM, S.E.

J. W. BENSON, LTD.

25, Old Bond Street, W.

LATEST NOVELTY,
TURQUOISE, PAVÉ JEWELLERY.
initiated by
J. W. BENSON, Ltd.

Pearls and Turquoise, £2 11s.

"It is quaint, pretty, and extremely inexpensive."—Queen, May 7th, 1898.

Turquoise and Pearls, £1 11s.

Turquoise and Pearls, £2 18s.

Catalogues Free.
Selections on Approval.

Steam Factory. 62 & 64, LUDGATE HILL, & 28, ROYAL EXCHANGE, E.C.

MADE BY POPE
MANUFACTURING Co
HARTFORD,
Conn., U.S.A.
IN BOTH
CHAIN
AND CHAINLESS
MODELS.

MARKT & CO.,
25&26, Shoe-lane, E.C.
West End Depot:
21, Baker-street.

Fashionable Mourning:

Priestley's

High-Class

Dress Fabrics

Trimmed with

Courtauld's

Waterproof

Crape.

Kept by the Leading Drapers of the World.

CHATTO & WINDUS'S NEW BOOKS.

In the press. Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d.

SNAZELLEPARILLA.

Decanted by G. S. EDWARDS.

With Portrait of G. H. SNAZELLE, and 65 Illustrations by CHARLES LYALL.

THE JACOBITE. By HARRY LINDSAY, Author of "Methodist Idylls." Crown 8vo, cloth, 6s.

SOME LATER VERSES. By BRET HARTE. Crown 8vo, cloth gilt, 5s.

"In this delightful volume he shows no falling off from his first self. He is still master of the two moods of humour, the pure comedy and the bouffe, in which he first showed his extraordinary range."—Daily News.

MERIEL: A Love Story. By AMÉLIE RIVES, Author of "Barbara Dering." Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d.

"Rarely, indeed, in English fiction do we come across a novel in this genre marked by the tenderness, the delicacy, and the passion that distinguish Amélie Rives's new work. 'Meriel' has something of the glowing warmth and passionate abandon of Mrs. Browning's love-poems."—Echo.

THE HERITAGE OF EVE. By H. H. SPETTIGUE. Crown 8vo, cloth, 6s.

"Sometimes you are quite charmed at the author's cleverness, insight, and truthfulness. . . . The author compels your attention. If it is her first book, then it must be pronounced a success."—Pall Mall Gazette.

ON THE BRINK OF A CHASM. By L. T. MEADE, Author of "Dr. Rumsey's Patient." Crown 8vo, cloth, 6s.

"The story is of unfailing interest."—Scotsman.

"Handled with all Mrs. Meade's well-known livelliness and skill."—Manchester Guardian.

BY PROXY. By JAMES PAYN. Cheap Edition, medium 8vo, 6d.; cloth, 1s.

SIX-SHILLING NOVELS.

A WOMAN TEMPTED HIM. By WILLIAM WESTALL.
WAS SHE JUSTIFIED? By FRANK BARRETT.
MISS BALMAINE'S PAST. By B. M. CROKER.
FORTUNE'S GATE. By ALAN ST. AUBYN.
A WOMAN WORTH WINNING. By G. MANVILLE FENN.
COLONEL THORNDYKE'S SECRET. By G. A. HENTY.

THREE-AND-SIXPENNY NOVELS.

A RACE FOR MILLIONS. By D. CHRISTIE MURRAY.
A MODERN DICK WHITTINGTON. By JAMES PAYN.
A FOUNTAIN SEALED. By WALTER BESANT.
NULMA. By Mrs. CAMPBELL PRAED.
LOVICE. By Mrs. HUNGERFORD.
EVERY INCH A SOLDIER. By M. J. COLQUHOUN.

London: CHATTO & WINDUS, 111, St. Martin's-lane, W.C.

HURST & BLACKETT'S NEW BOOKS.

NEW WORK BY MR. W. A. PICKERING, C.M.G.

Now Ready, in 1 vol., demy 8vo, extra cloth, with 25 Illustrations from Photographs and Sketches by the Author, 16s.

PIONEERING IN FORMOSA: Recollections of Adventures among Mandarins, Wreckers, and Head-Hunting Savages. By W. A. PICKERING, C.M.G., late Protector of Chinese in the Straits Settlements. With an Appendix on British Policy and Interests in China and the Far East.

"Mr. Pickering's book will be of much interest to students of geography and to those who follow the politics and apparent dissolution of the Chinese Empire. Though his experiences and adventures were those of thirty years ago, the author has evidently kept himself au fait with what has been going on in the Far East ever since, as evidenced by remarks in the Preface on the 'culpable supineness' of Great Britian in China, and by letters in the Appendix on the same topic. Mr. Pickering's book is capitally and bountifully illustrated."—Morning Post.

"The pages devoted to the description and the history of Formosa are both full and interesting, and supply what will undoubtedly come to be regarded as the most authoritative account of the place obtainable."—Daily Chronicle.

NEW WORK BY J. H. E. SECRETAN.

Now Ready, in 1 vol., large crown 8vo, with 24 Illustrations, 6s.

TO KLONDYKE AND BACK: A Journey down the Yukon from its Source to its Mouth. By J. H. E. SECRETAN, C.E., of Ottawa. With Hints to intending Prospectors.

"Mr. Secretan's book is wholesome reading. A country perpetually frozen, a scarcity of almost the bare necessities of life and the toils of the journey are described graphically enough to daunt all but those who love a hard life for its own sake."—Times.

"There is many a twinkle of genuine humour, dry, racy, unforced, in Mr. J. H. E. Secretan's account of trials endured on his trip 'To Klondyke and Back.' The photographs with which his pages are generously interspersed are exceptionally good, and remarkably well reproduced."—Pall Mall Gazette.

"Certainly the most amusing Klondyke book that has yet appeared."—Financial Times.

HURST & BLACKETT, (Limited), 13, Great Marlborough-street.

New Edition. Now ready. Price, Cloth, 2s. 6d., by Post 2s. 10d.

SEASIDE WATERING PLACES, describing 258 Holiday Resorts on our Coasts, the Channel Islands, and the Isle of Man, enabling anyone to decide where to go for the Holidays. Illustrated and with Map.
London: L. UPCOTT GILL, 170, Strand, W.C.

WM. BLACKWOOD & SONS' NEW PUBLICATIONS.

SOLDIER AND TRAVELLER.
THIS WEEK AT ALL LIBRARIES.

MEMOIRS OF ALEXANDER GARDNER.

Colonel of Artillery in the service of Maharaja Ranjit Singh. Edited by Major HUGH PEARSE, 2nd Batn. East Surrey Regiment.
With an Introduction by the Right Hon. Sir RICHARD TEMPLE, Bart., G.C.S.I.
With two Portraits and two Maps, demy 8vo, 16s.

AT ALL BOOKSELLERS AND LIBRARIES.

THE ADVENTURES OF THE COMTE DE LA MUETTE DURING THE REIGN OF TERROR. By BERNARD CAPES, Author of "The Mill of Silence," "The Lake of Wine," &c. Crown 8vo, 6s.

"Told not merely well, but powerfully, with great force of picturesque description and charm of surprising and romantic narrative."—Scotsman.

"The charm of the story lies in the virility and richness of the author's style. . . . . In many ways a notable and strong book."—Pall Mall Gazette.

"Brilliant literary skill is combined with an uncommon ability in the weaving of a humanly impressive story. . . . A charming love story."—Daily Mail.

NEW WRITER OF FICTION. READY THIS WEEK.

LIFE IS LIFE: And other Tales and Episodes. By ZACK. Crown 8vo, 6s.

"A very distinguished critic said to me that 'Zack's' work recalled Emily Brontë's. That seemed an extravagant saying, but a story of hers, 'The Storm,' published a week or two back in the Outlook, went far to convince me that he was right. The thing was quite short—a scene in a cottage—but strung to a fierce intensity of passion, and, one might almost say, shaken by the storm throughout. It was indeed a masterpiece of tragic suggestion."—Pall Mall Gazette, April 4th, 1898.

DEDICATED BY SPECIAL PERMISSION TO H.R.H. THE DUKE OF YORK.

NOW READY. AT ALL BOOKSELLERS.

RETRIEVERS, AND HOW TO BREAK THEM. By Lieut.-Colonel Sir HENRY SMITH, K.C.B. With an Introduction by Mr. Shirley of Ettington, President of the Kennel Club. With Illustrations. Crown 8vo, 5s.

MR. STEEVENS' NEW BOOK.

EGYPT IN 1898. By G. W. STEEVENS, Author of "The Land of the Dollar," "With the Conquering Turk," &c. With Illustrations. Crown 8vo, 6s.

"Bright and readable . . . provides plenty of entertainment."—Times.

"It will lead many casual readers to take an interest in Egypt who have never before given two minutes' serious thought to the country. Herein Mr. Steevens has performed a distinct public service."—Outlook.

WILLIAM BLACKWOOD & SONS, Edinburgh and London.

NEW BOOKS.

NEW EDITION NOW READY.

In 1 vol., extra crown 8vo, cloth, gilt top, price 7s. 6d.

THE STORY OF GLADSTONE'S LIFE. By JUSTIN MCCARTHY, M.P. Containing 45 Illustrations, representing Mr. Gladstone at different periods.

"This is a charmingly-written sketch of Mr. Gladstone's public career, with some interesting glimpses at the same time into his private life." — The Observer.

Square crown 8vo, cloth, Illustrated, price 6s.

A MIDDY'S RECOLLECTIONS, 1853 to 1860. By Rear-Admiral the Hon. VICTOR A. MONTAGU.

"His descriptions are written with as much freshness and verve as if the events recorded were of quite recent occurrence, and with a sailorly downrightness and infectious good humour that help to render this extremely interesting volume a welcome exception to the great majority of works of its order with which the book-market has lately been flooded."—The World.

"You will be more than pleased by Admiral Montagu's 'A Middy's Recollections,' written in an ideally sailor-like style and spirit—modest, breezy, frank, and free."—Truth.

Demy 8vo, cloth, price 12s. 6d.

ARISTOCRACY AND EVOLUTION. By W. H. MALLOCK.

"With the main idea of this work, which is quite the most important that Mr. Mallock has yet produced, we do not think there can be any dispute, though most of the active sociologists in England either ignore that idea or are openly hostile to it."—Spectator.

Crown 8vo, cloth, price 5s.

HIS GRACE O' THE GUNNE. By I. HOOPER.

"It is a very good story, with some striking episodes admirably presented."—The Daily Chronicle.

In crown 8vo, 864 pages, price 3s. 6d. net.

WHO'S WHO, 1898.

"This is undoubtedly the handiest biographical dictionary and compendium of information, referring to prominent persons and their doings, in existence."—Nature.

A. & C. BLACK, Soho-square, London.

HARPER & BROTHERS' NEW LIST.

SILENCE, and other Stories. By MARY E. WILKINS, Author of "A New England Nun," "Jerome," &c. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 6s.

WILMAY, and other Stories of Women. By BARRY PAIN, Author of "The Octave of Claudius" and "In a Canadian Canoe." Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 3s. 6d.

GHOSTS I HAVE MET. By JOHN KENDRICK BANGS, Author of "The House-Boat on the Styx." Illustrated. 12mo, cloth, 2s.

THE GOLFICIDE, and other Tales of the Fair Green. By W. G. VAN TASSEL SUTPHEN. Illustrated, 12mo, cloth, 2s.

These stories, by an enthusiastic golfer, realise the fascination which the royal and ancient game has for its votaries.

THE LATEST NOVELS.

MEG OF THE SCARLET FOOT. By W. EDWARDS TIREBUCK, Author of "Miss Grace of All Souls," "The Little Widow," &c. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 6s.

THE STORY OF A PLAY. By W. D. HOWELLS. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 6s.

BEHIND A MASK. By THEO DOUGLAS, Author of "Iras, a Mystery." Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 6s.

THE LUCK OF PARCO. By JOHN MACLAIR. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 6s.

FLAUNTING MOLL, and other Stories. By R. A. J. WALLING. Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d.

"It is refreshing to take up a volume like Mr. Walling's, of genuine strength and character."—Scotsman.

SOWING THE SAND. By FLORENCE HENNIKER, Author of "In Scarlet and Grey," &c. Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d.

"Mrs. Henniker is a writer whose work invariably bears the hall-mark of distinction, and every one who values the intellectual quality in fiction will welcome her new novel."—Speaker.

HARPER & BROTHERS, Publishers, London and New York.

TEN POPULAR NOVELS.

SIX SHILLINGS EACH.

THE STANDARD BEARER. S. R. CROCKETT.
THE CROOK OF THE BOUGH. MENIE MURIEL DOWIE.
ACROSS THE SALT SEAS. J. BLOUNDELLE-BURTON.
BETWEEN SUN AND SAND. W. C. SCULLY.
SONS OF ADVERSITY. L. COPE CORNFORD.
MISS ERIN. M. E. FRANCIS.
VAUSSORE. FRANCIS BRUNE.
THE PHILANTHROPIST. LUCY MAYNARD.
CROSS TRAILS. VICTOR WAITE.
BIJLI THE DANCER. JAMES BLYTHE PATTON.

METHUEN & CO., 36, Essex-street, W.C.

Mr. GEORGE MOORE'S great musical novel, EVELYN INNES, price 6s., is now ready at some of the Libraries and at all Booksellers'.

THROUGH UNKNOWN TIBET. By Captain M. S. WELLBY, 18th Hussars. Many Illustrations and Maps. Cloth, 21s.

THE MUTINEER: A ROMANCE OF PITCAIRN. By LOUIS BECKE and WALTER JEFFERY. Cloth, 6s.

London: T. FISHER UNWIN, Paternoster-square, E.C.

SMITH, ELDER, & CO.'S NEW BOOKS.

"This delightful volume."—DAILY NEWS.

NOTICE.—A SECOND EDITION of "COLLECTIONS AND RECOLLECTIONS," by "ONE WHO HAS KEPT A DIARY," is Now Ready. With Frontispiece. Demy 8vo, 16s.

The Academy.—"Some people work their way through life; a happier sort goes laughing. Mr. G. W. E. Russell belongs to the latter class. He appears to have kept steadily before him a single-hearted purpose to find life amusing, and to have instituted a diary to the express end that no gleeful word should fall to the ground. . . . The book runs over with good things."

From the Spectator: "One of the most entertaining books that we have ever looked through. Mr. Russell not only tells us who is who, but he tells us who was who. All the people who flit before us live, and some of them live in quite a new light."

MRS. HUMPHRY WARD'S NEW NOVEL.

At all Booksellers' and Libraries, crown 8vo, 6s.

HELBECK OF BANNISDALE.

By Mrs. HUMPHRY WARD,

Author of "Robert Elsmere," "Marcella," "Sir George Tressady," &c.

From the Spectator: "Very few men and women will, we predict, be able to close Mrs. Ward's book without the sense that they have been profoundly interested and deeply touched. We follow the searchings of heart experienced both by Laura and the Squire with intense interest. We never lose our human interest, nor do the chief combatants ever cease to be real people, and so we shall venture to predict for Mrs. Ward's new book a success quite as great as that which fell to her last two novels."

From the Manchester Guardian: "Notwithstanding the height of its theme, the most simply and effectively told story of any that have yet come to us from her hand."

NOTICE.—The FIRST EDITION of "SONGS OF ACTION," by Conan Doyle is NEARLY EXHAUSTED. A SECOND EDITION is in the Press. Small Foolscap 8vo, 5s.

From the Daily Telegraph: "There is spirit and animation, the rush and glow of young blood about his poems—always a pulsating sense of life."

From the Globe: "Dr. Doyle's 'Songs' are full of movement. They have fluency, they have vigour, they have force. Everybody should hasten to make acquaintance with them."

NEW VOLUME OF

THE BIOGRAPHICAL EDITION OF

W. M. THACKERAY'S COMPLETE WORKS.

Just Published. Large crown 8vo, cloth, gilt top, 6s.

YELLOWPLUSH PAPERS, &c. With 24 Full-page Reproductions of Steel Plates by George Cruikshank, 11 Woodcuts, and a Portrait of the Author by Maclise.

 A volume will be issued each subsequent month, until the entire Edition is completed on April 15th, 1899.

 A Prospectus of the Edition, with Specimen Pages, will be sent post-free on application.

NEW VOLUME OF "THE DICTIONARY OF NATIONAL BIOGRAPHY."

ON JUNE 25TH.—Royal 8vo, 15s. net, in cloth; or in half-morocco, marbled edges, 20s. net.—VOLUME LV. (STOW—TAYLOR) of

THE DICTIONARY OF NATIONAL BIOGRAPHY.

Edited by SIDNEY LEE.

 Vol. I. was published on January 1st, 1885, and a further volume will be issued Quarterly until the completion of the Work, which will be effected within two years from the present time.

NOTE.—A Full Prospectus of "The Dictionary of National Biography," with Specimen Pages, will be sent upon application."

COMPLETION OF THE NEW EDITION OF SYMONDS' "RENAISSANCE IN ITALY."

Now Ready. In 2 vols., with Portrait and Index to the 7 vols., large crown 8vo, 15s.

THE CATHOLIC REACTION. By the late JOHN ADDINGTON SYMONDS.

NEW NOVEL.

At all Booksellers' and Libraries. Crown 8vo, 6s.

THE AMBITION OF JUDITH. By OLIVE LORRELL, Author of "Anthony Langsyde," "Behind the Magic Mirror," &c.

CORNHILL MAGAZINE

FOR JULY. PRICE ONE SHILLING. CONTENTS:—

FIGHTS FOR THE FLAG. VII. WELLINGTON AT SALAMANCA. By the Rev. W. H. Fitchett.
THE ANTI-JACOBIN: an Anniversary Study. By W. B. Duffield.
THE ETCHINGHAM LETTERS. I.-IV.
HAVANA IN 1870. By Frank T. Bullen.
THE FIGHT THAT LOST JERUSALEM. By Stanley Lane-Poole.
ANTHONY BLIGHT. By S. Baring-Gould.
CYRANO DE BERGERAC. By Garnet Smith.
A QUACK'S TRIUMPH.
THE HUMOURS OF MUSICAL LIFE. By Miss Maude Valérie White.
THE CASTLE INN. Chapters XXIV.-XXVI. By Stanley Weyman.

London: SMITH, ELDER, & CO., 15, Waterloo-place.

DIGBY, LONG, & CO.'S New Novels

TO BE HAD AT ALL LIBRARIES.

SECOND EDITION NOW READY.

By E. GERARD (EMILY DE LASZOWSKA).

THE TRAGEDY OF A NOSE. By the Author of "A Foreigner," "A Secret Mission," &c.

"There is a consistent strain in the serio-comic about Miss Gerard's story that will win it many readers among those who affect the lighter fiction."—Scotsman.

"The story possesses the merit of originality of plot, and the situations are well worked out."—Aberdeen Press.

"The story is delightful, and will linger long in the reader's memory. It is beautifully written, full of real wit and brightness."—Dundee Advertiser.

BY NAUNTON COVERTSIDE.

THE SECRET OF A HOLLOW TREE. By the Author of "A Day with the Hounds, and what came of it."

"The book will please those readers who like their fiction highly coloured."—Standard.

"The tale is told in a spirited fashion, and not a few of the characters are sketched in a way to command our admiration and sympathy. It is possible to spend a very pleasant evening over its pages."—Speaker.

"One or two hunting scenes are well described."—Athenæum.

BY J. E. MUDDOCK.

THE LOST LAIRD. By the Author of "Stripped of the Tinsel," "Without Faith or Fear," &c.

"The author presents a striking story, which carries the reader along, and sustains his interest from the pathos of the opening chapters to the last."—Sheffield Daily Telegraph.

SECOND EDITION NOW READY.

NEW NOVEL BY G. BERESFORD FITZGERALD.

THE FATAL PHIAL. By the Author of "An Odd Career," "A Fleeting Show," &c.

"In G. Beresford Fitzgerald's latest novel there is presented an interesting study of a woman of remarkable character."—Scotsman.

"It will be read with avidity."—Manchester Guardian.

"The story itself shows considerable originality."—Madame.

"Is a clever story written by a man of taste and thought."—Star.

By LOLA MORLEY.

LIFE'S WHEEL. "Is a story of high life from start to finish through which a delicious love story runs. The language is well chosen and the dialogue pleasing."—Sheffield Daily Telegraph.

"The plot is well constructed."—Belfast News Letter.

By ALEX. SURTEESE.

ONE OF NATURE'S GENTLEMEN.

"A well-written, well-constructed, entertaining novel."—Belfast News Letter.

"Is a novel of more than ordinary merit."—Belfast Northern Whig.

NEW NOVEL BY BELTON OTTERBURN.

CLEMENT CARLISLE'S DREAM. By the Author of "Unrelated Twins," "Nurse Adelaide," &c.

NEW NOVEL BY THERESA MOLYNEUX.

THE DEFEAT OF AVARICE. By the Author of "A Lady's Confessions."

NEW NOVEL BY MRS. LODGE.

A SON OF THE GODS. By the Author of "The Mystery of Bloomsbury Crescent," &c.

NEW NOVEL BY GUILLAUME DALL.

(Pseudonym of Madame Jules Lebaudy.)

CHRISTINE MYRIANE. [Just out.

By G. YEATES HUNTER, I.M.D.

CAN IT BE TRUE? A Psychological Study. By the Author of "Body and Mind," &c. [Just out.

By E. DOWNING TALBOT.

THE INEVITABLE. [Just out.

DIGBY, LONG, & CO., 18, Bouverie-street, London.

SAMPSON LOW, MARSTON & CO.'S NEW BOOKS

AT ALL BOOKSELLERS'.

"The best biography of Mr. Gladstone that at present exists."—Daily Chronicle.

LIFE OF W. E. GLADSTONE

By G. W. E. RUSSELL (late M.P.)

FOURTH EDITION, Revised, and with an Additional Chapter bringing the Life down to its close. ("Queen's Prime Ministers Series.") Crown 8vo, with splendid Photogravure Portrait, cloth extra, 3s. 6d.

 This Biography was written under the sanction of Mr. Gladstone himself.

"A ROYAL MAN-HUNTER." See

THE ROMANCE OF A REGIMENT.

The Giant Grenadiers of Potsdam, 1713-1740.

By J. R. HUTCHINSON, B.A. With Coloured Frontispiece. 6s.

"As entertaining, witty, and spirited a book as one could wish to read."—Pall Mall Gazette.

TWENTY-FIVE YEARS IN BRITISH GUIANA.

By HENRY KIRKE, M.A. With Map and Illustrations. Demy 8vo, cloth, 10s. 6d.

"A volume which contains many of the best stories and jokes that we have come across."—The Athenæum.

"A capital book, full of lively descriptions and chatty anecdotes of colonial manners and customs."—Graphic.

A SUMMER ON THE ROCKIES. By Major Sir ROSE LAMBERT PRICE, Bart., Author of "The Two Americas." With Map and Portrait. Crown 8vo, cloth, 6s.

SEVENTH AND CHEAPER EDITION JUST READY.

OUIDA'S NOVEL

THE MASSARENES

Crown 8vo, cloth, 2s. 6d.

"EXTREMELY INTERESTING. . . . A brilliant picture of a contemporary mania."—Daily Telegraph.

"CLEVER. . . . The irreclaimable 'Cocky' is an excellent creation."—Pall Mall Gazette.

"THOROUGHLY INTERESTING, and touches of real pathos mingle with its vigorous satire and strong situations."—Glasgow Herald.

London: SAMPSON LOW, MARSTON, & COMPANY, Limited.

THE BADMINTON LIBRARY.

NEW VOLUME JUST READY.

With 75 Illustrations. Crown 8vo, price 10s. 6d.

ROWING,

By R. P. P. ROWE and C. M. PITMAN.

With Chapters on STEERING, by C. P. SEROCOLD and F. C. BEGG; METROPOLITAN ROWING, by S. LE BLANC SMITH; and on PUNTING, by P. W. SQUIRE.

 This Volume takes the place of the Volume on "Boating."

LONGMANS, GREEN, & CO., London, New York, and Bombay.

MUDIE'S SELECT LIBRARY.

For the CIRCULATION and SALE of all the BEST

ENGLISH, FRENCH, GERMAN, ITALIAN, RUSSIAN, & SPANISH BOOKS.

TOWN SUBSCRIPTIONS from ONE GUINEA per annum.

LONDON BOOK SOCIETY (for weekly exchange of Books at the Houses of Subscribers) from TWO GUINEAS per annum.

COUNTRY SUBSCRIPTIONS from TWO GUINEAS per annum.

N.B.—Two or Three Friends may UNITE IN ONE SUBSCRIPTION, and thus lessen the Cost of Carriage.

SURPLUS LIBRARY BOOKS NOW OFFERED AT GREATLY REDUCED PRICES.

A NEW CLEARANCE LIST (100 PAGES) SENT GRATIS AND POST FREE TO ANY ADDRESS.

The List contains Popular Works in Travel, Sport, History, Biography, Science, and Fiction. Also New and Surplus Copies of French, German, Italian, and Spanish Books.

MUDIE'S SELECT LIBRARY, LIMITED,

30—34, NEW OXFORD ST.; 241, BROMPTON ROAD, S.W.; 48, QUEEN VICTORIA ST., E.C. LONDON; AND AT BARTON ARCADE, MANCHESTER.

Tenth Edition. 22nd Thousand. Cloth, 1s. 6d. Paper, 1s.

THE DIETETIC CURE OF OBESITY. (Foods for the Fat.) By N. E. YORKE DAVIES, L.R.C.P., Lond., &c.

Revised and Enlarged, with Chapters on the DIETETIC TREATMENT OF GOUT.

CONTENTS. Part I.—Evils and dangerous conditions due to corpulency. Weak heart and congestive diseases of the Corpulent. Arteral degeneration. Apoplexy and Syncope in the obese. The dangers of the use of purgatives, drugs, and quack medicines for the reduction of weight, &c. Evils of over-eating. Part II.—Gout and its dietetic cure. Part III.—Stimulants in obesity and gout, &c. Part IV.—Exercise. Part V.—Dietetics of obesity and gout, &c

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.—"This work deserves careful study."—Queen. "The only practical treatise on this subject."—St. Stephen's Review. "It may be commended to every one who wants to reduce weight."—Scotsman. "Should be carefully read, not only by those who are stout, but by those in whom incipient corpulency has manifested itself."—Morning Advertiser.

CHATTO & WINDUS, 111, St. Martin's-lane, London, W.C.

LONDON LIBRARY,

ST. JAMES' SQUARE, S.W.

Patron—H.R.H. The PRINCE of WALES, K.G.

President.....LESLIE STEPHEN, Esq.

Vice-Presidents—The Rt. Rev. the LORD BISHOP of LONDON, HERBERT SPENCER, Esq., HENRY BARKLY, K.C.B.

Trustees—Right Hon. Sir M. GRANT DUFF, Right Hon. Sir JOHN LUBBOCK, Bart., M.P., Right Hon. EARL of ROSEBERY.

The Library contains about 180,000 Volumes of Ancient and Modern Literature, in various languages. Subscription £3 a year. Life Membership, according to Age. Fifteen Volumes are allowed to Country, and Ten to Town Members. Reading-room Open from Ten to Half-past Six. CATALOGUE, FIFTH EDITION, 2 vols. royal 8vo, price 21s.; to Members, 16s.

C. T. HAGBERG WRIGHT, Secretary and Librarian.

1/— (BY POST, 1/2½.) 1/—

QUEER STORIES

—FROM—

"TRUTH."

Vols. I. and II., in cloth, 2s.

"TRUTH" PUBLISHING OFFICE,

10, BOLT COURT, FLEET STREET, LONDON, E.C.

ON THE STŒCHIOLOGICAL CURE OF

CONSUMPTION,

ASTHMA, BRONCHITIS, INFLUENZA, AND ALL THROAT AND LUNG COMPLAINTS.

By JOHN FRANCIS CHURCHILL, M.D.

One Shilling, Post Free.

T. BURLEIGH, LATE DAVID STOTT, 370, OXFORD STREET.

STERILITY IN WOMEN: Its Causes and Curative Treatment. An Illustrated Treatise based on the special practice and observation of the last 15 years. Price 3s. 6d.; post free, 3s. 8d.

London: HENRY RENSHAW, 356, Strand.

Post free, 1s. 1d.

EXHAUSTION AND PREMATURE DECLINE IN MAN.

A treatise on the restorative effects of Electrolysis.

HENRY RENSHAW, 356, Strand, London.

MAPLE & CO

LONDON and PARIS

GARDEN AND LAWN FURNITURE

TENTS UMBRELLAS

CANOPIED SEATS

"UMBRA" CHAIRS 6s 10d

LAWN CHAIRS 3s 6d

MADEIRA CHAIRS 6s 9d

HAMMOCK CHAIRS 3s 3d

DUNSTER TABLES 7s 6d

UMBRELLA TENTS with Iron Tables 34s 6d

PLAIN and FANCY HAMMOCKS 2s 6d to 50s

LAWN MOWERS ROLLERS

ENGINES HOSE AND REELS

CYCLES BABY CARRIAGES

CUSHIONS for LAWN or RIVER 2s 6d each

"GF" Illustrations of Useful Articles for Outdoor Use Post free "GF"

LONDON and PARIS

MAPLE & CO

HOTELS, &c.

GRAND HOTEL, LYNDHURST (New Forest).—Charming Hotel, recently enlarged. Beautiful grounds of 4 acres adjoin golf links. Hunting, fishing, &c. Trains met at Brockenhurst.

Mrs. HART, Manageress.

CLARENDON HOTEL, Princes-street, Edinburgh.—First-class Family Hotel. Opposite Castle, and overlooking the gardens. Kitchen lately fitted up on top of Hotel. Recommended to American visitors. Under the personal management of the new Proprietor.

MARGATE.—WHITE HART HOTEL.

Sixty Bedrooms, many commanding magnificent sea views. Famous for its perfect English cooking and choice cellar. Most invigorating sea air in England. Under supervision of Proprietor—G. MARSHALL.

CLIFTON GRAND SPA HYDRO., BRISTOL.

Now open. The Premier Hydro. Sumptuously equipped. Pump Room. Unrivalled Turkish, Russian, and other baths. Sea trips. Drives. Golf. Tennis. Resident Physician. Address Manager. Telegrams, "Spa, Bristol."

THE NEW FOREST: 90,000 acres of magnificent woodland scenery, intersected by good cycling roads. The CROWN HOTEL, rebuilt 1897, is situated on high ground in the best part of lovely LYNDHURST, the village capital of the NEW FOREST. Large gardens. Posting stables. Electric light. Nearest station, Lyndhurst-road.

FOLKESTONE. — QUEEN'S HOTEL. Centrally situated, Within Two Minutes' Walk of THE LEAS.

Inclusive Terms, 10s. 6d. Daily.

Boulogne Return Boat Fare (Sundays) 6s. 6d.

RAMSGATE.

THE GRANVILLE.

PITLOCHRY.

THE ATHOLL HYDROPATHIC (Macdonald's).

The ORIGINAL and very much the LARGEST.

500 feet above sea level. Pure, dry, bracing air. Extensive pleasure grounds (36 acres). Tennis—Croquet—Cycling—Golf—Archery—Fishing.

Inclusive Terms from 2½ Guineas each per week. To prevent disappointment, address all communications "THE ATHOLL, PITLOCHRY."

Telegraphic Address "ATHOLL." SEASON COMMENCES 26th MAY.

ALPINE HEALTH RESORT.

MALOJA, Upper Engadine, Switzerland.

The largest and most beautiful glacier mills in the World. Nature's wonders. Open from June to end of September. The splendid Palace Hotel, Maloja, offers to its patrons all home comforts, combined with the charm of a climatic Alpine station; first-class highland tours as well as easy walks. 6,000 feet above sea level. 350 beds, spacious reception rooms, concert and theatre halls, Milanese Scala Orchestral Concerts daily. Lift. Golf, cricket, lawn-tennis. riding and driving opportunities. Large cycle track. Sea sport, fishing. Oil motor boat on the delightful Maloja Lake as well as rowing and sailing boats. Dark room for photographs. Baths and excellent sanitary arrangements. English and Roman Catholic Church services. Post and Telegraph Offices. Resident English Physician. Highly recommended as a quiet resort early in the season, especially for families. Average temperature, 16 degrees C. Building heated throughout on cold days.

Further particulars may be obtained from the Director, J. F. WALTHER-DENZ, MALOJA PALACE, ENGADINE, SWITZERLAND.

HOSPITALS & APPEALS.

GREAT NORTHERN CENTRAL HOSPITAL, Holloway. VERY POOR and DEPENDENT ENTIRELY UPON VOLUNTARY SUPPORT.

PATIENTS ADMITTED FREE, sickness and poverty the only qualifications for relief.

£10,000 needed annually to support the work of relieving 1,500 in-patients and 25,000 out-patients.

LEWIS H. GLENTON KERR, Secretary.

LONDON ORPHAN ASYLUM, Watford.—Established 1813. For the Maintenance and Education of respectable Fatherless Boys and Girls from every part of the United Kingdom.

The NEXT ELECTION occurs on the 27th JUNE, when EIGHT GIRLS and TWENTY-TWO BOYS will be ADMITTED.

500 Children are now in the School, 6,051 have been already benefited.

Annual Subscription for one Vote at each Half-yearly Election, 10s. 6d. Life Subscription for one Vote, £5 5s., the Votes increasing in proportion to the Subscription, and entitling to vote at the coming Election.

A. CAPEL CARNEGY ARBUTHNOTT, Treas.
E. H. BOUSFIELD, Chairman.
HENRY C. ARMIGER, Secretary.

NICOLE FRÈRES

POLYPHON MUSICAL BOX

Is the greatest novelty of the age. It plays to perfection any selections of secular or sacred music desired. It is not a toy but a delightful musical instrument. All Dealers, or write for No. 50 Catalogue, post free. From 16s. 6d. to 50 Guineas.

NICOLE FRÈRES Ltd., 21, Ely Place London, E.C. Established 1815.

"TRUTH" HOTEL LIST.

ABERYSTWITH.—The QUEEN'S HOTEL faces the sea, and is lighted by electricity. The late Sir Jas. Clarke, M.D., says: "A fortnight at Aberystwith is equal to a month at most watering-places." For tariffs, &c., apply to W. H. PALMER, Proprietor. Soft Atlantic breezes. Pure water from Plinlimmon, and excellent drainage.

BONCHURCH HOTEL, Bonchurch, Isle of Wight, one mile from Ventnor Station.
A comfortable, quiet, and most beautifully-situated Hotel. Pretty garden. Good sea view.
H. RIBBANDS, Proprietor.

BOURNEMOUTH.—HIGHCLIFFE HOTEL. Unrivalled position, West Cliff, full south. Splendid sea view. Table d'hôte (separate tables). Supplies from Alderney Dairy Farm. Telephone 27.—J. KILNER, Proprietor.

BOURNEMOUTH.—HOTEL MONT DORE.—South aspect, 150 rooms, electric light throughout, passenger lift, first-class cuisine, winter garden and lounge, covered tennis court. Turkish, sea-water, and medicated Baths. The Hotel is within two minutes' walk of the Golf Links.—For tariff, address W. KNEESE, Manager.

BRIGHTON.—GRAND HOTEL.—Centre of sea front. Electric Light throughout. Lift to all floors. Bicycle room. Inclusive terms if desired from 10s. 6d. to 15s. per day.—For particulars apply to A. D. HOOK, Manager.

BRIGHTON.—BEDFORD HOTEL.—Old-established. Unequalled in situation; opposite West Pier. Spacious coffee and reading rooms; sea-water service; unequalled cuisine; great variety of excellent wines. Moderate tariff. Electric light in all rooms. Passenger lift to all the floors.
GEO. HECKFORD, Manager.

CARBIS BAY HOTEL, Cornwall. The very spot to obtain rest and quietude. Overlooking the finest bay in England. Mild yet bracing climate. Within easy distance of London by G. W. R. Splendid Golf Links. "A more beautiful spot for residence could hardly be imagined."—Truth.

FOLKESTONE.—The LEAS HOTEL.—Situated in private grounds. Adjoining fashionable promenade. Sea views. Refurnished throughout. Passenger lift. Certified sanitation. Excellent cuisine. Moderate tariff. Good golf links and tennis court.

FOLKESTONE.—BATES' HOTEL, West Cliff Gardens, and LONGFORD PRIVATE HOTEL, The Lees. Oldest established and most select Family Hotels in Folkestone. Reduced terms during Winter and Spring months. Pension (new Coffee-room) at Bates' Hotel.—G. L. HART, Proprietor. Sanitation Certified.

GRAND CANARY.—The Newest and Best Hotel is The METROPOLE. Facing the sea. Delightful position. Terms most moderate.
Agents, ELDER, DEMPSTER & CO., 14, Castle-street, Liverpool, and 4, St. Mary Axe, London, E.C.

JERSEY.—GRAND HOTEL.—The only first-class modern Hotel facing the sea, and full south, the largest, the best appointed, and the up-to-date Hotel in the Channel Islands. Liberal Management.
D. DE LEIDI, Manager.

MALVERN—The IMPERIAL HOTEL occupies the best position, and receives visitors en pension. The golf-links (18 holes) are one of the best in England. Capital stabling for hunters. Droitwich Brine, Turkish and large Swimming Bath in separate buildings.—For tariff, apply to the Proprietor, F. MOERSCHELL.

SANDGATE.—ROYAL KENT HOTEL, a favourite resort of Ruskin. An ideal summer and winter residence, delightfully situated in its own grounds, facing the sea. Redecorated and refurnished. New Coffee-room, Smoking-room, and Conservatory have recently been added. Fifteen minutes from Folkestone. Omnibus meets all trains Sandgate Station.—J. E. TANARE, Prop.

SOUTHSEA.—ROYAL BEACH MANSIONS HOTEL.—Largest in Southsea, splendidly situated on the beach; 300 yards nearer the sea than any other public hotel on the line of marine terraces. Passenger lift. Inclusive terms from £3. 13s. 6d. per week. Entirely under new management.—M. ECCLES, Manageress.

TORQUAY.—IMPERIAL HOTEL.—Under entirely New Management. New sanitary arrangements throughout. It is the largest and best-situated Hotel in Torquay, and the best winter residence on the South Coast. Visitors received en pension or à la carte. Terms moderate.
F. FISCHER, Manager.

All applications for spaces in this List should be made to the ADVERTISEMENT MANAGER,
"TRUTH" BUILDINGS, CARTERET STREET,
QUEEN ANNE'S GATE, S.W.

AT HOTEL BURLINGTON, BOSCOMBE, BOURNEMOUTH.

200 Rooms.

SUMMER HOLIDAYS.

SPLENDID BATHING.

PLEASURE STEAMERS DAILY to ISLE of WIGHT, SWANAGE, &c.
Coach seats booked for New Forest drives.
Tennis Lawn. Golf Links.
Six acres of beautifully shaded grounds, sloping to a fine sandy beach.

SPECIAL NOTICE.
Inclusive terms 10s. 6d. per day. Reduced charges for families and children.
TERMS ON APPLICATION.

AVONDALE HOTEL & RESTAURANT

(Corner of Dover-street and Piccadilly).
MAGNIFICENT SUITES of ROOMS, including Ladies' Reception-room.
KANDT'S ROYAL ORCHESTRA
plays nightly during Dinner and Supper.
LUNCHEON, 4s.; DINNER, 10s. 6d.; SUPPER, 4s.
A SPECIAL ROYAL ACADEMY LUNCHEON at 2s. 6d. served daily.
The Wines have been most carefully selected by connoisseurs.
Manager: Mons. GARIN. Chef de Cuisine: Mons. DUTRU. } late of the Savoy Hotel.
AND

HATCHETT'S RESTAURANT.

UNDER AVONDALE HOTEL.

Under entirely new management. First-class Cuisine and Unrivalled Cellar of Wines. Moderate Prices. Luncheons, Dinners, and Suppers, Table d'Hôte, Grill-room, and à la Carte. Arrangements are being made for a String Band to play nightly during Dinner and Supper.
Manager: Mons. EUGENE.

PAVILION HOTEL FOLKESTONE

THE HANDSOME NEW BUILDINGS
FORMING AN EXTENSIVE ADDITION TO THIS

OLD-ESTABLISHED FAVOURITE HOTEL

FAMOUS FOR ITS HOME-LIKE COMFORT AND CUISINE
WILL BE OPENED EARLY IN JULY

PAVILION HOTEL FOLKESTONE

BUXTON, DERBYSHIRE.

THE PALACE HOTEL.

200 rooms. Finest position. Own grounds. American elevator. Tariff, with plan of rooms and sketch map of Buxton, on application.
A. CROSS, Manager.

SAVOY HOTEL

OVERLOOKING RIVER AND EMBANKMENT GARDENS.

By day the most beautiful garden and river view in Europe. By night a fairy scene. All charges for rooms include baths, lights, and attendance.

Savoy Restaurant.

Of Gastronomic Fame. Dinners à la Carte. Private Rooms for Parties.
The Savoy Dejeuner à prix fixe, 5s., served on the Balcony overlooking the Gardens and River from 12 to 3.
"The Opera Supper," 5s. The Orchestra plays during Dinner and Supper.
The Restaurant is under the direction of the famous Maître d'Hôtel, "Joseph," of the Restaurant Marivaux, Paris. Chef, Maître THOURAUD.
Prix Fixe Dinner (7s. 6d.) is served in the new Salle à Manger, on the Restaurant Floor, at Separate Tables, from 6 to 8.30.
The GRAND HOTEL, ROME, is under the same direction.

LONDON.—BRUNSWICK HOTEL, Jermyn-street, Piccadilly. New Sanitation and Redecoration by Warings. First-class cuisine. High-class Family Hotel. Moderate tariff. Under new management.

A FINE HOTEL] DOVER [IN DOVER BAY

Accommodates 400 guests. Is superbly appointed, with all the comforts of a well-arranged mansion at moderate cost. Perfect cuisine. The Dover Golf Links for use of Hotel Burlington visitors. The finest coast hotel in England. Brochure and Tariff free.

Facing the Pleasure Pier and in centre of Dover Bay.

HOTEL BURLINGTON

THE INTERNATIONAL PALACE HOTELS.

OSTEND ..... Hotel de la Plage.
ARDENNES..... Chateau d'Ardennes.
(Palace of Leopold II.)
LISBON ..... The Avenida Palace.
THERAPIA..... Bosphorus Summer Palace.
London Office, 14, Cockspur-street, S.W.

ILFRACOMBE.

ILFRACOMBE HOTEL.

Famous for its high-class Cuisine and general comfort.
The PRINCIPAL and ONLY HOTEL on the SEASHORE.
An ideal position. 250 rooms. Grounds five acres. Tennis, Croquet. Splendid Swimming Bath. Elegant Lounge Hall. Moderate tariff. Terms "en pension."
H. R. GROVER, Manager.

HASTINGS. Due South, Facing Sea.

QUEEN'S HOTEL,

LARGEST AND BEST APPOINTED.
Sunny, and most sheltered position in Hastings and St. Leonards.
ELECTRIC LIGHT. PASSENGER ELEVATOR.
Moderate Tariff. Hotel Flys attend the trains.
WILLIAM GLADE, Manager.

AMUSEMENTS.

HAYMARKET THEATRE.
Sole Lessee, Mr. Frederick Harrison.
Managers, Mr. Frederick Harrison and Mr. Cyril Maude.
EVERY EVENING (except on Saturdays), at 8.30,
THE LITTLE MINISTER, by J. M. Barrie.
Miss WINIFRED EMERY and Mr. CYRIL MAUDE.
MATINEES EVERY WEDNESDAY and SATURDAY, at 2.30.

VAUDEVILLE.—A. & S. GATTI, Sole Lessees and Managers. THE FRENCH MAID. TO-NIGHT, at 8.20. LAST WEEKS. Doors open 8. MATINEE EVERY WEDNESDAY, at 2.30.

CRITERION THEATRE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. CHARLES WYNDHAM.—EVERY EVENING at 8.15, THE LIARS, by Henry Arthur Jones. Mr. CHARLES WYNDHAM, Miss MARY MOORE, and Company. MATINEE EVERY SATURDAY, at 2.30.

CRYSTAL PALACE.
CAFÉ CHANTANT. Twice daily at 4.0 and 8.0
also
Half-past Five o'clock Entertainments, including
A Grand Ballet from Brussels.
Crystal Palace Fireworks.—Magnificent display every THURSDAY, by C. T. Brock & Co. at 9.15. Wonderful living fireworks, mechanical moving devices, and aerial displays. Stupendous firework picture an eighth of a mile long, depicting the Battle of Manila Bay. The largest set piece ever fired. Can be witnessed by tens of thousands, without extra payment.

Saturday, July 2nd.
THE NATIONAL ROSE SOCIETY'S
GRAND NATIONAL ROSE SHOW.
Admission daily, 1s., except on July 2nd, when the price of admission will be 2s. 6d. before 5, and 1s. after 5.

THE QUEEN'S DIAMOND JUBILEE PRESENTS
On VIEW at the
IMPERIAL INSTITUTE
From 1 p.m. to 11 p.m.

IMPERIAL INSTITUTE.
EXHIBITION of ACETYLENE GAS, APPARATUS and PRODUCTION.
ILLUMINATION of GALLERY by ACETYLENE.

IMPERIAL INSTITUTE.
THE CONCERT ORCHESTRA,
FROM THE THEATRE LA SCALA, MILAN,
Director, LEANDRO CAMPANARI.
CONCERTS DAILY, at 4 p.m. and 8.45 p.m.
COVERED WAY COMMUNICATION with the SOUTH KENSINGTON SUBWAY.
Admission 1s., from 1 p.m. to 11 p.m., except Wednesdays (Fellows' Day), when admission is by ticket only, to be obtained from Fellows.

IMPERIAL INSTITUTE.
COLLECTIONS of PRODUCTS
FROM ALL PARTS of the EMPIRE.
OPEN FREE to the PUBLIC from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m.

IMPERIAL INSTITUTE.
DINNERS from 6.30 p.m. Luncheons, &c. Orders addressed to Superintendent, Catering Syndicate. Telephone No. 623 Kensington.

THE GREAT FASHIONABLE SUMMER SHOW
OF THE
LADIES' KENNEL ASSOCIATION,
Patron—H.R.H. THE PRINCESS OF WALES,
In part-aid of the Royal Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals,
WILL BE HELD, BY PERMISSION OF THE COUNCIL,
In the Gardens of the Royal Botanic Society,
REGENT'S PARK,
ON THE
23rd and 24th of JUNE, 1898.
£3,000 in Prizes.
ADMISSION FIVE SHILLINGS.
THE LADIES' PREMIERSHIP SHOW.
Two Hundred Challenge Trophies in Competition.
On View Each Day—National Dogs, Children's Dogs, Actress's Dogs, Champion Dogs and Champion Cats.
The Band of the Gordon Boys will play both days.

"CLUBLAND," 175, New Bond-street.—Members of the leading London and County Clubs and their friends can avail themselves of the following "CLUBLAND" ARRANGEMENTS for HENLEY ROYAL REGATTA, July 5th, 6th, and 7th.
There will be the usual "Clubland" Lawn at Henley, on the BERKS side of the River, next to Grand Stand, facing Isthmian Lawn.
From a raised and covered promenade a magnificent view of the course will be obtained from Fawley Court to the winning post.
The "Clubland" Stand (with a promenade attached), the size of which has been LARGELY INCREASED in length and depth, will afford ample accommodation, and the individual comfort of every visitor to "Clubland" will be fully provided for.
A spacious Marquee and smaller tents (including a Ladies' Drawing-room tent) will be erected, and every provision made for visitors.
A Full String Band will play each day on the Lawn.
Brakes will be at the station to convey visitors to the Lawn.

		Including 1st Class Railway Return Tickets.	Including 2nd Class Railway Return Tickets.
Tickets for Admission,	£ s. d.	£ s. d.	£ s. d.
Luncheon & Tea, &c., each per day.	0 12 6	1 3 0	0 19 0
Tickets for the Lawn only per day	0 5 0	0 15 6	0 11 6

Saloons for "Clubland" will be reserved at Paddington. N.B.—Tickets can be used for any one of the three days.
NOTE.—Arrangements are in progress for Goodwood, the next probable event in the "Clubland" programme, particulars of which will be duly announced.
Early application should be made to The Secretaries, "Clubland," 175, Bond-street, W.

AMUSEMENTS.

ROYAL OPERA, COVENT GARDEN.
Lessees, THE GRAND OPERA SYNDICATE, LTD.
GRAND OPERA EVERY EVENING.
For full particulars see daily papers. Box-office now open.

LYCEUM.—MADAME SANS-GÊNE, TO-NIGHT (Wednesday) and Next Monday Night at 8.
HENRY IRVING. | Miss ELLEN TERRY.
NANCE OLDFIELD and THE LYONS MAIL, To-morrow (Thursday) Night.
NANCE OLDFIELD and THE BELLS, Next Friday Night and Thursday, 30th.
THE MEDICINE MAN. Matinée Next Saturday, and Tuesday Night, 28th.
LOUIS XI. Next Saturday Night.
THE MERCHANT of VENICE. Next Wednesday Night, June 29, and Friday Night, July 1, Last Night of the Season.
Box-office (Mr. J. Hurst) open 10 to 5, and 7.30 to 10. Seats also booked by letter or telegram.

HER MAJESTY'S THEATRE.
Proprietor and Manager, Mr. HERBERT BEERBOHM TREE.
TO-NIGHT, Thursday, June 23rd, and EVERY EVENING.
RAGGED ROBIN.
Adapted by Louis N. Parker
from "Le Chimineau," by Jean Richepin.
FIRST MATINEE WEDNESDAY, June 29, and EVERY WEDNESDAY and SATURDAY, at 2.30.
Box-office (Mr. F. J. Turner) 10 to 6. Seats booked from 2s.

GAIETY.—Lessee and Manager, GEORGE EDWARDES.
EVERY EVENING, at 8 o'clock (doors open 7.40),
A RUNAWAY GIRL.
Box-office open daily from 10 till 6.
MATINEE SATURDAY NEXT, at 2. Doors open 1.40.

SAVOY THEATRE.—Every Evening at 8, and Every Saturday Afternoon at 2.0, will be produced the New Romantic Musical Drama, THE BEAUTY STONE, by A. W. Pinero, J. Comyns Carr, and Arthur Sullivan. Box-office 9 a.m. to 11 p.m.—R. D'OYLY CARTE, Manager.

COURT THEATRE, Sloane Square.—Sole Lessee and Manager, Mr. ARTHUR CHUDLEIGH.—TO-NIGHT, at 9 p.m., HIS EXCELLENCY THE GOVERNOR, by R. Marshall. Preceded, at 8.30, by MRS. RAWDON'S REHEARSAL. Doors open 8. MATINEE EVERY SATURDAY, at 3.

DALY'S THEATRE.—EVERY EVENING, at 8.15, Matinée EVERY SATURDAY, at 2.30, Mr. George Edwardes' Company in a New Musical Play, A GREEK SLAVE. The Book by Owen Hall, with Lyrics by Harry Greenbank and Adrian Ross, the Music by Sidney Jones.

MR. FORBES ROBERTSON, MRS. PATRICK CAMPBELL, and Company, in a Tragical Romance in Five Acts, entitled
PELLEAS AND MELISANDE,
By Maurice Maeterlinck, translated by J. W. Mackail (with special Music by Gabriel Fauré).
SEVEN MATINEES—To-day (Thursday), June 23, and June 24, 27, 28, 29, 30, and July 1, at 3 o'clock.
Box plan now open. PRINCE OF WALES'S THEATRE.

LYRIC THEATRE.—SARAH BERNHARDT.
Lessee, Mr. WILLIAM GREET.
MADAME SARAH BERNHARDT'S SEASON
(Under the Direction of Mr. MAURICE GRAU).

TO-NIGHT (THURSDAY) (last time), at 8	LYSIANE.
TO-MORROW (FRIDAY)	FROU-FROU.
SATURDAY Next, June 25	FROU-FROU.
MONDAY Next, June 27	ADRIENNE LECOUVREUR.
TUESDAY Next, June 28	ADRIENNE LECOUVREUR.
WEDNESDAY Next, June 29	MAGDA.
THURSDAY Next, June 30	JULIE AND LA FEMME DE CLAUDE.
FRIDAY, July 1	JULIE AND LA FEMME DE CLAUDE.
SATURDAY, July 2	CAMILLE.
MATINEES.
SATURDAY Next, June 25, at 2	PHEDRE.
WEDNESDAY Next, June 29, at 2	FROU-FROU.
SATURDAY July 2, at 2	ADRIENNE LECOUVREUR.

Box-office open 10 till 10, and of all the principal Librarians.
Seats can also be booked by letter or telegram.

GARRICK.—Lessee and Manager, H. T. BRICKWELL.
TO-NIGHT, at 9, and SATURDAY, at 3.
WILLIAM GILLETTE | TOO MUCH JOHNSON.
LAST SIX PERFORMANCES.

ST. JAMES'S.—Mr. GEORGE ALEXANDER,
Sole Lessee and Manager.
TO-NIGHT, and EVERY EVENING, at 8.30,
THE AMBASSADOR,
A Comedy, in Four Acts, by John Oliver Hobbes.
MATINEE WEDNESDAY and SATURDAY NEXT, at 2.
Box-office open 10 to 10. ST. JAMES'S THEATRE.

COMEDY THEATRE, Panton-street, Haymarket.
Sole Manager, Mr. CHARLES HAWTREY.
TO-NIGHT, and EVERY EVENING, at 8.30,
LORD AND LADY ALGY,
an Original Light Comedy, in Three Acts, by R. C. Carton.
Mr. CHARLES HAWTREY and Company.
At 8, a Duologue, entitled CONSTANCY, by Cyril Hallward.
MATINEES, WEDNESDAY NEXT, June 29, at 3; and WEDNESDAYS, July 6, 13, and 20.
Box-office open 10 to 10. COMEDY.

SHAFTESBURY THEATRE.
Directors, WILLIAMSON and MUSGROVE, Limited.
EVERY EVENING, at 8, Casino Theatre Company, of New York, in
THE BELLE OF NEW YORK.
"The subject of all the town talk."
Box-office now open at the Theatre from 10 till 10.
MATINEE WEDNESDAY and SATURDAY at 2.

AMUSEMENTS.

QUEEN'S HALL.
SUNDAY AFTERNOON CONCERTS.
EVERY SUNDAY, at 3.30.
Conductor, Mr. Henry J. Wood.
The Queen's Hall Grand Orchestra.
Admission free. Reserved seats, 2s., 3s., 1s., and 6d.

INTERNATIONAL UNIVERSAL EXHIBITION,

EARL'S COURT, West Brompton, and West Kensington.
IMRE KIRALFY, Director-General.
Admission Daily, 1s. Open 11 a.m. to 11 p.m.
BAND of the 1st GRENADIER GUARDS.
BAND of the HONOURABLE ARTILLERY COMPANY.
The LONDON EXHIBITIONS' ORCHESTRAL BAND.
THE EMPRESS THEATRE.
GRAND PATRIOTIC NAVAL SPECTACLE.
Peace and War. Naval Manœuvres. The Fleet at Night.
Attack on the Enemy's Forts.
TWICE DAILY, at 3.30 and 9 p.m.
Thousands of Reserved Seats at 6d., 1s., 2s., and 3s.
The Hungarian Minstrels. American Liliputian Troupe.
Grand Hungarian Feszty Panorama. Royal Javanese Troupe.
Hagenbeck's Zoological Kindergarten. Moorish Camp.
Bella Napoli Troupe. Electric Theatre. Captive Balloon.
THE GREAT WHEEL, 300 ft. HIGH.
South Sea Islanders, "Astarte." Belvedere Tower. Electrophone.
Switchback. Electric Launches.
WET or DRY, London's one place to spend an ENJOYABLE 12 HOURS.
THE FLORAL LOUNGE.
The Most Delightful Entertainment Hall in the World.
The Chamounix Minstrels and other Novel Attractions Daily, Free.

EMPIRE THEATRE.—EVERY EVENING, New Ballet, THE PRESS, and Sporting Sketch, THE RACE. Grand VARIETIES. Doors open at 7.45.

LONDON PAVILION.—Dan Leno, Vesta Tilley, Eugene Stratton, Bertoldi, Chirgwin, Brothers Griffiths, Geo. Robey, Rachael Walker, T.E. Dunville, Pat Rafferty, and many others, including a mile Bicycle Race for Ladies. Prices from 1s. to £3 3s. Manager, Mr. FRANK GLENISTER.

PALACE, Shaftesbury-avenue.—The HANDSOMEST THEATRE in EUROPE. The finest Variety Entertainment in London. Full Licence. Prices from 6d. Doors open 8.—Manager, Mr. CHARLES MORTON.

TIVOLI, Strand, London.—The Greatest Combination of Talent in London.—Open EVERY EVENING, at 7.30, and SATURDAY MATINEE, at 2.30, with a STAR PROGRAMME, embracing every Artiste of note.—Manager, Mr. VERNON DOWSETT.

MADAME TUSSAUD'S EXHIBITION, Baker-street Station.—Gordon's Last Stand at Khartoum. New Portrait Models of the late Mr. W. E. Gladstone, Emile Zola, &c.

OPERA and THEATRE TICKETS.—Boxes, Stalls, Dress Circle, and Upper Circle in good positions for "The Opera," and every Theatre in London, can be had at any office of the DISTRICT MESSENGER AND THEATRE TICKET COMPANY. Branches City and West-end. Letters and telegrams to 193, Piccadilly, next to Prince's Hall.

ORIENT COMPANY'S PLEASURE CRUISES

by their
Steamship "LUSITANIA," 3,912 tons register.
For COPENHAGEN, WISBY, STOCKHOLM, ST. PETERSBURG, BALTIC CANAL, &c.,
leaving London 17th August, returning 14th September.
For SICILY, CONSTANTINOPLE, the CRIMEA, GREECE, MALTA, ALGIERS, &c.,
leaving London 20th September, returning 8th November.
String Band, Electric Light, High-class Cuisine.
Managers { F. GREEN & CO. / ANDERSON, ANDERSON, & CO. } Head Offices: Fenchurch-avenue.
For passage apply to the latter firm at 5, Fenchurch-avenue, London, E.C.; or to the West End Branch Office, 16, Cockspur-street, S.W.

NORWAY AND BALTIC CRUISES.

The S.Y. VICTORIA sails JULY 2nd, for 25 days, to NORTH CAPE and NORWEGIAN FIORDS.
To be followed by other cruises on July 30th, and August 18th.
The only modern pleasure cruiser with large airy cabins.
For particulars, apply Manager, 4, Regent-street; GRINDLAY & CO., 55, Parliament-street; or any of THOS. COOK & SONS' Offices.

QUICK CHEAP ROUTE
TO SCANDINAVIA,
Via HARWICH and ESBJERG,

By the Steamers of the U.S.S. Co. of Copenhagen thrice weekly.
Apply to TEGNER, PRICE, & CO., 107, Fenchurch-street, London; or the Continental Manager, Liverpool-st. Station, E.C.

JAPAN, CHINA, AUSTRALIA, HONOLULU, FIJI, NEW ZEALAND, and ROUND THE WORLD.
CANADIAN PACIFIC ROUTE.
For berths or descriptive pamphlets, apply CANADIAN PACIFIC RAILWAY, 67 and 68, King William-street, London Bridge, or 30, Cockspur-street, Trafalgar-square, S.W.

GREAT NORTH OF SCOTLAND RAILWAY.

THE ROYAL ROUTE TO THE NORTH OF SCOTLAND IS viâ ABERDEEN AND THE GREAT NORTH OF SCOTLAND RAILWAY. This route serves Ballater—for Balmoral and Braemar—Peterhead, Fraserburgh, Inverurie, Turriff, Banff, Macduff, Huntly, Keith, Dufftown, Craigellachie, Buckie, Elgin, Forres, Nairn, Inverness, Dingwall, Strathpeffer, Kyle of Lochalsh—for Skye and the Western Isles—Wick, Thurso, and all places in the North of Scotland.

EXPRESS TRAINS, equipped with first and third class corridor carriages with lavatory accommodation and lighted by electricity, run from and to Aberdeen in direct connection with the West Coast and East Coast Companies' fast trains to and from London and all parts of England and Scotland.

THROUGH CARRIAGES are run between ABERDEEN and INVERNESS by all trains, and Conductors in uniform travel with the through carriages viâ Elgin.

Passenger are requested to ask for Tickets routed viâ Aberdeen.

ALTERNATIVE ROUTES.—Passengers from all through booking Stations in England and from through booking Stations in Scotland south of Perth or Dundee, to Forres, Nairn, Inverness, Strathpeffer, Wick, Thurso, and other Stations on the Highland Railway, may on request at the time of booking have tourist or ordinary return tickets made available to travel viâ Aberdeen on the outward journey and viâ Dunkeld on the return journey; or the tickets may be made out to go viâ Dunkeld and return viâ Aberdeen. In travelling viâ Aberdeen passengers have the choice in either direction of four routes on the Great North of Scotland Railway:—

(1) By the Moray Firth Coast Line, viâ Grange and Buckie.
(2) Viâ Keith Town and Craigellachie.
(3) Viâ Keith Junction and Mulben.
(4) Viâ Turriff to Banffbridge or Macduff, resuming the journey from Banff Harbour Station and travelling by the Moray Firth Coast Line viâ Buckie. There is no railway connection between Banffbridge or Macduff and Banff Harbour Station, distance about a mile.

SCENERY.—The Great North of Scotland Railway passes through some of the finest scenery in Scotland. The variety is most pleasing. At one part the Tourist traverses some of the finest agricultural districts in Scotland, with beautiful sylvan and river scenery; at the next he is surrounded by high imposing hills, rising here and there to mountains; while, if he has an eye to coast scenery, nothing could be finer than the prospect from the Coast Line, which skirts the southern shore of the beautiful Moray Firth. The famous Deeside Line, which runs along the picturesque valley of the Dee, carries one through the grandest mountain scenery in the Kingdom. BALMORAL, the Queen's Highland home, where the Court is in residence for four months each year, is within nine miles of Ballater, the terminus of the Deeside Railway. Coaches run daily during Summer between Ballater and BRAEMAR viâ Balmoral through magnificent Highland scenery.

GOLF.—There are large and excellent Golf Courses at all the important places on the Railway. A full list may be obtained on application.

CRUDEN BAY, ABERDEENSHIRE.

A New Seaside Resort. Rail from Aberdeen by the new Cruden Railway. Sheltered Beach. Golf, Bathing, Sea Fishing, Fine Coast Scenery. The Company's splendid new Hotel at Cruden Bay will be ready for the reception of visitors shortly.

Full information and copies of Time Tables, Tourist Programmes, List of Country Lodgings, &c., can be obtained by applying to Mr. A. G. REID, Passenger Superintendent, Aberdeen, or to W. MOFFATT, General Manager.

THE PALACE HOTEL, within the Passenger Station, Aberdeen, owned by the Great North of Scotland Railway Co. Lifts; electrically lighted; mechanically ventilated; covered way from Station. Hotel porters at all trains.

SPA.—Grand Fêtes during the Summer Season. Return Fare 42s. 2d. The Ardennes (Cheapest Continental Holiday), Brussels (for the Field of Waterloo), Switzerland, &c., viâ Harwich-Antwerp, every week-day.

ROYAL MAIL ROUTE TO HOLLAND. HARWICH-HOOK Route to the CONTINENT daily (Sundays included) by the G.E.R. Co.'s twin-screw s.s. Cheapest route Germany and quickest to Holland.

Passengers leave London (Liverpool-street Station) at 8.30 p.m. for the Hook of Holland, and at 8.40 p.m. for Antwerp. Direct service to Harwich from Scotland, the North and Midlands. Restaurant car from York. HAMBURG by G.S.N. Co.'s steamers, Wednesdays and Saturdays. Cheap tickets and tours to all parts of the Continent. Read "Walks in Belgium," price 6d., post 8d. —Particulars at the G.E.R. Co.'s American Rendezvous, 2, Cockspur-street, S.W.; or of the Continental Manager, Liverpool-street Station, E.C.

12 GUINEA NORWAY CRUISES from NEWCASTLE-ON-TYNE—FORTNIGHTLY.
"MIDNIGHT SUN," 3,178 Tons, 3,500 H.P.
Finest YACHTING STEAMER afloat. NO UPPER BERTHS.
Sailings:—May 28; June 11, 25; July 9, 23; and August 6, 20.
Special Cruises, September 3rd and 17th.
Fares from 12 Guineas, including first-class table.
For itinerary, &c., apply to the PASSENGER AGENT, ALBION S.S. Co., Ltd., Mercantile Chambers, Newcastle-on-Tyne.

GAZE'S UNIVERSAL TOURS.

DIRECT TRAVEL and Circular Tours. Tickets issued in advance throughout Great Britain, the Continent, and America.
HOTEL COUPONS for 1,000 Hotels.
CONDUCTED TOURS, Paris, Belgium, The Rhine, Switzerland, &c.
PLEASURE CRUISES: Scotland, Norway, &c.
BAGGAGE, Forwarding and Insurance.

GAZE'S TOURIST GAZETTE, Monthly, gives Summary of all Arrangements and facilities.

HENRY GAZE & SONS, Ltd.,
142, STRAND; 18, WESTBOURNE GROVE; and PICCADILLY CIRCUS,
London.

SIX GUINEAS.—GENEVA TOUR, nine days, extensions to Chamounix (Mont Blanc), Zermatt (Matterhorn), St. Gothard, Oberland, &c. Lecturers, Sir Robert Ball, Mr. Edward Whymper, Dr. Lunn. Departures weekly from May 10.—Details from Secretary, 5, Endsleigh-gardens, Euston, N.W.; 32, Piccadilly, W.; 47, St. Paul's-churchyard, E.C.; 3, Charing-cross, S.W.

LIQUEURS OF THE GRANDE CHARTREUSE.

These delicious Liqueurs, which have come so much into public favour on account of their wonderful properties of aiding Digestion and preventing Dyspepsia, can now be had of all the principal Wine and Spirit Merchants, and all good Hotels and Restaurants throughout the Kingdom.
Sole Consignee: W. DOYLE, 35, Crutched Friars, London, E.C.

ESTATES, AUCTIONS, &c.

TATTERSALL'S THURSDAYS' SALES at ALBERT GATE.
Messrs. TATTERSALL beg to give notice that their THURSDAYS' SALES have commenced, and will be continued during the season.
SALES ON MONDAYS AND THURSDAYS.

ALDRIDGE'S.—40 High-class Coach Horses.
TO BE SOLD, without reserve, next WEDNESDAY, June 29, 1898, by Messrs. W. & S. FREEMAN, at Aldridge's Repository, St. Martin's-lane, London, the property of Mr. E. B. Haselden, 40 HORSES
that have been working in the Excelsior Coach from Brighton to Portsmouth during last winter and the London and Lingfield up to the present time.
Full particulars next week.

ALDRIDGE'S.—Sir H. F. de Trafford's entire KENNEL of SPORTING DOGS, including all his noted field, trial, and bench winners, WILL BE SOLD by AUCTION, on FRIDAY, 1st July, about 1.30 o'clock, by Messrs. W. & S. FREEMAN. Catalogue forwarded.

A COMMANDING BUILDING, suitable for Club, Hotel, Restaurant, Theatre, Music Hall, Stores, Flats, Religious or Philanthropic Institution, or for Commercial Firms requiring large space. — OXFORD MANSION, Oxford Circus, London, W.—To be SOLD by TENDER, on 30th JUNE next, this well-known BUILDING, of striking elevation and fireproof construction, standing on nearly ¼ acre, with four frontages of 100 feet, each within a few yards of the new Oxford Circus Station of the Central London Railway. Six stories; floor space about 54,700 sup. feet; 153 rooms and large central hall and basement; artesian well. Portland lease 58 years.—For particulars and forms of Tender, apply to LEGGATT, RUBINSTEIN, & CO., Solicitors, 5, Raymond-buildings, Gray's Inn, London, W.C.

A BUNGALOW TO BE LET, Furnished, Unfurnished, or would be SOLD, close to Coastguard Station at Shoreham, Sussex, about half a mile from railway station, containing seven rooms, large hall, verandah, lavatory. Price £160. The furniture can be purchased. Unfurnished, £20 per annum; furnished, 2½ guineas per week. Attractions—beautifully situated on beach, splendid bathing, good fishing, river, Downs, delightful views. Close to Brighton and Worthing. Good service of trains to London.—Apply, BELGRAVE LADIES' AGENCY, 83, Ebury-street.

RICKMANSWORTH, Herts.—TO BE LET, a perfectly Furnished HOUSE, containing nine bedrooms, two dressing, three reception, good servants' offices, with hall. Stabling for four; large coach-house; nine acres of ground. Ten minutes' walk from station; golf links close. Plenty fruit and vegetables. 16 guineas inclusive.—Apply to the BELGRAVE LADIES' AGENCY, 83, Ebury-street, S.W.

THE BELGRAVE LADIES' AGENCY are revising their Country House List, and are now getting numerous applications for Houses, with good gardens, on and near the River.—Apply to 83, Ebury-street, S.W.

UPPER PART (Furnished) TO BE LET in Lower Belgrave-street. Electric light; four bedrooms, two reception. Five guineas a week.—Apply to THE BELGRAVE LADIES' AGENCY, 83, Ebury-street, S.W.

TO BE LET, from now until the end of the Season, for 100 guineas, delightful HOUSE in Chester-square, containing nine bedrooms, four reception; well furnished and newly decorated; electric light.—Apply to THE BELGRAVE LADIES' AGENCY, 83, Ebury-street, S.W.

TO INVALIDS.—A LIST of MEDICAL MEN, in all parts, receiving RESIDENT PATIENTS sent gratis, with full particulars, Schools also recommended.—Medical, &c., Association, Ltd., 8, Lancaster-place, Strand, W.C. Tel. Add., "Triform, London." Telephone No. 1,854 (Gerrard).

SALARIED APPOINTMENT VACANT.—A large Financial Corporation require the SERVICES of a GENTLEMAN of good social position to fill the above. Only those of undoubted standing need apply.—Address, L. H. S., 71, Piccadilly.

£20 TOBACCONISTS COMMENCING. Illd. guide (259 pgs.), 3d., "How to open respectably £20 to £2,000." Tobacconists' Outfitting Co., Euston-rd., Ldn. Hairdressers fitted.—H. MYERS.

SPIERS & POND'S STORES

QUEEN VICTORIA STREET, E.C. (Opposite St. Paul's Station, L.C. & D. Rly.).

THE SUMMER SALE
in all Departments will commence
MONDAY, JULY 4th, and continue
for 14 DAYS ONLY.

Sale Lists, also Price Book, No. 51, published 2nd May (1,000 pages), Illustrated, Free on Application.

SPIERS & POND'S STORES
QUEEN VICTORIA STREET, E.C. (Opposite St. Paul's Station, L.C. & D. Rly.).

HEAL & SON'S
BEDROOM FURNITURE.

SIMPLE. ARTISTIC. INEXPENSIVE.

New Catalogue of Bedsteads, Bedding, & Bedroom Furniture post free.

195, 197, 196, 198, TOTTENHAM COURT ROAD, W.

Learning to write with the pen is a wearisome task. . .

But nothing can be simpler or more delightful than learning to manipulate

THE. . .

YOST

. . . Typewriter,

AND THE BENEFITS TO BE DERIVED FROM ITS USE ARE TESTIFIED TO BY AN ARMY OF PEOPLE

INVALUABLE to the Clergyman, the Judge, the Lawyer, the Editor, the Physician, the Business Man, and ALL WHO HAVE MUCH WRITING TO DO.

Sent on One Month's Hire, or Free Trial for Seven Days.

The YOST Typewriter Co., Ltd.,
50, Holborn Viaduct, London, E.C.

"RALEIGH"

SPECIALITIES

Patent Double Drop Frame Tandem for Lady and Gentleman. Patent Triple-tube Lady's Cycle; Light; Rigid. Patent Interchangeable System of Gearing. Unbreakable Fork-crown. Dust-Proof Pedals; &c., &c., &c.

HIGH GRADE ONLY

Catalogues Post Free

CYCLES

Works & Head Offices:— NOTTINGHAM.

London Depôt:— 41, HOLBORN VIADUCT.

"MADE LIKE A GUN."

ROYAL ENFIELD BICYCLES

SEND FOR CATALOGUE.

ENFIELD CYCLE CO., LTD., Redditch.

LONDON: 6c, SLOANE ST., W.; DUBLIN: 73, GRAFTON STREET; CITY AGENCY: BENETFINK'S, CHEAPSIDE.

CARTER 6A NEW CAVENDISH ST. PORTLAND PLACE, LONDON.

ONLY ADDRESS OF ORIGINAL CARTER

LITERARY MACHINE.

For holding book, lamp, meals, &c., in any position over an easychair, bed, or sofa. Deliciously luxurious. A most useful gift. Prices from 17/6

Carrying Chairs from £1.

Breakfast in Bed Tables from 30/-

INVALID FURNITURE.

ADJUSTABLE COUCHES and BEDS from £1. 10/-

Bed Lift £3. 10/-	Bed Rests 7/6
Reclining Boards, 25/-	Leg Rests 10/-
Walking Machines	Crutches 10/6
Portable W.C.'s.	Bed Baths 12. 6
Electric Bells, Urinals, &c.	Commodes, £1. 5/-
Air & Water Beds.

Self-Propelling Chairs from £2

BATH CHAIRS FROM £1. 5/-

ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUES POST FREE.

JOHN CARTER, 6a, NEW CAVENDISH ST. Portland-pl. London, W.

WIRE CYCLE SADDLE.

WOODS' PATENT.

AN IDEAL SADDLE FOR LADY OR GENTLEMAN.

NO MORE CHAFING.

SADDLE SORENESS ENTIRELY PREVENTED.

One Month's Trial Allowed.

Fitted with Felt or Leather Cover.

Prices and Testimonials on application to

THE LONGFORD WIRE CO., LTD., WARRINGTON.

Showrooms—61. ST. MARY AXE, LONDON. (Please mention this Journal.

21/- Post Free The "Osoezi" Saddle 21/- Post Free

Is at once hygienic, anatomically correct, and pressure upon the perineum is avoided. No Saddle-Soreness, even after the hardest and most continuous riding.

Suitable for Ladies or Gentlemen. Easily adaptable to any Machine.

A. W. GAMAGE, LTD.,

126 to 129, Holborn, E.C.

Solid Silver, £4 4s.

Substantially made afternoon tea set on approval. If you decide within two weeks that you do not want it, the money will be returned. Every piece is the highest strength consistent with neatness, and will last a life-time. English Hall Marked.

Delivered safe and secure on receipt of

£4 4s.

WATCHMAKERS' ALLIANCE LTD.,

227, Regent-st., & 184, Oxford-st., London.

DENTAKON

For Cleaning

ARTIFICIAL TEETH,

EITHER

Gold, Platinum, or Vulcanite,

Deodorizing, Disinfecting, removing Grease, keeping them Bright and Clean as when new.

ALL WEARERS SHOULD TRY IT.

Recommended by many eminent Dentists.

In Boxes, 1s. 6d., through any Chemist, or Post free from Maker.

C. LOWE, Chemist, Surbiton, S.W.

WATER ABSOLUTELY FREE FROM DISEASE GERMS, BY USING THE

BERKEFELD FILTER.

Full Illustrated Price List and Testimonials free on application.

FILTER H. AS SKETCH, 42s.

SMALLER SIZE, 30s.

Extract from the Special Report to the British Medical Journal on "The Relative Efficiency of Water Filters," by Drs. Sims Woodhead and Cartwright Wood, Jan. 22nd, 1898. "Experiments were carried out with the Filter H., an exceedingly good model which seems to subserve the functions of a Filter better than any we have yet seen described. . . . The output is so large that there is no reason why such Filters should not supply sufficient water for all household requirements. These Berkefeld Filters afford complete protection against the communication of waterborne disease."—Offices and Showrooms:—

THE BERKEFELD FILTER CO., Ltd., 121, Oxford-street, London, W.

City Depot: W. SCHACHT & CO., 26, Finsbury-pavement, London, E.C.

VINOLIA TOILET REQUISITES.

4d PREMIER VINOLIA SOAP
(For Family Use).

For Delicate, Sensitive, Irritable Skins.

The CHEMIST AND DRUGGIST reports:

"An ideal soap, delightfully perfumed."

1/- per box of 3 Tablets.

6d FLORAL VINOLIA SOAP
(For Private Use).

Keeps the Skin as soft as Velvet.

The MEDICAL NEWS reports:

"Beautifully emollient and softening to the skin."

1/6 per box of 3 Tablets.

10d TOILET VINOLIA SOAP
(OTTO)

Scented with Choice Otto of Rose Perfume.

Beautifies the Complexion.

The GENTLEWOMAN reports:

"Strongly recommended to keep the skin smooth and free from roughness."

2/6 per Box of 3 Tablets.

6d BLONDEAU PERFUMES
Concentrated, Delicate, Pure.

*Vinolia Bouquet,	Rondeletia,
*Marequil,	Hyacinth,
*Jequilla,	Ylang Ylang
*Losaria,	Stephanotis
Wood Violet,	Opoponax,
White Heliotrope,	Patchouli,
Ess. Bouquet,	Musk,
Frangipanni,	Ambergris,
Jockey Club,	Amaryllis,
Maréchal Niel,	White Lilac,
Millefleur,	Narcissus,
White Rose,	Chypre,
Jasmin,	Violette de Parme,
Musk Rose,	Mignonette,
Honeysuckle,	Clematis,
New Mown Hay,	Wallflower,
Lily of the Valley,

Violet, | *Rhine Violets, | Peau d'Espagne.

6d., 1/-, 2/-, 3/-, and 5/- per bottle.

*These perfumes are not supplied in the 6d. quality.

1/- VINOLIA HAIR WASH

DRY. Freshens and cleanses the Hair, and preserves it free from any oily moist appearance.

MOIST. Imparts a natural gloss to the Hair

1/- per Bottle.

Each in 3 odours: Portugal, Rose, and Violet.

1/1½ VINOLIA CREAM

For Itching, Face Spots, Sunburn, &c.

The LANCET reports:

"An emollient cream for the skin in eczema, rash, eruptions, &c."

1/1½, 1/9, 3/6, and 6/- per Box.

1/- VINOLIA POWDER

For Redness, Roughness, Toilet Nursery, &c.

The LADY'S PICTORIAL reports:

"Superseding the old-fashioned toilet powders which are apt to cause acne spots on the face by blocking up the pores of the skin."

In White, Pink, and Cream Tints.
1/-, 1/9, 3/6, and 6/- per Box.

VINOLIA SHAVING SOAP.
6d

(STICKS AND FLAT CAKES.)

Causes no Blotches.

STICKS: Premier 6d., Toilet 1/-, 1/6, 2/6, Vestal 2/-.

FLAT CAKES: Premier 1/-, Toilet 2/-, Vestal 2/6.

6d LYPSYL

A Coralline Emollient for Dry, Rough, Cracked, or Pallid Lips.

In Rose-Red and White Tints, 6d. and 1/- a Tube.

6d VINOLIA LAVENDER WATER.

Natural and Very Lasting.

Contains the finest Essential Oils, Concentrated, therefore the Most Economical.

6d., 1/-, 2/-, and 3/6.

1/6 VINOLIA TOILET WATER.

This is prepared with delicate, refreshing perfumes, and is a most exquisite and delightful preparation to use either clear or in water for the Toilet or in the bath.

1s. 6d. per Bottle.

4d PREMIER VINOLIA DENTIFRICE

Aromatic, Tonic, Refreshing, Preservative.

Keeps the Teeth Ivory White.

Premier in Round Box and Glass Bottle, 4d.
English—2/6.
American—1/6.

6d VINOLIA TOOTH SOAP.

An exquisite preparation for the Teeth. Delightfully perfumed and free from any injurious ingredients.

In Round Metal Box, 6d.

6d VINOLIA TOOTH PASTE.

Delicately Perfumed.

Whitens and Cleanses the Teeth, without in any way injuriously affecting the dental structures.

In Collapsable Tube, 6d.

6d BLONDEAU Inexhaustible Lavender SMELLING SALTS.

These Smelling Salts are of exceptional Strength and most Refreshing. They are agreeably scented, the pleasant odour of Lavender being very pronounced.

6d. and 9d. per Bottle.

6d VINOLIA EAU DE COLOGNE.

Fragrant. Refreshing.

As fine as can possibly be made.

The "Court Circular" reports:

"Vinolia Eau de Cologne we consider is absolutely unequalled for strength, purity, and delicacy of aroma."

6d., 1/-, 2/-, 3/3, and 5/6.

3d per 2-oz. Packet. VINOLIA VIOLET POWDER.

Sanitary. Antiseptic. Soothing.

Specially prepared for Toilet and Nursery use.

In 2-oz. and ¼-lb. Packets, 3d. & 6d.
In ½-lb. Tins, 6d.
In 1-lb. Tins, 9d.

VINOLIA COMPANY, Ltd., MALDEN CRESCENT, LONDON, N.W.

THE NEW EDISON-BELL PHONOGRAPH,

FOR COMMERCIAL USE AND HOME AMUSEMENT IS NOW BEING SOLD, FOR THE FIRST TIME, AT PRICES FROM £6. 6/- COMPLETE.

To be obtained only from the

EDISON - BELL CONSOLIDATED PHONOGRAPH COMPANY, LIMITED,

Edison House, Northumberland Avenue, W.C., or their Licensees and Agents.

THE ESMOND SADDLE

15/- (moveable). 17/6

For Ladies and Gentlemen.

Absolute freedom from all Saddle Discomforts and Increased Power Guaranteed.

TRY ONE FOR A WEEK.

Botolph House, Eastcheap, London.

REAL GERMAN HOLLOW GROUND

KROPP RAZOR

Black Handle 5/6 | Pair, Ivory Handles, in Russia Leather Case. 21/- | Kropp's Duplex Strop 7/6
Ivory Handle 7/6 | Kropp's Strop Paste ...6d.

☞ Write for Pamphlet, "Shaver's Kit and Outfit." Post free.

Wholesale: OSBORNE, GARRETT, & CO., LONDON, W.

Madame Marie Mathieu,

Who has been privately patronised by the highest ladies in England and abroad, begs to state that BY THEIR DESIRE she has now taken additional rooms at

23, CONDUIT STREET, W.

She wishes it to be known that she is the SOLE OWNER and IMPORTER of the OIL which she uses in her treatment for the removal of wrinkles and in all her preparations for the skin.

Prices: Derma Paste, 10/6; Crême Roma, 5/-; Avoinine Powder, 3/6.

All these preparations are harmless, healthy, and most beneficial to the skin.

Hours: 11 a.m. to 6 p.m.

MASSAGE AT HOME.

The MATTO CHAIN

Used by Sandow and all the leading Athletes, Cyclists, &c.

Recommended by the Medical Profession.

For Liver Complaints, Rheumatism, and all Nervous Disorders. Prevents Obesity.

Price 7s. 6d. each. By Post, 4d. extra. From all Chemists.

MATTO LIMITED, 32 & 34, Clerkenwell-rd. London, E.C.

Dr Tibbles'

MALTATED

BANANA FOOD.

UNIQUE FOR INFANTS & INVALIDS AND ALL SUFFERERS FROM INDIGESTION.

Makes a Delicious Porridge

DESCRIPTIVE PAMPHLET OF Dr TIBBLES' BANANA BISCUITS AND OTHER SPECIALITIES, FREE FROM Dr TIBBLES, COUNTY CHAMBERS, BIRMINGHAM.

"The Old Favourite."

MAX GREGER'S CARLOWITZ

SAFEST, SOUNDEST

Dinner Wine.

PURE HUNGARIAN BURGUNDY.

From 15/- per doz.

Of all Wine Merchants and Grocers.

See that every cork bears the brand 'Max Greger.' Without it the wine is not genuine.

Established] [1784.

Old Bushmills

PURE MALT WHISKEY.

A. H. ALLEN, F.I.C., Public Analyst, in his evidence before the Select Committee of the House of Commons on the Bonding of Spirits, remarked:—

"Bushmills Whiskey is entirely a Pot Still Whiskey, and is Distilled wholly from Malt."

PERFECT PURITY GUARANTEED.

Orders will be executed from either of the undermentioned Offices, or from the accredited agents in all parts of the world.

THE OLD BUSHMILLS DISTILLERY CO., LTD., HILL STREET, BELFAST.
THE OLD BUSHMILLS DISTILLERY CO., LTD., 42, NORFOLK-ST., STRAND, W.C.

Old Liqueur, 51s. per doz. * * * (Three Stars), 45s. per doz.

Carriage Paid. Packages Free. Net Cash.

GLEBE

GLEBE SUGAR REFINING Co., GREENOCK.
GLASGOW. & St GEORGE'S-HOUSE, LONDON, E.C.

MARTYRS TO INDIGESTION, KIDNEY TROUBLES, RHEUMATISM, GOUT, &c., &c.

AVOID BEETROOT SALTS!

—

USE ONLY 'GLEBE' SUGAR.

LOSS OF HAIR

Now Ready, post free, 1s. "The Truth and Facts about the Causes and Cure of BALDNESS, GREYNESS, SUPERFLUOUS HAIR, &c." 60 pages. Illustrated. From the Author, O. E. HORN, D Sc, Bournemouth.

PRESS OPINIONS.—"Dr. Horn is a wonderfully clever Hair Specialist."—Editor, St. Paul's, 3/7/97. "Remarkable success has attended Dr. Horn's plan of treatment."—Whitehall Review. "We are quite convinced of the soundness of his fundamental principles."—The Queen.

For Longhand, Shorthand, Pen-and-Ink Drawing, Music-Writing, indeed, whenever a Pen is necessary, use only a "SWAN."

Adds immeasurably to Celerity and Comfort in writing. Of all Pens most famous.

Made in 3 sizes at

10s. 6d.
16s. 6d.
25s.

UP TO £18 18s.
POST FREE.

Send for Complete . . . . Illustrated Catalogue

MABIE, TODD & BARD,
DEPT. C. I.
93, Cheapside, London, E.C.
95a, REGENT ST., W., and 3, EXCHANGE ST., MANCHESTER.

"Quality and price being equal it behoves all patriotic Englishmen to buy the produce of their own Colonies, rather than that of Foreign Countries."

Joshua's

PURE

Australian Brandy

The LANCET says:—"It is sound and honest, and of a fragrance, purity, and quality second to none."

	Bottle.
JOSHUA'S "ONE STAR" ...	4/-
JOSHUA'S "THREE STAR" ...	4/6
JOSHUA'S "SPECIAL" ...	5/6

OF STORES, GROCERS, AND WINE MERCHANTS.

JOSHUA'S "SPECIAL," bottled in Melbourne, bears the Stamp of H.M. Government of Victoria, guaranteeing it the PURE PRODUCT OF THE GRAPE.

Importers: JOSHUA BROTHERS,
28, MARK LANE, LONDON, E.C.

Buy the 4711

Eau de Cologne

IT IS THE BEST, GENUINE, STRONGEST,
MOST LASTING,
MOST REFRESHING
AND INVIGORATING.

Insist upon the "4711"
Brand.
REFUSE ALL SUBSTITUTES.

Of most Dealers in First-class Perfumes. Case of 6 Bottles, carriage paid, for 12/6; or Sample Bottle, 2/3 post free.

THE 4711 DEPOT, 62, NEW BOND ST., LONDON, W.

NOTICE. THE NEW

"CRICKLITE" LAMPS

FOR DINNER TABLES AND DRAWING ROOMS.

Can be SEEN and purchased ONLY at

75, REGENT STREET, next door to St. James's Hall, and
156, REGENT STREET, AND NOWHERE ELSE.

A Special Set of CRICKLITE LAMPS expressly made for HIS IMPERIAL MAJESTY the SULTAN of TURKEY is now on view.

N.B.—Please write for the new Book of Designs, Now Ready.

BEST & SAFEST DENTIFRICE

SOLD BY ALL CHEMISTS AND PERFUMERS IN ELEGANT CRYSTAL TOILET CASKET
PRICE 2/6.
ALSO IN PATENT METALLIC BOX
PRICE 1/-

PRESERVE YOUR TEETH
BY USING THE

OS TOOTH BLOCK

Established 20 years

OVER 3000 TESTIMONIALS

The Purest and the Nicest.

Hovis Bread

Perfectly Self Digestive.

Hovis Bread is baked and delivered daily by all good class Bakers in the British Isles; Hovis Biscuits are sold by most Grocers and Bakers; or 6d. and 1s. Samples of Bread and Biscuits will be sent on receipt of stamps by THE HOVIS-BREAD FLOUR Co., LTD., Millers, Macclesfield.

FLORILINE

FOR THE TEETH AND BREATH

Is the BEST LIQUID DENTIFRICE in the WORLD.

PREVENTS THE DECAY OF THE TEETH.

Renders the Teeth Pearly White.

IS PERFECTLY HARMLESS AND DELICIOUS TO THE TASTE.

Is Partly Composed of Honey, and Extracts from Sweet Herbs and Plants.

Of all Chemists and Perfumers throughout the World.

2s. 6d. per Bottle.

FLORILINE TOOTH POWDER,

Only put in Glass Jars, Price 1s.

THE MEXICAN HAIR RENEWER

Prevents the Hair from Falling off.

Restores Grey or White Hair to its ORIGINAL COLOUR.

Being delicately perfumed, it leaves no Unpleasant Odour.

IS NOT A DYE.

Should be in every House where a HAIR RENEWER is needed.

ASK YOUR CHEMIST OR HAIRDRESSER FOR

THE MEXICAN HAIR RENEWER.

Price 3s. 6d. per bottle.

A HEALTHY HOME

Is obtained by using "PEGAMOID" Brand Leathers, Wall and Ceiling Papers, Window Blinds, Paints, &c., throughout the same.

THE PEGAMOID BRAND.

LEATHER CLOTH for FURNITURE, CARRIAGES, &c., is cheaper than Morocco. Durable, Dirtproof, Scratchproof. Supplied in scores of designs. Easily cleaned with a damp sponge.

WINDOW BLINDS never need be sent to the cleaners, as they can be washed with soap and water by the housemaid, without removal.

PAINTS, ENAMELS, &c., For Iron, Wood, and Stone Work, Artistic Decorations. Impervious to, and unaffected by, Weather, Oils, Acids, and Gases. Germproof and Washable.

Apply to your Upholsterers and Decorators for Patterns and Prices, and insist on seeing them. Applications from the trade only to

PEGAMOID LIMITED,

144, QUEEN VICTORIA STREET, E.C.

Agencies in Manchester, Liverpool, Glasgow, Newcastle-on-Tyne, Birmingham, Bristol, and Southampton.

Achille Serre

HIGH CLASS DYER AND CLEANER,

263, OXFORD STREET,

& 10, NEW BOND STREET, W.

THE MOST ELABORATE COSTUME CLEANED WHOLE.

ALL COUNTRY ORDERS TO BE SENT TO

Works: White Post Lane, Hackney Wick, London, E.

WRITE FOR PRICE LIST.

CARRIAGE PAID ONE WAY ON ALL COUNTRY ORDERS.

The VICTORIA DATE CO., Ltd., Food and Condiment Specialists, beg to draw attention to the following preparations, for the purity and general excellence of which they have obtained numerous awards—Gold Medals, &c.

Victoria Date Vinegar.

The New Vinegar. This condiment is prepared exclusively from dates. It is absolutely pure. Culinary experts pronounce it far superior for Cooking and Pickling purposes to Malt or White Wine Vinegars, as, though of a similar flavour to these, it is non-injurious, and can therefore be used with impunity by the most dyspeptic. It is far and away the best for table use. The leading Pickle and Sauce Manufacturers use it exclusively, among others, POTTER'S PERFECT PICKLES are prepared in Victoria Date Vinegar.

Derby Sauce.

This new Sauce has rapidly taken the first place in popular favour. A trial is sufficient to give it a permanent place in the cruet. Prepared from a Persian recipe of wide reputation in the East, it is a delightful appetiser. It is intended for use with Cold Meats, Chops, Steaks, &c.

Worcester Sauce.

This resembles other sauces of the same name in flavour, but possesses the unique quality of absolute purity.

The VICTORIA DATE CO., Ltd., will have much pleasure in forwarding tasting samples, post free, to applicants who will write to them, mentioning this paper, to Victoria Works, 112, Belvedere Road, Lambeth, London, S.E.

THE

LIVERPOOL & LONDON & GLOBE

INSURANCE COMPANY.

Invested Funds ... ... £9,575,342.

FIRE. LIFE. ENDOWMENTS. ANNUITIES.

Fire Insurances Effected on Most Favourable Terms. Life Bonuses Large, either in Cash or Additions to Sum Assured. Life Policy-holders may so insure as to participate in NINE-TENTHS OF THE PROFITS of their class.

EQUITABLE RATES. MODERATE EXPENSES.

Head Offices: 1, DALE STREET, LIVERPOOL; 7, CORNHILL, LONDON.

PRUDENTIAL ASSURANCE COMPANY, LIMITED.—Holborn Bars, London.

EVERY DESCRIPTION OF LIFE ASSURANCE AND ANNUITY BUSINESS TRANSACTED.
REVERSIONS PURCHASED.

Invested Funds, £30,000,000.

The last Annual Report can be obtained on application to the Secretary.

SPECIAL ADVANTAGES TO PRIVATE INSURERS.

THE IMPERIAL INSURANCE COMPANY, LIMITED. FIRE. Est. 1803, 1, Old Broad-st., E.C., & 22, Pall Mall, S.W. Subd. Capital, £1,200,000. Paid-up, £300,000. Total funds, over £1,500,000.—E. COZENS SMITH, Gen. Man.

BIRKBECK BANK (Estab. 1851), Southampton-buildings, Chancery-lane, London. Two and a-half per cent. interest allowed on deposits, repayable on demand. Two per cent. on current accounts, on the minimum monthly balances when not below £100.
The BIRKBECK ALMANACK with particulars, post free.
FRANCIS RAVENSCROFT, Manager.

THE STOCK EXCHANGE.

NOTICE.

No Member of the Stock Exchange is allowed to advertise for business purposes, or to issue circulars to persons other than his own principals.

Persons who advertise as Brokers or Share Dealers are not Members of the Stock Exchange, or under the control of the Committee.

A List of Members of the Stock Exchange who are Stock and Share Brokers may be seen at the Bartholomew-lane Entrance to the Bank of England, or obtained on application to

EDWARD SATTERTHWAITE,
Secretary to the Committee of the Stock Exchange.

Committee Room, The Stock Exchange, London, E.C.

H. HALFORD and COMPANY, 70 and 71, Palmerston Buildings, Old Broad Street, London.

ESTABLISHED 1869.

Business in Stocks and Shares at close prices.

Dealings reported by wire if required.

Prompt Settlements.

Thousands of Testimonials from Clients.

Americans and Canadians a Speciality. Also Westralians and Kaffirs.

Lists of Closing Prices gratis.

Telegrams: "Monitor, London."

NO CONNECTION WITH ANY OTHER FIRM.

THREE GOLD MEDALS.

Exquisite Models. Perfect Fit. Guaranteed Wear.

THE Y & N PATENT DIAGONAL SEAM CORSET

Will not split in the Seams nor tear in the Fabric. Made in all the fashionable colours and White, Black, and Shades in Italian Cloth, Satin, and Coutil, 4/11, 5/11, 6/11, 7/11 per pair and upwards.

CAUTION.—Every genuine Y & N Corset is stamped.

Sold by Drapers and Ladies' Outfitters in the United Kingdom and Colonies

ALLAN'S ANTI-FAT

PURELY VEGETABLE, Perfectly Harmless. Will reduce from two to five pounds per week; acts on the food in the stomach, preventing its conversion into Fat. Sold by Chemists. Send stamp for pamphlet.

Botanic Medicine Co., 3, New Oxford-street, London, W.C.

BEST AND SAFEST NATURAL APERIENT.

Hunyadi János

"The Prototype of all Bitter Waters."
THE LANCET.

CAUTION.

Every Bottle bears the Signature of the Proprietor, ANDREAS SAXLEHNER.

ABRIDGED PROSPECTUS.

TYNE IMPROVEMENT COMMISSION.

ISSUE of £500,000 THREE-AND-A-HALF PER CENT. TYNE IMPROVEMENT REDEEMABLE STOCK.—Under the Authority of the Tyne Improvement Acts, 1850 to 1898.—Redeemable at par between 1st July, 1918, and the 1st July, 1952, inclusive. Minimum Price of Issue, £100 for every £100 Stock. A full six months' dividend will be paid on the 1st January, 1899.

BARCLAY & COMPANY, Limited, 54, Lombard-street, London, instructed by the Tyne Improvement Commissioners, will RECEIVE, as Bankers to the Commissioners, TENDERS for £500,000 TYNE IMPROVEMENT REDEEMABLE STOCK, bearing interest at 3½ per cent. per annum, payable half-yearly, January 1st and July 1st, at the said Bank or any of its Branches.

Under Section 3 of the Tyne Improvement Act, 1897, the Tyne Improvement Commissioners may from time to time create and issue Tyne Improvement Redeemable Stock, and the amount of the Stock which the Commissioners are by their various Acts empowered to create and issue is not to exceed for all purposes £4,800,000.

Under Section 4 of the Tyne Improvement Act, 1897, the Stock, when issued, and the interest thereon, will be a charge on the Tyne Consolidated Fund, to which, under Section 5 of the Tyne Improvement Act, 1890, all dues, rates, tolls, charges, and sums received by the Commissioners are carried.

Under Section 5 of the Tyne Improvement Act, 1897, all Stock at any time and from time to time created and issued shall rank equally, and shall also rank equally with the Mortgages on the Tyne Consolidated Fund granted after the passing of the Tyne Improvement Act, 1881, without any priority or preference on any ground whatsoever, and the interest for the time being payable on all Stock shall rank equally, and shall also rank equally with the interest on all such Mortgages as aforesaid. The only securities of the Commissioners which have now any priority or preference over the Stock are certain Tyne Improvement Commission Debenture Stock, created under the Tyne Improvement Act, 1877, and certain Mortgages created before the passing of the Tyne Improvement Act, 1881, the total amount of such Debenture Stock and Mortgages being £107,080.

The total amount of money which the Commissioners are by their Acts authorised to borrow is £4,800,000, and the amount owing by the Commissioners for money so borrowed at the 1st June, 1898, was £4,253,631, of which £4,146,551 ranks pari passu, and the balance (£107,080), as stated above, has at present a priority.

For the last five years the gross revenue and the surplus revenue of the Tyne Consolidated Fund have been as follows, namely—

Year.	Gross Revenue.	Surplus Revenue.
1893	£306,565 18 9	£43,166 19 5
1894	332,976 0 0	61,750 9 0
1895	309,256 5 2	27,222 12 9
1896	319,484 3 9	31,735 10 0
1897	346,617 14 8	59,427 13 1

The surplus revenue is arrived at by deducting from the gross revenue all charges for interest, maintenance, and management. The gross revenue has gradually increased from £188,818 5s. 3d. in 1877 to £346,617 14s. 8d. in 1897, or over 83 per cent. in 20 years.

The expenditure charged to Capital Account up to 31st December, 1897, has been	£5,498,990 16 8
Of which there has been met out of accumulated surplus revenue	1,376,620 0 8
	£4,122,370 16 0

The proceeds of the above issue will be mainly devoted to the redemption of existing mortgages bearing a higher rate of interest.

The Stock is redeemable by the commissioners at par on the first July, 1952; or at the option of the Commissioners, on or at any time after the 1st July 1918, but not later than the 1st July, 1952, on the Commissioners giving or sending by post six months' previous notice in writing to the Stockholder of their intention to redeem.

Tenders, in sealed envelopes, will be received by Barclay & Company, Limited, 54, Lombard-street, London, not later than 2 p.m., on Thursday, 23rd June, 1898, where and when they will be opened in the presence of representatives of the Commissioners, and of such of the applicants as may attend.

Tenders may be lodged with Barclay & Company, Limited, Newcastle-on-Tyne, and with any of their branches, not later than Wednesday, the 22nd June, 1898, for transmission to their Head Office in London.

Payment will be required as follows, viz.—£10 per cent. on application, and as much on allotment, but not later than the 1st July, as will leave 50 per cent. to be paid on August 1st, 1898.

The Books of the Stock will be kept at the Banking House of Barclay & Company, Limited, 54, Lombard-street, London, who have been appointed Registrars, where Transfers can be made (without charge and free of Stamp Duty) by personal attendance or Attorney.

Full Prospectuses and Forms of Tender may be obtained at Barclay & Company, Limited, 54, Lombard-street, London, and at their Newcastle-on-Tyne and other Branches; of Messrs. Pember & Boyle, Stockbrokers, 24, Lombard-street, London; and of the Tyne Improvement Commissioners, Berwick-street, Newcastle-on-Tyne.

J. C. STEVENSON, Chairman.
ROBERT URWIN, Secretary.

Tyne Improvement Commission, Newcastle-on-Tyne,
June 18th, 1898.

DOMINION OF CANADA. CITY OF QUEBEC.

Conversion and Redemption of the following Sterling Debentures of the City of Quebec, viz.:—

6	per cent.	Consolidated Fund Loan,	due 1st July, 1905
6	,,	,, ,,	,, 1st July, 1908
6	,,	Debentures	,, 1st Jan., 1910
5	,,	,,	,, 1st Jan., 1913
4½	,,	,,	,, 1st Jan., 1914
4½	,,	,,	,, 1st Jan., 1918
4½	,,	,,	,, 1st Jan., 1925

Messrs. Coates, Son & Co. are authorised by the City of Quebec to invite Holders of the outstanding Debentures of the above issues to exchange their present holdings either for new 3½ per cent. Consolidated Registered Stock of the City of Quebec, or Cash, upon the terms set out in the full Prospectus.

The Stock to be issued in exchange for the Bonds surrendered for conversion is a part of a total authorised issue of £654,480. An official quotation on the London, Liverpool, and Glasgow Stock Exchanges has been granted for that portion of the Stock already issued, and application will be made for any further Stock issued in the terms of this prospectus to be added thereto.

Cheques for the amount of the redemption price of Debentures to be exchanged for Cash will be issued in one week after the Bonds have been deposited.

Prospectuses and Forms for Listing the Debentures to be lodged for Conversion or payment off in Cash may be obtained from Messrs. Glyn, Mills, Currie & Co., Lombard-street, London, The Clydesdale Bank, Limited, London, Glasgow, and Edinburgh, or of Messrs. Coates, Son & Co., 99, Gresham-street, London, E.C.

99, Gresham-street, London, E.C., June 2nd, 1898.

CENTRAL PACIFIC RAILROAD COMPANY.

The London Committee of the Shareholders of this Company hereby give Notice that a GENERAL MEETING of the Holders of the Certificates issued by them will be held in the Large Hall of WINCHESTER HOUSE, 50, Old Broad-street, London, E.C., on TUESDAY, the 28th day of June, 1898, at 2 o'clock in the afternoon, when they will report the result of their labours since the Shareholders were invited to deposit their Stock with them.

By order of the Committee,

F. G. BANBURY, Chairman.
E. W. CHEESMAN, Secretary.

6a, Austin Friars, London, E.C., June 15, 1898.

UNITED STATES OF BRAZIL FUNDING SCHEME.

The Government of the United States of Brazil, having decided to fund for three years, namely, from the 1st of July, 1898, to the 30th of June, 1901, both inclusive, the Interest on the External Debt, the Interest on the 4½ per cent. Internal Gold Loan of 1879 and also certain amounts payable annually for Railway Guarantees, His Excellency the Minister of Finance, acting in conformity with Laws No. 401 of the 11th of September, 1846, No. 427 of the 9th of December, 1896, No. 428 of the 10th of December, 1896, and No. 489 of the 15th of December, 1897, has authorised Messrs. N. M. Rothschild & Sons to ISSUE an amount not exceeding £10,000,000 NOMINAL CAPITAL, 5 per cent. FUNDING BONDS specially secured by the Customs Revenues, as hereinafter mentioned.

The following LOANS will be included in the Funding Scheme :—

The 4½ per cent. Loan of 1883.
The 4½ per cent. Loan of 1888.
The 4 per cent. Loan of 1889.
The 5 per cent. Loan of 1895.
The Western of Minas Railroad Company 5 per cent. Guaranteed Loan of 1893.
The Internal 4½ per cent. Gold Loan of 1879;

And also the amounts GUARANTEED to the following Railways :—

The Alagoas Railway Company (Linha Principal).
The Alagoas Railway Company (Ramal da Assembleá).
The Great Western of Brazil Railway Company.
The Conde d'Eu Railway Company.
The Central Bahia Railway Company.
The Brazil Great Southern Railway Company.
The Bahia and Sau Francisco Railway Company (Timbó Branch).
The Donna Theresa Christina Railway Company.
Southern Brazilian Rio Grande do Sul Railway Company.
Companhia Mogyana.
The Minas and Rio Railway Company.
The Natal and Nova Cruz Railway Company.
Compagnie Générale de Chemins de fer Brésiliens (Paranaguá á Curitiba).
Compagnie Générale de Chemins de fer Brésiliens (Prolongamentos e Ramaes).
Compagnie des Chemins de fer Sud-Ouest Brésiliens (Linha de Santa Maria a Cruz Alta).
Compagnie des Chemins de fer Sud-Ouest Brésiliens (Linha de Cruz Alta a Uruguay).
The Bahia and San Francisco Railway Company.
The Recife and San Francisco Railway Company.
Chemin de fer São Paulo and Rio Grande.

The Sinking Funds and Redemption of the Loans, will be suspended for thirteen years from the 1st of July, 1898.

The said 5 per cent. Funding Bonds will be specially secured by the Rio de Janeiro Customs Revenues, on which they will be a first charge after provision has been made for the amount required for Interest and repayment of the £2,000,000 five per cent. Treasury Bills issued in January, 1898, which are repayable at the rate of £500,000 every six months, the first amount being due on the 1st of July, 1898. The Bonds will also be secured by the Customs Revenues of the other ports of the Union, should the Rio de Janeiro Customs at any time prove insufficient.

According to the Official Returns the Customs Revenues of the Federal Capital amounted, for the year 1897, to 92,000 Contos of Reis, equivalent, at the Exchange of 7d., to £2,683,333 and at the Exchange of 8d., to £3,066,666.

The Total Customs Revenues of the Union, including the above, amounted to 244,000 Contos of Reis, equivalent, at the Exchange of 7d., to £7,116,666 and at the Exchange of 8d., to £8,133,333.

On and after the 1st of January, 1899, and pari passu with the issue of Funding Bonds the Government will deposit in Rio de Janeiro in Trust with the London and River Plate Bank, Limited, the London and Brazilian Bank, Limited, and the Brazilianische Bank für Deutschland, the equivalent of the said Bonds in current paper money at the exchange of 18d., and the paper money equivalent to the Bonds issued from the 1st of July to the 31st of December, 1898, will be deposited in the same manner during a period of three years commencing the 1st of January, 1899.

The paper money deposited will either be withdrawn from circulation and destroyed, or, if and when the Exchange is favourable, will be applied in the purchase of Bills on London in favour of Messrs. N. M. Rothschild & Sons, to be placed to the credit of a Fund towards the future payment in Gold of the Interest on the Loans and the Railway Guarantees.

The 5 per cent. Funding Bonds will be free from all Brazilian Taxes.

The Bonds will be to bearer in sums of £20, £100, £500, and £1,000 each, with Coupons for Interest at the rate of 5 per cent. per annum, payable quarterly, on the 1st of January, the 1st of April, the 1st of July, and the 1st of October in London, in pounds sterling; and in Paris, Amsterdam, Brussels, and Hamburg, at the exchange of the day on London.

The Bonds will be redeemed by an Accumulative Sinking Fund of one-half per cent. per annum, to be applied half-yearly by purchase of Bonds, when the price is under par, and when at or above par by drawings. The Redemption of the Bonds by means of the Sinking Fund, will commence at the end of ten years from the 30th of June, 1901, but the Government reserves the right to pay off the Loan at par at any time.

This Funding Scheme was formulated with the approval of Dr. Campos Salles, President-Elect of the Republic, who during his recent visit to London was in constant communication with his Government on the subject; and before his departure His Excellency expressed his satisfaction with the scheme, and added his assurance that during his term of office he would do all in his power to place the finances of Brazil on a sound basis, and to restore the credit of his country.

The following are the conditions to be observed by holders of Bonds of the before enumerated Loans for the funding of their Coupons, which are to be presented as they become due up to the 30th of June, 1901, inclusive.

In exchange for their Coupons, holders will receive a Receipt for the amount lodged.

These Receipts must be presented in amounts of not less than £20 to be exchanged for Scrip, which will be afterwards exchanged for Bonds of the 5 per cent. Funding Loan.

The smallest denomination of Bond being £20, Certificates will be given for fractional parts of £20, and these fractional Certificates may afterwards be exchanged for Scrip or Bonds in like manner with the Receipts—that is to say, in amounts of not less than £20.

No Interest will be paid on the Receipts or fractional Certificates, but the Scrip or Bonds given in exchange for Receipts or Certificates will bear Interest from the due date of the Coupons for which the Receipts were issued.

Receipts and Certificates for Coupons due on different dates must be kept separate when presented for exchange into Scrip. Only Receipts and Certificates for Coupons due on the same date can be used together in making up the amount to be exchanged for Scrip or Bonds.

New Court, E.C., 15th of June, 1898.

No promotion money has been or will be paid, and no part of the Capital has been underwritten. Of the £115,000 now offered, £75,000 has been already subscribed in Venice.

The Subscription List opened on Tuesday, the 21st June, and will close on or before Thursday, the 23rd June, at 4 p.m.

THE VENICE HOTELS, Limited.

Incorporated under the Companies Act, 1862 to 1893.

CAPITAL .. .. £200,000.

divided into

28,000 Six per cent. Cumulative Preference Shares of £5 each ..	£140,000
60,000 Ordinary Shares of £1 each	60,000
	£200,000

The Preference Shares will be entitled to a Preference both as to Capital and Dividend. The Articles provide that, subject to the power of constituting a reserve fund or funds, the profits shall be applicable first in payment of a Cumulative 6 per cent. Dividend upon the Preference Shares, and secondly in payment of a Non-Cumulative 7 per cent. Dividend on the Ordinary Shares. Of the Balance, 35 per cent. will belong to the Preference Shares, and the remaining 65 per cent. to the Ordinary Shares. The Vendors stipulate that the whole of the Ordinary Shares shall be issued to them as fully-paid. They are willing to take the balance of their purchase price in Cash or Preference Shares as hereinafter mentioned.

The Articles of Association provide that no Debentures shall be issued unless sanctioned by a Resolution of the Preference Shareholders, and £25,000 Preference Shares are reserved for future issue, as, and when, required.

Issue of 23,000 Preference Shares of £5 each, at par, payable as follows :—

On Application	£ 10s.
On Allotment	1 10s.
One Month after Allotment	1 10s.
Two Months after Allotment	1 10s.
	£5 0s.

DIRECTORS.

Edward Moore, Esq., Chairman, Bristol Hotel and Palmerston Co., Ltd.
A. G. Pollock, Esq., Director Nilgiri Railway Co., Ltd.
H. H. Spiller, Esq., 2, Pembridge-villas, W.
Cavaliere Massimo Guetta, of Venice.
*Commendatore Michelangelo Jesurum, of Venice, Director Salviati, Jesurum, & Co., Ltd.
*Signor Nicolò Spada, of Venice.
* Being Vendors, will join the Board after Allotment.

BANKERS.

London :—Lloyd's Bank, Limited, Lombard-street, E.C., and Branches.
Venice :—Jesurum Bros. & Co.'s First Foreigner's Bank in Venice.

SOLICITORS FOR THE COMPANY.—Paines, Blyth, & Huxtable, 14, St. Helen's-place, London, E.C.

SOLICITOR FOR THE VENDORS.—Gilbert E. Samuel, Esq., 16, Great Winchester-street, London, E.C.

BROKERS.

London : Tomkinson & Price, 3, Copthall-buildings, E.C., and Stock Exchange.
Glasgow : A. Dunn Macindoe, Esq., 69, St. Vincent-street.

AUDITORS.—C. F. Kemp, Ford, & Co., 73, Lombard-street, E.C.

SECRETARY AND OFFICES (pro tem.).—J. R. Sherman, 2, Austin Friars, E.C.

ABRIDGED PROSPECTUS.

OBJECT OF COMPANY.—This Company has been formed to acquire the Hotel Royal Danieli, and the Grand Hotel, two old established hotels of world-wide reputation in Venice, which are decorated and furnished throughout in the best style, and are fully equipped as first-class hotels. It is also intended to take over the Hotel Beau Rivage, and the Victoria Hotel, for the purpose of serving as dépendances or annexes to the two first-mentioned hotels. These four hotels are capable of accommodating 1,000 visitors. It is further in contemplation to acquire other hotels of established reputation in Venice as opportunity offers, and negotiations are now in progress for the acquisition of the Hotel de Rome and Pension Suisse. The latter hotel has been offered to the Directors, and a contract for its purchase has been entered into with a trustee for the Company. If upon investigation the Directors are satisfied with the proposed terms, the contract will be adopted.

The primary object of the Amalgamation is to do away with the competition at present existing amongst the above Hotels, thus effecting considerable economies in management, advertising, and otherwise.

Independently of his position as Director, M. Spada has consented to superintend the business in Venice. In addition, arrangements have been made with the present Manager of the Hotel Royal Danieli, to continue to serve the Company in that capacity for a period of five years. Negotiations are pending with the Managers of the Grand Hotel with the same object.

Messrs. C. F. Kemp, Ford, & Co., Chartered Accountants, of London, have examined the books of the Hotels Royal Danieli, Grand, and Victoria, and report as follows :—

Gentlemen,—We have examined the Accounts of the following Hotels in Venice for the periods stated :—

Grand Hotel .....From 1st January, 1895, to 31st December, 1897,
Hotel Royal Danieli..... ,, 1st May, 1895, to 31st do. 1897,
Hotel Victoria ..... ,, 1st March, 1895, to 28th February, 1898.

After making certain necessary adjustments, we certify that the Accounts show that the combined Profits for the above periods accordingly amounted to £31,135 2s. 5d., or an average of £10,602 18s. 3d. a year, whilst the profits of the Hotels for the last year were £12,276 15s. 5d.

In arriving at these profits exchange has been taken at 26 lire to the £, and no charge has been made for interest on Capital and loans, nor for amortization of leaseholds. But the expenses of management and an allowance for Depreciation of Furniture and Fittings in addition to the cost of repairs and maintenance both of the Buildings and Furniture have been charged in the Accounts.

As regards the considerable falling off in the profits of the Hotel Royal Danieli for the year 1896, we are informed that this arose in consequence of structural alterations to the building in that year, which interfered with the business. (Signed) C. F. KEMP, FORD, & CO.

The sum of £6,900 will be necessary to pay the fixed dividend of 6 per cent. upon the Preference Shares now offered for subscription, and taking last year's profits as the basis of calculation, there will remain £5,376 available for sinking fund purposes, London expenses, and dividend on the Ordinary Shares.

It must be remembered that no profit is taken into account in respect of the Hotel Beau Rivage, possession of which will not be obtained for nearly eleven months, and that beyond the saving expected to result from the amalgamation, profit is anticipated from a large restaurant which it is proposed to open on the ground floor of the Hotel Victoria, as well as from the further accommodation to be given to the Hotel Royal Danieli by the addition of a freehold house, which is included in the property to be acquired by the Company, and which, when converted, will increase by forty the number of bedrooms in that hotel. Moreover, the Palace Gritti, which has been only recently acquired by the Grand Hotel, was not ready for the reception of visitors until April of last year.

A portion of the furniture at the Palace Molin, being the property of the Lessor, is not for sale, but the Lease entitles the tenant to the use of it. Some of the Furniture, which is in private use, at the same hotel is also excluded.

Commendatore Emilio Pellesina, a Valuer of high reputation in Venice, values all the above, with the exception of the Leaseholds, at 2,738,600 Lire = at 26 lire to the £, to £105,330 15s. 4d., which, with the cash working capital of £15,000 to be provided out of the present issue, forms the security for the present issue of Preference Shares.

No part of this issue has been underwritten and no promotion money has been or will be paid.

Application for a quotation and settlement on the Stock Exchange for the Preference Shares will be made in due course.

Copies of the Memorandum and Articles of Association and of the Contracts above referred to, together with the Report of Messrs. C. F. Kemp, Ford & Co., and sworn valuations by Commendatore Pellesina (including one in regard to the Hotel de Rome and Pension Suisse) may be inspected by intending subscribers at the office of the Solicitors of the Company.

Prospectuses and Forms of Application, &c., can be obtained from the Bankers, Brokers, and Solicitors, and at the Offices of the Company.

The Application List will Open on Wednesday, the 22nd day of June, 1898, and Close on or before Friday, the 24th day of June, at 4 p.m.

THE HYDRO-INCANDESCENT GAS LIGHT CO.

(Incorporated under the Companies Acts, 1862-1893.) LIMITED.

Working under Contract with the Welsbach Incandescent Gas Light Company, Limited.

CAPITAL - - £200,000,

DIVIDED INTO 200,000 SHARES OF £1 EACH.

ISSUE OF 200,000 SHARES, which are now offered for Subscription at par, payable as follows:—2s. 6d. per Share on Application, 7s. 6d. on Allotment, and 10s. one month after Allotment.

DIRECTORS.

Sir William Robinson, G.C.M.G., late Governor of Hong Kong, 53, Ashley-gardens, S.W.

Henry A. Greig, Esq., Chairman Limmer Asphalte Company, Limited, 2, Moorgate-street, E.C.

Sidney Marler, Esq., Director, Waring & Gillow, Limited, 175 and 176, Sloane-street, S.W.

*Martin Wassermann, Esq., D.C.L. (Heidelberg), Director of Internationale Hydro-Press-Gas Compagnie, Limited, Hamburg.

*Will join the Board after allotment as the Representative of the Internationale Hydro-Press-Gas Compagnie, Limited, of Hamburg.

With power to add.

BANKERS.—The Capital and Counties Bank, Limited, Threadneedle-street London, E.C., and Branches.

BROKERS.—Messrs. Lumsden & Myers, 29, Cornhill, and Stock Exchange, London, E.C.

SOLICITORS FOR THE COMPANY.—Messrs. Faithfull & Owen, 11, Victoria-st., S.W.

SOLICITORS TO THE VENDORS.—Claude M. Treadwell, Esq., 49, Queen Victoria-street, E.C.

AUDITORS.—Messrs. E. Layton, Bennett & Co., Bishopsgate House, Bishopsgate-street, E.C.

GENERAL MANAGER.—G. T. Augspurg, Esq. (late of the Welsbach Incandescent Gas Light Company, Limited).

SECRETARY.—Charles Weyland, Esq.

OFFICES.—88, Victoria-street, Westminster, S.W.

PROSPECTUS.

This Company has been formed for the purpose of acquiring the whole of the British, Indian, Australasian, South African, and Canadian patent rights, and all other rights incidental thereto, of the Hydro-Incandescent Gas Light, and the benefits of the valuable license with the Welsbach Incandescent Gas Light Company hereinafter referred to.

This Company has had transferred to it a contract and license with the Welsbach Incandescent Gas Light Company whereby the latter undertakes, for a minimum period of five years, to manufacture and sell the apparatus, paying over to this Company 50 per cent. of the gross profits, not charging anything for establishment expenses, advertising or cost of selling and placing on the market, and during the continuance of the license not to make use of any other hydraulic gas pressing apparatus; and that, in the further event of the contract being determined, this Company is to be deemed to have a license to use the Welsbach mantles and burners, and the Welsbach Incandescent Gas Light Company are to supply such mantles and burners at a discount of 30 per cent. from the current price.

The Hydro-Incandescent Gas Light embodies a most ingenious, practical and useful advance in lighting power for hotels, theatres, concert halls, shops, manufactories, railway stations, streets, barracks, docks, lighthouses, foundries, cotton and other mills, and all other places where brillant illumination and hygienic conditions, combined with safety, are desired.

The apparatus by means of which the advantages of this light are achieved is exceedingly simple, and can easily be fitted to existing gas and water supplies. The resultant light is superior to the electric arc light, being absolutely steady and devoid of the bluish flickering glare which characterises the latter. Notwithstanding its greater illuminating power, the light is more salutary than any other form of artificial light, owing to the fact that it more nearly approximates the sun's rays, and shades of colour are as readily distinguishable as in the daylight.

One of the effects of the hydro treatment is to remove impurities from the gas, which, under the old conditions, escaped through the flame. Another important feature in connection with the Hydro-Incandescent Light is that no covering whatever is required. It burns quite steadily and effectually, even in a dusty factory, without globe or chimney, but for decorative purposes the usual gas globes may be employed.

Beyond the great monetary saving effected by dispensing with chimneys, and the economy of mantles, under the new system, one burner will do the work that many were required to accomplish. A single burner consuming ordinary gas as supplied from the main by a gas company can, if desired, give a light up to 1,500 (fifteen hundred) candle power, at a much lower price than an electric arc lamp.

The Welsbach Incandescent Gas Light Company use for the distribution of their goods no fewer than 16,000 agents and traders in the United Kingdom. Through the contract referred to, the Hydro-Incandescent Company will practically avoid the expenses and delays attendant on organising an establishment of its own; therefore this Company starts under the brightest auspices.

England, without doubt, is one of the largest fields for the sale of Incandescent Burners and Mantles, and it is stated that in the United Kingdom there are over 200,000,000 gas jets in use, and that not five per cent. of these are Incandescent Lights. The future prospects therefore for the Hydro-Incandescent Apparatus deserve close attention.

In addition to the income to be derived from the Company's operations in Great Britain, the Indian, Australasian, South African and Canadian Patents are of high value, and the Directors feel confident that a considerable revenue is secured for the Company from its inception.

The validity of the letters patent which the Company will acquire has been thoroughly investigated. The following is the opinion of Mr. J. Fletcher Moulton, Q.C.:—

"I have examined the specification and claims of the letters patent granted to Rothgiesser, No. 8186 of 1897, and the prior specifications disclosed by the search in British and American specifications by Messrs. Jensen & Son, Patent Agents, and I am of opinion that the letters patent are valid and adequately protect the apparatus as made.

"Temple, 27th May, 1898."

The purchase price of the patents and all rights for Great Britain, India, Australasia, South Africa, and Canada, together with the benefits of the license with the Welsbach Incandescent Gas Light Company, Limited, has been fixed by the Vendors, who are the promoters, at £180,000, payable as to £113,334 in cash, and the balance in cash or partly in cash and partly in shares, or 66,666 in shares at the option of the Directors, being the maximum allowed by the rules of the Stock Exchange, leaving £20,000 for working capital.

The Vendors are also entitled, under a valuable Contract dated the 3rd day of June, 1898, and made between the Internationale Hydro-Press-Gas Compagnie, Limited, of the one part, and themselves of the other part, to an option, until the 31st December, 1898, to purchase the United States, Russian, French, Belgian, Italian, Austrian, and Hungarian patents, or patent rights, relating to the Hydro-Incandescent Gas Light, or any of them, subject as to the United States and Belgium patents to certain negotiations which have been already entered upon by the Internationale Hydro-Press-Gas Compagnie, Limited, but the benefit of which will be assigned to the Vendors, and by their Contract with the Company they have agreed to pay to the Company 25 per cent. of the gross profits made by them on the resale of these patents, or patent rights, or any of them.

The following Contracts have also been entered into:—

Contract, dated the 17th day of March, 1898, and made between the Internationale Hydro-Press-Gas Compagnie, Limited, of Hamburg, Germany, of the one part, and Maurice Joseph Wells and Samuel Husbands Beckles of the other part, being the agreement under which the Vendors are acquiring the premises from the present owners, the above-named German Company. Contract, dated the 4th day of June, 1898, and made between the said Maurice Joseph Wells and Samuel Husbands Beckles of the one part, and the Company of the other part, being the Contract under which the Vendors sell the premises to the Company at a profit, as modified by agreement endorsed thereon, dated June 3rd, 1898, and made between the same parties. Also a licence, dated the 19th day of February, 1898, made between the Internationale Hydro-Press-Gas Compagnie, Limited, of Hamburg, Germany, of the one part, and the Incandescent Gas Light Company, Limited, of the other part, being the licence above referred to, and as regards the interests of the Incandescent Gas Light Company, Limited, vested in the Welsbach Incandescent Gas Light Company, Limited.

Applicants are to be deemed to have full notice of the contents of the above contracts and license, and to have agreed with the Company as a Trustee for the Directors, and other persons liable not to make any claim whatsoever, or to take any proceedings under the Section 38 of the Companies Act, 1867, or under the Directors' Liability Act in respect of any non-compliance with the said Section, or any mis-statement in the prospectus made by the Directors under the bonâ fide belief that it was true.

There are other agreements and arrangements made by the Vendors in connection with the promotion of the Company and the providing of the capital thereof to which the Company is no party, which may be within the said Section 38 of the Companies Act, 1867, and applicants for shares shall be deemed to have full notice of these agreements, and to have waived all rights to be supplied with particulars of such contracts, and to have agreed with the Company as a Trustee for the Directors and other persons liable in manner above mentioned.

The Vendors will pay all costs in connection with the formation and registration of this Company down to the first general allotment of shares, except the stamp duties on the agreements for purchase and brokerage.

The Memorandum and Articles of Association of the Company, and the said covenants and agreements and license, together with Mr. J. Fletcher Moulton's opinion, can be seen at the Offices of Company's Solicitors.

Application will be made in due course to the Committee of the Stock Exchange for a special settlement and official quotation.

Applications should be made on the form below, and forwarded to the Bankers of the Company with the amount of deposit. When no allotment is made the deposit will be returned in full, and if the number of shares allotted be less than that applied for the surplus will be credited in reduction of the payment on allotment, and any balance will be returned.

Copies of the Prospectus and Forms of Application for Shares can be obtained at the Registered Offices of the Company, or of the Bankers, Solicitors, or Brokers.

London, 15th June, 1898.

This Form must be sent entire with remittance of 2s. 6d. per Share, addressed to the Bankers, The Capital and Counties Bank, Limited, Threadneedle-street, London, E.C., or any of their Branches.

THE HYDRO-INCANDESCENT GAS LIGHT COMPANY, LIMITED.

CAPITAL - - £200,000, in SHARES of £1 each.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR SHARES.

To the Directors of THE HYDRO-INCANDESCENT GAS LIGHT COMPANY, Limited.

GENTLEMEN,—I request you to allot me.....Shares of £1 each, of the above-named Company, and I agree to accept the same or any smaller number that may be allotted to me, subject to the Memorandum and Articles of Association, and upon the terms and conditions contained in the Prospectus, dated 15th June, 1898. I undertake to pay the further instalments as provided by the said Prospectus, and authorise you to register me as the holder of the Shares, and I hereby agree with the Company as Trustees for the Directors and other persons liable, to waive any further compliance with the 38th Section of the Companies Act, 1867, than is contained in the said Prospectus.

I enclose a cheque for £.....being the deposit of 2s. 6d. per Share payable on application.

Name (in full).....

Address.....

Description.....

Date.....1898.

Usual Signature.....

THE HYDRO-INCANDESCENT GAS LIGHT COMPANY, LIMITED.

BANKERS' RECEIPT FOR DEPOSIT.

RECEIVED this day of 1898, from the sum of Pounds, Shillings, and Pence, being a deposit of 2s. 6d. per Share on application for Shares of £1 each in the above-named Company.

For The Capital and Counties Bank, Limited.

£ : : STAMP. Cashier.

FREEHOLD SECURITIES.

The List of Applications OPENED on TUESDAY, June 21st, and CLOSE on THURSDAY, June 23rd, for Town and FRIDAY, June 24th, for the Country.

THE HOTEL AND CLUB INVESTMENT CO., Ltd.

Incorporated under the Companies Acts, 1862 to 1893.

SHARE CAPITAL, £100,000, divided into 100,000 Shares of £1 each.

Issue of £150,000 Four-and-a-Half per Cent. First Mortgage Debentures at Par.

The Debentures are issued in amounts of £50 each, payable as follows:—£10 on Application; £20 on Allotment; £10 on October 3rd, 1898; and £10 on January 3rd, 1899. Total, £50.

Interest will be payable on the 31st December, 1898, on each instalment from the date of payment, but if desired the whole amount may be paid in full on Allotment, and will carry 4½ per cent. per annum from the date of payment.

Interest will be payable half-yearly on the 30th June and 31st December in each year on each Debenture fully paid. The Debentures will be redeemable after 31st December, 1908, at the price of £52 10s. each on six months' notice at the option of the Company. The Debentures will be secured by a specific mortgage to the trustees of the freehold properties described in this Prospectus and by a floating charge on the furniture, plant, stores, effects, licences, subscriptions, goodwill, and all the other assets of the Company.

NONE OF THE ORDINARY SHARE CAPITAL IS OFFERED, AND IT IS NOT PROPOSED TO OFFER ANY FOR PUBLIC SUBSCRIPTION.

TRUSTEES for the DEBENTURE HOLDERS.—The Ocean Accident and Guarantee Corporation, Limited.

DIRECTORS.

DAVID DE PINNA, Esq., 44, Porchester-terrace, Hyde Park, W. (Chairman).
JOHN PHILIP FEARON, Esq. (Messrs. H. B. Fearon & Son), 39, Holborn-viaduct, E.C.
HERBERT J. GRIMWADE, Esq. (Messrs. Terry, Herbert, & Co.), 19 and 21, Fore-street-avenue, E.C.

SOLICITORS TO THE TRUSTEES FOR THE DEBENTURE HOLDERS. — Messrs. Mellor, Smith, & May, 1, Moorgate-place, E.C.

SOLICITORS TO THE COMPANY.—Messrs. Frank Richardson & Sadler, 28, Golden-square, Regent-street, W.

AUDITORS.—Messrs. Edward Moore & Sons, Chartered Accountants, 3, Crosby-square, E.C.

BANKERS.—The City Bank (Limited), 34, Old Bond-street, W., Head Office and Branches.

ARCHITECTS.

Messrs. J. T. Wimperis & Arber, 25, Sackville-street, W.
G. M. Jay, Esq., Palmeira-chambers, Brighton.

SECRETARY.—Mr. Otho Oliver. OFFICES.—47, Pall Mall, S.W.

The present issue of Four and a Half per Cent. First Mortgage Debentures is made by the Hotel and Club Investment Co., Limited, for the purpose of redeeming the existing debentures of the Company, for completing the purchase of the freehold site in Dover-street and Berkeley-street, Piccadilly, hereinafter described; for building upon part of such site and equipping a new club house, for the Empress Club, Dover-street; for erecting upon the remainder of such site and equipping the Hotel Osborne, Berkeley-street, Piccadilly, and for purchasing the freehold of the old-established and highly connected Princes Hotel, Brighton, with the goodwill of the business carried on there, and the furniture, plant, fixtures, and effects in and upon such hotel.

So compact a block of freehold land as the freehold site in the Dover-street and Berkeley-street, Piccadilly, and situated in that particular locality, changes hands so seldom that it is difficult to correctly estimate its worth, but there can be no doubt as regards its great value for investment purposes. The choicest positions in the West End, as a general rule, either belong to the Crown or to entailed estates. Hence the difficulty in any private individual or company acquiring a freehold site equal to the one secured by this Company for the new buildings of the Empress Club and the Hotel Osborne. Forming a block of about a quarter of an acre, it is in the very centre of that most valuable and fashionable area bordered by Piccadilly and Pall Mall, Mayfair, Berkeley-square, Grosvenor-square, and Bond-street. The property is surrounded by the estates of the Duke of Devonshire, the Marquis of Lansdowne, Lord Fitzhardinge, and the Earl of Mexborough. The rapid growth of expensive mansions, flats, and shops, in the vicinity of Piccadilly induces a steady annual increase in the value of land in that part of London, and makes it therefore a most desirable investment.

The new building for the Empress Club, fronting on Dover-street, is to be a fine stone building of imposing elevation, from the designs of Messrs. J. T. Wimperis & Arber. The area occupied will be about 5,250 square feet, or about one-eight of an acre. The building will be situate close to Piccadilly and Bond-street. The magnificent reception rooms and club rooms as planned are unique even for buildings of this class, and there will also be about 60 bedrooms for members visiting town, besides ample accommodation for carrying on the large business of the club, which has over 2,700 members, and the new premises will accommodate nearly twice that number. The success of the Empress Club has been almost phenomenal, which renders it urgently necessary to provide much larger premises. The new building is only three doors removed from the present club house, and arrangements will be made to complete the work with all speed.

The Hotel Osborne, Berkeley-street, Piccadilly, will also cover about one-eighth of an acre, and is to be erected from designs by the same eminent architects as the Empress Club. The position of the hotel will be unequalled in the West End of London. Situated in one of the busiest centres, and midway between Piccadilly and Berkeley-square, it has the incomparable advantage of a completely open prospect, the windows commanding a lovely outlook over the beautifully wooded grounds immediately opposite. There will be 10 complete residential suites in front of the hotel, and altogether over 100 rooms.

The Empress Club and the Hotel Osborne will be fitted with very elegant passenger lifts to all floors, besides several luggage and service lifts. All these will be worked by electric power, which together with the electric light throughout both buildings, and all the steam for cooking and heating purposes, besides the entire hot-water circulation, will be supplied, wholly or partly, from the Company's own works, which they propose to construct on the property.

Princes Hotel, Brighton, is an old-established fully-licensed freehold property. It it an imposing building, occupying the very choicest corner of the sea front and grand avenue, facing the sea and the beautiful Hove lawns. The area occupied is about 11,286 square feet, or rather over a quarter of an acre. This portion of Brighton is a favourite residential district for the fashionable world, and is of a very exclusive character. As Princes Hotel is the only licensed house on this part of the sea front, the exceptional value and importance of the property can hardly be over-estimated. It has been a favourite resort for families of the nobility visiting Brighton for 30 years past. The hotel is substantially and elegantly furnished, and fitted throughout with all the latest modern improvements, including the electric light and modern passenger lift. It is now being renovated and redecorated, and a new and modern system of drainage carried out, which will bring the conveniences of the house up-to-date with the most recently constructed hotel.

The directors estimate that the expense of building and equipping the New Club House for the Empress Club and the Hotel Osborne will not be less than £130,000. This is exclusive of the cost of the freehold land and of acquiring the Princes Hotel, Brighton.

Messrs. J. A. Lumley & Co., the well-known surveyors and valuers, report on the various properties as follows (owing to want of space the following is only an extract from their report; full report is contained in the Prospectus):—

"Lumley House, 34, St. James's-street, London, S.W., May 31st, 1898.

"To the DIRECTORS, the HOTEL and CLUB INVESTMENT COMPANY, Ltd.

"Gentlemen—Following your instructions, we have made a careful survey of the freehold site fronting Dover-street and Berkeley-street, Piccadilly, as well as of the plans of the new buildings which have been submitted to us by Messrs. J. T. Wimperis & Arber. We find that the frontage is 50 ft. on both Dover-street and Berkeley-street, and the depth, being 215 ft., gives an approximate area of 10,750 square feet, or about one-quarter of an acre.

"We consider the position is admirably situated for the purpose for which it is intended—namely, the new building for the Empress Club and an equally high-class hotel. The advantages of the position are, indeed, so obvious that it is needless for us to enlarge upon them, and we consider that you are very fortunate in being able to secure such a property, which may be regarded as a gilt-edged investment.

"We have also made a careful survey of the Princes Hotel, Brighton. The property is freehold and fully licensed. It has a frontage to the sea front of 6 feet, and a return frontage of 171 feet upon the Grand-avenue, and covers an area of 11,286 square feet, or more than a quarter of an acre. The building is substantial in construction and is now being put in complete condition both inside and outside.

"We estimate the value of the Freehold Properties (when the two new buildings are complete), together with the electric light, lifts, steam power, and plant complete, and furnished, fitted, and equipped as designed for the purposes of the businesses, at the following amounts:—

"Freehold Properties	£170,000
"Furniture, fixtures, plant, electric light, lifts, steam and water plant, together with wines, spirits, and stores (estimated)	65,000
	£235,000

"This valuation is exclusive of the goodwill of the company's businesses, which are of very great value, and are included in the security to the debenture holders. We are, Gentlemen, yours faithfully, J. A. LUMLEY & CO."

Although the dividend distribution among the Ordinary shareholders does not affect the rights of the Debenture holders, the following report of the Company's Auditors is added:—

"3, Crosby-square, London, E.C., 2nd June, 1898.

"To the DIRECTORS of the HOTEL and CLUB INVESTMENT COMPANY, Ltd.

"GENTLEMEN,—We have examined the books of the Empress Club from the date of its opening in March, 1897, to 31st December last, and have found that the gross receipts amounted to the sum of £10,604 19s. 7d., of which the sum of £6,583 was received from subscriptions and entrance fees. After writing off the whole of the preliminary expenses and depreciations and carrying over the unexpired proportions of the above subscriptions applicable to 1898, the net profits for the period were equivalent to £24 3s. per cent. per annum upon the capital employed in the club.

"We have also examined the books of Princes Hotel Brighton, from the 1st July, 1895, to the 9th May, 1898, the date of the commencement of the present alterations, a period of nearly three years, and after writing off all expenses and repairs, but without providing for depreciations, the profit was equal to £12 3s. 7d. per cent. per annum, upon the capital invested in the hotel; the average for the period from the 1st July, 1897, to the 9th May, 1898, was £14 3s. 5d. per cent.

"We are, Gentlemen, yours faithfully, EDWARD MOORE & SONS."

The ample sources of revenue out of which the interest on the Debentures is to be provided will be seen from the following:—

(a) The estimated rental value of the company's freehold properties (apart from any business carried on there) exceeds the amount of the Debenture interest.

(b) The estimated income from the two freehold hotels is more than sufficient to cover the interest on the Debentures, exclusive of the large income derivable from the Empress Club.

(c) The income derivable from the Empress Club in the new premises should be sufficient to pay the interest on the Debentures nearly twice over.

(d) At extremely moderate prices the returns from the front suites of rooms of the Hotel Osborne from permanent tenants when fully let would be sufficient to pay the whole amount of the interest on these Debentures.

(e) The directors feel assured that it is better for the general business of the company to retain possession of the Hotel Osborne, but a proposal has been made to take the hotel on lease when completed and fully furnished, licensed, and equipped, at a rental nearly sufficient to pay the entire interest on the present issue of Debentures.

The public appreciation of high-class hotel companies as safe and profitable investments may be recognised from the current market price of similar issues of Debentures taken from the Stock Exchange Official List for May 14th, 1898:

Burlington Hotels, Limited ...	Four per Cent. Debentures ...	104—107
Coburg Hotel, Limited	" " ...	101—103
Spiers & Pond, Limited	" " ...	103—105
De Keyser's Hotel, Limited ...	" " ...	109—111
Gordon Hotels, Limited	" " ...	121—124
Holborn and Frascati, Limited	" " ...	111—115
Palace Hotel, Limited...	" " ...	101—103
Savoy Hotel, Limited...	" " ...	110—113

The average middle price of these Debenture issues works out fractionally higher than 108¾ per cent., and on this valuation the market value of the present issue of Four-and-a-Half per Cent. Debentures would be over 122 per cent.

No preference will be made in the allotment of these Debentures, with the single exception that holders of the existing Debentures, which it is proposed to redeem, will, as far as possible, receive allotments in full.

Application will be made in due course for an official quotation on the London Stock Exchange.

Applications for Debentures should be made on the enclosed form and forwarded, together with the amount due on application, to the Bankers.

Where no allotment is made, the amount deposited on application will be returned in full; and where the number of Debentures allotted is less than the number applied for, the balance will be applied towards the payment due on allotment.

Copies of this Prospectus and Forms of Application for Debentures can be obtained at the Offices of the Company or the City Bank, Bond-street, and branches. Print of the Memorandum and Articles of Association of the Company, form of Debenture and draft of the trust deed, may be inspected at the Office of the Company's Solicitors, Messrs. Frank Richardson & Sadler, 28, Golden-square, Regent-street, W.

June, 1898.

This application form may be cut out, filled up, and sent, with cheque for deposit, to the City Bank, Limited, Bond-street, London, W., or to the Secretary of the Company.

THE HOTEL AND CLUB INVESTMENT COMPANY, LIMITED.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR FOUR-AND-A-HALF PER CENT. FIRST MORTGAGE DEBENTURES.

To the DIRECTORS of THE HOTEL and CLUB INVESTMENT COMPANY, Ltd.

Gentlemen,—Having paid to the Company's Bankers (the City Bank, Limited, Bond-street), the sum of £....., being a deposit of £10 per debenture on ..... Four-and-a-Half per Cent. First Mortgage Debentures of £50 each, I request you to allot me the same upon the terms and subject to the conditions of the Company's Prospectus, dated June, 1898, and I hereby agree to accept the same, or any smaller number that may be allotted to me, and to pay the further instalments as provided by the said prospectus.

Name (in full).....
Address.....
.....
Description or Title.....
Usual Signature.....
June ....., 1898.

Please write these Particulars distinctly.

FREEHOLD SECURITIES.

Particulars of the Freehold Properties, together with Photographs and Sketches, enclosed with the Prospectus.

THE HOTEL AND CLUB INVESTMENT CO., Ltd.

The following more detailed description of the Company's Freehold Properties, with Photograph and Sketches, are enclosed with the Prospectus:—

HOTEL OSBORNE, BERKELEY-STREET, PICCADILLY.

The Hotel Osborne, which the Company proposes to build upon the Berkeley-street portion of the freehold land mentioned in the Prospectus, will be erected from designs by the well-known architects, Messrs. J. T. Wimperis & Arber. The building will be of white stone, of imposing elevation, and occupying a site of about one-eighth of an acre in undoubtedly the choicest position in the heart of the West End, and, situate only 15 doors from Piccadilly and 10 from Berkeley-square, it will have the unique advantage of overlooking the beautiful gardens and well-wooded grounds of his Grace the Duke of Devonshire and of the Earl of Lansdowne.

There will be ten distinct private suites, each comprising drawing room, two bedrooms, and bathroom, the principal rooms overlooking the grounds. The spacious entrance hall, flanked on either side by the drawing room and smoking room, both cheerful, sunny rooms, at the back of which will be the billiard and dining rooms, opening on to a palmarium; manager's office, service rooms, &c., complete the ground floor. There will also be a number of bedrooms of various sizes, provided with bathrooms of the most modern and approved type. The electric power for lighting and working the lifts, both passenger, luggage, and service, also the steam for heating and cooking, and the hot-water service, will be supplied wholly or partly from the Company's own works which they propose to construct on the property, and throughout the plans every advantage has been taken of the latest inventions for saving labour and curtailing current expenses by judicious initial outlay.

THE EMPRESS CLUB, DOVER-STREET, PICCADILLY.

The design opposite represents the new premises for the Empress Club, about to be erected from the plans of Messrs. J. T. Wimperis & Arber, upon the Dover-street portion of the freehold land. It will be a fine stone building, in every way worthy of the principal ladies' club in the world, and is situated only three doors from the present club house.

The grand and roomy old mansion formerly occupying the site will be well remembered by many as the family town house of the Marquis of Abergavenny, famous for its massive and stately proportions. Many of the beautiful carvings and doors, which it would be impossible to reproduce, will be preserved and utilised in the new building.

The arrangements have been planned with a view of securing to the members on a complete scale all the numerous advantages which have been found by experience at the present Club House to be the basis of permanent and lasting success, and which have made the Club practically indispensable to the majority of its distinguished members.

On the ground floor will be arranged a comfortable inner hall and lounge opening from the entrance hall with waiting and cloak rooms; a spacious reception-room and a really magnificent guests' dining-room surrounded on three sides by a gallery and opening into a palmarium. On the first floor will be the members' dining-room, reading and silence rooms, also a handsome suite of drawing-rooms capable of being divided by sliding doors that they may be used to their fullest advantage, and adapted to meet every purpose for which they may be required. The bedrooms, about 60 in number, will be bright, cheerful rooms, containing hanging wardrobe accommodation for from 10 to 20 dresses, and on each floor bathrooms, service and attendants' rooms; the ladies' maids' sitting-room will be on the second floor. A special feature of the building will be a lower ground floor, in which will be located dressing-rooms with wardrobes, very large luggage and cycle rooms, parcel offices, &c. The passenger lift will run from this floor to the top of the house. Luggage will not pass through the hall, but will be conveyed by lift down the area, through the building on a trolley, and up the luggage lift to its destination. The electric power for lighting and working the lifts, both passenger, luggage, and service, will be supplied by the Company's own works which they propose to construct on the property. Every detail concerning the working arrangements and general administration has been most carefully thought out with a view to facilitating and expediting the service and reducing the cost of labour to a minimum. The building will be erected as nearly as possible in accordance with the architect's plans and designs, but it is possible that in the course of construction various improvements and alterations may become necessary or desirable.

The Empress Club is the principal ladies' club in the world, and its position as such has so frequently been acknowledged that its social status is established in a manner that places it beyond criticism.

It now consists of over 2,700 members, but the new building will enable the membership to be increased to 5,000.

PRINCES HOTEL, BRIGHTON.

This imposing building, which was erected some thirty years ago, forms the corner block of the Grand Avenue and the sea front facing the private lawns, and is undoubtedly the finest position on the whole of the sea front. The hotel (the freehold of which the company are purchasing), is exclusively a first-class hotel, and all the arrangements are made with a view of suiting the tastes and requirements of its very quiet, select, and distinguished patrons.

The splendid position of this property may be gathered from the fact that in selecting a site for the new grand Statue of her Majesty the Queen the Commissioners have decided upon the sea front end of the Grand Avenue, exactly facing the entrance of Princes Hotel.

The following list of names, taken casually from the regular arrivals book, will fully justify the reputation which the Hotel has enjoyed for nearly thirty years:—

Maj.-Gen. and Mrs. Abadie
Lord Abercrombie
The Marquis of Abergavenny
The Lady Abinger
The Earl of Albemarle
W. C. Alston, Esq.
Count Althaus
Sir Richard and Lady Amphlett
Sir John and Lady Amory
Lord and Lady Annaly
Sir George Arthur
Viscount Ashbrook
The Dowager Countess of Ashburton
The Hon. Evelyn Ashley
His Grace the Duke of Atholl
Her Grace the Duchess of Atholl
The Earl of Aylesford
Lord Bagot
Sir David and Lady Baird
Douglas Baird, Esq.
Charles Balfour, Esq.
Viscount Baring
The Hon. Lilian Baring
Lieut.-Gen. Baring
The Hon. Mrs. Hamar Bass
His Grace the Duke of Beaufort
The late Earl of Beaconsfield
The late Earl of Bective
The Countess of Bective
Lord Marcus Beresford
Lieut.-Gen. Beresford
Lord George Binning
Prince Bismarck
Lady Mary Birkbeck
The Marquis of Blandford
Lady Elizabeth Boyle
Lady Mary Boyle
The Count and Countess Bobvinsky
The Earl of Bradford
The Hon. Arthur Brand
Lord and Lady Burton
Mr. and Mrs. Bulteel
The late Colonel Burnaby
The Marchioness of Camden
The Earl of Carnarvon
The Earl Cadogan
The Earl and Countess Cairns
The Viscount Castlerosse
The Viscount Castlereagh
The Viscountess Castlereagh
The Earl and Countess Carrington
Sir James Carmichael
The Hon. George Cathcart
Mr. and Mrs. Carnegie
Lord Eustace Cecil
Lord Randolph Churchill
Lady Randolph Churchill
The Marquis of Cholmondeley
Lord Churston
Sir George Chetwynd
Lord Cheylesmore
The Hon. Henry Chaplin
Lord Chesterfield
Col. and the Hon. Mrs. Chaine
Capt. the Hon. Alan Charteris
Lady Clifton
The Hon. Mrs. Clanglton
Lord Edward Pelham Clinton
Princess Isa Colonna
Princess Vittoria Colonna
The Earl and Countess Cowley
Lord and Lady Colchester
Lord Alwyne Compton
Viscount Cole
The Hon. Lady Cochrane
The Hon. Cecil Colville
Sir Charles Coote
Mr. and Mrs. Winchester Clowes
Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Cooper
The Hon. Hamilton and Lady Cuffe
Mr. James Currie
Lord Dangan
Colonel and the Hon. Mrs. Dawnay
The Earl and Countess of Dalkeith
Sir Lionel Darrell
Captain Dawson
Mr. G. W. Dalbiac
Lady De Gex
Prince Demidoff
Princess Elsa de Wagram
Count and Countess Deyen
Baron d'Estournelle
The Hon. E. Digby
Countess De Lane
Mr. and Mrs. De Murietta
Chevalier Edward de Martino
Lord De Clifford
Mr. and Mrs. De Rutzen
The Marchioness of Downshire
Lord and Lady Dorchester
Lady Margaret Douglas
Earl and Countess of Dundonald
The Earl of Dunraven
Earl and Countess of Dudley
The Hon. James Duncombe
Mr. Du Cane
Lady Emily Dyke
Viscount Dupplin
The Dean of Edinburgh
Viscount Ednam
Lady Herbert Edwards
The Dowager Countess of Effingham
The Earl and Countess of Egmont
The Hon. Reginald Egerton
The Earl and Countess of Ellesmere
The Hon. L. Agar Ellis
Lord Elcho
The Earl and Countess of Erne
The Hon. Mrs. A. Erskine
Prince Esterhazy
The Hon. Mrs. Eyre
The Hon. Mrs. Roger Eykyn
Lord Farquhar
Sir Arthur and Lady Fairbairn
Lady Augusta Fane
Lady Maud Keith Falconer
The Earl and Countess of Feversham
Colonel Featherstonhaugh
Count and Countess Festitig
General the Hon. Sir Percy Feilding
Sir L. and Lady Fanny Fitzwygram
The Hon. Mrs. Fitzmaurice
His Grace the Duke of Fife
The Hon. Reginald Fitzwilliam
Count Flambouriasy
Viscountess Folkestone
Sir Charles and Lady Forbes
The Hon. A. G. Fortescue
Captain C. D. Fortescue
Colonel the Hon. H. Forester
Colonel Freemantle
Mrs. Keith Fraser
Mrs. Gabrielli
Lord and Lady Gerard
The Hon. Robert Gerard
Prince John Ghica
Lord and Lady Glenesk
Lord and Lady Grauville Gordon
General Gordon
Lord Douglas Gordon
Sir Julian Goldsmidt
Captain Gough
Mr. and Mrs. Goschen and family
The Hon. Richard Grosvenor
Lord Henry Grosvenor
Lady Violet Greville
The Marquis of Hartington
The Marquis of Hamilton
The Earl of Hardwicke
Lord William Hay
Lord Claud Hamilton
Lord Ernest Hamilton
Sir Arthur and Lady Haliburton
Sir Charles Hall, Q.C.
Sir Charles and Lady Hartopp
The Hon. Arthur Hay
Mr. and Mrs. E. Alex. Hambro
Capt. and Mrs. Price Hamilton
Lord Henniker
The Hon. Helen Henniker
The Hon. Arthur Henniker
Lord and Lady Helmsley
The Hon. Michael Herbert
Baron Hirsch
Sir John and Lady Hibbert
Lord Hindlip
Viscount and Viscountess Hood
Lady Mary Howard
Lord Howard of Effingham
The Misses Howard of Effingham
The Hon. Dudley Hood
Baron and Lady Diana Huddlestone
Mrs. Henry Hungerford
Mrs. Tom Hughes
Lord Inchiquin
Colonel Gordon Ives
Count Jaragersski
Mr. and Mrs. Arthur James
Sir George and Lady Jessel
Mr. and Mrs. Henry Jourdain family
The Hon. E. Johnson
Lord Justice Kay
Miss Kay
The Hon. M. Keppel
Lady Kennedy
Lady Caroline Kerrison
Prince Malcolm Khan
The Earl and Countess of Kintore
Lord and Lady Kinnaird
Lord Kilmaine
Count Kinsky
Sir John and Lady Kirk
Sir Francis and Lady Knollys
Lord Langford
Lord Lambton
The Hon. Edwin Lascelles
Countess Larische
Sir Thomas and Lady Lawrence
Lord and Lady A. Gordon-Lennox
Lord Henry Gordon-Lennox
The Hon. C. Legge
The Hon. Henry Gerald Leigh
His Grace the Duke of Leeds
Sir George Lewis
The Earl and Countess of Listowel
Sir Martin and Lady Lloyd
The Earl and Countess of Lonsdale
The Dowager Marchioness of Londonderry
The Marchioness of Lothian
Lord and Lady Augustus Loftus
The Hon. G. Loftus
The Hon. Charles Lowther
Sir Lambton and Lady Loraine
Lord Lurgan
Sir Charles Lugard
His Grace the Duke of Marlborough
Her Grace the Duchess of Marlborough
Her Grace the Duchess of Manchester
Lord Maidstone
Sir W. T. Marriott, Q.C.
Lord and Lady Maghcramorne
Lord and Lady Manderville
Lord and Lady John Manners
Sir W. MacMahon
Sir David and Miss MacPherson
Sir James MacGregor
Sir Henry and Lady Malet
Archdeacon and Mrs. Maude
Sir Theodore and Lady Martin
Lord MacLaren
Lord Methuen
Count Metchnick
Lady Henry Melville
The Hon. R. Meade
Lady Milford
Lady Milner
Sir William Milner
Her Grace the Duchess of Montrose
Sir Hugh Montgomery
The Hon. Mrs. Basil Montgomery
Lady Montgomery
Count Montgelas
Lady G. Molyneux
Lady Moncrieff
Lady Monck Breton
Sir Charles Moore
Lord Justice Murphy
Major Musgrave
His Grace the Duke of Newcastle
Viscount Newport
Lord Henry Nevill
Lady Dorothy Nevill
Lady North
Lady Norreys
Sir Stafford and Lady Northcote
Lord and Lady O'Hagan and family
Mr. and Mrs. O'Hara
Mr. and Mrs. H. Oppenheim
Lady Ormonde
Lord Ormathwaite
Viscountess Ossington
Lady Charles Osborne
Sir Arthur and Lady Otway
Capt. Loftus Otway
Hugh Owen, Esq.
Lord Henry Panlet
Sir Roger Palmer
The Hon. Geoffrey Parsons
The Earl and Countess of Pembroke
Lord and Lady Penrhyn
Lord Henry Percy
Sir William and Lady Pearce
The Hon. Emma Pennant
The Hon. Harriet Phipps
Lord Pirbright
The Hon. Horace Plunkett
The Hon. John Pleydell-Bouverie
His Grace the Duke of Portland
Canon and Mrs. Pollock
Lord and Lady Pultimore
General and Mrs. Prendergast
Mr. and Mrs. Raphael
Mr. and Mrs. Ralli and family
Sir Edward Reed, M.P.
&c., &c., &c., &c.

Want of space prevents us continuing the Alphabetical List.

The PARISIAN DIAMOND CO.

"ORIENT" PEARL and DIAMOND CROWN.
A very exquisitely executed piece of Diamond work. Price £80 0 0.

THE "Orient" Pearls.
THE COMPANY'S GREAT SPÉCIALITÉ.

143, Regent St., W.
THE COMPANY'S NEW BRANCH (Opposite Liberty's, Chesham House).

GOLD MEDAL, PARIS, 1889.

ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE POST FREE.

DIAMOND TIARA.
New Design. Set à jour in Real Diamond Mounts.
Price £27 0 0.

143, Regent St., W.
43, Burlington Arcade, W.
85, New Bond St., W.
And in Paris.

OUR PUZZLES.

"TRUTH" PUZZLE No. 1,008.

		s.	d.
CHUTNEY	(real name and address will be published in due course) ...	8	6
ERIN	(" " " " ") ...	8	6
BABS	(" " " " ") ...	8	6
KNIGHT'S PAWN	(" " " " ") ...	8	6
HARRIET MARCH	(" " " " ") ...	8	6

CONDENSED RULES.

All answers to the current Puzzle must be sent in on or before the morning of the Monday week following the date of that Puzzle's publication, to the PUZZLE EDITOR, TRUTH Buildings, Carteret-street, Queen Anne's-gate, London, S.W. The answers must be signed by a nom de plume of not more than twelve letters, and must not be sent on post-cards, nor by telegraph, nor by hand; whilst in the case of new competitors the real name and address must be forwarded with the first reply sent.

"TRUTH" PUZZLE, No. 1,006.

I have not yet received answers from all the competitors who tied for the Prize in this competition. By next week I hope to be able to announce their decision as to a new test of their skill.

"TRUTH" PUZZLE, No. 1,007.

The Prize in this Competition has been divided between KING HAL and ORLANDO, whose Acrostic Stanzas on Lord Salisbury appeared in TRUTH for June 2.

"TRUTH" PUZZLE, No. 1,009.

The Prize in this Competition will be awarded next week.

"TRUTH" PUZZLE, No. 1,113.

A discussion has again arisen in one of the daily papers as to "Apt Alliteration's Artful Aid." Various instances of alliteration have been given, including that well-known alliterative, rhymed alphabet, which begins :—

An Austrian army, awfully arrayed,
Boldly, by battery, besieged Belgrade;
Cossack commanders cannonading come
Dealing destruction's devastating doom, and so on. This alphabet is almost invariably quoted when alliteration is discussed, and it has occurred to me that some of TRUTH'S ingenious competitors may very possibly be able to improve upon what is by no means a composition without shortcomings. The usual prize of Two Guineas is, therefore, offered for

THE BEST ACROSTIC RHYMED ALPHABET DEALING WITH ANY SUBJECT, AND WRITTEN AFTER THE MODEL QUOTED ABOVE.

The alphabet must be composed in the metre of the lines quoted above, and must consist of twenty-six lines, each one of which must rhyme with some other in the composition. All the words in the same line must begin with the same initial. It will, of course, be very difficult to deal with certain of the lines—the X line for example. Competitors will, however, doubtless triumph more or less completely over the difficulties of their task. All alphabets must reach me by the morning of Monday, July 4, at the latest.

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

KNIGHT'S PAWN.—I have read your very courteous and reasonable letter with much interest. I still think, however, that I did the right thing in not allowing points for the quotations which had been written by artists specially for their own pictures.

CHUTNEY.—You are already eligible to take part in these competitions again.

LICHFIELD, GRANITE, and KASHAN.—Your Acrostic Alphabet sentences arrived too late to be printed with the other specimens.

FAD.—Many thanks for your suggestion; but, as I think you will have anticipated, it is one I am unable to follow.

LUDWIG B.—Quite so.

HENRY IX.—I will duly consider the point you have raised.

ALDBARN.—I am much obliged to you for your kind suggestions.

IVY LEAVES.—You may take it, I think, that the quotations for which no authors' names have been discovered were composed by the artists themselves, or their friends, for the Academy Catalogue.

ROBERT MARTIN.—As you will see, I have acted upon a modified form of your suggestion.

THE PUZZLE EDITOR.

"TRUTH" PUZZLE, No. 1,010.—ASSORTED SPECIMENS—GOOD AND OTHERWISE.

ACROSTIC SENTENCES ON ANY SUBJECT.

A bloomer-clad cyclist, disliking excessively fools greeting her in jocose knavish language, miscalling names, or poking quaint, ribald sarcasms, tried using vituperative words, Xantippe-like: "Yokels i zanies!"—Carib.

A blissful contemplation, destroyed entirely from groundless household interruptions, just kills love. "May not one proceed quietly," remarked Socrates, "thou unceasingly vexatious wife Xantippe, yet zealously?"—Ludwig B.

America's bewildered correspondents, despite every forethought generally helpful in journalism, keenly lament many not ordinarily perplexing questions respecting Spain that undeniably vanquish Western Xenophons'* Yankee zeal.—Bowzer.

* "Western Xenophons," i.e., journalese for "American war correspondents."

THE CRICKET CHAMPIONSHIP.

After being continually defeated, Essex's form gradually has improved, Jack Kortwright lowering many notable opponents' pegs, quite ruthlessly storming their unlucky visitors with xylophagous yorking zeal.—R. F.

NOTE.—Nuttall gives "xylophagous" as "eating or feeding on wood," and, as cricket-stumps are made of wood, "xylophagous," by a slight stretch, may be taken as meaning "wicket-destroying," and, therefore, "storming . . . . . with xylophagous yorking zeal" may be rendered as "bowling with zeal wicket-destroying yorkers."

1. After busy, cheerless days, evenings frequently gloomy, health indifferent, Jack kindly lectured many nights on "Peculiarly Quaint Readings," selecting these unappreciated varied writers: Xenophon, Young, Zangwill. 2. A boy carefully, discreetly educated, Fred gained honourably immense kudos, literally making no orthographic preparations, quite readily spelling these unpronounceable, villainous words: *xylophone, ytterbium, zoæcium.—Nimrod.

* The above words beginning x, y, z are from Annandale's Concise Dictionary.

A burial ceremony discomforted England; for Gladstone, honourably interred, justly kindled loving memories. Number of persons question resentment shown to Unionists very wisely. 'Xcuse yearning zeal.—A. Pownall.

THE LONDON SEASON.

A brilliant concourse, delightful equipages, fascinating garments, handsome idlers (jostling keen eyed loafers), millionaires' numberless orgies, philanthropists' quixotic repasts—show the unutterably varied world's *xenodochic yearly zeal.—Nodding Violet.

* "Xenodochy"—reception of strangers, hospitality. See Nuttall's Dictionary.

All boon companions dining enjoy fine good Hock, imported Jouet, Koch, light Moselle; nevertheless old Port quite rejoices seasoned topers understanding vintages, while Xeres yields zest.—Whig.

A brave commander defies every foe, grants help in jeopardy, keeps laws, makes nothing of perilous quests, resists savage tyrants, uses vengeance with Xerxes' youthful zeal.—Spot.

Although Bunsen clearly delimited every formula generically hypostatizing idocrase; jumbled knowledge lets mineralogical neophytes occasionally propound quaintly ridiculous statements that "unevenly veined white xanthite yields zirconium."—Yorick.

N B.—Xanthite is a form of Idocrase.

Hypostatize—to give the hypostasis, or underlying substance, of anything.

A boy can do everything from grinning, hiding, idling, jumping, kicking, laughing, merrymaking, nutting, osculating, perplexing, questioning, running, skipping, to upholding virtue with Xenophon's yearning zealousness.—Almaviva.

A boastful, canting Dissenter ever feigning great holiness is joyfully keeping long meetings, never omitting prayers, questionings, repentance, sins, tracts until villainy wins. X. Yes. Zero.—Hilarion.

N.B.—X=algebraical sign for unknown quantity. Zero=nothing.

As Bacchus culled delicious, ebony, fragrant grapes, he invoked joyously, kindling, lovesick, maddening nymphs, on playful quivering reeds, sweetly tuneful upborne—volleying winespouts (Xeres-grown), yelling zealously.—Bigjohn.

A bookseller came down every Friday, generally habited in juvenile knickerbockers, leaving mostly novels or periodicals, quite ready sometimes to unmercifully victimise, with xylographs, your zeal.—Anatedignus.

A boy came down east from Great Headly in Jutland, kicking like mad naughtiness, only particularly quick respecting sane truths, uniting versatility with xylography, yet Zionistic.—Sinond.

Arthur's brother Cantab, David Evans, found George Harrison in Jesus, keen, last Monday night, on perusing quaint Robinson's * story, touched (unduly, verily) with Xury's youthful zeal.—Pimlicola.

* Robinson Crusoe.

A blooming cyclist demanded entertainment from Garçon. He inspected Julia's knickerbockered leg most narrowly. "O, pardon!" quoth retainer, "serve trousers?" "Unmannerly varlet! Wretched xenodochy, you Zeno!"—Rabelais.

THE COQUET.

"Coquetry is an irregularity of the mind."—La Bruyère.

A bold, capricious damsel, enticing, fashionable, gossipping, handsome, illusory, jocular, knowing, labelling men's numerous offers, peremptory, quaint, romantic, skittish, tantalising, unsusceptible, variable,* wonderfully xylographs † young Zanies.—J. McGrigor Allan.

* "Varium et mutabile semper Fœmina."—Virgil.

† Impresses.

A beautiful, coy damsel, enjoying fortune's great honours, is joyfully kindling love's memories, never once portraying queer, relentless satire, terribly uncomfortable, veering waterlogged xebecs, yearning zealously.—Teajaypea.

A bicycle contest, distance eleven furlongs' grade. Handicap in June. Kindly leave many notices on public quarters. Rendezvous, Totteridge Union, Victoria. Write X.Y.Z.—She.

A boat, carrying despatches, expected from Georgetown, has, in journeying, kept low, merely notifying officially, persons quite reliable, some tactics under view with xyloidin.* Yankee zeal.—Thiew.

* Xyloidin—explosive.

A beauty, considered domesticated, eager for general honours in jurisprudential knowledge, let maladroit nincompoops of professional questionableness rebut surrejoinders tentatively, until vanity with xenodochy yawned zeallessly.—Brunswicker.

(My wife)—Argues bootlessly, cultivates dowdy emancipated females gloating hysterically in jeopardous knowledge, laments my naught of principle querulously reiterating suspicious totally ungrounded—vying with Xantippe, yea zestfully.—Duplex.

Always be careful; death ever fills greedily his insatiable jaws, killing, lacerating, mangling numbers of people, quenching reason, stifling talent, uprooting vigour, wasting, Xerxes-like, your zeal.—Aldec.

Able books charm dead enthusiasms for great heroic ideals; judiciously keep little mean notions outside; preserve, quicken reason; stimulate to undertake voyages where xebecs yield zest.—Esperanza.

A beautiful calm day especially favours good humour, imparts joyous kindliness; lastly, makes Nature overpower pessimism; questionings rest spiritual; turmoils utterly vanish. Why X-ray yourself, zealot?—Mem-Sahib.

"A bold, crushing denial, Eva!" Frank growled, hastily inspecting Jane's knitting, lying mercifully near on papa's quaint rack. "Still, the unknown victim worshipped Xangti*, yearningly, zealously."—Modèle de Luxe.

* Xangti—the supreme being of Chinese mythology.

A beneficent County Council does everything for good householders in Japan, kindly lends money, never opposes popular questions, renovates society, thoroughly unbreeching velocipeding women—Xantippean Yawing Zeolites.*—Pyramid.

* "A name given to a group . . . characterised by much intumescence."—Dictionary...

Any bitter controversy deadens earnest friendships, generates hatred, inspires jealousy, kills love, moreover; nevertheless, occasionally people quickly recover serene tempers, unstintingly vindicating whoever, Xantippe-like, yells zealously.—Fly-catcher.

Americans bellicose chase Dons' evasive fleet, gaining hope in juxtaposed Keywest littoral. Macklnley now operates personally qua "redresser Spanish tyranny," urged vehemently with Xanthic* Yankee zeal.—Henry IX.

* The yellow press.

Anthropological bigots, called Darwinians, estranged from grace, habitually inventing jokes, kickshaws, lampoons, must not obtrude profane questions regarding sacred things, undermining virtue with Xanthic yeasty Zolaism.—Commune.

A being clearly destined eventually for great hazards, indomitable, joyous, kindling loving memories; not offering problems, quelling resistance, subduing turbulent, unrest vigorously; winning Xantippes, yokels, zealots.—Omega.

Assuredly Benedicts court disastrous experiences; for, granting how incessant jarring kills love, marriage never offers perfect quietude; reality sees that Utopia vanish, with Xantippe yielding Zero.—Benzine.

A beautiful court dame, eminent for gracious hospitality, invited judges, knights, learned men; now overflowed playful, quick repartee; social talent unfolded versatility, warranting Xenodochy's youthful zeal.—Excelsior.

A bland, courteous demeanour's everywhere found, good manners habitual in Japan's kindly little men, noble or plebeian: quiet resolution, self-consequence too universal vying with Xerxes-like Yankee zealousness.—Prima Donna.

Arrogant bigots called devout enthusiasts forsworn, godless heretics. Intolerant, Jesuitical kingcraft long maltreated nonconforming opponents. Persistent quiet resolution, steadfast truthfulness ultimately vanquished wrathful Ximines' yeasty zealotry.—Hammonia.

A brilliantly clever diplomatist expects friendly gratulations; hence, in judging Kruger, let men now overlook petty quarrels, rather seeking the undoubted victories which, Xerxes-like, yield zest.—Coal-heaver.

A beautiful calm death ends friend Gladstone's honoured, illustrious, just, kindly life; many now openly praise qualities reckoned safe to uphold vast works—xylographer* yesterday zealous.—Heather.

* Wood-cutter or carver.

America bestirs civilisation, disseminating enlightened freedom, gallantly, honourably indicating justice, kindness, love; maintaining needful optimism; planning quiescent relations, suggesting tractability; undertaking virile warfare, Xerxes-like yielding zeal.—A. E. L.

After being continually denied every facility Gertrude's hero insisted joining Kathleen, liking maidenly naïveté or personal quaintness (regarded sexually) than unfailing vehemence which Xenophon yelped zeal.—Glenrosa.

As buried chief disarms each foe,
Gladstone's—huffed in joust—kneel low,
Much noting on pathetic quest,
Rare, such tireless unit, vest
With Xtian yearning, zest.
Robert Martin.

Admired by Commoners, denouncing everything false, Gladstone, having incomparable judgment, kept liberty manfully; notwithstanding opposition, persevered quietly, restoring sound tranquillity, utterly vanquishing wrongs xylographised, ye zealot!—Old Stick.

Artist (British celebrity) drawing, especially figures gave highly impressionist journalist Kodak likenesses, memorising Nature or portraiture, quite recently securing truthful, uncanny, very weird X-rays, yielding—Zola!—Addie.

America bombarding Cuba damages every fort gives humorous intelligence; jockeys knowingly leaving McKinley no option; prepares queer reports sending telegrams under very wonder X-ray yielding zeniths.—Azile.

Agonisingly, beloved champion, does every feeling, gentle heart, in justest, kindliest language mourn; neighbours, operatives, people, Queen relatives, statesmen, tenantry, universities vociferating, worthy Xtian, your zeal!—La Plata.

A bird, conirostral, delivered entirely free, generously, here in jeopardous, knowingly loose manner not, observe, packed quite roughly, seems totally unlike variety wagered Xanthornis' yesterday, zealously.—Marah.

Another bravo career deserving everlasting fame great heart in justice, kindness, lifting mighty nations; oppression's power quelling; right steadfastly teaching; utterly vanquishing words xiphold yearning, zealous.—Rugeley.

A bay called Dainty, ever faithful gallant hunter in jumping kicked like mad, nearly overturning people; quiet rider showed tact, using valorously, wise Xenophon! your zoography.—Asor.

Another bright commemoration day! England's faithful, generous hearts in justice, kindness loyalty, must needs our precious Queen remember; some take untold, valuable, wonderful xenlums yelling "zounds!"—Lichfield.

Arthur Bridge comes down every Friday, going home in John Kirk's landau, mother never offering payment. "Quite right," says Tom; "use 'Venture some Wag's' (Xylographer), young Zebras."—M. E.

A brand comes, directly exported from Germany here. If J—— keeps light Moselle, nevertheless our produce quite rivals sherry, that unequalled vintage, which Xeres yields zealously.—Petruchio.

Ah! boy, champagne drunk every fresh gotten holiday is just killing. Learn moderation now, O prodigal! Questionable rioting seems the undoubtedly very worst 'xtravagance, you Zany.—Mecca.

Acrostic sentences have also been received from—Modèle-de-Luxe, Tiny, Oxoniensis, Spot, Hammonia, Commoner, J. McGrigor Allan, Wordsworth, Tho Hen, B. McHarg, Sudbury, Verax, Beta, Pollio, Titiau, and J. F.

"COOPER" CYCLES.

From £5 10. Competition Defied.

Latest design Frame, large Weldless Steel Tubes, Ball Bearings, Tangent Wheels, Brake, and Mud-guards, Cushion Tyres, £5 10; Pneumatic, £7 10; Ladies', with Dress and Gear Guards, from £6. Twelve months' warranty. Lists free. AGENTS WANTED

Wm. Cooper, 753, Old Kent Rd., London, S.E.

18 carat Gold, £7. 7s.

H. SAMUEL'S WATCHES.

In Wear all over the World.

A large saving in price as compared with usual London charges. Stamped 18 carat gold, keyless, centre seconds chronograph, lever movement, extra jewelled, chronometer balance, ten years' warranty.

H. SAMUEL'S Price, £7. 7s.

H. SAMUEL'S NEW WATCH PAMPHLET contains illustrations and descriptions of Watches and Jewellery in Gold and Silver, also Clocks, Plate, &c., together with many letters of approval from purchasers. This pamphlet will be sent to any address, gratis and post free, on receipt of name and address

H. SAMUEL,

Central Watch Depot, Manchester.

THE

Chancery Lane Safe Deposit

AND OFFICES COMPANY, LTD.

CHAIRMAN: Sir WILLIAM H. MARLING, Bart., Stanley Park, Stroud.
VICE-CHAIRMAN: ROBERT C. PONSONBY, Esq., 1, Clement's-inn, Strand, W.C.

SAFES and STRONG ROOMS for the Deposit of Deeds, Bonds, Plate and Valuables of every description from £1 1

Rooms for Consultations, Writing Rooms, and Telephone Rooms, &c. Free of Charge.

Rooms for Arbitrations, Meetings of Shareholders, Creditors, and Companies' Meetings from 10s. 6d.

Registration of Keys with Accident Insurance Policy for £100, on payment of 1s.

Offices, Flats, and Chambers to Let, close to Law Courts, Patent and Public Record Offices. Moderate Rents.

DEPOSIT BANK.

MONEY RECEIVED ON DEPOSIT in Large or Small Sums, Repayable at Eight Days' Notice. Compound Interest allowed at £2 10s. per Cent. per annum.

Further particulars can be obtained from E. Vincent Evans, Manager and Secretary of the Company, 63-4, Chancery-lane, London.

PATENT FAST DYED KHAKI MATERIALS.

Absolutely Fast to Washing.
Stand any amount of wear.

Most useful for all kinds of wear by Ladies, Gentlemen, and Children.

Contractors to H.M. WAR OFFICE and INDIA OFFICE.

WOOL.

SERGES.
FLANNELS.
CORDS.
LEG BANDAGES.

COTTON.

DRILLS.
SERGE.
CORDS.

Price List and Patterns Free on application to

E. SPINNER & CO., MANCHESTER AND BOMBAY, Sole Agents.

Genuine Old Welch Dressers

(Inlaid and Carved Oak), from £6. 10s.

ILLUSTRATED PRICED CATALOGUES POST FREE.
ALL GOODS CARRIAGE PAID TO ANY STATION IN GREAT BRITAIN.

ESTATE DEPARTMENT.
Auctions and Private Sales, Valuations, Lettings, Surveys, Repairs, and Decorations.

HEWETSONS,

OTTENHAM COURT ROAD, London, W.

TORPID LIVER. HEADACHE.

Small Pill.
Small Dose.
Small Price.

Purely Vegetable Sugar Coated.

1s. 1½d.

JUNO CYCLES ARE THE VERY BEST
Any JUNO Twelve Monthly Payments.
JUNO Lady's or Gent's Safety, £12 12s., 21/- monthly; £14 14s., 24/6 monthly. JUNOS from £10, 16/8 monthly. Write for New Season's List of JUNO Cycles & Accessories, sent post free. Junos shipped to all parts of the world. Large discount.
METROPOLITAN MACHINISTS CO., LTD., 75, 76, Bishopsgate Without, E.C.; & at Piccadilly Circus, London W.

"A Clean and Easy Shave once a day makes all men, and a few women also, quite happy."—GORDON STABLES, M.D., R.N.
The delightful sensation of shaving at home with a really sharp razor cannot easily be described, there should be no cutting of the skin, no 'dragging' of the beard, simply an indescribable sense of freshness, nothing else.
The Proprietor of the "RIGID-CURVE" STROP warrants his Invention to produce an edge upon a razor so sharp as to readily sever a hair held loosely between finger and thumb.
Price, with full instructions, 3s. 6d., carriage paid. Money returned any time within a month if not approved.
A. HOWARTH, 53, Penn-road, Wolverhampton.

Enormous Demand.

There can be no surer sign of popularity than the enormous demand all over the country for

LIPTONS' DELICIOUS TEAS

They are appreciated everywhere for their delicate flavour and exquisite aroma, and undoubtedly have attained the pinnacle of fame.

LIPTONS' DELICIOUS TEAS. Millions drink them daily.

Millions of people are daily drinking and enjoying these delicious Teas, fresh from the sweet-scented island of Ceylon. Liptons own ne of the most famous estates in Ceylon, which cover thousands of acres of the best tea-growing land, including such well-known gardens Dambattenne, Laymastotte, Monerakande, Mahadambatenne, Mousakelle, Pooprassie, Hanagalla, Gigranella, Karandagalla, Daminatenne, kfield, and Nahakettia, in connection with which several thousand natives are constantly employed.

LIPTONS CONTROL THE TEA MARKET.

LIPTONS' TEAS HAVE THE LARGEST SALE IN THE WORLD

ROYAL APPOINTMENT
LIPTON,
Tea Merchant by Special Appointment To Her Majesty The Queen.

BUY FROM THE GROWERS.
The Finest Tea the World can produce.
PER 1/7 LB.
NO HIGHER PRICE.

RICH, PURE, AND FRAGRANT.
PER 1/- AND 1/4 LB.

LIPTON LTD.,

TEA, COFFEE, AND COCOA PLANTERS, CEYLON, THE LARGEST TEA, COFFEE, AND PROVISION DEALERS IN THE WORLD.

Chief Offices: CITY ROAD, LONDON. Branches and Agencies throughout the World.

lon Offices and Tea and Coffee Shipping Warehouses: PRINCE STREET, and MADDEMA MILLS, CINNAMON GARDENS, COLOMBO. Indian Offices and Shipping Warehouses: HARE STREET, CALCUTTA.

If not, you place them at a disadvantage in the Struggle for Life with the 1,000,000 Children who use it daily.

Elevenpence is a trifling Premium to pay on a Permanent Insurance of Health, Wealth, and Beauty.

SCHWEITZER'S

Cocoatina

"THE ROYAL COCOA."

Absolutely pure and full of nourishing and sustaining properties.

"THE QUEEN has a cup of Schweitzer's Cocoatina brought to her at 7.30 a.m., and two hours later uses the same beverage at the breakfast table."—SOCIETY.

BY ORDER OF THE CZAR.—"Send immediately to office of Marshal, Imperial Court, Petersburg Winter Palace, twenty half-pound tins Schweitzer's Cocoatina—Colonel Anitschkoff."—(TELEGRAM FROM ST. PETERSBURG).

"WORTH A GUINEA A BOX."

BEECHAM'S PILLS.

FOR ALL

BILIOUS & NERVOUS DISORDERS,

SUCH AS

Sick Headache, Constipation, Weak Stomach, Impaired Digestion. Disordered Liver & Female Ailments.

SALE NOW OVER SIX MILLION BOXES YEARLY.

In boxes, 1/1½ and 2/9 each, with full directions.

Prepared only by the Proprietor.

THOMAS BEECHAM, St. Helens, Lancashire.

Sold by all Druggists and Patent Medicine Dealers everywhere.

Elswick Elswick Cycles. Cycles.

Agents, THE STEREOSCOPIC Company, 106 & 108, REGENT-ST. W.

Agents, BENETFINK and Company, 107 & 108, CHEAPSIDE, E.C.

1898 ELSWICK.

Elswick Elswick Cycles. Cycles.

Agents, W. & F. THORN, 19, GT. PORTLAND-ST. W., and RANELAGH HOUSE, LOWER GROSVENOR PLACE, S.W.

FITTED WITH THE "PATTISSON" HYGIENIC SADDLE

THE ELSWICK CYCLES COMPANY, Ltd., Newcastle-on-Tyne.

Export Agents, RALPH DOUSE & SONS, Billiter-buildings, Billiter-street, E.C.

FOR YOUTHFUL APPEARANCE. BEAUTIFUL HAIR.

IMPERIAL HAIR DYES &c.

ONE LIQUID.

No. 1. Black.
No. 2. Dark Brown.
No. 3. Light Brown.
No. 4. Golden Brown or Auburn.
No. 5. Pure Golden.
No. 6. Imperial Hair Grower.

Harmless, Perfect, Permanent, and Odourless.

A Medical Certificate with each bottle.

2/6, 3/6, 5/-, AND 10/6

(PRIVATELY PACKED).

J. BRODIE,

41, Museum Street, London.

Established 1868. ONCE TRIED, ALWAYS USED.

FIRST SPECTACLES.—When these are required the advice of a very skilful optician should be taken, as unless the spectacles used in the first instance are exactly suited to the eyes mischief is soon done which cannot afterwards be remedied.

BROWNING'S SYSTEM OF SUITING THE SIGHT

IS ALWAYS SUCCESSFUL.

Mr. JOHN BROWNING, President of The British Optical Association and Author of "Our Eyes," now in its 17th Edition, price 1s., 63, STRAND, LONDON, W.C. May be consulted personally free of charge.

EPPS'S COCOAINE.

COCOA-NIB EXTRACT.

The choicest roasted nibs (broken-up beans) of the natural Cocoa on being subjected to powerful hydraulic pressure, give forth their excess of oil, leaving for use a finely-flavoured powder—"Cocoaine," a product which, when prepared with boiling water, has the consistence of tea, of which it is now, with many beneficially taking the place. Its active principle being a gentle nerve stimulant, supplies the needed energy without unduly exciting the system. Sold only in labelled tins. If unable to obtain it of your tradesman, a tin will be sent post free for 9 stamps. — JAMES EPPS & CO., LTD., Homœopathic Chemists, London.

Printed for the Proprietor by LOVE & WYMAN, Limited, Great Queen-st. W.C. and published at 10, Bolt-ct. Fleet-st. E.C. in the Parish of St. Dunstan's-in-the-West, in the City of London. Cheques and Post Office Orders should be made payable to REGINALD E. BOOKER, "Truth" Buildings, Carteret-st. Queen Anne's-gate, S.W.

• TRUTH •

"Cultores Veritatis Fraudis Inimici."—Cicero.

No. 1122. Vol. XLIII. Thursday, June 30, 1898. Price Sixpence.

NOTICE.

The terms of Subscription to Truth, which are payable in advance, are as follows:—To any address in the United Kingdom, for 3 months, 7s.; 6 months, 14s.; and for 12 months, 28s. The Thin Paper Edition is forwarded to countries within the Postal Union for 3 months for 7s. 8d.; 6 months, 15s. 4d.; and 12 months, 30s. 8d. Cheques and Post Office Orders should be made payable to the Manager, Truth, "Truth Building," Carteret-street, S.W.

ENTRE NOUS.

THE Queen and Princess Beatrice are to leave Windsor Castle next Wednesday afternoon for Aldershot, where they will stay at the Royal Pavilion in the Camp until Friday morning, when her Majesty is to pay a visit to the Empress Eugénie at Farnborough before returning to Windsor. The Queen is to review the troops in Camp on Laffan's Plain on Thursday, and the Prince and Princess of Wales will come down from town for the function. Her Majesty will also open the new Hospital for Women, and she is to present new colours to the 3rd Battalion Coldstream Guards on the Queen's Parade Ground.

There is no foundation for the report, which has gone round the papers, that the Queen is going to pay another visit to Baron Ferdinand de Rothschild at Waddesdon Manor, Bucks. The Prince of Wales, however, is to be a "Saturday till Monday" guest at Waddesdon in the course of the summer. The statement of the St. James's Gazette, that the Queen proposed to drive to Waddesdon from Windsor, was obviously nonsense, the distance between the two places being considerably too great for a drive. The report of a contemplated trip to Waddesdon may have arisen out of the fact that the Queen intends to pay an afternoon visit to Lord and Lady Salisbury at Hatfield one day before she leaves Windsor for Osborne.

The Queen has always set a good example by her kindly consideration for her employees and dependants. She might well go a step further by intimating to the companies over whose lines she travels that it is not her wish that human lives should be jeopardised in order to secure the uninterrupted progress of the Royal train. Such an intimation seems to be required after the tragic events of last week. The driver of one engine is killed by an accident—apparently an accident pure and simple, and one which might have happened on any train. His mate whistles to attract attention, and a gallant official of the company on the second engine then climbs from one engine to the other at imminent risk of his life, to come to the stoker's assistance. Why was not the train stopped? Apparently because those in charge felt that it must not be stopped at any cost, and because of the universal desire, which extended even to the officials at Perth, to keep from the Queen for a few hours—it could not be more than that—any knowledge of what had happened. Neither reason is sufficient to justify the risking of a second life after one had been lost. The Queen must be gratified to see such devotion to her peace of mind among those who are privileged to wait upon her, but it cannot be her wish that their devotion should be carried to such lengths.

With regard to the accident to the driver, I am told that in America it is a common practice to suspend, about fifty yards in front of every bridge, a frame with a number of small knotted cords hanging from it. This is a simple and effectual means of giving a warning of the approach of danger; but I suppose that accidents of this kind are extremely rare—at any rate, in England.

The Prince and Princess of Wales are to be the guests of the Duke of Richmond and Gordon and Lady Caroline Gordon-Lennox during Goodwood race week, and the house party will include the Prince and Princess Christian, the Duke of Cambridge, and Prince and Princess Edward of Saxe-Weimar.

H.R.H. will go to Homburg after the Cowes Regatta week, and the Princess will proceed to Gmunden, on a visit to the Duke and Duchess of Cumberland, their Royal Highnesses travelling together as far as Frankfort. At the end of August the Prince and Princess will pay a brief visit to the Empress Frederick at Kronberg, after which they are going to Holland for the Coronation of Queen Wilhelmina, when there will be festivities extending over a week at the Hague and at Amsterdam. The Princess of Wales will then go to Denmark on a long visit to the King and Queen at the Château of Bernstorff, and the Prince will probably return to England, in which case he is to be the guest of Lord Crewe at Fryston Hall, near Pontefract, during Doncaster race week.

The Duke of Connaught, and a number of the officers of the Aldershot Division have rented the shooting over the Tedworth estate, near Marlborough, from the War Office. This property, of nearly 7,000 acres, was purchased last year by the Government from Sir John Kelk. Upwards of 14,000 head of game were killed at Tedworth last season. The place belonged to that renowned Nimrod, Mr. Assheton Smith, and many years after his death the estate was sold to the late Sir John Kelk.

Princess Beatrice finished her "cure" at Bad-Kissingen on Friday, and on Saturday morning she left for Darmstadt. The Princess just missed meeting her brother, the Duke of Coburg, who arrived at Kissingen on Saturday evening from Coburg, and he is to take the waters for a month. Princess Beatrice is to arrive at Windsor Castle from Germany next Tuesday.

The marriage of the Duke of Augustenburg, only brother of the German Empress, and the Princess Dorothea, only daughter of Prince Philip of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha, and grand-daughter of the King of the Belgians, is to take place at Coburg on Tuesday, August 2, and the Emperor William and the Empress, the Emperor Frederick, King Leopold, the Archduchess Stéphanie, and other relatives will be present, including Prince and Princess Christian. The Duke of Coburg is to represent the Queen. Princess Dorothea, who celebrated her seventeenth birthday on April 30, is nearly eighteen years younger than her future husband, and it is generally thought at the Continental Courts that a more suitable marriage might have been arranged for her, especially as she will have a huge fortune.

The tardy marriage of Duke Ernest Günther is not regarded with favour at our own Court, as he was supposed to be a confirmed bachelor, and Prince Christian is at present next heir to his titles and to his estates in Holstein and Silesia. This dukedom is permanently endowed with an allowance of £16,000 a year from the Prussian Government, as compensation for the loss of territories in 1864.

During July the Lords-in-Waiting on the Queen will be Lords Bridport, Denbigh, and Bagot; while Sir Edmund Commerell, Lord William Cecil, and Major Harbord are to be the Grooms-in-Waiting. The Dowager Lady Erroll, Dowager Lady Churchill, and Lady Lytton will be the Ladies-of-the-Bedchamber on duty.

Colonel Carington and Lieutenant Ponsonby are to be the Equerries-in-Waiting on the Queen at Windsor Castle and at Osborne during July, replacing Lord Strafford and Colonel Davidson. If any Royal personage comes to England next month, for whom the attendance of one of her Majesty's Equerries is required, Major Legge will have to undertake this extra duty.

The appointment of Secretary to the Board of Green Cloth, which has become vacant by the death of Mr. March, has been given by the Queen to Mr. Courroux, the chief clerk of the department. The place is worth £1,200 a year, including an allowance of £200 a year instead of a house, but it is expected that the emoluments will be reduced. The post is by no means onerous, for the late Secretary died in harness at the age of eighty-two, and his predecessor drew a large pension for many years after his retirement, and was approaching ninety when he died.

The office of Receiver of Fees of Honour, which Mr. March also held for many years, has not yet been filled up, and it might very well be joined to some other post of the same description, as the duties are very light, while the emoluments are considerable. It was recommended long ago by a Parliamentary Committee that the Fees of Honour, and the office which subsists on them, should be abolished, and the Prince Consort was much in favour of the change, but the vested interests were too powerful and the obstructive indisposition to reforms which is an inherent quality in Court officials could not be overcome.

There are at present two vacancies in the corps of Serjeants-at-Arms, the one caused by the death of Mr. March, and the other by the succession of Mr. Monson to the Peerage. The new Lord Monson has not yet resigned the post, but it cannot by any possibility be held by a Peer.

During the frequent absences of Lord Cadogan from Ireland the Lord Chief Justice of Ireland and the Chief Baron have to suffer the indignity of being set aside when "Lords Justices" for Ireland are selected from amongst the members of the Judicial Bench. When the Lord Chancellor is a Catholic, even he is subject to the same indignity. It cannot be argued that the "Lords Justices" must belong to the same Church as the Lord Lieutenant. Lord Cadogan belongs to the Protestant Church of England, whilst the "Lords Justices" usually belong to that of Ireland, which is not only an independent Church, but is very strong on the point of its independence.

The Irish question, in its present stage, needs much what Goethe called for at the close of his life—"Light, more light." The wonder is that so much darkness should still prevail and keep back a settlement, considering that England—in its own way—groans, just as much as Ireland, under the wearying and persistent "Question." Foremost amongst the crowd of fallacies connected with Irish affairs is the fallacy of a religious equality, established by the abolition of the State Church. The almost universal acceptance of the fallacy causes disgust, surprise, and a feeling that the Irish are intractable, when an outbreak like that of the late Belfast riots takes place.

The Protestant rioters, however, had logic on their side. With the example of the Irish Privy Council before them, they reasonably argued that, as Protestant ascendency is strictly maintained in that leading body, it

---

For the TRUTH HOTEL LIST, see page 1670 in the present issue.
For HOSPITALS and APPEALS, see page 1665.
For AMUSEMENTS, see pages 1668-1669.
For OUR PUZZLES, see page 1689.

is consistent for the rank and file to assume like privileges. Circumstances alter cases, and cause variety in the methods used to promote the same ends. Dublin Castle employs an oath to block the way of the Catholic Privy Councillors; the Belfast Protestants use with their Catholic brethren the more primitive method of stones and bricks.

At the time when London is at its fullest, Dublin is given over to the tourist. The shutters are up in most of the houses in the principal streets and squares. The Irish capital has long ceased to be the "car-drivingest" town in the kingdom; indeed, the very existence of the once famous Irish car is strongly threatened by the coming system of electric tramways and the bicycle which has already come. That the streets may become the "bikingest" in the kingdom, seems probable, for Ireland is second to no country for the unanimity with which all sorts and conditions of humanity have adopted the bicycle. It is in keeping with the incalculable nature of the Celt that the country so specially devoted to the horse cult should have adopted the horseless wheel with such enthusiasm.

It would seem that the Duke of Westminster's Committee has agreed to a resolution to make one shilling the minimum subscription to the National Gladstone Committee, but that it has not yet decided in what way the fund is to be expended. What I should like to see is a fund making one shilling the maximum contribution, in order that there may be a statue erected to Mr. Gladstone by the people. With respect to the Westminster Memorial, it will not be easy—should there be heavy subscriptions—to agree as to its destination. Of course, any object connected with the spread of Mr. Gladstone's political principles would be impossible, in view of the fact that there are many gentlemen on the Committee who presumably have not altered their anti-Gladstonian opinions. A convalescent home has been suggested, and no doubt such a home in some healthy spot would be of considerable advantage. But for this, not only a building fund would be necessary, but a considerable annual income.

I am myself no great believer in memorials, which, however useful themselves, have no particular connection with the person to whose memory the memorial is raised. Mr. Gladstone's great services to the nation were rendered as a Statesman, and the most fitting monument to a Statesman is a statue. This appeals to every one, and can be seen by every one. The total amount subscribed is not by any means so important as the number of the subscribers.

One of my readers is very much exercised about the dirty condition of Westminster Abbey, and probably a good many of those who recently attended Mr. Gladstone's funeral were impressed in the same way. The dirt upon the monuments, on the woodcarving of the choir stalls, and generally throughout the building, must represent the accumulation of ages, and one would like to know why a church, of all places, should be the only building it is not thought necessary to clean regularly. Cleanliness may be next to godliness, but in the majority of churches the gap between the two is a very long one.

A Calcutta correspondent tells me that there has been considerable comment there over the fact that while all the shops and places of business were closed on the day of Mr. Gladstone's funeral, and many flags flying at half-mast, neither the Government of India nor the Government of Bengal deigned to show any official recognition of the event. The flagstaff on the Viceroy's residence was conspicuous by its bare nakedness, in marked contrast to the American Consulate close by, where the Stars and Stripes were duly hoisted and hung all day at half-mast. The conduct of the Government certainly seems ungracious, but possibly they will reply, as the Dean of Chester did in regard to a similar complaint, that there was some rule against any such recognition of Mr. Gladstone's death.

At the end of the year the Malta Governorship will fall vacant, when Sir Arthur Fremantle's term of office comes to an end. Sir Arthur and Lady Fremantle have been popular in the island, and entertained much at their various residences, for, small though the place is, the Governor has several. They will be regretted by all classes. Malta is deserted now, except by the officials whom duty keeps there. The Mediterranean Fleet has gone on its summer cruise to the East and other places, under Sir J. Hopkins. Lord and Lady Congleton have returned to England for the General's leave. The case of the dockyard official, now in custody in Malta pending inquiries, is the sensation of the dull season.

People who have friends in the Canaries, or who contemplate visiting those islands, should not pay too much attention to the sensational statements that have appeared in the Press regarding the disturbed condition of the islands, and the danger or annoyance to which English residents are exposed. I hear from a resident at Las Palmas that Grand Canary is "peaceful and quiet," and that the "English who have remained here are treated in the best possible way, and with the courtesy peculiar to Spain." The writer goes on to state that he was recently in an out-of-the-way country place, entirely alone, and met with the greatest hospitality and kindness. It would not be astonishing if the Spanish populace were openly unfriendly to the English just at present. Our sympathies with America in the present war have not been disguised, and at all times Englishmen and Americans are liable to be confused by the people of other European countries.

The Show of the Royal Agricultural Society in Four Oaks Park, of which great things were expected, has ended in a grievous disappointment, and the result will be a considerable deficit. There were only 98,221 visitors, as against 217,980 at Manchester last year. The last time the "Royal" visited Birmingham was in 1876, when there were 160,181 visitors. The failure is attributed, in a great measure, to the utter collapse of the railway arrangements for conveying passengers between Birmingham and Sutton Coldfield. The exhibition itself was a very good one indeed, both in numbers and in point of quality.

Scott Adie, 115, Regent-st., London, for Shooting Suits, Golf Suits, Travelling Coats, Inverness Capes, Carriage Rugs from 10/9, Shawls, hand-knit Hose, Scotch Cheviots, and Harris Homespuns.

A paragraph has appeared in a London journal, and has been reproduced in several Yorkshire papers, stating that the collection of china, pictures, and plate which was made by Mr. Mark and Lady Augusta Milbank, and which belonged to the late Sir Frederick Milbank, will be sold next month at Christie's. This is entirely incorrect. The collection was made by the late Sir Frederick, and not by Mr. Mark Milbank, and it now belongs to Sir Frederick's son and heir, who has no intention of parting with it. What will be sold at Christie's next month is a small portion of plate and china which has passed by an old will to Mr. Godolphin Milbank, a cousin of the present baronet.

Mr. Montague Guest has written to the Times, to complain of the crowding of the thoroughfare in Bond-street. His suggested remedy is not to allow omnibuses to use the street. But an omnibus at least has the merit of only passing through the street, whereas the block is caused by carriages stopping before shop doors whilst their owners are inside the shops. Cannot the authorities, asks Mr. Guest, regulate the traffic? The only legitimate mode of regulating it would be to forbid the carriages from remaining before the shop doors. The omnibus proprietor and the omnibus occupant pay rates for paving, &c. The right-of-way through any street exists alike for omnibuses, private carriages and cabs. Public vehicles are excluded from some parts of Hyde Park, because the park is a Royal one. But this exclusion should not be extended to public thoroughfares, because ladies want their carriages to loiter there.

Something was said in one of the daily papers the other day about the hardship of the existing law which declines to recognise insanity as a ground for divorce. I have been asked by a victim of this form of matrimonial misfortune —not the insane party, but the other—to take up my parable on the subject; but it strikes me as rather a difficult problem. Every one must sympathise with the position of the husband or wife who is tied for life to an insane spouse. But I have sometimes sympathised with the positions of husbands and wives who are tied for life to spouses who are not insane. Insanity is unfortunately not the only cause which occasionally renders marriage a failure.

The existing arrangement is that the parties take one another for better or worse, and there is a good deal to be said in favour of it, though naturally the parties kick against it in the case of a bad bargain. If you were to release one of the parties because the other has become insane, why not when he or she has become paralytic, or a hopeless invalid, or a confirmed drunkard? It is all very well for a man to appeal for sympathy on the ground that his wife has been for the last ten years in a lunatic asylum, and is never likely to get out, but, if he looks about him, I believe he will have no difficulty in finding plenty of men who would be only too happy if their wives were in lunatic asylums, and vice versâ.

The present Government have been most audacious in many of their appointments, and particularly in the dispensation of those offices which are in the gift of the Prime Minister or of the Lord Chancellor. It is surely inconceivable, however, that it can be in contemplation to pass over all the well-qualified candidates for the important and lucrative office of Principal of Glasgow University in order that it may be given to a Scotch Tory member. The individual in question is a clever and a popular man, but his qualification for this particular office may be thus defined—nil. If Lord Kelvin will not accept the Principalship, the post should be offered to the Master of Balliol.

I learn that the General Board of Studies at Cambridge have recommended the appointment of a Professor of Ancient History, who will receive a stipend from the University funds of £600 a year. The proposal will not come formally before the Senate until next October, but it is certain to be accepted, and probably the general feeling will be simply one of amazement that such a "seminary of sound learning" should have gone on for so long a period without a Chair of Ancient History.

The question "Why men won't go to church" is again under discussion in one of the Church papers, but I do not notice that any one has hit upon the real cause which, as I have frequently pointed out, is to be found primarily in the tall hat. Under present conditions, a regular attendance at church is only possible for those men who are totally indifferent to the condition of their hats, or who can afford a new hat once a week; and even a man whose piety would take him to church at the sacrifice of his hat finds that a true spirit of devotion is incompatible with the knowledge that his new Lincoln & Bennett is being seriously mutilated, either by the heels of his own boots or the skirts of the lady next to him. Something might be done to get over this difficulty by arranging suitable receptacles for tall hats under the seats of churches. But the proper and business-like arrangement would be to have a cloak-room at the church door where hats could be left.

As the domestic affairs of the Church of England are at present attracting a great deal of public attention, I would take the opportunity of pointing out that cloak-rooms would probably do more than anything else to avert the Disestablishment of the Church. It is not only a question of hats. You must think also about the waterproofs and umbrellas. The fact that places of worship are unprovided with conveniences of this kind shows how completely we are at the mercy of tradition in all matters relating to religion. No architect would dream of planning a theatre or a music-hall without proper cloak-room accommodation, yet it has never dawned upon anybody designing a church or a chapel that such a thing is necessary. As the chapels are as bad in this respect as the churches, a great opportunity here presents itself of popularising the Establishment. In these days of competition, a very trifling advantage one way or the other is sufficient to turn the scale, and my belief is that if all the London churches were to have attached to them a cloak-room and an attendant in charge, in a few weeks' time the chapels would be entirely emptied. Ritualism is a comparatively subordinate matter. Let an incumbent show himself really solicitous for the comfort of his congregation, and he may snap his fingers at Mr. Kensit. This is a matter which ought to be brought up in Convocation.

"Hôtel Burlington," at Sunny Boscombe. (200 rooms). Every luxury. Delightful grounds. Magnificent golf links. Sea-water baths. Moderate charges.—Bournemouth East Station.

The living of Sunbury-on-Thames, which is worth about £700 a year with house, and is in the gift of the Dean and Chapter of St. Paul's, became vacant last week, by the death of the Rev. H. Vigne, who had been vicar for fifty-six years. The curious thing is that Mr. Vigne's predecessor held this living for fifty-two years, so that the present vacancy is only the second which has occurred since 1790. The living of Brettenham, Suffolk, of which the Lord Chancellor is the patron, is remarkable in the same way. It has been only once vacated since 1798, when Lord Eldon presented the Rev. Samuel Cole, who died in 1850, and his successor, Canon Betham, is now rector of the parish.

Bishop Anson, who has accepted the vacant canonry in Lichfield Cathedral from Bishop Legge, was for some years Vicar of Woolwich, and then Bishop of Qu'Appelle, and he held that See for eight years, resigning because his health broke down. For the last four years the Bishop has been Master of St. John's Hospital at Lichfield. His preferment will give much satisfaction, for he has well earned it, and he is very popular in the diocese. The stall is worth £500 a year with house.

Canon Gordon, who is an uncle of Lord Aberdeen, will this week vacate the residentiary stall in Salisbury Cathedral which he has held for thirty-eight years. Canon Gordon was for nine years Rector of Great Stanmore, and then Rector of Northolt for twenty-one years, and he has been a Chaplain-in-Ordinary to the Queen since 1857. Bishop Wordsworth has appointed Prebendary Bankes, Rector of Corfe Castle, to the Canonry, and that ecclesiastic will resign the valuable family living which he now holds, and to which he was presented more than forty years ago. A stall at Salisbury can now be held only by a clergyman possessed of adequate private means, as agricultural depression has reduced the stipend to about £300 a year, and each Canon has a large house and garden to keep up.

The appointed preachers at the Chapel Royal, St. James's Palace, during July are:—3rd, the Sub-Dean; 10th, Rev. A. L. B. Peile, Master of St. Katherine's Hospital; 17th, Prebendary Harry Jones; 24th, Prebendary Barker; 31st, Archdeacon Wilkinson, Vicar of Plymouth. The chapel will be closed for about two months after the beginning of August.

I was recently consulted by a Roman Catholic concerning certain pitiful appeals which have been regularly advertised for a year or more past in the Tablet. A year ago the appeal was running in this form:—

> IN pitiful Christian mercy, through the grace of the Holy Spirit, lend a kindly ear to this cry of real distress, and for the love of Almighty God, the Sacred Heart of Jesus and Mary, send a donation or subscription to help the Convert invalid Gentleman for whom the imploring appeal is being made under the sanction of the late Lord Emly and the Very Rev. E. J. Purbrick, S.J., to obtain an income of £50 yearly. The case is very exceptional, and his sufferings extreme.

The latest edition is as follows:—

> FOR THE LOVE OF GOD, HELP.
>
> TO THE CATHOLICS OF GREAT BRITAIN AND IRELAND.—The urgent, imploring appeal of mercy which is being made under the sanction of the late Lord Emly and the Very Rev. E. J. Purbrick, S.J., to obtain an income of £50 a year for the suffering convert invalid Gentleman is now entirely without response. It is painfully sad to state that the misery and dark tribulation which surround him can scarcely be worse. To, therefore, save him from utter starvation and death in the end, this present further great earnest appeal is to ask merciful remembrance from Catholic hearts towards one who is true to the Holy Love of Jesus. Give your mite and receive the blessing of God, in whose sacred name this solemn appeal is made. Father Purbrick having left England, all donations and subscriptions to be sent to William Baker, 5, North Parade, Grantham, Lincolnshire.

William Baker's real name is William Baker Bennett. For four years he occupied a room at Ashley-road, Richmond, and removed thence in January last. It appears to be true that he is a chronic invalid, and that he suffers either from a spinal or some internal complaint, though it did not prevent him getting out occasionally when he was at Richmond. For several years he has subsisted solely by begging, and there can be no doubt that his appeals (which emanate solely from himself) have brought in the £50 a year which he specifies as desired; for I am told that his living expenses at Richmond exceeded that amount, not allowing for the cost of his advertisements. The late Lord Emly has been dead about four years, so that it is not clear how this advertisement can be published under his sanction. Father Purbrick, as the advertisement states, has long since left this country, and if he in any way approves of the use made of his name, he is very ill-advised. I do not say that Mr. William Baker Bennett should not be supported, but I do say that some responsible person should undertake the work of collecting and accounting for the money. And I am also strongly of opinion that, if it is illegal to stand at the street corner and beg, it should be equally so to insert an advertisement for the same purpose in a newspaper—especially an advertisement so reeking with offensive religious cant as the effusions of this "convert invalid gentleman."

A Country Vicar's Wife writes:—

> Cannot you do something for the Country Clergy Holiday Fund? That a man with a large town parish needs rest and change goes without saying, but many think that his rural brother has no such need. Canon Benham has started a fund, but it will languish unless influential people give it their support. Men who would readily give a thousand pounds towards a new college would not give sixpence in response to such an appeal.

PRINCES RESTAURANT, PICCADILLY, admittedly the most fashionable in London. Table d'Hôte luncheon, 4s. 6d.; dinners à la Carte; suppers, 5s. Finest wines and cuisine only. Bocchi's famous orchestra performs daily. The charming Royal Institute Picture Galleries can be hired for balls, receptions, &c.—Managing Director, GUSTAVE FOURAULT, from Benoist's.

My husband has been here seven years and a half without a break. He has only had one Sunday off duty all that time. He has preached more than 800 sermons consecutively. How can a man with a nett income of £100 afford such a luxury as a holiday? Yet how much he needs it—shut up from year's end to year's end in a little parish six miles from a railway station, with most uncongenial surroundings! Do raise your voice on behalf of these long-suffering men.

I will raise it with pleasure—all the more so because it will be raised not only on behalf of the long-suffering men, but also on that of their long-suffering congregations. In thinking of the man who has to preach 800 sermons on consecutive Sundays, I cannot help thinking also of those who have to listen to them. They may be the most admirable of discourses—in the case of the vicar whose lady writes the foregoing appeal, I don't doubt that they are—but a Chrysostom would grow tiresome under such conditions. I would, therefore, recommend the Country Clergy Holidays Fund to appeal to the congregations. I anticipate that they will be found ready to make great sacrifices in order to give their parson a change.

One cannot help being struck by another aspect of this grievance. While one parson (not to mention Mrs. Parson) is languishing through being shut up in his uncongenial surroundings six miles from a railway station for seven and half years at a stretch, how many parsons could be found in the big towns who would regard a few weeks in such quarters as a perfect holiday! Surely something in the way of clerical holidays might be provided merely by temporary exchange of work and residence among the clergy, without any appeal to the public for funds. If the country vicar whose sad plight is described above cannot get a month in Switzerland or Scotland, he might find plenty of change and amusement in the West End of London, even in August and September, and there must be many West End vicarages which could easily be placed at his disposal.

At the root of the whole matter, however, is the question lately discussed in TRUTH—why shut any man up, on an inadequate stipend, in a remote village or hamlet to minister to, it may be, a mere handful of people from year's end to year's end? Substitute for the "resident gentleman" plan a system of itinerant priests, and you will hear no more of the necessity for subscribing to give the country clergy change of air and scene, nor of men rusting and rotting in country parsonages by reason of the isolation, monotony, and idleness of their lives.

I have received £2 from L. T. C., and £1 from Sibyl towards Lady Jeune's Country Holiday Fund for poor and sickly children.

G. L. W. sends me £5 towards the deficit of the Toy Fund.

H. L. SAVORY & CO.'S CIGARETTES.—By Special Warrants of Appointments to H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, H.R.H. the Duke of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha, H.S.H. the Duke of Teck, and the Houses of Lords and Commons. To be obtained of all the leading Houses in the trade.—Sole address, 59, Piccadilly, London, W. Specimen case of samples, containing all sizes, 2s. 6d., with price list.

FINE FEATHERS (!)

Mr. Brodrick admitted, in answer to Sir J. Lubbock, that osprey plumes were worn by certain regiments of our Army. This admission implies the stripping of the feathers from the parent ospreys during the breeding season, and the consequent starvation of the young ones.—Parliamentary Intelligence.

So, thanks to this new evidence,
Which Mr. Brodrick kindly tenders,
The ladies, it would now appear,
Are not the principal offenders.
For years they have been solely blamed
For causing needless osprey slaughter;
But now it seems Mars' gallant son
Is quite as bad as Eve's fair daughter.

Since, then, this fact is widely known
On data seemingly quite ample,
Let's hope the gallant son of Mars,
Will set at once a good example,
And cease to wear those cruel plumes
(However on his heart their loss preys)
Which doom to lingering, painful death
The helpless young of many ospreys.

No soldier willingly would show
The much-despised and scorned "white feather;"
Then why not let this shameful badge
And osprey plumes be linked together?
Since no brave man, although his speech
May be but rough, his manners rougher,
Would wittingly by aught he does
Cause helpless innocence to suffer.

Lively anticipations have been excited in Service circles by the report that the annual edition of the Queen's Regulations, which was due in 1896, is likely to make its appearance before many months have passed. I am told that the work of correcting the proofs of the amendments to the 1895 edition, some of which have only been in type for a couple of years, is now approaching completion, and too much praise cannot be bestowed upon all concerned for the thoroughness and rapidity with which this work is being got through. A rumour is current that a gigantic scheme is on hand which involves the renumbering of the whole of the sections and paragraphs, and it may be anticipated that this will prove most embarrassing to Continental Powers in the event of hostilities.

A circular has just been issued inviting subscriptions to a testimonial to Lieutenant-Colonel Ritchie, R.A., who is retiring after nearly forty years' service. The gallant officer has done so many good turns to lucky individuals during his term of office as D.A.G., R.A., that the testimonial ought certainly to be a handsome one. Unfortunately, gratitude is more often than not inspired by a sense of favours to come, and it is to be feared that the kind of favours that Colonel Ritchie has bestowed have made him almost as many enemies as friends.

I asked last week whether it was true that Brigadier-General Spragge, C.R.A. with the Tirah Field Force, took with him a field officer, Major Mercer, as his orderly officer. From what I have since heard, there seems to be no doubt about it whatever. Brigadier-General Spragge himself, however, should, I am told, be absolved from any responsibility for this anomalous proceeding. The opinion in the

For Truth, and all other Newspapers, Magazines, and Periodicals, send your Subscriptions to WM. DAWSON & SONS, Ltd., Cannon House, Bream's-bldngs., London. (Estab. 1809.) Catalogue gratis.

Service is that if the Brigadier-General had not been disposed to take General Nairne's son-in-law with him, he himself would not have gone to Tirah. It was a choice of evils, and he naturally chose the lesser.

A few weeks back I was taken to task by an officer for suggesting that there could be anything in the shape of favouritism or personal feeling in regard to the promotion of non-commissioned officers. What about the following narrative from the Army Ordnance Corps? A corporal in this corps was recently promoted to sergeant within six weeks of having been reprimanded for striking another corporal. Having attained sergeant's rank, the same youth was placed under arrest at the Curragh last October for drunkenness, and this time was ordered a severe reprimand. In the ordinary course of things this should have prevented his further promotion for twelve months; but, nevertheless, he has now been, or is just about to be, promoted to staff-sergeant. The explanation of his luck appears to be that promotions in the Corps are made at Headquarters, and that the favoured N.C.O. has a relative in an influential position there. Another N.C.O. of the same family, after having been made a prisoner for drunkenness, was let off without any punishment after a private inquiry, and a month afterwards was promoted from sergeant to quartermaster-sergeant, and twelve months later became a warrant officer over the heads of several seniors. These facts are in glaring contrast to other cases which could easily be adduced where men have no influential relatives to look after them.

Attention was called not long back, in one of the Service papers, to the hardship created by the block of promotion to the rank of Lieutenant on the establishment of District Officers R.A. This is a very real grievance, and ought to be looked into by the War Office authorities. Since the reduction of the establishment in 1894 by eight Lieutenants, no vacancies that have occurred have been filled; and if there is no intention of filling them until the limit of the new establishment is reached, no promotion can occur in the ordinary course of things for at least four or five years to come. In the meantime, several men qualified for commissions and recommended for promotion have fallen out under the age rules, and many others will follow them. The usual course in the case of a reduction like this is to fill up every alternate vacancy, so as to keep promotion moving, though at a slower rate; and there is no reason why that course should not have been followed in this instance, except that the men affected do not belong to a sufficiently influential class to make their protests effectual. If the difficulty cannot be got over in any other way, let the age limit be extended to forty-five, which is already the limit for quartermasters.

One of the Indian papers recently commented on the disgraceful way in which Indian Departmental warrant officers, conductors and sub-conductors, as also officers of the commissioned grade of Deputy-Assistant-Commissary-General, are treated in the matter of furlough pay. This is a point which has before now been discussed in TRUTH, and the delay in remedying the grievance reflects great discredit upon the Indian Government. Under the rules now in force, a conductor (a first-class warrant officer) receives on furlough £75 or £78 a year. As against this an Infantry sergeant-major (fourth-class warrant officer) receives £100 7s. 6d., being £25 7s. 6d. in excess of what his senior officer receives; while the highest-paid regimental warrant officer in the British Service, a sergeant-major R.H.A., receives £118 12s. 6d. as furlough pay in Europe. I believe it is a fact that the furlough pay of the Indian conductor has not been increased for half a century past, or more, which in itself is sufficient to establish the case for a rise, in view of the increase of all salaries which has taken place during that period; and it may also be mentioned that the Indian Departmental warrant officers are distinguished from all other classes in the military Service of the Indian Government by the fact that their furlough pay is less than their pensions.

Again, a Deputy-Assistant-Commissary-General, a commissioned officer with the rank of lieutenant, receives furlough pay at the rate of £110 per annum, which is not only far below that of any other commissioned officer in the Indian Service, but actually below that of the sergeant-major R.H.A. above mentioned. The financial embarrassments of the Indian Government, largely due to that Government's reckless and unnecessary military expenditure, are no excuse for such shabby and unfair treatment as is shown in all the foregoing cases; and if the Indian authorities are not disposed to look into this grievance spontaneously, pressure ought to be put upon them by the Secretary of State or Parliament.

We are all getting a little tired, I think, of the grievances of the Army Medical Staff, but I cannot help being amused at the way in which one military medico, writing to me on the subject of his pay, expresses his grievances. A Veterinary-Lieutenant, he points out, gets paid upon joining "£50 a year more for looking after the horses than a Surgeon-Lieutenant gets for looking after the men." In the same way, "the Royal Engineers in every rank except Lieutenant, get more pay for looking after the drains than the Doctor does for looking after the typhoid cases caused by them." The writer goes on to remark that if the War Office wants good men, it will have to pay for them. As one of those, however, out of whose pockets the pay has to come, I would suggest that the War Office should wait to see the effect of the recent concessions before raising the Army Surgeon's fees.

Non-commissioned officers rejoining from the Reserve under the new regulations are being allowed to go, if they so desire, to the new battalions in process of formation. There is a feeling in many quarters that it would have been much better to have taken the N.C.O.s for these battalions from those regiments which at present have

LUNCHEONS. DINNERS. SUPPERS. — HÔTEL CONTINENTAL, 1, Regent-street (Waterloo-place). Elegant Suites of Apartments and Single Bedrooms. Telephone: "3686 Gerrard."

N.C.O.s in excess of their establishment, and where promotion is blocked in consequence. Here is a case in point. The 1st Worcestershire Regiment came home a year and a half back with its usual foreign establishment of sergeants, and shortly received a number of others from the Depot and elsewhere, bringing up the total to about sixteen in excess of the establishment. This excess has been partly reduced since by sending sergeants to the 2nd Battalion, the Militia Staff, and so on, but several more will have to go before a vacancy can occur for the men next on the list for promotion, although it is over two years since the last promotion to sergeant. One would think that in new battalions more than anywhere else it must be of advantage to have experienced non-commissioned officers, and it is surprising that steps have not been taken to obtain them from other regiments which have such men to spare.

Here is another little grievance in connection with Reservists rejoining. A sergeant who rejoins under the new regulations, in addition to other privileges, is allowed to be borne on the supernumerary married roll. On the other hand, a sergeant of upwards of seven years' service, who has never left the colours, but is serving on an extended engagement, is not eligible to be borne on the supernumerary married roll. No doubt there was a reason for allowing facilities to married men rejoining, but, at the same time, it looks decidedly anomalous that a man who has been away from the colours for two or three years should have advantages on rejoining over men who have been serving continuously.

There is a growing feeling of dissatisfaction in the Army Ordnance Corps at the results of the order issued about two years ago which threw open the rank of sub-conductor to the Service at large. Since the order was promulgated upwards of a dozen N.C.O.s from other branches of the Service have joined the Army Ordnance Corps and obtained warrant rank, and the rate at which outsiders are coming in may be judged from the fact that within the last few months there have joined the corps at Woolwich, a quartermaster-sergeant military staff clerk, a battery quartermaster-sergeant, and a company sergeant-major, R.A., all of whom will probably be appointed warrant officers before the thirty-five quartermaster-sergeants already in the Corps, men with from twelve to sixteen years' service. Considering the high standard of the N.C.O.s and men of the Army Ordnance Corps in education and conduct, it certainly seems very unjust to them that their prospects of obtaining warrant rank should be marred in this way; nor is it easy to see how the interests of the Service are served by thus pitch-forking into the highest appointments in a Departmental Corps men who have had no practical training or experience in the work of that particular Department.

I was recently introduced to a humble but useful body of men in the Service—the saddler-sergeants. The saddler-sergeants, it is scarcely necessary to say, have a grievance. It is that they get no chance of earning a higher pension than 2s. 3d., whereas the farrier-sergeants can rise to the rank of squadron-sergeant major with a pension of 2s. 6d. There are only, I believe, thirty-one saddler-sergeants in the whole of the Army, but I take it that saddlers are quite as useful and necessary to the efficiency of the Cavalry as farriers, and there seems no reason why they should not be in as good a position, except that, owing to the fewness of their numbers, their claims have been overlooked. I would specially invite the attention of the military authorities to the case of these men, not only because to give them all another threepence a day pension would not involve a very heavy charge upon the public, but also because skilled tradesmen of all classes employed in the Army ought to be specially encouraged.

By one of those anomalies of military administration which are incomprehensible to an outsider, the clerical staff of the 1st Cavalry Brigade is composed of men of the Staff Clerk Section, Army Service Corps, while the staffs of the 2nd, 3rd, and 4th Brigades are composed of men taken from the various Cavalry regiments. The effect of this is that the latter only draw Cavalry rates of pay as orderly-room sergeants and orderly-room clerks, which means that they receive from 1s. to 2s. a day less than men doing the same work in the 1st Brigade, while their prospects of promotion are also inferior. Why should not the clerical staffs of all the brigades be on the same footing?

Apropos of my last references to the Staff College, I have had a letter from an officer in India who says that, whatever else the Staff College may or may not do, it certainly does not turn out men who are qualified to hold Staff positions in frontier campaigns against native tribes. He writes:—

> There is little doubt that most P.S.C. men know their Staff work well enough for the conditions of work in Europe, but in this country different organisation, equipment, climate, customs, country, and troops make a great deal of their European training useless or superfluous to P.S.C. men. It is for this reason as much as any other that the majority of our best Indian Staff Corps men do not go through the Staff College. The College has a name out here for theory as against practice. That is simply because although a good P.S.C. man may in time grasp the altered conditions out here, it always takes time, and a dull man may never grasp them at all. There are lots of dull men with P.S.C. to their names, and also lots of theoretical soldiers.
>
> I do not want to "crab" the Staff College. For Europe, no doubt it is excellent, but it is very little use for India. The moral is, Let us have a Staff College in India for India.

That is a moral which was pointed out in TRUTH some weeks back. The arguments in favour of an Indian Staff College seem to me unanswerable. It is unfair to Indian officers to compel them to come to England to qualify for Staff appointments, and it stands to reason that a Staff College in India must be in a better position for teaching the requirements of Indian warfare than the best institution of the same kind in England.

Here is a communication which throws light upon the "skeleton" condition of some of the home battalions.

A SEA BATH in your own room. Bracing and refreshing is BRILL'S SEA SALT. A safeguard against colds and rheumatism. Invaluable in the nursery.

HOTEL ALBEMARLE, Piccadilly, London. Private Suite, Bath, Electric Light, Lift. VERMERSCH, Proprietor. Paris: Imperial Hotel, Champs Elysées. Boulogne S/M: Imperial Pavilion Hotel.

The writer is dealing with the number of men on garrison, as distinct from regimental, employ :—

In every garrison there are an enormous number of men on garrison employ, and none of these men can be taken for a single parade except General's inspections and manœuvres, if executed, without special permission from the General Officer Commanding. All these men are often excused from military training, sometimes even from musketry, doing no military duty whatever. In the case of a battalion on home service, which is seldom up to its full strength and contains a large number of men at recruits' drill, the drain caused by garrison employ together with guards and other necessary duties is so great that there are very seldom sufficient men available for a battalion parade, and the captain of a company never has a chance of getting the whole of his men together except at musketry and military training. In some instances I have known a captain obliged to send recruits on garrison employ before they are dismissed their drill.

These employments consist, first, of orderlies, of which there is a small army in every garrison, each of the innumerable offices requiring several for its own use; and the men thus employed have nothing to do but clean the offices and be ready to take a message if required. Secondly, there are servants to the General Staff and Departmental officers, including grooms, gardeners, scullions, cowmen, and other domestics and menials. I have known as many as thirty men employed in one house. Besides these, there are N.C.O.s and men in charge of garrison canteens, libraries, recreation rooms, military prisons, &c.

The absence of all these men makes the military duties fall much harder than desirable upon those who are not fortunate enough to get such employment, and it is no uncommon occurrence in garrisons for a man to go on guard with only two nights in bed.

Some people blame the system of regimental employment; but a regimental officer cannot have more servants than he is entitled to, and men on regimental employ are available in the regiment, and are frequently taken for parades and route marches, and, most mportant of all, they never lose touch with their regiments, hereas those on garrison employ are often away from their corps r months in succession.

If the War Office people had a single idea for improving the condition of the Army beyond getting more men voted by Parliament, and laying ever-increasing burdens upon the taxpayers, they would long since have made some serious attempt to deal with this question. I would suggest to one or other of those gentlemen in Parliament who make a speciality of military criticism, that they should obtain a return of the exact number of men in the whole Army who are taken away from purely military duties for both garrison and regimental employment. Such a return would, I think, open the eyes of the British taxpayer very considerably, and would prove that thousands of the men who are charged to the country as soldiers, and reckoned upon the effective strength of the Army, are in reality merely domestic servants, or clerks, messengers, and minor officials.

As the officer who sends me the above letter remarks, it is of peculiar importance under the short-service system that every soldier on the strength of the battalion should remain in the ranks throughout his period of service, and if any considerable number fail to do so, the battalion cannot be properly efficient. I have repeatedly advocated in TRUTH that all berths which take men from their properly military training should be filled by pensioners or reservists. It is said that in regard to regimental employ this would not be practicable under present conditions. But where there is a will there is a way; and most certainly in the case of garrison employment there seems no reason at all why there should not be formed at every garrison town a separate corps of old soldiers to discharge all such functions as those specified above.

Apart from all this, there are serious abuses in connection with the present system which require to be looked into and terminated. Under no circumstances ought men who are nominally engaged in military service to be actually employed as gardeners or cowmen; and when an officer states that he has known as many as thirty soldiers employed in the household of one officer in a garrison, it is certainly time for the War Office to look into such a scandal.

In referring last week to the pay of the men engaged in the gymnastic display at the Military Tournament, I find that I inadvertently stated the amount paid for the whole performance as a payment "per week;" that is to say, the payment has been in former years 28s. 6d. to 30s., and this year is reduced to 25s. for the Tournament. The correction makes, of course, no difference to the point of my remarks. The question is why the pay of the gymnastic staff alone was reduced this year.

Here is a curious case in connection with an Army pension. A man in receipt of a pension of 16s. 7½d. per week was removed to a lunatic asylum, where the charge for his maintenance was 9s. per week. This charge was paid out of the pension by the military authorities, and in reply to an inquiry the man's son was informed that the balance of 7s. 7½d. per week would be retained until the patient was discharged from the asylum. After being there three and a half years, the pensioner, though he had not regained his reason, was sufficiently recovered to be handed over to the care of his son.

Since that time the pension has been received by the son, but it is kept a quarter in arrear instead of being paid in advance, and the authorities refuse to part with the sum that accumulated during the period the pensioner was in the asylum. At first they said they would retain it in case of his complete recovery; and next, when medical certificates were submitted showing that his complete recovery was impossible, they said they would retain it for his funeral expenses. Is it the usual practice to keep back the overplus of a pension in such circumstances as these? After what has happened, the son may well doubt whether the money ever will be handed over, though, as the maintenance, nursing, and medical expenses he has already incurred on his father's account are considerably in excess of what he has received, he undoubtedly has a good claim to it.

A great deal of disappointment, not to use a stronger term, has been caused by the pointed omission of the 1st Battalion Royal Irish Fusiliers from the force selected for the coming operations in the Soudan. The omission is the more remarkable because, not only has every other regiment in Egypt been selected, but also two regiments from outside—the Grenadiers and the Rifle Brigade. The 1st Royal Irish have been fifteen years in India, and are in every respect healthy and fit, and they have not been on active service since 1882. Considering that the authorities have just had to apologise to another Irish battalion for an undeserved slight offered to it in connection with the Indian Frontier operations, there is the more reason for asking for some explanation of this latest injustice to Ireland.

---

CHARING CROSS HOSPITAL, W.C., entirely dependent on voluntary support, urgently requires help. Liabilities, £11,000. No investments.

In the case of our friend "Tommy Atkins," I suppose like that of the frogs in the pond, what is amusement to others may be very unpleasant for him. There is, however, very often a comic side to his grievances. For instance, in the 1st Battalion West Riding Regiment now at Malta there is an order in force that every man who is not on standing pass at midnight must stand at his bed at 9.30 tattoo and answer to his name as the orderly-sergeant calls the roll. This, of course, implies that a man who has gone to bed before that hour must turn out and answer to his name. Here is a complaint from the ranks showing the hardship of this order :—

It very often happens that when a man has been in the canteen and, perhaps, had enough drink to make him sleepy, he goes off to bed without any trouble, and goes to sleep ; but when he has to get out of his bed at 9.30 and stand up by the side of it, he is a little dazed, and does not like the idea. So in the end he gets marched off to the guard-room for being drunk. It is very hard on a man that if he can walk all right from the canteen and put himself to bed without any trouble, that he should then be woke up out of his sleep and made to get out of bed and dress himself, and then be put in the guard-room on a charge of being drunk. I hear of employers refusing to take men from the Army through their having so many drunks on their sheets, and it is very hard that orders should be enforced which have the effect of making crimes against men when there is no necessity for it.

I agree that if a man can get himself safely from the canteen to bed, he ought not to be woke up an hour or so afterwards in order to test his sobriety. Moreover, this may lead to totally unfounded suspicions. A man may go to bed on nothing stronger than a glass of milk, or a basin of gruel, and yet may be uncommonly drowsy and stupid if suddenly awakened an hour afterwards. The regulation seems irrational, and quite unnecessary, for the orderly sergeant can see whether a man is in his bed without troubling him to stand up and answer to his name.

I should like to ask Mr. Rudyard Kipling whether his friend Learoyd is still serving with the colours, because I have had a letter from India which, although signed in a different name, is strongly suggestive of that hero, unless it happens to be Ortheris. My Learoyd (or Ortheris) is in the 1st Royal Fusiliers, and he is in trouble about his dog. To begin with, it seems that, owing to the dogs of the 1st Royal Fusiliers not being allowed in the bungalows during the day, they have to be tied up in the sun, which in the middle of May in Bombay is naturally not a good thing for a dog. Besides that, when a soldier keeps a dog, or a dog keeps a soldier (whichever it may be), the soldier has to be provided with a pass. In the 1st Royal Fusiliers they have run out of printed passes at the canteen, and manuscript passes are not recognised. The consequence is that Private Learoyd (or Ortheris), in company with several other dog fanciers, has been doing punishment drill. It is very hard on a man that he should be punished because the canteen does not keep dog passes. Perhaps some one may say that the difficulty may be got over by getting rid of the dog, but if anybody says that, he does not know his Learoyd—or his Ortheris.

On the question of "flat-foots" in the Army, a West End doctor, who is a well-known authority on orthopædics, sends the following letter. In view of the increased attention now being given to marching, I think that what he says is worth the attention of the military authorities, and I therefore publish the letter in full :—

The question of the soldier's feet is a far more serious one than the uninformed general reader supposes. A soldier without his two great toes in a fairly straight line with the innermost point of his ankle joint, and with his instep in a flexible, free playing, but taut "bow" (not "arch," which is a misnomer), is an absolute encumbrance, rather than an efficient soldier, after any considerable part of a long march has been accomplished.

In TRUTH of June 16, I read that flat-footed men are being enlisted, and they are to be cured by gymnastics before "use." Of course, there are many special exercises (of the "tip-toe" and "balancing" class) which will correct flat-foot in children and young people whose feet are still soft and not fully formed. I doubt, however, if the special aptitude and intelligence, or the necessary anatomical knowledge for the conducting of such treatment is to be found in the Army gymnastic department and if the instructors with this "orthopædic" skill are available, how do they expect to improve or correct the flat feet of adult men, past their period of growth, with the bones of the feet fully ossified, in the gymnasium ?

Certainly I have seen even such feet vastly improved by patient daily "tip-toe," &c., exercises continued for a year or two, with the wearing of proper boots ; but there's the rub. Whether the military authorities enlist flat-footed men or not, the military drill and the military boots (those served out to the private and corporal, and perhaps a grade higher) most certainly produce flat-footed men. Fortunately, many of the men are aware of the bad effect on their feet of the inflexible waisted boots, and they select, when trying on for their second pair and after pairs, a size too big for them, so that when firmly fastened round the ankle, or at least enough to look neat for inspection, their feet can still bend, and the heel get a very slight range of rise and fall, inside the boots, however rigid the boot sole may be at the "waist" (just as the Breton peasant uses his "sabots"). Of course, this means sore heels on long marches ; but that is a small matter compared with permanent crippling from flat-foot, and the atrocious sufferings a man must endure from flat feet when marching.

The second ingenious arrangement used in the Army for producing the shifting of the body weight as far as possible towards the inner borders of the feet (for the leg bones at the ankle, carrying the weight, may be caused to press with their burden on either border, according to the position of the feet), is that utterly ridiculous order in drill, the position at "attention." It is a posture which I would not permit the flat-footed and weak-ankled children I deal with professionally to assume at any time, unless for some special exercise or "equilibrant" (excuse the tall term) posture. It is the flat-footed man's evil posture, and our soldiers have to maintain it daily—often for hours !

Would it be a very enormous strain on the resources of the War Office, I wonder, to introduce the "four square" placing of the feet for "attention," and the use of boots with the waist of the soles made of the flexible, but perfectly durable and wet-proof leather which is used for a civilian's foot clothing ?

In a further communication the writer of the above speaks of the British Army as the "greatest flat-foot factory ever instituted." From another source—a military one this time—I hear that Army surgeons could testify to the fact that men who enter the Army with sound and elastic feet now suffer tortures from flat-foot, and that, not only their marching power, but their general health is seriously affected from this cause. The absence of a flexible waist in the Army boot is a matter which has frequently been mentioned in TRUTH in one connection or another; and it would be well worth the while of the CHALLIS'S ROYAL HOTEL, Rupert-street, Piccadilly-circus.—The new Louis XV. Dining-room now open for Luncheons and Dinners. Table d'Hôte Luncheon, 2/-, from 12.30 to 3 p.m. ; Table d'Hôte Dinner, 3/6, from 6.30 to 9 p.m., served at separate tables. Open to non-residents.

LÉRINA.—Finest Liqueur. Made by the monks at the Abbey of St. Lérins, Isle St. Honorat, nr. Cannes, and well known to all visitors to the Riviera. From all Stores and Wine Merchants.

military authorities to inquire thoroughly as to whether flat-footedness is produced by this cause, either alone or in conjunction with the faulty drill to which my orthopædic correspondent alludes.

I am pillorying below a further batch of Mr. Atkins' grievances :—

2nd Battalion Scots Guards, Windsor.—An order has recently been put in force in this battalion requiring all men to bathe once a week, and those who have not taken a voluntary dip in the course of the preceding week are marched to the bathing-place on Monday morning and compelled to go in. This is an unobjectionable arrangement in itself, and probably there are few soldiers who during the summer weather would require to be compelled to bathe if a proper place to bathe were provided, but the bathing-place in this instance is a dirty backwater, or stream running into the river, with about 2 ft. of mud at the bottom of it, and, as the men come out dirtier than they go in, it is the more cleanly of them who most object to the regulation. If cleanliness is the object in view, it would seem to be sufficient to require the men to avail themselves of the baths provided at the barracks. If they are to learn swimming, a proper place should be provided for that purpose.

East Kent Militia.—On this battalion assembling at Canterbury they had to march to the railway station in a heavy rain for the purpose of proceeding to Shorncliffe, and by the time they got into camp they were wet through, and were ordered to change their clothing at once. It was then discovered that only a few of the men had a change of clothing with them, the result being that many of them had to lie all night—and the night happened to be a very cold one—in wet tents and wet clothes, and they suffered considerably in health in consequence. The reason of this appears to be that it is the custom in the battalion to complete the men's kits in a leisurely way in the course of the month's training. After the above experience it is to be hoped that in future the kits will be made up when the battalion assembles.

Royal Engineers, Curragh Camp.—A correspondent writing from the Curragh mentions that on Wednesday, the 15th inst., a serious nuisance was occasioned on one of the public ways through the camp by a party of men being engaged in the afternoon in cleaning latrines. Some inquiry ought certainly to be made into this matter, for not only is it contrary to the usual practice, if not to the regulations, that such work should be done during the day, but it is primâ facie the duty of a contractor, not that of soldiers. The party engaged upon the work belonged to the 37th Company, R.E., and were under the command of a non-commissioned officer.

Medical Staff Corps, Aldershot.—One N.C.O. here has held the appointment of company accountant for the past three years. Is there not a rule in the Corps that men shall take turn and turn about in such appointments? In addition to this appointment, the same N.C.O. is employed as an assistant compounder at the 3rd Station Hospital. He is thereby depriving another man of paid employment, even if he is not drawing two extra-duty pays in contravention of the regulations.

2nd Battalion The King's Shropshire Light Infantry.—There is some grievance in this regiment in regard to "walking out boots." The point of it seems to be that after a man has bought a pair of boots, costing anything from 10s. 6d. to 15s. 6d., at the regimental shop, he is forbidden to wear them. What I should like to know is, why boots are allowed to be on sale at the regimental shop which are not allowed to be worn.

2nd Battalion South Lancashire Regiment, Kamptee.—Up to the end of May this battalion had not been provided with the new clothing supposed to be served out in April. The Government authorities are presumably to blame for this, but pending the arrival of the clothing it is certainly unfair that the men should be checked for not having their old clothing in proper condition. Many of them complain of having been in trouble through having their clothes spotted or patched. A suit of khaki which has been in wear over twelve months can hardly be expected to be in first-class condition.

72nd Field Battery, R.A., Ramandroag.—The men of this battery have been long permitted to wear non-regulation grey shirts. While a detachment at Ramandroag were going through physical drill in these shirts, one of the men was asked by the Acting-Adjutant (who belongs to a Line Infantry regiment) whether the shirts were served out to him. The man, thinking the question had reference to the shirt he had on, replied "No." It appears that the officer meant the regulation grey shirt. The man was then brought before the Commandant (Captain Reid) on the charge of making a false statement to an officer. He called evidence in support of his defence that the answer was given under a misapprehension, but he was found guilty and awarded ten days' C.B. If this is not manufacturing "crime," I do not know the correct name for it.

Reference has recently been made in TRUTH to the shabby treatment of the officers of the Royal Indian Marine when invalided home. If the embarrassments of the Indian Government preclude any financial concession to the Indian Marine just at present, might I suggest that there is one way in which a great boon could be conferred upon that branch of the Service, without additional cost to the taxpayer—namely, by permitting an officer to forego his two months' privilege leave in one year and add it to the year following? A four months' holiday once in two years being sufficient to enable a man to get a run home for two or three months, would be far more appreciated and more beneficial to the men than a couple of months in each year, and the Government would probably reap the benefit of it in a reduction of the sick list. If this proposal were adopted, there is no reason why passages home should not be found for such officers upon the Government troopships.

THE COAL THAT FAILED.

Our autumn Naval manœuvres have been put off on account of the scarcity of coal.

The Jingoes, it is very clear,
If they'd the vogue prolong
Of their exceedingly well-known
And vulgar battle song,
The chance to instantly amend
Their anthem should not miss;
In fact, they now should make it run
In some such way as this :—

"We don't want to fight! but by Jingo! if we do,
We've got the ships! we've got the men! we've got the money, too!
And though at present no great stock we're able to control,
We hope that we ere long may say we've also got the coal!"

Britannia's sceptre on the main
Used paramount to be,
But clearly now 'tis Old King Coal
That's sovereign of the sea.
So let the Jingoes honour him
On whom they so depend,
And thus, when they their anthem sing,
Its sentiment amend :—

"We don't want to fight! but by Jingo! if we do,
We've got the ships! we've got the men! we've got the money, too!
And best of all, that we may sweep the sea from Pole to Pole,
We've got as our most staunch ally his Majesty King Coal!"

It is the brewer, as a fact,
Gets turned into a peer;
But coal to England, now we see,
Is worth much more than beer;
So why should brewers' vats alone
Insure this great reward?
The coal-pit owner ought to be
In future made a lord!

And when we fight, if fight we must, don't let us yell that stuff,
'Bout having ships, and men, and cash—for that is not enough.
Instead of shouting, let us set to work with heart and soul,
And see that in the day of need our stores are full of coal!

In answer to a question put to him last Friday, Mr. Goschen endeavoured to assure us that all reports to the prejudice of the marksmanship of Naval gunners are unfounded. The Admiralty, we are told, "have no reason to believe that there is the slightest foundation for the allegations," namely, that ammunition supposed to have been expended in target practice has in reality been thrown overboard. No one ever imagined that the Admiralty had the slightest reason to believe it; on the contrary, every one with a grain of common-sense in his cranium must be perfectly sure that, if such a thing were done, every care would be taken that the Admiralty should know nothing whatever about it.

The Maximum of Effect at the Minimum of Cost.—An Object Lesson in Decorating and Furnishing can be obtained by inspecting Messrs. WARING'S Suites of furnished rooms at 175-181, Oxford-st. W

Unfortunately, what the Admiralty believe is not evidence, and what people who profess to have been eye-witnesses assert is evidence, though I don't say that it is necessarily conclusive evidence, especially when the witnesses are not disposed to come forward. The great thing is that the Admiralty should know of such rumours, and be on their guard against any such practices. It is satisfactory to hear from Mr. Goschen that "the Admiralty are giving their most earnest attention to the best means of improving the standard of marksmanship in the Navy, and are carefully considering whether any further regulations on the subject are necessary;" but this does not quite read as if everything were already considered to be for the best in the best of Navies. What the Admiralty should bear in mind in any new Regulations that may be framed is, not the desirability of having a certain number of crack marksmen on each ship, but the necessity of making our naval gunners all round the first in the world. Without this the mere building of ships and casting of guns can avail us little.

On the few occasions when I have been privileged to witness a launch, it has always struck me that a very slight accident might produce a terrible catastrophe. That the catastrophe has come at last, surprises me, therefore, less than that it has not come sooner. The verdict of the jury upon the Blackwall disaster brings it clearly within the category of preventable accidents; and I hope that not only will the recommendations of the jury in regard to police supervision be carried out in future, but that the police will take good care that everybody present when a big ship is being launched shall be out of harm's way.

Our Governments, as a rule, are not prone to the endowment of scientific research. Peculiar interest, therefore, attaches to the additional grant of £500 contributed by the Treasury this year to the Solar Physics Committee. The Solar Physicists, I understand, are mainly occupied in investigating sun-spots, and other eccentricities in the orb of day, under the direction of Sir Norman Lockyer, K.C.B. According to Sir Norman, who is responsible for a number of other astronomical theories, the work may in the future throw considerable light upon the vagaries of the weather. I know a man who thinks that it may enable us to foretell the course of the Stock Markets during the next account, and the winner of next year's Derby. We shall see. In the meanwhile, the increased endowment of the Solar Physical Research has enabled Dr. W. S. Lockyer, a son of Sir Norman, to be appointed to the staff of researchers, and a bird in the hand is worth two in the bush.

In connection with the completion of the South Kensington buildings, the representatives of Science and Art are agitating to get the proposed extension of the Royal College of Science carried out on the west side of Exhibition-road. As all the Art portion of the Museum and the Royal College of Art are on the east side of the road, together with the original Royal College of Science building, while the Science collections of the Museum, and some three or four overflow branches of the College of Science, are already on the west side, common sense suggests that Art should be left in possession of the east side, and that whatever new Science buildings are required should be erected on the west, where there is plenty of land available. If economy be the motive for the proposed crowding of all the buildings on the east side, what an opportunity is now offered for utilising the barren wastes of the Imperial Institute!

It is interesting to note the line which the Post Office takes when pressed to carry out its promise of a daily delivery of letters at every house in the United Kingdom. Some months back I referred to the case of a gentleman in Argyllshire who, notwithstanding the promise made in Parliament a year previously, could only get his letters by sending for them across the neighbouring loch. This case having been further pressed upon the Postmaster-General through the medium of a Member of Parliament, the Post Office have so far given way as to deliver letters at the house once a week, while on the remaining days the letters must be sent for as before. It is perfectly evident from this that the Post Office are not prepared to grant a daily delivery everywhere, and that the Chancellor of the Exchequer's declaration on the subject was mere gammon. I hope that this is not an unparliamentary word, but I know of no other which properly characterises the facts.

Let us lay the blame upon the right shoulders. I would not suggest for a minute that the real responsibility in this matter rests with the Postmaster-General. It is one of the numerous cases in which the Post Office is absolutely fettered by the Treasury. A daily delivery at every house in the kingdom would involve a considerable expenditure of money, and the Treasury simply will not allow that money to be spent. This view of the matter only accentuates the humbug of the Chancellor of the Exchequer getting up in the House of Commons and declaring, in a Budget speech, that a portion of his surplus was to be devoted to introducing this universal daily delivery, and then refusing to furnish the Post Office with the means of giving effect to his declaration. What I should like to know is whether, when he made the promise, the Chancellor of the Exchequer was himself informed as to the amount it would cost to carry it out, or whether, after the money has been specifically devoted to this purpose, it is really being applied to some other.

Much more important than the establishment of a municipal opera house—with which I have dealt elsewhere—is that the County Council should come to the rescue of London's most important playground—Hampstead Heath. The estate of the late Sir Spencer Wells, the eminent surgeon, abutting thereon, is about to be disposed of, and that indefatigable "bogey," the speculative builder, already has his evil eye upon such an excellent investment. If the West Heath were to be thus fenced in by "eligible houses," it would be nothing less than a national calamity; whereas, the acquisition of the land now for sale would not only increase the fine open space already available for metropolitan toilers, but would effectually prevent a similar danger in the future.

My attention has lately been directed to the alarming amount of sickness prevailing in London Board Schools, owing to the practice of painting the buildings and repairing drains, &c., while the children are at work in the schools. The matter is of the more importance, as it would appear that the School Board officers are entirely unaware of the existence of the evil. Pressure of other matters prevents my dealing with the subject this week at the length it requires, but in the next issue of TRUTH I propose to go into the facts fully.

In Leicester-square will be found the first street lamp—at this end of the town—fitted to fulfil the requirements of a coffee-shop and a distributor of hot water on the penny-in-the-slot system. The lamp now being placed is larger than those hitherto adapted, as it is to supply both coffee and cocoa at the rate of a halfpenny a cup, in addition to hot water at a halfpenny a gallon. The post itself will contain magazines of different articles (all procurable on the slot system), such as extract of beef, for making into beef-tea by means of the hot water obtainable above—that is to say, if the wayfarer has thoughtfully provided himself with a cup or mug—a system for hiring out vessels on the penny-in-the-slot principle not having yet been devised.

The City Fathers of Bristol are very cross with the inconsiderate people who periodically disturb their peaceful slumbers over such awkward questions as the pollution of the Avon and the non-ventilation of the sewers. Last week an influential body of ratepayers at Clifton were snubbed for venturing to present a memorial on these subjects, and rebuked—in common with TRUTH—for damaging the interests of the place by an "unseemly agitation." It is thoroughly characteristic of municipal wisdom to take up such an attitude. The "agitation" has been rendered necessary by the negligence and procrastination of the local authorities, and if the reputation of Clifton suffers it is they alone who are to blame.

As complaints are made of the statements that have appeared in TRUTH on this matter, I take the following instructive extract from an article in the Western Daily Press on the proceedings of the Council last week:—

> As long as the river remains the vehicle for the sewage of Bristol and some other towns, there will be a liability to effluvia in the summer months. But the noisome mud need not be disturbed by the dredgers and then redeposited in the bed of the river. This is an accentuation of an almost intolerable evil, which might well be avoided at a moderate cost; and so it is understood that these dredgings will henceforth—in summer, at any rate—be carried right out to the Channel. The arrangement is better than nothing.

The fact that this extraordinarily stupid "accentuation of an almost intolerable evil" has been allowed to go on until the present moment, and is even now only to be suspended during the summer months, is indeed a striking testimony to the energy and intelligence of the Bristol Corporation.

I suppose that my friend in Grosvenor-street who can only get his dustbin emptied about lunch time or calling-time in the afternoon ought to think himself lucky, for I hear of a distressed resident in the neighbourhood of Belgrave-square who has been for weeks unable to get his dustbin emptied at all. This gentleman's account of his negotiations with the Vestry of St. George, Hanover-square, affords, indeed, a monumental example of the way in which municipal government is conducted in London at the close of the nineteenth century. He describes how, his dustbin having remained unemptied for several weeks, he paid visit after visit to the Vestry Office, and could get no satisfaction, beyond an explanation from the Clerk that the Vestry were entirely in the hands of the contractors, who were new to their work, and he was told that he was only one of about eighty complainants. From the Vestry Office he went to the police station without result, and then applied to the magistrate at Westminster, who declined to grant a summons, as he thought the Vestry were not liable for the nuisance. The dustbin actually went uncleared for six weeks, and as the refuse was beginning to choke the area and render the house uninhabitable, the happy ratepayer made his own arrangements with a contractor to have the refuse removed, when at the last moment the representative of the Vestry appeared on the scene.

Now, I should like to know what right we have to call ourselves a civilised nation when such a state of things as this can prevail in the wealthiest part of the West End of London without any visible remedy. Under the City Corporation, which, with all its faults, acquits itself fairly well of its duties as a municipal authority, all house refuse is removed every day by ten o'clock in the morning, and so it would be in every other properly governed community. Why does not the Government, instead of hatching insane schemes for turning all these vestrymen into municipal councillors, provide the ratepayers with some summary and drastic remedy for compelling them to perform their duties? Whether it is a question of emptying dustbins, watering the roads, or lighting the streets, the ratepayers ought to have some means at hand of compelling the execution of the work which they pay to have done, and the only means I see is by fining or imprisoning vestrymen like those of St. George, Hanover square.

Pending the passing of a short Act for this purpose, I would suggest to the ratepayers of St. George's that they should apply to the High Court for a mandamus. The late Sir Alexander Cockburn used to say that, if he had a free hand, he would govern all England from the Court of Queen's Bench. From what I remember of that learned judge, I feel sure he would have made short work of any vestry which refused to empty dustbins, and pleaded that it was all the fault of a contractor who was new to his work.

For some time past a dispute has been going on at Tunbridge Wells in reference to the right of way to the well-known Harrison's Rocks in Birchden Wood. It is claimed that a right-of-way has existed there from time immemorial, but the Goldsmiths' Company, who are the owners of the Birchden Estate, have denied the existence of this right, and have latterly placed various restrictions upon the visits of the public to the Rocks. The District Council—as too often happens in such cases—has failed to take up the question in the interests of the public, and so this duty has fallen on the Footpaths Committee of the Tradesmen's Association, whose chairman, Dr. E. Abbott, is now being sued in the Court of Chancery by the Goldsmiths' Company for trespass. It is hoped that the action will be the means of obtaining a final judicial settlement of the whole dispute, and in view of its importance to residents and visitors, those engaged in the defence will be glad to hear from anybody in a position to throw light on the facts as to the use of the right-of-way.

I am glad to see that the New Palace Steamer Company have taken the hint, given in TRUTH last summer, that it is a little unreasonable in its charges for the conveyance of passengers' cycles. The company have this season conceded to the members of at least one cycling club the privilege of travelling at reduced fares, and of paying half rates for their machines. The company would probably be no losers if they extended the same privilege to all cyclists.

It is reported that several provincial police authorities contemplate taking action to obtain a modification of the Police Pension Act of 1890, so as to prevent the retirement of constables after twenty-six years' service. There is, unfortunately, no question that many men now elect to leave the force the moment they become entitled to a pension, and when they are quite capable of putting in another ten or twelve years' good service. The leakage is regrettable on more grounds than one; but it seems open to doubt whether the proposed extension of the qualifying age for a pension is the best way in which to deal with it. The authorities should consider whether the desire of the men to get out of the force as soon as possible may not be due, to a great extent, to dissatisfaction at their treatment, and the absence of reasonable inducements to the old hands to prolong their period of service. It should also be considered whether, if the prospect of the pension is made more remote, and the other conditions of the service remain unchanged, the force will be likely to attract as desirable a class of recruits as it does at present.

The discussion at Maidstone regarding a recent addition to the Borough Bench has had a singular sequel in the form of the following announcement in the South-Eastern Gazette:—

JUSTICE'S APPOINTMENT.—It having been intimated to Mr. Johnson that his appointment is not acceptable to some of the Justices, he has decided not to take the oath, and has written to the Chairman of the Conservative Party to that effect. This being so, there will be no need for any further meeting of the Justices. Mr. Johnson states that this is the only reason which has induced him to adopt this course.

This seems to me anything but a satisfactory ending to the incident. It leaves Mr. Johnson in the position of a half-fledged magistrate. He is on the Commission of the Peace, and entitled to describe himself as a J.P., but he is not qualified to act because he has not taken the oath. This is a state of affairs which will, I should think, convince the Lord Chancellor of the desirability of making the inquiries which I suggested a week or two back. It is the Lord Chancellor who makes the appointment, not the other Justices or the Chairman of the political party to which Mr. Johnson belongs, and the mere fact that it is not acceptable to certain individuals is in itself no reason whatever why Mr. Johnson should refuse to exercise the duties of the office that has been conferred upon him. On the other hand, if there is any good ground for the objection to his presence on the Bench, which has been "intimated" to Mr. Johnson, it is clear that the Lord Chancellor should be acquainted with it. This gentleman is either a fit and proper person to act as a magistrate, or else he is not a fit and proper person to be on the Commission of the Peace.

Apropos of the late Mr. Pochin's will and the duties of testators to their families, a gentleman at Glasgow was highly surprised the other day "that I, of all people, should stand forth as the champion of hereditary privilege;" and he has kindly favoured me with a lecture spread over half a dozen sheets of paper. He refers me at the outset to "Mill" as having "hit the right nail on the head." Unless, however, he has read his Mill more carefully than he has read his TRUTH, I hesitate to believe that the philosopher would have committed himself to such an absurdity as the defence of the present English law. Philosophers are often woefully lacking in common-sense, but I doubt whether the most hare-brained and unpractical of them—which John Stuart Mill certainly was not—would have committed himself to the proposition that a man who amuses himself during life by acquiring a wife and a large family may, whatever his means of providing for them, leave them to be maintained by the public on his death. The true philosophy of the thing—in this as in most other matters—is embodied in the principle of the Roman law, namely, that the family have a right to a certain minimum share in the estate, but a right liable to be defeated by their own misconduct.

An action tried in the Manchester County Court last week illustrates the stress of competition for life insurance business, and suggests that it is sometimes met by methods more enterprising than scrupulous. There seems to have been a great rush of rival agents after a Manchester gentleman who contemplated taking out policies to the amount of £25,000, and the local representatives of the Equitable Life Assurance Society of the United States apparently conceived the idea that a Mr. C. E. Mainprice was most likely to obtain this particular business. Mr. Mainprice was in the employ of another American office, but the Equitable promptly secured his services as an agent at a salary of £6 per week for three months certain. The "KRONENQUELLE" WATER.—The famous Natural Mineral Water for GOUT, RHEUMATISM, and DIABETES. Prices: 1 dozen bottles, 10/6; case of 50 bottles, 40/-.—Sole Importers, W. SCHACHT & Co., 26, Finsbury-pavement, London, E.C. Pamphlet by eminent medical specialists post free on application.

£25,000 insurance did not come off, however, and at the end of a month Mr. Mainprice was summarily dismissed.

At the hearing of Mr. Mainprice's action for the remaining eight weeks' salary, the society's representatives put their conduct in a still more discreditable light by suddenly trumping up against the plaintiff a serious and slanderous charge, for which, in the opinion of Judge Parry, there was not a tittle of foundation. The dishonesty, his Honour severely observed, was on the side of the defendants, not on the plaintiff, and companies must be taught not to bring such charges against their servants, unless they had evidence to back them up. It is a matter for regret that the lesson could not be enforced by something more substantial than the verdict for the plaintiff for £48 and costs, which was the most the Judge could give.

A recent conviction of a country grocer for adulteration is brought under my notice as an illustration of the way in which the retail tradesman often has to suffer for the sins of the wholesale manufacturer. The defendant and most of the other grocers in the same district were selling an article, which was accepted as pure on the strength of the reputation of the wholesale firm by whom it was made and supplied. On an analysis showing the local sanitary authorities that the stuff was adulterated, one retail grocer was selected for prosecution, and fined, while the manufacturers escaped any penalty beyond the obloquy they incurred through the publication of the proceedings.

I am all for a rigorous enforcement of the laws against adulteration, but there seems to be a good deal of force in the contention that such a case as this is rather hard upon the retailer. The latter cannot, of course, be entirely absolved from legal responsibility by the plea that he sold the adulterated article in the condition in which he received it from the manufacturer. No doubt it is his business to see that he is not made a medium for imposing upon consumers. But when the purity of a particular product is called in question for the first time, and the prosecution is avowedly instituted by way of warning—as it was on this occasion—the law should surely enable the authorities to proceed against the manufacturers, who are the real offenders, instead of compelling them to single out for punishment one of the numerous shopkeepers who have innocently retailed the stuff.

In a case at Pembroke Police-court the other day, in which a man was summoned for keeping a dog without a licence, it appeared from his own statement that he had got rid of the animal by having it put down an old coal-pit. As a correspondent points out, this means that the dog was condemned to a most cruel and lingering death. If there was water in the pit, the wretched creature would swim about till he was exhausted, and if there was no water, he would possibly lie in agony where he fell for days before death put an end to his sufferings. On the charge before the Court the Bench had, of course, no power to deal with any question of cruelty; but defendant's admission should certainly lead to inquiries by the police or the R.S.P.C.A. with a view to the institution of further proceedings.

It will be seen from my Legal Pillory this week that in Scotland ruffians who beat their wives—or, failing a wife, a sister-in-law or any other woman—have been enjoying their amiable diversion on particularly cheap terms, thanks to the unaccountable lenity of a wooden-headed magistracy. The case at Motherwell was in many respects the worst of the series, and in the natural course of magisterial stupidity it was, therefore, visited with the lightest penalty—a penalty which, considered in conjunction with another inflicted at the same court, seems to show that in the judgment of the Bailie the breaking of a pane of glass is an offence four times more serious than an outrageous assault upon a woman. I am glad to observe that the Glasgow Mail has strongly condemned the scandalous laxity of the Scottish magistrates in dealing with brutality towards women and children. "We too frequently find sentences recorded," says my contemporary, "indicating a callousness to the sufferings of the victims that makes one ask whether the greatest brutes are in the dock or on the Bench." The same question is suggested by many of the sentences that are passed by our English Shallows; and here, as in Scotland, the display of undue indulgence in cases of violence and cruelty stands out in striking contrast to the unreasonable severity that is shown in other cases:—

Motherwell. Police-court. Before Bailie King. Wm. Fulton, charged with assaulting his brother's wife. The accused, being out of work, was living at his brother's house. The two men quarrelled, and the woman, who was in delicate health, asked them not to make a noise. The accused thereupon knocked her down twice, blackening both her eyes, cutting her mouth, and so badly injuring her that she was in bed for a week. He also beat the woman's child. Fined 5s., or three days.

Bristol Police-court. Before Messrs. A. Robinson and J. H. Woodward. Walter Stone, charged (1) with being drunk and disorderly, (2), with using bad language, and (3) with assaulting the police. On being arrested for the two first offences defendant became very violent, tripping up the constable and kicking him on the knee, and assistance was required to get him to the police station. Fined 10s. and costs, or fourteen days.

Ashbourne Petty Sessions. Samuel Sowter, convicted of assaulting Henry Smith by knocking him down and violently kicking him. The Bench said it was a very serious assault. Fined £2 and costs.

Paisley J.P. Court. Before Messrs. Galbraith and Pollock. Peter Scott, charged with assaulting his wife. He created a disturbance in the house, then threatened to stab his daughter, and struck his wife on the face, knocked her down, and bit her on one of her fingers. Fined £2.

Motherwell Police-court. Before Bailie King. James Mulheron, a young miner, pleaded guilty to breaking a pane of glass in a window of the burgh weighing-house. Fined £1, or fourteen days.

Spittlegate Petty Sessions, Grantham. Before Sir Hugh Cholmeley, Colonel Parker, and other magistrates. William Wormall and John Henry Jeffries, labourers, charged under the Poaching Prevention Act with being found in possession of fourteen partridges' eggs. Fined £1 10s. each and costs.

Bristol Police-court. Before the same magistrates. Edwin Hopkins, charged with stealing a shoe from a vessel lying at the docks. Twenty-one days.

Harwich Police-court. Before Messrs. C. F. Bevan and H. G. Everard. James Monk, charged with sleeping out in a railway truck and being without visible means of subsistence. Fourteen days.

Beverley East Riding Police-court. Before Admiral Walker, Mr. Burton, and Alderman Sampson. Alfred Edward Johnson, convicted of stealing a hen. Fourteen days.

Falkirk Burgh Court. Elizabeth Quinn pleaded guilty to stealing a shirt from a clothes line. Seven days.

Wellingborough Police-court. Before Mr. C. J. K. Woolston. John Plowman, charged with sleeping out, and being without visible means of subsistence. Fourteen days.

Subscriptions greatly needed by THE ROYAL SOCIETY FOR PREVENTION OF CRUELTY TO ANIMALS.—2,876 convictions this year; 7,545 last year. Address complaints of cruelty, contributions, letters, &c., to SECRETARY, 105, Jermyn-st., London.

Govan Police-court. Thomas Carson, convicted of assaulting a woman by pulling her by the hair and throwing her down a flight of stairs. Fined 21s.

West Bromwich Police-court. Before Messrs. G. Garrett and W. Lawley. Harry Whitehouse, charged with being drunk and disorderly and with assaulting two policemen. Defendant was very violent, and struck and kicked both officers. Fined £1 8s. 6d. including costs.

Larne Petty Sessions. Before Messrs. H. H. Smiley, J. Gate Smith, J. Heggarty, Thomas Millikin, and Colonel McNeill. John O'Hara, charged with assaulting Thomas Luck. Defendant dealt the complainant a heavy blow on the head with a stick, inflicting a serious wound. Fined 10s. and costs.

Pollokshaws Police-court. Before Bailie Emery. John Docherty pleaded guilty to assaulting his wife by striking her on the head with a poker, knocking her down, and pushing and dragging her about the house. Fined 20s.

Airdrie Sheriff Court. Before Sheriff Watt. William Chisholm, Alexander Wilson, and John Porteous, charged with stealing a ferret. Porteous, twenty days; the others thirty days each.

Grimsby Police-court. Before the Mayor, Messrs. W. Jackson, C. Morton, and A. Bannister. Arthur Woodhead, a youth, charged with stealing a pair of trousers from a shop. Six weeks.

Helston Police-court. Before Mr. R. C. Rowe. Charles Johnson, charged with sleeping out in a field and having no visible means of subsistence. Fourteen days.

Birmingham Police-court. Mary Fitzgerald, charged with stealing a piece of bacon value 1s. 4d. Two months.

Greenock Police-court. Before Bailie Calder. John Cairney, a lad, pleaded guilty to stealing a hand plane and six herrings. Seven days.

Last week a novel theory in the administration of justice was expounded by the Dover County Bench. After they had fined a man 10s., including costs, for having been drunk and disorderly, it transpired that the defendant had the sum of £1 3s. 6d. in his possession when he was arrested, and the Chairman thereupon lectured the police for omitting to mention the fact. If the Bench had known that the defendant had got so much money, the fine, it was intimated, might have been heavier. Their Worships would apparently improve upon the idea of fitting the punishment to the crime by fitting it also to the prisoner's means. Carried to its logical conclusion, such a plan would produce some surprising results. If, for instance, a fine of 10s. is deemed too light for a man possessed of the huge sum of £1 3s. 6d., what amount ought to be exacted from, say, an African millionaire should one be found drunk and disorderly within the jurisdiction of these Dover Solons? But this scheme for graduating fines to suit the defendant's purse is not, of course, intended to apply to rich or well-to-do offenders, who can always rely upon more lenient treatment than their poorer brethren receive.

A youth belonging to a concern called the Boys' Help Institution or the Self Help Brigade at Leeds, was fined by the Aberystwyth Magistrates last week for acting as a pedlar without a certificate. It seems that the members of the "Brigade" are engaged in hawking books, and the "superintendent," one Rimmer, stated that this was the first occasion on which there had been any such interference with the business. If that is so, I can only express a hope that the precedent set by this prosecution will be strictly followed wherever the youths from this Self Help Brigade, or any similar institutions—including several in London which have frequently been dealt with in these columns—are found hawking without licences. Better still would it be if the law invoked against the defendant at Aberystwyth were also enforced, as it ought to be, against those pernicious pests, the "area touts," who constantly bamboozle, and sometimes swindle, servant girls.

Can anybody at Leeds throw any light upon the character of the above-mentioned Boys' Help Institution? It is carried on at 7, Melrose-street. The "superintendent" seems to have tried to lead the Aberystwyth Bench to believe that it is a philanthropic institution, but a wire to the police at Leeds produced the reply that it is a private enterprise, and that the boys sell the books on commission.

The arrest of A. J. Monson and "Victor Honour," the Jermyn-street usurer, is an interesting event, and there are many people in London besides myself who will watch the result with considerable curiosity. More than that one cannot say with justice to the prisoners at the present stage. While, however, the police are looking into this case, there are several others which might be investigated with advantage, and I have in my possession materials for such an investigation which are entirely at the service of Scotland Yard, if Scotland Yard cares to avail itself of them. By the way, how is it that "Victor Honour"——a euphonious name adopted, I believe, as an improvement upon the Polish patronymic, Urbanowski—never appeared before the Money-lending Committee? Few among the fraternity would have better repaid the attentions of Mr. T. W. Russell and his colleagues

---

The man Thomas Kempe, whose frauds on deaf people have been repeatedly exposed in TRUTH, was last week convicted at the Old Bailey under the name of Richards, and was sentenced by the Common Serjeant to three years' penal servitude. The sentence was not a day more than Kempe deserved, for, apart from the fact that he had been previously convicted, his frauds were of the most barefaced character, and have extended over a considerable period of time. His modus operandi was of the most simple description, for he merely advertised a specific, and having obtained 15s. for his appliances, abstained from sending the articles or holding further communication with the customer. The difficulty in getting at him arose from the fact that he advertised from a little apartment in a block of offices on St. Andrew's Hill, where he was never to be found, unless in the brief daily intervals when he called to clear his letter-box. His conviction is specially interesting, because I find that he has been for some time associated with the man Nicholson, who has been preying on the deaf for many years past. Kempe, in fact, appears to have been an employee of Nicholson, and he had other offices in Cathedral Buildings, in one of which he figured under the name of "Forder & Co.," which appears to be simply an alias of Nicholson. In an early issue I hope to be able to throw a good deal of further light upon the history of this man Nicholson.

A country solicitor writes to me as follows:—

SIR,—I enclose a letter sent to a client of mine on the 14th inst. This client —— died between three and four years ago, and his widow handed me the letter. In my opinion it is an attempt to obtain money in some way by practising on the credulity of the public, and if you care to publish it, or comment on it in your paper, you are at liberty to do so, of course suppressing the name of ——.

The writer says he joined a rebellion in July last, and in consequence had to flee to England, where after residing for some time he heard of the death of his wife, and then returned to Spain, after burying his money at ——, near here. He now applies to —— a farmer of —— to assist him in recovering his money, presumably on the strength of having known —— as an honourable man during his stay over here. But as a matter of fact, as I have said before, —— died long before this letter writer ever came to England, and it looks to me as though he is selecting names from out-of-date country directories for the purpose of obtaining money by a trick. I know three or four other persons in this neighbourhood who have received similar letters at various times, and this man may be playing the same game in other parts of the country.

Let me at once congratulate you, my dear sir, on the penetration you have displayed. The letter addressed to your client is an attempt to obtain money by practising upon the credulity of the public, and the same game has been played in other parts of the country. Permit me also to inform you that it is not exactly the novel swindle that you apparently suppose it to be. The Spanish Prisoner and his buried treasure have been fairly well known for some time past. The trick has been continually exposed in TRUTH during the last eighteen or twenty years; recently it has been made the subject of periodical warnings from the police; and scarcely a newspaper in the provinces can have failed to notice it at one time or another. For this reason I think your own letter will be more interesting to my readers than the document which you ask me to publish. It will doubtless amuse them to find that there is a solicitor in the country unacquainted with so notorious a fraud. To me, after all these years of effort for the enlightenment of the public, the fact is a little disheartening.

Doubtless it will surprise my legal friend to learn that the Spanish Prisoners—there are whole gangs of them engaged in the business—do not confine their operations to this country. Simpletons in France, Germany, and Italy have long been paying tribute to their ingenuity; our kith and kin in America have not been spared; and for the last year or two the net has been cast over the Australian continent and the Indian Empire. Only a fortnight ago I recorded the receipt of one of the usual communications at Prowe, in Burma, and among those that have since reached me are two from Ganhati, in Assam, a third from Jullundur, and a couple more from different parts of Australia.

There is no abatement of the flood of money-lenders' circulars that pours into this office from people wide-awake enough not to be caught in the toils of Shylock. In vain is the net spread in the sight of my readers. It is more successful with those who, unfortunately for themselves, have not learned wisdom in the pages of TRUTH, and I am frequently amused with ingenuous inquiries as to the reputation of this or that shark and the prospect of obtaining a loan from him on the tempting terms which he sets forth as his bait for gudgeons. It is hardly necessary to say that I strongly advise everybody to avoid any circularising or advertising usurer as they would the plague. Some members of the fraternity may be more rapacious and unscrupulous than others; but all are more or less tarred with the same brush.

Without repeating, at the present moment, anything in the shape of a list of even the worst of these harpies, I may mention that Isaac Gordon is still the most active of the whole tribe. As "James W. Ryland," of 6, Livery-street, Birmingham; "Robert Dean," of 99, Willington-road, Manchester; and "George J. Addison," of 3, Holles-street, London, W.—to mention only three of his innumerable aliases and addresses—he scatters his circulars abroad with the most reckless prodigality. So also does his Irish agent or partner, the man Levin, alias "H. Staples," of 4, Nassau-street, Dublin, and "James Cameron," of 73, Harcourt-street, Dublin. A very old-established usurer's tout, in the person of H. Sanguinetti, of 16, Old Bond-street, London, W., has lately resumed his former nom de guerre of "H. Lester," which he had for some time abandoned. Another well-known name is that of "Edwards & Co.," of 17, Sackville-street, Piccadilly, who, in spite of their offers of "immediate advances" to an apparently unlimited amount, seem to be short of pennies for postage stamps—at any rate, they sometimes leave the unwary recipient to pay twopence for the delivery of their precious circular.

The name of "Arthur Cliffe," of 23, Duke-street, Piccadilly, is new to me; but the address is quite familiar. It has been used for several years by a usurer's tout who calls himself "J. Jackson," but whose real name is Abrahams, and whose brother, Savile Jacques Parker, is still better known in the money-lending world. Probably I shall not be far wrong if I assume that "Cliffe" is a fresh alias for Abrahams.

An Irish correspondent, alluding to my remarks in reference to the usurer Levin, otherwise "H. Staples," expresses surprise that a paper of the standing of the Irish Times should assist this shady shark to prey upon the public by publishing the advertisements which he issues under various aliases from different addresses in Dublin. Perhaps my contemporary is still blissfully ignorant of the identity and character of this advertiser, though he has been unmasked often enough during the past year or so. I am sorry to say, however, that there is nothing uncommon in a newspaper accepting a money-lender's advertisements, even when it knows perfectly well that he is an unscrupulous extortioner and a pest to society. There are journals of the highest respectability here, as well as in Ireland, which think it compatible with their honour and dignity to denounce Shylock and all his works in their editorial columns, and at the same time to sell him a space in their advertisement columns for the capture of fresh victims.

A country Editor, who has received the following generous offer from an Insurance Company, sends it to me, feeling that it deserves wider publicity, than he can afford it. I quite agree. When we hear so many whispers of blackmailing by newspapers for the purpose of obtaining advertisements, it is refreshing to find a firm of advertisers who seriously expect that they can get a valuable free advertisement now by the mere promise to "keep it before them" when they do their legitimate advertising in the autumn:—

TRAINS DE LUXE.—LUCHON EXPRESS, every Tuesday and Thursday, direct to Luchon. ENGADINE EXPRESS, to Coire and Lucerne. CARLSBAD EXPRESS, daily to Bayreuth, Carlsbad, &c. Tickets and all particulars from INTERNATIONAL SLEEPING CAR Co., 14, Cockspur-street, London, S.W.

As we have your paper on our advertising list we enclose a reprint of a paragraph from the Insurance Record.

If you feel disposed to insert the paragraph, we should be pleased to receive a copy of your paper containing it, which would be kept before us until our next advertisements are sent in the early autumn.

As Mr. Tanquerey, Director of the "Société Artistique de Portraits," is a regular reader of TRUTH, I make him a present of the suggestion that it is about time for him to get out a new circular. Considering that Tanquerey has been circularising the British public wholesale for two or three years past—not to mention the fact that the Free Portrait trick has been run in one shape or another for the last eight or ten years—this ancient formula is getting a little too thin:—

In order to introduce our work in England we have decided to make a limited number of our portraits to some prominent people absolutely free of charge, believing that to be the best and cheapest method of advertising our work among the English-speaking people.

The English-speaking people, I am glad to find, are beginning to know their Tanquerey pretty well, and they show their appreciation of this noble offer by sending on Tanquerey's circulars by the dozen to the office of TRUTH.

For the information of several correspondents I may mention that T. Smith & Co., who are at present advertising from 16, Shaftesbury-avenue, are the same firm who formerly worked the rubber-stamp trick in the same name from 79, St. Helen's-gardens, North Kensington. As Smith & Co. are still advertising in a great many newspapers and offering people an assured income for work in their spare time, it may be as well that there should be no misapprehension on this point. I have already dealt fully in TRUTH with Smith & Co., the trustworthiness of whose statements may be judged from the fact that they persisted for a long time in publishing a garbled extract from TRUTH as an advertisement of their business, the said extract conveying a totally false impression as to what had been said about them in these columns, and that they refused to desist from publishing this advertisement until threatened by my solicitors with proceedings for an injunction. Their advertisement is simply a trick for selling their goods with payment in advance.

I see that Coleman & Co., another of the home-employment dodgers, is advertising an extract from TRUTH which appeared a good many months back, and in which I remarked that I "could not say that the business was not honestly conducted." This is not, on the face of it, much of a recommendation, but I think it right to say that I have since withdrawn even this qualified expression of confidence in Mr. Coleman, and the recent account of his doings which appeared in TRUTH should act as a warning to all who may come across his advertisements.

By the way, there is a little journal called Our Paper, published at the Church House by the Church of England Women's Help Society. In this paper I see one of Coleman's advertisements, under the seductive heading, "A Few More Ladies Required." The Church of England Women's Help Society would better act up to its title by warning its readers against such home employment dodgers than by helping them into Coleman's parlour.

All previous developments of the snowball business are put into the shade by the audacious project of a firm named Henderson & Co., of 12, Phayre-street, Rangoon. They call it the "accumulator prize system," and they issue printed circulars asking each recipient to send them the names and addresses of five friends, together with a rupee from each, and one from himself. Of the six rupees so collected, Henderson & Co. will return two to the sender for his trouble. They will then request each of the five friends to repeat the same process on the same terms; a similar application will be made in due course to the twenty-five friends of the first five, and so "the scheme goes on to infinitude." A few revolutions of the snowball would bring the rupees rolling in at an almost incalculable rate; but Henderson & Co. promise to distribute "the whole of the money" in bonuses among the contributors, their own object being simply "to keep themselves before the public." Either Henderson & Co. must be a foolishly sanguine firm, or else it must be a peculiarly foolish public to whom they appeal in Rangoon.

The following letter indicates a new development of the sorrows of Mrs. Margaret Longshaw. The lady anticipates that her troubles will only end with life, and really there seems good ground for this apprehension. The gentleman to whom this letter was addressed tells me that some years back he remitted money to Mrs. Longshaw on a representation about the dangerous illness of her little daughter, and a threatened distraint for rent. Within the last year or two he has twice heard from her, and the child was still suffering sadly. My readers may remember a reference to Mrs. Longshaw's latest appeals in TRUTH of March 3, when one of the children was ill "with what the doctor fears may turn to rheumatic fever," and at the same time a hard-hearted furniture company were threatening to seize the bed on which the poor child lay. Now one of the children—I trust not the same one—has tumbled down stairs and got concussion of the brain. Here is the whole story:—

7, Freehold-street, Fanfield, Liverpool,
Monday.

DEAR SIR,—I hope you will pardon me for again troubling you, but my little girl who fell down the stairs, and has been suffering with concussion of the brain, is slowly recovering, but the doctor says she is suffering from mental shock, and requires a change to the sea for a fortnight to restore her. I could arrange for this if I had £2, and I would most earnestly ask you to help me, as it means life to my poor child. I have had a terrible time of it, and surely my troubles will only end with life. Anxiously hoping for a favourable reply,—I remain, Sir, yours truly,

M. LONGSHAW.

In the last line but one Mrs. Longshaw has first written "Madam," and then "Sir" over it, which would seem to point to the fact that she was using the same form of appeal for ladies and gentlemen, and was momentarily confused as to the sex of the person she was addressing.

If you want to entirely Furnish your House or select any article of Furniture or Carpet, &c., send for HEWETSONS' Illustrated Priced Catalogue.—HEWETSONS, Tottenham Court-road, London.

THE OLDEST GLASS AND CHINA SHOP IN LONDON (Established 1760), provides Outfits for Palace or Cottage.—ALFRED B. PEARCE, 39, Ludgate-hill, London, E.C.

For criticising this lady's appeals, which have now been distributed broadcast for several years, I have been seriously taken to task both by the lady herself and by one or two persons who have interested themselves in her welfare. I think the time has come when those who have taken up the cudgels on behalf of Mrs. Longshaw should explain what evidence they have of the truth of her statements. In my last reference to the subject it was pointed out that the letters Mrs. Longshaw was then writing contained intrinsic evidence of their untruthfulness, and I put certain questions then to Mrs. Longshaw and her supporters which have never been answered. Last autumn a kind-hearted retired officer, Colonel Turner, late of the Cameronians, undertook to make himself responsible for three months for any money which might be contributed for Mrs. Longshaw's assistance until she was able to make a profit out of the laundry which she had established at Liverpool. As Colonel Turner has interested himself in the lady to this extent, I think that he may be well asked now to inform the public generally whether he is still prepared to answer for the lady's truthfulness and the merits of her appeals.

From New Scotland Yard the Receiver for the Metropolitan Police District sends me a valuable work of reference in the form of a newly-issued Book of Hackney Carriage Distances with a map. Many a warm and disagreeable altercation would be avoided if this publication —which can be obtained from Messrs. Eyre & Spottiswoode, East Harding-street, Fleet-street, E.C.— were in the hands of every patron of the lumbering growler or the (comparatively) sprightly hansom, for it enables one to ascertain in a moment the legal fare for any cab journey in London. I wonder, by the way, how many people are aware that every cabman is bound to carry, and on demand to produce, an official table of distances for the inspection of his fare?

The following appears in the advertisement of a travelling menagerie, which is on a visit to Elgin:—

> Special Notice.—At the eight o'clock performance on Friday first, the management have agreed to allow a local gentleman to enter the lions' den. This daring feat has only been sanctioned for Elgin, the interest manifested in a similar feat on the occasion of the menagerie's visit last year having been fully realised by Mr. Bostock. This feat is not to be allowed in any other town in Scotland, and only at one performance in Elgin.

It does not speak highly for the activity of the local police if the exhibition is allowed even there.

In reference to the article, "Mr. Hartshorne's Executorship," which appeared in Truth of May 26, and the remarks on the same subject in an earlier issue, I ought perhaps to mention that I have been served by Mr. Hartshorne with a writ claiming damages for libel, as have also Messrs. Love & Wyman, the printers of Truth. In both writs Mr. Hartshorne appears in person, and he has given me rather a shock by notifying that his "address for service" is the Athenæum Club. As I have nothing to unsay in either of the articles complained of, no effort will be spared on my part to bring the issue to trial at the earliest possible moment, and with the least possible amount of inconvenience to the Athenæum Club.

Picked up in the House of Commons.

Says Harcourt, "I don't care a tittle
For this wild Canon's shocks,
For clearly, coming from Knox Little,
They're only little knocks."

If there is no mistake in the report which announces that the Petroleum Committee has, by a very narrow majority, decided to raise the flash-point, we shall not have long to wait for a diminution in the number of victims annually sacrificed to these explosive oils. It is not much to boast about that, in a country supposed to be so careful of human life, we have been so long in safeguarding that humbler portion of the community who instinctively look to their rulers for protection; but, having begun to do what should have been done long since, it is to be hoped that the job may be made a complete one before it is finally dropped. To do this it is a necessity that the present dangerous lamps in general use should be condemned, and some safe, but cheap, pattern substituted in place of them. Then, and not till then, shall we get rid of that painfully frequent heading "another fatal lamp disaster," which is always staring us in the face when we open our morning's paper.

In the Times on Monday there is a headed article from a correspondent which, if correct, throws a good deal of light upon the Dreyfus and Esterhazy business. According to the writer, Esterhazy was an agent provocateur of the French General Staff. He gave the German Government the information which the Staff wished should be conveyed to it, pretending all the time that he was a traitor. Dreyfus, according to the same authority, without consultation with the Staff, gave the Russian Government similar information, alleging that he did this in order to obtain information from Russia that might be useful to his country. Assuming the fact of the information having been given, it is obvious that Dreyfus was most properly condemned as a traitor. If the purity of his intention is to be believed, no traitor revealing to a foreign Government secrets of his own Government could be condemned. The defence is childish and absurd.

The League that works the newspapers in the interest of Dreyfus has curious ideas about evidence. Mr. F. C. Conybeare, "of Oxford," wrote an article, making certain statements about Esterhazy, in an English review. M. Joseph Reinach in the Siècle, quoted and commented favourably on these statements. For this he was brought before a military tribunal, which decided to remove his name from the Army List. What appears to have been his defence? A letter from Mr. F. C. Conybeare, in which that gentleman says that Colonel Schwartzkopfen, acting for the German Government, paid Esterhazy £80 per month for secret information, and that there is a possibility of the publication in fac-simile of the documents sold by Esterhazy. I wonder what such a defence would have been thought of in an English Court of Law. Yet several "own correspondents" of English newspapers denounce the French military tribunal for finding M. Joseph Reinach guilty of libel.

Fashionable Stationery.—Latest Designs.—Invitation Cards, Ball Programmes, Menus, Visiting Cards, &c.—Parkins & Gotto, Court Stationers, Oxford-street, London, W. Patterns free.

For the Decorating and Furnishing in best modern manner, or in any of the traditional styles, of a single room or an entire house, Hampton & Sons, Ltd., prepare, free of charge, suggestive schemes and competitive estimates.—Pall Mall East, S.W.

If Colonel Schwartzkopfen did make any such statement, and allow its publication, his views of what an officer may do and say are strange, in view of the fact that he has allowed by his silence M. Joseph Reinach to be punished for repeating it. But even supposing that it were true that Esterhazy did receive money from him for secret information, is there any evidence that Esterhazy was not acting with the permission of the French military authorities with a view to deceive the Colonel? Esterhazy does not appear to be a particularly reputable person, but there has been no evidence adduced to show that he was a traitor, except mere vague hearsay talk. Nor if he were, does this prove that Dreyfus was not. There are only two alternatives, and these have been put by Zola. Either Dreyfus was justly condemned, or his condemnation was due to a number of French officers of position and of unimpeachable character, having deliberately entered into a conspiracy to find an innocent man guilty of treason to his country. The former is a good deal more probable than the latter. But in these days it really seems more easy for a rich man, or a man with rich belongings, to enter the Kingdom of Heaven, than to serve out his sentence in a prison.

What would our "dailies" do were it not for their foreign intelligence? They must provide their readers with sensational news, and they have so accustomed them to this nourishment, that it is as necessary to them as a morning nip to a confirmed dram-drinker. One advantage of foreign over sensational news of domestic manufacture is, that Englishmen are singularly ignorant of all countries except their own. Therefore, sensational news from abroad is easily manufactured. Journalistic exigencies demand that there always should be some foreign Power that is engaged in a fell conspiracy against the British race, for on this peg it is easy to hang any patriotic bluster which forms the staple of so many leading articles. But newspaper readers soon tire of monotony. If there must always be a foreign fiend, either the fiend has to be changed, or, if he remains the same, he must not be engaged in his wicked work in one particular part of the world.

In the last few years Germany, France, the United States, and Russia have each played the part of the fiend. It has been Russia's turn of late in the Far East. When war broke out between the United States and Spain, it was thought at first by our journalistic purveyors, that the incidents of the war might take the place of the foreign fiend. He therefore slumbered. The war has, however, not come up to their expectations. Then a good deal was hoped by substituting for the fiend declarations of love and affection for the United States. But this has not "caught on" as a sensation. It became necessary, therefore, to revert to the fiend. If only France had been good enough to decline to enter into an equitable treaty of delimitation with us in Western Africa, it would have been the turn of France to play the part. Or the Transvaal might have done so, had President Kruger played up to Mr. Chamberlain's lead. Or Germany, if the German Emperor had indulged in a telegram to somebody.

All else having failed, I observe that we have gone back to the Russian fiend's operations in China. But it is as difficult to galvanise a dead fiend into life as a corpse. Who, then, is to be the next fiend, and where is to be the locality in which he is playing the devil with our interests? We are like the Irishman—trailing about our coat-tails; and yet no one will make even a gesture that we might convert into an intention to tread on them. Something must be done, for the sake of the British Press and the British public.

Colonel E. A. Alderson, who was one of the commanders of the force employed to crush the Mashonas, has published his experiences, and I observe the words, "Exeter Hall, please note." I am not Exeter Hall, but I note. This, it would seem, is how the Mashonas were treated:—

> Apparently no one in Mashonaland had even dreamt it possible that the Mashonas might rise, every one had got so used to two or three men going to a kraal when anything wrong had been done by the natives, and demanding to see the chief, and when that individual came forth, if it appeared good to them, breaking his own cooking-pot over his head, or threatening him with, and even using the sjambok on him.

It is hardly surprising that the Mashonas rose against all this hideous ruffianism. The fate of one of their chiefs who was tried and condemned to death for "armed rebellion" is thus related by the ingenuous Colonel:—

> Makomi was, for a Mashoni, in many ways a fine fellow. His argument was: "It is very well to call me a rebel, but the country belonged to me and to my forefathers long before you came here."

The argument seems to me to have been unanswerable. It was met by a firing party discharging their bullets into this African patriot. And all this was done on the chance of a crew of promoters getting fools to subscribe money to purchase holes in which they were told gold might be found! For my part, I heartily regret that Makomi did not succeed in his armed rebellion against the régime of cooking-pot and sjambok.

I read the following in the Natal Mercury. Salting a mine is a very old trick, and, if the statement be true, we shall soon have the news telegraphed of a wondrous discovery of gold-bearing ore in some mine in Rhodesia:—

> It is known to the authorities at Krugersdorp—it has, indeed, been officially noted—that several loads of ore have, within the past few months, been conveyed to Rhodesia. Its actual destination is not known. It is a remarkable coincidence that the Krugersdorp gold-bearing ore is similar to the white quartz that abounds in the auriferous regions of Rhodesia. It is just possible that specimens of Krugersdorp ore may find their way to London as the "real article" from Rhodesia.

SUPPORT BRITISH INDUSTRIES and drink St. Ronan's, the Scotch Natural Mineral Table Water, superior to, and cheaper than, any of the foreign mineral waters. Delicious with whisky. The "St. Ronan's Wells" Company, Limited, Innerleithen, N.B.

MORTLOCK'S (Oxford-st.), Estd. A.D. 1746.—The collection of China and Glass now on view in their Galleries fully maintains the high reputation and pre-eminence enjoyed by "MORTLOCK'S" for the last century and a half, and well repays a visit of inspection.

Sir Ellis Ashmead-Bartlett is not a gentleman with whose political views I agree. But he is energetic in pushing them, alike in Parliament, in the Press, and on the platform. He seems to have had a newspaper called England, which required funds to keep it going, and he allowed 10 per cent. to those who obtained the funds. He gave special instructions with regard to the touting, and among other things suggested that the Duchess of Sutherland should be flattered out of £500. All this, and more to the same effect, came out at a public washing of the dirty linen of England in the Law Courts. What a comment the whole thing is on the Tory Press! These organs of "public opinion" have apparently to be kept going by politicians connected with them flattering Duchesses, and coaxing millionaires to provide money. The Duchess, it has since appeared, had sufficient sense to resist the voice of the charmer. But what about the others?

BARTLETT'S HISTORY OF "ENGLAND."

(With apologies to Mr. William Ernest Henley.)

SIR E*L*S A*HMD B*RTL*TT, loq.:—

"What have I done for thee,
England, my England?
What is there I would not do,
England, my own?
That thy life I still might save,
I, 'Silomo' named—the brave!—
I have stooped more cash to crave
That thy fame might still be known,
England—
That thy name might still be known!

"Where shall the watchful sun,
England, my England!
Match the work for thee I've done,
England, my own?
To prolong thy hard career
I have cadged both far and near,
I have drawn the wealthy peer,
For the rich M.P. I have gone,
England—
For the rich M.P. I have gone!

"Ever for thee to scheme,
England, my England!
That has been my daily dream,
England, my own!
Thy most precious sheets to scatter,
Filled with such portentous matter,
I have been prepared to flatter
A Duchess who's very well known,
England—
To dun a fair Duchess well known!

"It was thou wert in my thought,
England, my England!
When such daring deeds I wrought,
England, my own!
When I led the Turks' élite,
When, unyielding in defeat,
I defied the whole Greek fleet,
'Twas for thee and for thee alone,
England—
'Twas all done for thee alone.

"My soul was in thee outpoured,
England, my England!
'Twas my spirit in thee upsoared,
England, my own!
And the public, who could see
Naught but what was dull in thee,
Were, in fact, condemning me;
For 'twas I that set thy tone,
England—
It was I that set thy tone.

"Still, it now occurs to me,
England, my England!
That I've had enough of thee,
England, my own!
Though on thee I've laboured long,
From the first thou hast gone wrong;
Thou canst go, then, to—Hongkong!
For with thee at last I've done,
England—
For with thee at last I've done!"

SPA, BELGIUM.—SUMMER SEASON.—Casino, Concerts, Racing, Pigeon Shooting, Theatre. Delightful situation. Excellent Hotels. For details apply to JULES CREHAY, Secretary, Casino.

SCRUTATOR.

RITUALISM IN PARLIAMENT.

THE House of Commons is not at its best when discussing matters of religion. It is not, however, the fault of Parliament that such matters have to be discussed by it. The Church of England was established by Act of Parliament. Its doctrines, its ritual, and its discipline were laid down by Parliament. The only title that it has to the income that it possesses is a Parliamentary title. It follows that if changes in regard to these matters need legislative action, its members can hardly complain that the House of Commons should treat the proposals like any other alterations in the law. The House may criticise the Bill that embodies these changes, and it may suggest in amendments anything within the four corners of the title of any Bill affecting the Church that is submitted to it. This is what happened last week, and what must happen so long as Church and State are one and the same.

There are Churchmen who assert that the Church of England goes back to the early ages of the Christian era; that it represents what ought to be, and what once was, the Universal Church. In one sense—assuming the Church of England to be correct in its view of what the Catholic Church once was—this is correct. But in the Parliamentary sense it is incorrect. Parliament has only to consider what has by law been established, without concerning itself whether this be theologically right or wrong.

The Bill that was under discussion last week had for its main object to put an end to the sale of presentations to livings, and incidentally to vest in the Bishops the power to forbid the presentation of persons whose lives have rendered them unfit for the cure of souls. In defining, however, this unfitness the words "misconduct in an ecclesiastical office" were used. This naturally opened a door to the discussion of what is such misconduct. The framers of the Bill were, therefore, to blame for opening this door, rather than the House of Commons for making use of it.

The Church of England separated itself from the Church of Rome under Henry VIII. That monarch was as great a scoundrel as ever occupied a throne. His object in breaking with the Church of Rome was to get rid of an old wife and to marry a young one. When Henry had effected the separation of the Churches, and his own separation from Katherine of Aragon, he seems to have become convinced that he had inherited the Papal infallibility, and he cut off the heads of those who did not accept the various dogmas that he propounded. When Elizabeth came to the throne, she found herself the Sovereign of a nation the majority of which was attached to the Roman liturgy, and the minority of which was Puritan. The existing Established Church is the outcome of an endeavour to trim between the two, and to unite all in a political bond against the Catholic Powers of the Continent. At the commencement of the present century the Church, thus constituted, relying on its connection with the State, troubled itself little about theological matters. Its dignitaries and its priests were more concerned with holding fast to its temporalities. The Evangelical Party strove to awaken the Church to its spiritual duties. For a time it enjoyed a vast influence. This influence has, however, greatly diminished, and at present the High Church party seems to be far more active. The main distinction between the parties is, that the former represents the Puritan element and the latter the sacerdotal element. The former seeks to accentuate the difference between the ritual and the doctrines of the Church of Rome and the Church of England; the latter slurs them over, so far as this can be done, without coming into actual contact with the Thirty-nine Articles and the Prayer Book.

For my part—and probably my views are shared by most of those who are what the ardent spirits on both sides would term Laodiceans—I think that a great deal of what is regarded as of vital moment by the two factions is of exceedingly little importance. How a priest arrays himself; whether a cross be affixed inside a church; whether a morning service be called matins or by any other term; whether the services be more ornate or less ornate, are mere details. So, too, with regard to dogmas. The majority of men do not concern themselves about them; they find themselves pitchforked into a little speck in the universe which is careering through space they know not whither, and they are aware that after a very brief period they will disappear from it. Their aim is, therefore, to make the best of things whilst they are on the speck. What may happen to them afterwards is to their minds a hypothesis, and their assent to any particular hypothesis is rather passive than active. Tolerance has replaced intolerance. Any one who suggested that an individual should be either burnt or deprived of any rights of citizenship, because he holds certain views in respect to a future life, would be deemed a pernicious lunatic.

As a Church—and I speak with perfect impartiality, not being, as I have said, a dogmatist in religious matters—the Established Church suffers from its connection with the State; for the connection makes those who are not members of the Church the arbiters of its ritual and its doctrine, whereas the Church ought to be a law to itself. It seems to me, too, to be absurd that the right to appoint a man to the cure of souls should be, under any circumstances, vested in any man who may choose to buy an advowson. Either this right should be vested in the heads of the Church, or in some assembly of Churchmen lay and clerical, or in the owners of the souls who are to be looked after. Patronage when exercised by an individual has always a tendency to jobbery. The best man is generally the man whom the dispenser of the patronage likes best. What would the Army be if the right to nominate the Colonel of a regiment might be bought or sold? So long as the Church of England accepts connection with the State, it surrenders its liberty of action, and this liberty of action ought to be the keystone of every Church.

I am for disestablishment and disendowment, because I know no more ground for the clergy of the Church of England being supported at the expense of the community than the Baptist or the Primitive Methodist clergy—or, indeed, the Rabbis. If the Church of England is wise, it will secure liberty of action by giving up its loaves and fishes. Surely if other Churches are able to pay their clergy, it should be able to do so. I would have every body of men banded together as a Church the absolute masters of that Church's doctrines and of its ritual without interference from the State. But it is obvious that the Church of England cannot even claim this right so long as its doctrines and its ritual are settled by law. The only result is that a spirit of casuistry is nurtured, so as to enable many of its members to evade the clear meaning of words. At present there is a dead set made against Ritualists, but I should say that Broad Churchmen are often quite as open to the charge of casuistry of interpretation as the Ritualists. Within the last few years the Church of England has certainly gained strength in the towns. This is due to the zeal of the Ritualist, or High Church, clergy. I may not agree with them, but this does not alter the fact that this revival of the influence of their Church is mainly due to them. Many of them are in favour of disestablishment. This they will never secure without disendowment also. Let them, then, accept in its entirety disestablishment and disendowment, and join with us—although our motives may be different—in securing these objects.

But whilst my views in regard to Church discipline ritual, and doctrine may be deemed somewhat broad, I by no means agree with Mr. W. Redmond in his denunciations of Sir William Harcourt for having registered a protest against certain intemperate zealots who seek to attract attention to themselves by advocating doctrines and by practising a ritual which are clearly outside the widest interpretation of the Thirty-Nine Articles and the Prayer Book, and against which the highest of Churchmen protest as much as the lowest. Mr. Redmond would have it that this was an attack upon the Roman Catholics. He might as well say that, for the Roman Catholics to protest against one of their priests performing the service of the Church of England in a Roman Catholic church, would be an attack upon Protestants. What Sir William Harcourt condemned, and what he suggested that the Bishops ought to be armed with power to prevent, were practices which the vast majority of High Churchmen themselves condemn. Mr. Balfour joined him in this condemnation, the only difference between them being that, whilst Sir William wished to strengthen the hands of the Bishops to put down such practices, Mr. Balfour declined to do so. To assert that Sir William is an enemy of the Church of England because he is on the side of the Bishops of that Church is assuredly a strange contradiction.

LOBENGULA THE SECOND.

Rumours have reached England during the last month or two of certain disturbances—"rebellion" is the convenient name which has been applied to the movement in some instances—in the Chartered Company's Protectorate which lies north of the Zambesi; but the information that has come to hand so far has been scrappy and indefinite. I have just received from an Englishman in the country, who has been an eye-witness of all that has passed, a detailed account of the disturbance. From this it would seem that the story of Lobengula and his Matabele has been reproduced in all its main features a few hundred miles further north. My correspondent writes for the express purpose of enlightening the public at home as to what has been going on, and as he is a gentleman who knows the country well, there is no reason to doubt the correctness of his information.

By a curious coincidence, the tribe with whom the Chartered Company have been at loggerheads in this instance are, like the Matabele, an offshoot of the Zulus, who "trekked" across the Zambesi many years ago, and founded a kingdom to the west of Lake Nyassa, They are known, I believe, as the Angoni Zulus. They seem to be, like the Matabele, a not over-prepossessing race of savages, and I imagine that they are anything but pleasant neighbours. Their present reigning Sovereign is a chief named M'Pseni—a name which must not be taken to indicate a Scottish origin—and by all accounts he has done his best to keep his subjects in order. The whole history, indeed, of M'Pseni bears a curious resemblance to that of the late Sovereign of the Matabele. It may be that, like Lobengula, he has grown fat and indolent in his old age, and is prepared to sacrifice his principles for the sake of a quiet life; or it may be that he has sufficient penetration to perceive that the future in that part of the world is with the white man, and that it is better policy for the natives to make friends of the new-comers than to engage in hopeless conflict with them. At any rate, for many years past M'Pseni has shown every disposition to conciliate and live in friendship with his white neighbours. My correspondent in the country tells me that M'Pseni has, in fact, shown himself, for a Zulu, a most enlightened ruler, and that he has been trusted and respected by all the European settlers in the country. The natural result has followed, as it did in Lobengula's case, that he has been somewhat at loggerheads with his own chiefs and headsmen, and has not always been able to keep them in order. His indunas have from time to time persisted in raiding neighbouring territory, just as the Matabele chiefs, in spite of the peaceable efforts of Lobengula, raided Mashonaland. A few months back M'Pseni, probably warned by what had occurred in Matabeleland and other places, sent messages to the British South Africa Company's agent at Fort Jameson and to the British Government's representative at Kota-kota in Nyassaland, inviting these authorities to take strong measures against any bands of his people who might be caught on raiding expeditions. This was the beginning of the recent trouble. In describing what ensued I simply follow the narrative of my correspondent in the country.

The nature of M'Pseni's communications with the neighbouring British authorities was not concealed from his people, or at any rate was very speedily known to them. The consequence was that the more turbulent spirits took matters into their own hands; and at the beginning of this year planned an attack upon all the white settlers in the country, with the intention of either murdering them or driving them out. M'Pseni himself seems to have been powerless to check the movement; but he behaved with the utmost loyalty to the whites. To quote my correspondent—one of the white men then in the country, be it remembered—he "advised all the white men of their danger, assured them that he would do his best to save them, and telling them that if they were murdered he would be murdered also." The white settlers applied for assistance to the representatives of the Chartered Company. The agent sent them a few rifles and some ammunition, and the settlers fortified themselves and prepared for the worst. An expedition was soon afterwards sent into the country for their relief. No resistance whatever was offered to this expedition by any section of the Angoni. M'Pseni himself welcomed it; the revolutionary party among his subjects seem to have been overawed, and collapsed. What followed will be best described in the words of my correspondent:—

> Everything up to this time was in order, but now begins a period in the course of affairs which all who were witnesses of it must deplore and condemn. Instead of employing themselves in discovering the real culprits and promoters of the disturbance, the leaders of the punitive expedition proceeded to deal out punishment indiscriminately upon all parties alike, including the purely innocent natives who, conscious of no fault and confiding in the boasted fairness of the white man, had all along remained quietly in their villages. The mob of irregular soldiers was let loose on the country. Their first step was to loot the property of the unfortunate natives, and seize all their cattle, which no doubt came in very handy to restock other already looted and ruined parts of the Chartered Company's territory. No difference was made between friend and foe; on the contrary, those who were pointed out as the friends of the settlers, and who had actually been given a flag in order to distinguish them, were ill-treated the more. As an Englishman, I am ashamed at having to add that these English authorities and professedly civilised men allowed hundreds of female prisoners to be given over to the gratification of their savage mob of troops. And what say you, sir, to British authorities, representatives of their nation among so-called savages, a nation which boasts of holding up the flag of liberty, and has spent millions to free the black race from bondage, distributing as a present to their conquerors a couple of hundred prisoners, these prisoners being the very people who had been enslaved by M'Pseni's people, and who had cheered the arrival of the English as their saviours from slavery? I could tell you much more, but it is unnecessary. I will only say that if you will investigate the case you will come across even worse facts than those above mentioned. In conclusion, the country is now devastated, villages have been burnt, cattle driven away, women and children murdered, while the real culprits, with one solitary exception, are still unpunished and at large. Although a sort of peace has been proclaimed, the soldiery, or banditti, continue up to this date to commit acts of rape, theft, and murder, and such is the state of things that the natives only venture under cover of night to come down from the hills to get food.
>
> As a reward for his loyal behaviour throughout the whole of the disturbance, M'Pseni has lost the whole of his cattle, although to prevent his being completely starved, twenty head were given back to him, together with a number of goats, which latter have already been stolen from him by the Askaris. In the first instance, he stayed in his own village during the disturbance, waiting for a conference to which the armed force had invited him. But he naturally cleared out when, by way of opening this negotiation, his village was partly burnt by the very men who had invited him to the meeting and guaranteed his life. After this he was for many days hunted round the hills, and ultimately, not trusting the word of the invaders, he gave himself up to the original white settlers in his country, on the assurance that his life should be spared, as he felt confident that those to whom he had behaved so faithfully would not betray him.

A few days of "progress and civilisation" have been sufficient to transform this flourishing and well-populated country into an ash heap; to make some 200,000 individuals homeless, hunted through the villages like game, and literally starving. Should you read in any newspaper, in reference to this affair, of a glorious British victory, you may judge what a fierce struggle the noble conquerors had to contend with when I tell you that not a single casualty was reported on their side, Maxims and seven-pounders being employed in mowing down a population who showed no resistance whatever; and, so far from any loss on the part of the victors, they have obtained a handsome credit to their banking account, derived from their share in the loot of about 15,000 head of cattle, taken to a great extent from an innocent and inoffensive people. Investigate the whole matter, Sir, for yourself, and you will come across facts that will make you blush that you are an Englishman.

A question was asked in Parliament respecting this matter some two months back by Mr. Bayley, the member for Chesterfield, who inquired about certain concessions obtained from M'Pseni and other chiefs in 1890 and 1891. The question apparently suggested that M'Pseni was entitled to an allowance of £860 per annum, and that the disturbance had been due to this amount not being paid. The following was the answer:—

Mr. Curzon.—The validity of the alleged concessions has never been acknowledged by her Majesty's Government, M'Pseni not being the hereditary or paramount chief of the territory in question, and there being other claims upon it of superior weight. The South Africa Company have expressed their readiness for the present to make a payment of £200 a year to M'Pseni. The recent disturbances are attributed not to the withholding of the larger sum, but to other causes. Every consideration consistent with the public safety will be shown to M'Pseni, who has now surrendered, and to others engaged in the recent rebellion.

Beyond this answer there has been no indication up to the present time that the Home Government has any knowledge of what has been going on in M'Pseni's country. From it one might suppose that in Mr. Curzon's estimation M'Pseni is a highly dangerous character, who has been engaged in some "rebellion" against British authority. "Every consideration consistent with the public safety," we are told, will be shown to this miscreant. How much the public safety was really threatened by M'Pseni may be judged from the above testimony from one of the settlers in his country, as also may the circumstances under which he "surrendered." Presumably, Mr. Curzon's knowledge of M'Pseni's character and attitude, and of the circumstances of the so-called rebellion, is derived from the officials of the Chartered Company. Very possibly these officials themselves know little of the actual facts, and are misled in their turn by their agents and representatives upon the spot. But if anything could add to the disgrace inflicted upon us by such atrocities as those described being perpetrated in the name of the British nation, it would be that the British Government at home should be so grossly misinformed of the true facts of the case. By the above testimony of an Englishman who has lived under his rule, M'Pseni endangered his own position and authority among his people by his friendliness to the British, and it is due to him alone that every white man in the country was not murdered. He has been treated with the worst of bad faith and the grossest cruelty by the hired ruffians of the Chartered Company, and he has surrendered, not to these lawless brigands, but to the white settlers whom he had endeavoured to serve, and whom the said brigands are supposed to be protecting. For his services to Englishmen he has been robbed and hunted like a wild beast, and he is finally held up in the House of Commons by the representative of the Foreign Office as a desperado dangerous to the public safety. Vile as is the treatment he has received, it would not seem to be worse than that meted out to his subjects. While many of these are admittedly the murderous enemies of the British settlers, it would seem from the above testimony that these particular individuals are precisely the class who have escaped all punishment, while the friendly and peaceably disposed inhabitants of the country have been murdered, outraged, and robbed indiscriminately. The whole story as given above is one of the most disgraceful in the whole black record of British dealings with African natives, and there ought at once to be some full official inquiry into the facts, followed by proper punishment of the wrongdoers.

The Hotel Cecil Restaurant.—Orchestra daily. M. François, Chef de Restaurant, from the Grand Hotel, Monte Carlo. The new Grill Room is now open.

SWEAR-WORDS IN THE ARMY.

A long story sent to me the other day from an Indian station would form the subject for an edifying lecture on Army manners. A corporal in a certain field battery, R.A., being in charge of a detachment, makes a blunder in laying his gun. The Lieutenant in charge of the section comes up and corrects him, using at the same time a filthy and offensive epithet. The corporal, feeling aggrieved, endeavours to put forward a complaint respecting this language through his section officer, fails on two occasions to find him at the office, and then makes his complaint direct to the C.O. This results in his being put under arrest for making a complaint in an irregular manner. This charge is dismissed after the C.O. has heard all the circumstances; and the corporal then proceeds to put in his complaint in due and proper form. When he comes before the C.O., accompanied by three witnesses to prove the language, the C.O. tells him that he thinks the complaint frivolous, and recommends him to drop the matter. This advice does not commend itself to the corporal, and he proceeds to send in another complaint for transmission to the Lieutenant-Colonel commanding the troops on the station. On his going before this officer, the Colonel informs him that he has already communicated with the Lieutenant, who denies using the language complained of, and he goes on to severely lecture the corporal for making unfounded complaints, and dismisses him ignominiously. The corporal, who bears an excellent character, and has had no entry against him for over six years, departs highly indignant and disgusted, his sentiments being aggravated by the fact that he has in the meantime been deprived of the charge of his subdivision, which has been given to the junior bombardier in the battery, while two of his witnesses have been transferred to another subdivision, and the third deprived of the post of "limber gunner," which I gather is a coveted appointment.

Looking at this story as a disinterested observer, it strikes me that, with the exception of the C.O. of the battery no one comes out of it particularly well. The balance of evidence certainly seems to show that the Lieutenant did apply the obnoxious epithet complained of to the corporal, which was certainly wrong on his part. On the other hand, there is much to be said for the C.O.'s view that the corporal was making an absurd fuss about a trumpery matter, and would have done better to drop it. I can understand a man being annoyed for the moment at being called an ugly name, but I cannot understand his putting the whole machinery of the law into force, and worrying away day after day at ventilating his grievance when the first feeling of resentment has subsided. At the same time, the man is asserting the rights which the law gives him, and when he ultimately brings his appeal before the Colonel, that officer puts himself in the wrong by hearing the defendant, and deciding the issue behind the backs of the complainant and his witnesses, and haranguing the complainant as a sort of criminal. And again, if the whole thing is childish and frivolous, it is a great mistake to inflict anything in the shape of punishment, either upon the man or his witnesses, and thereby convert a more or less imaginary grievance into a very real one.

I hear a great deal on this subject of swear-words in the Army. Here is another recent complaint from much nearer home—Chatham to wit. The officer commanding a certain company of Royal Engineers, notices at drill a man not standing at attention as he ought to have been, fires off a volley of oaths and abuse at the delinquent, and then strikes him a blow in the chest. (Several witnesses can be produced to prove these facts). At the same time the officer gave an order that the man should be brought before his C.O. for unsteadiness in the ranks, which order he subsequently thought better of and rescinded. The man then put forward a formal complaint about the blow and bad language, with the result that he was made a prisoner on the previously abandoned charge of unsteadiness in the ranks, and was admonished. His own complaint was gone into on the following day, when the officer incriminated admitted the bad language, but denied that the blow was anything more than a gentle push, and the C.O. "persuaded" the complainant to drop the charge by representing in alarming colours the consequences of preferring a charge against an officer, and failing to substantiate it.

I imagine that incidents of this kind are of very frequent occurrence in the Army, and that they produce a great deal of bad feeling and not a little crime. A man sworn at and threatened may happen to be as incapable as the officer addressing him of controlling his tongue and temper, in which case he will answer back—if he does not do worse—and get himself into serious trouble. If he controls his temper, he may still feel sufficiently resentful to adopt the constitutional means given him, and prefer a formal complaint, in which case it is ten to one that he comes into conflict with higher authorities, and ends up either in disgrace or with a feeling of resentment against every one in authority over him. Personally, I rather blame the man who makes a fuss over bad language addressed to him. Hard words break no bones, and nothing annoys an ill-tempered man who is abusing another more than the knowledge that his abuse produces no impression. In all spheres of life, too, people occupying subordinate positions are apt to get sworn at by their superiors, and the more sensible of them probably consider that it is allowed for in their pay. If it is not, they are at liberty to cancel their engagements. My advice to men in subordinate stations—whether soldiers, sailors, or civilians—who get sworn at in the ordinary course of business is "lie low and say nuffin." An unduly thin skin is a fatal hindrance both to success in life and to personal comfort.

The position of a soldier, however, is a little peculiar. In the "Advantages of the Army," no mention is made of swearing by officers. For his shilling a day Tommy contracts to go through a great deal, and even to be shot if occasion arises, but not to be damned—or worse. On the other hand, he cannot discharge himself, as a civilian employee could, on the ground that he "can't abide master's language." These considerations ought to induce a certain amount of consideration for the rank and file among even the most irascible and voluble of officers. To put it on the lowest ground, swearing at a man who daren't answer you, and can't refuse to listen, is very much like hitting a man whose hands are tied—which is a thing no one bearing her Majesty's commission would condescend to. There are, of course, higher grounds on which it might be put, but the War Office has lately shown itself so fully qualified to lecture officers on the higher aspects of their duty to their men, that it would be presumptuous in a mere journalist to attempt anything in that line.

I don't mean to suggest that it is the general practice in the British Army for officers to address their men in the style of a drunken bargee talking to his dog. On the contrary, I believe that an overwhelming majority adopt a very different tone; and, judging by the feeling of the Service men whose acquaintance I am privileged to enjoy, I should say that the language occasionally used on parade and at drill by a few foul-mouthed bullies is not resented by anybody more than by their brother officers. This is what encourages me to suggest that a stronger line should be occasionally taken with those who show themselves unable to control their tongues.

"RAGGED ROBIN."

There has always been an aureole of romance for the gipsy, the Bohemian, the citizen of the high roads of the world, and M. Jean Richepin has sung to us for many years in sonorous verse of his joys and sorrows, of the lights upon the unknown village as approached at sunset after rain, of the changing raiment of new hills and woods, and of that sense of more intimate communion with Nature which those attain who break the bonds of social life, or in the picturesque phraseology of the East "emancipate themselves from bricks and mortar."

Mr. Louis Parker has gone to the latest of these productions, the "Chemineau," for the plot of his "Ragged Robin." He transplants the scene to Dorsetshire, and in the prelude sets forth the wayward courting and conquest of Alison by the gipsy, and his disappearance after strange feats, which suggest to old Farmer Stokes magical powers, worth possessing at any cost. But initiation, as one might have supposed, is not to be bought. As in the French original, years and years elapse before we see the Romany again, and he reappears with the snows of many winters upon his head, to find Alison the wife of kind-hearted Jan Perrott, and her son—his son—Jack, the hopeless wooer of Nanny, daughter of that Farmer Stokes whom, long ago, he had so bewildered and amazed with the arts of Egypt. The kind heart of the gipsy is fairly brimming over for love of this son, and when Alison, who loves still her lover's waywardness, has told him of the feud between Jan Perrott and old Stokes, his quick brain speedily espies a favourable issue. Turning to the downcast boy by his side, the old wanderer promises him—Nanny. At first Jack is incredulous, but in a few words his father tells him of old Stokes' superstition, how he had dominated him in the past, and for the sake of his son will terrify him as before by these arts into yielding up his Nanny to her lover. This scene, in which Mr. Tree showed once again his true sense of poetry, leads up to the mystification of the old farmer, the betrothal of the young lovers, and the departure of the wanderer into the Christmas night upon his mystic way—mystical, because he has here a loving home, with hearts and hands to tend his old age, but he must go forth, driven by that strange instinct which will not let him rest, but ever urges onward towards other climes and lands.

Mr. Louis Parker has written "Ragged Robin" in the dialect of Dorsetshire, and preferred a somewhat ornate prose to the metallic Alexandrines of his original. I think he is right in rejecting verse (though, by the way, I seemed to detect more than one metrical line in the long speeches of Alison and Robin), but the literary periods so frequent in the play do not go well with the rustic burr, and one would prefer to admit the convention of Dorsetshire rustics speaking ordinary English to be perpetually straining after the meaning of common words disguised. I could have wished, moreover, that Mr. Parker had been less ambitious of fine writing and had left some of M. Richepin's stars and spangles of rhetoric at the Gare du Nord. The conversation in the first act between Robin and Alison might surely be shortened, and that powerful scene in the third act, the mystification of Farmer Stokes, would be the better for compression. The pruning knife might, in fact, be judiciously used in many places without damaging this play—after all, merely a prose adaptation from an original which, although I believe it took even longer to act in Paris, at any rate contained some fine poetic rhetoric and did not depend entirely for effect upon the action, as in the present instance.

The rags of Robin hang most picturesquely from the shoulders of Mr. Tree; he wears them with an ease, a naturalness, that speak an intimate sympathy with the part, which must, indeed, so far as the main conception goes, be dear to all men of imagination. One great quality is possessed by Mr. Tree which others may strain after in vain; I mean the element of strangeness. This he carries with him whenever he plays; and when, as on the present occasion, full scope is allowed for its artistic development, the effect is magical.

Abreast and independent of Mr. Tree, in method and talent, stands forth Mr. Charles Warner. This actor revealed on Thursday night, as elsewhere on previous occasions, the possession of exceptional gifts of insight, of identification with the character which he portrays, and of a sympathy contagious across the footlights. His transition from the stalwart farmer of the first act to the old man, broken in mind and body, of the latter part of the play, was an admirable passing, and well deserved the frantic applause which it procured him from his old admirers in melodrama, throned on high. Mr. Franklyn McLeay and Mr. Gerald du Maurier seemed to me inclined to pitch the rustic note too high, to give not quite caricatures, but clever portraits in very crude colours of Farmer Stokes and Zamm'l, whereas Mr. F. P. Stevens, as Tummas, dealt more successfully with the shading. Miss Evelyn Millard looked most picturesque as Nanny, but her habit of sing-song delivery greatly diminishes the sense of reality in the action, and the agreeable impression of her appearance.

Mrs. Tree, with all her cleverness, cannot shake off the atmosphere of the drawing-room, which accompanies Alison throughout the play, and suggests those ladies of the Court of Marie Antoinette who used to dress up as shepherdesses—and sometimes even milked the cows. I cannot conclude these remarks without a word of praise for the background of the first act: "Dorsetshire Cornfields at Harvest Time," by Joseph Harker—a marvel of scenic effect, which I do not remember having seen surpassed.

"PELLÉAS AND MÉLISANDE."

On the stage this play gives me just the impression of a wonderful moth caught and held by the wings; held ever so deftly, no doubt, but still held, and some of the delicate dust rubbed off. The acting, with few exceptions, was excellent, but throughout, though lulled and cradled a little by the exquisite music of Fauré, I experienced the sensation which comes upon me when shown beautiful illustrations to some work of the imagination long known and loved. The wings of sympathy are clipped; one is tied to reality; somebody else's vision comes between us and the poet, and we are not at ease. This is especially the case with Maeterlinck, who dwells on the borderland between sensation and thought. His mysterious method corresponds to the ultra violet, say, of the spectrum, and to see it reproduced in stained glass is for me no pleasure. As they move across the stage of the poet's imagination these are wonderful creatures indeed, come from the "misty mid-region of Weir," replete with infinite suggestion; but with a "local habitation and a name," however skilfully bestowed, they become for the most part things of two dimensions, mere decorative art. Golaud, for instance, alone in this play lives and moves like a being of normal flesh and blood. He wanders, as his creator intended, among a crowd of phantoms, for whom the moral and visible world has no precise meaning, weighed down by some imponderable fate like the Ananke of the Greeks, but with all the experience of the Middle Ages added to make her more terrible. Then again, the unavoidable break between the acts for the purpose of setting the next scene is a constant bringing back to reality, which dream-work like Maeterlinck's will hardly bear.

As I have already remarked, all praise is due to Mr. Forbes Robertson, and to the artists who have aided him in this enterprise. They have done the best possible to act a dream. Mrs. Patrick Campbell evidently feels the charm of Maeterlinck very strongly, and looks and talks picturesquely as Mélisande—how different from her ludicrous incompetence as Ophelia, her travesty of the Rat Wife in "Little Eyolf"! And, so far as regards Shakespeare, the reason for this is not far to seek. Shakespeare is all life, and none can impersonate his creations who have not the mind to grasp life in its infinite complexities, the swaying of the human soul under stress of joy and grief. But it is comparatively easy to catch and detain what I will call the visible side of Maeterlinck, to reproduce upon the stage the sexless, semi-conscious child which Mrs. Patrick Campbell makes of Mélisande. And in doing this she is half right, having rendered the visible side; but the other side, the invisible, has thereby become more remote and more difficult of access than before.

Despite the beautiful effects of colour in the costumes and the management of the light, despite the music of Fauré and the winged headdress of Pelléas, I caught myself wishing more than once that Mr. Forbes Robertson and the rest would turn into marionettes—I believe that Maeterlinck has been successfully played in Paris with marionettes—or that in default of that they would disappear into the unknown, and leave—just a voice to read the play. Yes, the acting of "Pelléas" has been for me, in more senses than one, a tragedy of decorative art.

A STRANGER IN NEW YORK.

I observe that the majority of the daily Press, after one or two remarks of mild disparagement and equally mild approval, suggests with significance that this play is more suited to the "provinces" than to the metropolis. One or two of the notes which I took during the performance will show that in my opinion a wider sphere is open to it, and also, I hope, help to prepare the "provinces" for the treat that is in store for them. I may remark that the action is supposed to take place in New York, but there is no plot worth mentioning; the author, by a happy euphemism, entitles the thing "an attempt to supply material for an evening's entertainment." That statement is the most amusing in the piece.

1. Two elderly men in tall hats and frock coats, seated in the hall of an hotel, are forcibly introduced to one another by a third, a stranger to both: they quarrel. (This trio would be a great success as the Chesterfields of the Society Islands, and be well suited to Polynesia generally.)

2. A young woman appears in an opera cloak. After much careful preparation, we are informed that she is wearing tights underneath it—and she reveals them. As she is obviously a ballet girl, this fact does not amaze us, but would no doubt be suited to, say, the New Guinea coast (where the natives would probably be both shocked and amused into eating her up for over-dressing).

3. Two young women and one young man sing a song with the refrain, "How happy could I be with either." (Suitable for the Grand Opera of the Solomon Islands.)

4. One young woman, dressed in what might be taken for a kilt by a Frenchman, sings a song which might pass for Scotch—in Mingrelia. (Certain to draw crowds at Inverness—but the sporran should be worn round the neck, according to the best Continental tradition.)

NOTES FROM PARIS.

THE POLITENESS OF KINGS.

THE late M. Félix Faure forgets that punctuality is the politeness of kings. He is hardly ever in time, except when he makes a railway journey or sails in a man-o'-war. Sometimes he is a good deal behind time. Last week he twice let the clock run on half an hour or so before he made his appearance. His lateness is said to be a police device. Detectives thus have time to study crowds through which he is to pass, and clear off individuals who strike them as suspicious. Perhaps. But the evening the Czar dined at the Elysée, dinner was announced nearly an hour after the time appointed. The meal had to be hurried through to get to the theatre in fairly good time, with the result that his Imperial Majesty was knocked up.

The centenary of the Conservatoire des Arts et Métiers afforded the President two opportunities not to imitate Royalty in being punctual. He managed to copy it extremely well in other respects. Really no king could go through the theatrical part of the business better, despite an air of vestry respectability clinging to him. The President has a valet and eke a tailor. The cloth of his clothes must be very flexible. Inevitable creases are scarcely perceptible. He is, perhaps, too spick-and-span. But one sees that he has an inborn taste for sumptuary elegance and the showy side of life. He manages not to be swagger or stuck up, the aim being to look digne (this word I must translate by the obsolete "worshipful"). It appears that he often asks the head of the Protocol: "In my place, how would a Sovereign behave?" and applies the lesson he obtains with tact. At the Arts et Métiers he gazed far forward, a way of preventing importunate persons from catching his eye. After all the speeches were made and decorations given, he spent some time admiring the wonders of the radiograph. Among them was a photo of a lovely being aged eighteen. When photographed, she was dressed, but wore no corset, as it was found the whalebones were of steel. She stood near in the clothes in which she was taken. The whole internal anatomy was laid bare. One could almost see the heart pulsating. The arachnoid tissue of the lungs was quite visible. The close grain of the liver showed. Some photographic images of beings as lovely, but less healthy, were then shown. One had spots on the lungs—"Indurations," said the doctor who acted as showman; "they are the first stage of consumption." M. Faure was so interested that he kept M. Peytral, with whom he had an appointment, waiting at the Elysée.

The doctor who explained the radiograph photos dwelt on the sincerity they might bring into match-making transactions. A perfect photo would enable the family doctor to tell exactly the constitutional or chronic, or other flaws of the aspirant to marriage. "No photo, no further negotiations," might become a usual condition, What a blessing this would be for posterity!

The Cabinet crisis dragged through the whole of last week. The President, it is said, wanted to bring back M. Méline by wearing out patience. M. Méline, according to his view, was not beaten, but retired of his own accord. The Chamber could not, therefore, be offended if, all possible Cabinet-makers failing, M. Faure asked the retiring Ministry to stay in office. A rather close game was played between him and Brisson and Bourgeois. They have programmes by which they personally stand. I should call Brisson the Keeper of the Republican Conscience in Parliament. M. Faure, to believe his critics, aimed at bringing the office into disrepute. If Brisson consented to a policy of pure sand-ploughing with a motley team, who could go on believing in his conscientiousness? He did a clever thing in accepting the programme of Sarrien and Peytral—both moderate Radicals—with a Ministry taken from the 295 who voted against Méline. They were the only majority that he knew of. This decision was made known to the President at the close of the Sunday afternoon matinée at the Elysée.

A point compassed at the Elysée was to keep M. Hanotaux. Who can be surprised or displeased? Human nature is human nature. Louis XIV. was in the habit of receiving from the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs the cream of his official correspondence as it arrived. A good deal of chit-chat about the Courts of Europe was repeated by the diplomatic correspondents. They would have known the King was pleased to read spicy gossip, and they often filled despatches with it. No Yellow-books were issued in his time. Ambassadors had not yet learned the art of saying nothing in long despatches. As an historian, M. Hanotaux had studied the mechanism of the Foreign Affairs Department under the Grand Monarque. He revived that part of it by skimming the cream of his official and private-official correspondence, and sending it on to the head of the State. What more charming attention? It gave work to secretaries and violated no constitutional rule. Instead of a dry summary, a palatable compilation was prepared. Perhaps it had been whispered to ambassadors that entertaining private-official letters were desired.

A Ministerial crisis causes a flutter in the families of deputies and senators. The wives of "ministrable" politicians are "run upon" by each other and those of "non-ministrables." Wives of Generals, Colonels, Admirals, Post-Captains, Departmental Clerks, and of office and decoration seekers rush to call on them. They are made to feel that the ball is at their foot and that it contains France. All are in a fever of excitement. All affect the sweetest amiability. The flattered ones feel really amiable. As their husbands are not yet gazetted, they are still on their good behaviour. They will only give themselves airs when they are in. But meanwhile what dreams they dream! How they calculate expenses! A Minister has 60,000 francs a year, besides frais de représentation that bring it up to 75,000 francs. Men-servants, coals, candle-lights, and flowers for dinner parties and soirées are thrown in by "La Princesse." "La Princesse" also gives Ministers' wives box-places at the subsidised theatres.

It is rare to find a Minister's wife with a political conscience. She takes a purely practical view of politics. It is nice to belong to the inner circle at Elysée crushes. What can be more heavenly than to sit in the salon-room reserved for la Présidente, the Ministers' wives, and the Ambassadresses? A delight of that privilege is to sit on gilded arm-chairs arranged in a semicircle to right and left of the one on which the highest lady thrones. Skirts are spread out, fans are fluttered, mutual admiration and deference are professed in mincing glances, smiles, bows, and little speeches. The precious wife is flattered in a thousand ways. She may or may not deserve the flattery. She may be a paquet from some provincial hole: one sometimes sees such a person with ministresses revolving round her. Or she may be a lady of personal distinction, like Mmes. Jules Ferry, or Floquet, or Ribot, or De Freycinet, or Brisson, or Lockroy, who was a ward of Jules Simon and caught his seductive grace.

It is very absurd, when one thinks of it, that the names of men like Peytral, Dupuy, Delcassé, Loubet, and so on, should have flashed for a whole week over telegraphic wires. Dupuy is said to be a gettatore. He was Prime Minister and Minister of the Interior when Carnot was assassinated. All the secret and other police of France were under him. His private inquiry detectives so harassed Casimir-Périer that he resigned. This so-called statesman is a process-server's son. He was a show boy at some country lyceum, became a professor, and, as such, had an upper class in the Marseilles Lyceum. As he was always watching for a chance to start in politics, his class was not well taught. His marriage with the daughter of a manufacturer of halfpenny pipes afforded the opportunity. It would be too long to tell by what means he won the goodwill as Minister of Public Instruction of a number of Old Boys of the École Polytechnique. They had the ear of President Carnot, who had graduated there. He called Dupuy to the Premiership. This was after the Panama scandal had discredited so many other statesmen that he hardly knew where to look for an Opportunist Premier. He knows how to oil creaking cogs.

Loubet, now President of the Senate, is a good fellow. He was bâtonnier of the Montélimart bar before he rose per saltum, through the favour of the Elysée, to some great political post. Montélimart people swear by him, and they are right. He is devoted to them, and remains the friend of every decent person there. When a Minister, he remained in his flat in the Rue de Seine. But as President of the Senate he lives at the Petit Luxembourg—a scarcely less charming abode than the Petit Bourbon.

Walking, Cycling, Shooting, Yachting Dresses, &c.—John Busvine & Co., Tailors and Riding Habit Makers to H.R.H. the Princess of Wales, the Princess Victoria of Wales, the Duchess of Fife, the Princess Charles of Denmark, the Marchioness of Lorne, the Princess Henry of Battenberg, the Duchess of Connaught, the Duchess of Albany, the Empress of Austria, the Empress of Russia, the Empress of Germany, the Princess Henry of Prussia, the Princess Victoria of Prussia, the Infanta Eulalia of Spain, the Countess de Paris, the Duchess d'Aosta.—4, Brook-street, London, W.

Peytral is a pharmaceutical chemist. He made a fortune in patent medicines, and was famous on the Cannebière for his hygienic cordials and mixtures. Until he got into the Senate he was a perfervid Radical. He tried last week to compound a Cabinet out of one Socialist, some tame Radicals, some Progressives, and some Moderates. Peytral never strove to shine as a superior person, but sets up to be a financier. He does not give umbrage to the President. This negative advantage goes a long way. Delcassé is another good fellow. He is still young. He was a journalist. But he merely passed in the crowd. Marriage with a wealthy widow enabled him to use the Press for his own political objects merely. He took up Colonial extension, made a row about it, was backed by all the Colonials, entered the Chamber, and one fine day was offered a seat in I forget what Cabinet. Mme. Delcassé is said to have the most comely bonnes in Paris. I never knew her to employ a plain one. Some of her parlourmaids have been remarkably pretty.

LETTER FROM THE LINKMAN.

"DON'T swear; fight!" The phrase, dear Lady Betty, has the ring of sound metal.

The American Army of Invasion advancing upon Santiago de Cuba was preceded by a body of rough-riders. Suddenly the Spaniards, who were lying in ambush, fired a deadly volley, and the startled rough-riders replied with an outburst of curses. "Don't swear; fight!" called out Colonel Wood. The phrase will live.

America is a big country; it is destined to become a great country, for there is manliness and vigour in the memorable phrases coined by celebrated Americans. It was Stephen Decatur who originated the toast, "Our country, right or wrong." Henry Clay said, "Sir, I would prefer to be right than to be President." The last words of Nathan Hale were, "I only regret that I have but one life to lose for my country." Grover Cleveland declared that "Public office is a public trust." William Penn coined the phrase, "I prefer the honestly simple to the ingeniously wicked." And it was Henry Ward Beecher who uttered the words, "The mother's heart is the child's schoolroom."

When nations become artificially refined the phrases which their great men coin are generally either cynical or flippant. Thus, to Talleyrand is attributed the phrase, "Mistrust first impressions, they are always good." Voltaire declared that, "Ideas are like beards, children and women never have them." To which might be added, "except when they are monstrosities." Antoine Rivarole said, "It is an immense advantage to have done nothing, but one should not abuse it." Samuel Rogers said, "When I was young I said good-natured things and nobody listened to me; now that I am old I say ill-natured things and everybody listens to me." To Sydney Smith we are indebted for the following ungracious description of a fashionable woman, "Do not mind the caprices of fashionable women. They are as gross as poodles fed on milk and muffins."

Whether Colonel Wood uttered them or not, the words, "Don't swear; fight!" will ring for long in the memories of many generations.

* * * * *

Unfortunately, for the moment, American men and women are misrepresented in Europe by an improvised aristocracy, whose Mecca is Marlborough House. These select nonentities, who have or have not attained some notoriety in New York, pervade the capitals of Europe, and render themselves and their fellow-country men and women ridiculous by their pretentious peculiarities. The United States of America were not founded by house-maids out of place and by mechanics out of work; but the impression which these over-dressed, under-bred people convey is that they were. It is important for the reputation of America that the United States Government should exercise some control over the export of such eccentricities.

* * * * *

At the Garrick Theatre there is being played a piece the name of which is "Too Much Johnson." At the Theatre Royal, Westminster, another piece is being played; it is "Too Much Chamberlain." Why does Lord Salisbury not amputate Mr. Joseph Chamberlain from a Cabinet whose life is endangered by his continued connection with it? Political gangrene has set in, and is spreading rapidly. Granting that Mr. Chamberlain is an excellent political prize-fighter—a master of muscular oratory—and that he excites the admiration of the "Tom and Jerry" type of politician, nevertheless he does not command the respect of the respectable.

It is popularly supposed that Mr. Chamberlain has the reversion of the Leadership of the Conservative Party. This is altogether incorrect. Were Lord Salisbury to retire, either the Duke of Devonshire or Mr. Arthur Balfour would have a better chance of being promoted to the Leadership. Mr. Chamberlain is a man of sixty-three; that has to be taken into account. Were the Conservative Government to be upset, a Radical, not a Liberal, Administration must succeed to power, and Mr. Joseph Chamberlain has severed his connection for all time with his former Party. So ambitious a man must now deeply repent that he seceded from Mr. Gladstone, for had he been faithful to him he might have succeeded to the Leadership of the Radical Party, and might have eventually become Prime Minister. As it is, little less than a miracle is required to make him Premier.

* * * * *

Much satisfaction has been caused throughout the British Diplomatic Service by the announcement that the Queen has conferred a K.C.M.G. on Mr. Martin Le Marchant Gosselin, in recognition of his services as British Commissioner at the Niger Conference at Paris. But why did the Times refer to Sir Martin as "de Marchant Gosselin"? The new Knight Commander, who is First Secretary of the British Embassy in Paris, is an especially well-known man, and it is surprising, therefore, that the editor of the leading newspaper in his own country is not sufficiently acquainted with his name to give it correctly.

* * * * *

The following letter has been addressed to me:—

"SIR,—It appears to be useless to urge the Duke of Cambridge to permit Hyde Park to be made a pleasant resort for the children of the poor, and for the public at large. But, perhaps, as the sympathies of the Duke are notoriously with the rich, this suggestion may meet with his approval: Throughout my life, when in London, I have ridden in Rotten-row, and whenever a shower of rain has occurred whilst I was there, I have been drenched. All who ride there agree that a shed should be erected in the Row, so that this annoyance might be removed. Were Hyde Park under the control of the London County Council, as it should be, and as it eventually will be, this reasonable suggestion would be adopted at once. It is inexplicable that the Duke of Cambridge should cling to the office of Ranger of the Royal Parks with the tenacity he does, in the face of the general opposition and the unpopularity which his policy excites.—Yours faithfully, CURZON-STREET."

It may be added that it is an open secret that the Government is anxious to undertake numerous improvements in the "Royal" Parks to meet the requirements of the public, but that all applications to the Duke for permission to do so are opposed with the utmost obstinacy. The Ranger is a kind of Royal Danton, who might have originated the sentiment, "Let us be terrible, to prevent the people from becoming so."—Believe me to be, very truly yours,

MARMADUKE.

SPORTING NOTES.

IT is, indeed, high time that the Stewards of the Jockey Club commenced to reform their programmes at Newmarket, where root-and-branch changes are urgently required, as I have often pointed out. At no other meeting in England are there so many five furlong races, the aim and end of which are simply gambling. There is not a particle of sport about these scrambles, for it is not the best horse which usually wins, but rather the animal which gets a good start. Some of the most experienced trainers are of the opinion that the tendency of five furlong races is to ruin horses, as their tempers are spoilt. Newmarket, in this matter, sets a scandalous example to other places. At the last meeting the longest distance race was a mile and a quarter, and there were only three events over that course, while there were a dozen or so of five furlong races.

Since Jeddah's easy victory in the Prince of Wales's Stakes at Ascot, the St. Leger has been generally declared to be merely a question of health for Mr. Larnach's colt, but we really know no more about the Derby winner now than we knew after Epsom, as his victory over Batt signifies absolutely nothing whatever, for the Duke of Westminster's horse was either out of form or else he cannot be trusted, judging from his abject exhibition in the Ascot Derby. Jeddah has several engagements before Doncaster, including the Sussex Stakes at Goodwood, but I do not suppose that he will run again during the summer, as he has heavy penalties in all these races. He is clearly a good stayer, and if he goes on all right he ought to have a good chance of winning the Ascot Cup next year.

King Crow won the Northumberland Plate in accordance with my prediction, and Mr. Vyner has certainly brought off a very pretty sequence with this horse, who would have been a nice "pot" for the Cesarewitch if he had been kept for it.

Knight of the Thistle has been entered for the Chesterfield Cup at Goodwood, and it is very probable that he will be reserved for that race, for which he may be a dangerous candidate.

With regard to the Princess of Wales's Stakes, which is run to-morrow, it seems to me that Collar will be the most dangerous opponent of Veslaquez, who has to give the Duke of Westminster's colt 6 lb. more than weight for age, and he ought to be able to do so. St. Cloud II. has undergone a special preparation for this race, but his running in the Royal Hunt Cup was simply deplorable. However, nobody now ever speaks of public form except to laugh at the idea of paying any attention to it.

Lord Stanley and Lord Farquhar have become partners in the two-year-old Hadrian, by St. Angelo out of Isone. This colt was bred at Burghley by Captain Greville, and at Newmarket last July Lord Derby gave 510 gs. for him.

The Goodwood Plate of £800, which takes the place of the defunct Goodwood Stakes, has obtained thirty entries, which must be considered a most satisfactory number, considering that the distance of the event is two miles and a half. If owners would only instruct their trainers to try the horses over long courses, instead of fuddling about, day after day, with five and six furlong gallops, as is now the slovenly practice in almost every stable, we should probably find that there are plenty of stayers. Among the older horses in the Goodwood race are St. Bris, Butter, Carlton Grange, History, Herminius, Rapallo, Piety, and Laughing Girl. There are twelve three-year-olds, including Winsome Charteris, Chubb, Loreto, Crimson Rambler, and Pie Powder.

The astonishingly poor entries for the principal events at the Liverpool July Meeting afford conclusive evidence (if any such were needed) that racing at present is ruinously overdone. There we find only nineteen horses engaged in a five furlong handicap of £500, while there are but twenty-seven in a six furlong race of the same value. The Liverpool Cup of £1,200 has obtained only twenty-seven entries, and a very familiar lot they are, including Knight of the Thistle, Goletta, Labrador, St. Bris, Dinna Forget, Lord Hervey, The Rush, Ashburn, and Brayhead.

There has been a deal of laudatory cackling about Cap Martin since his victory at Ascot, but Mr. Baird's colt really had nothing to beat in the St. James's Palace Stakes, and I should be vastly surprised to find that he can stay the St. Leger course. Cap Martin is still capable of much improvement, and he ought to be a considerably better horse at the beginning of September than he is now, but he need not be seriously thought of in connection with the Leger until his stamina has been tested. He was entered for the £2,000 stake at Sandown Park last week, but he paid forfeit when he was a yearling, which was an unfortunate blunder for his owner, as he would probably have won the race. He will doubtless be started for the Sussex Stakes at Goodwood, the distance being one mile, and this will be one of the most interesting races of the summer if it also brings out Dieudonné (8 st. 13 lb.), Ninus (9 st. 1 lb.), Batt (8 st. 13 lb.), and Cyllene (9 st. 3 lb.). Cap Martin's weight would be 9 st. 1 lb.

Wantage has justified my prediction that his turf career would be brief by falling lame, and it is certainly unfortunate that a race has not been got out of the Duke of Portland's colt, as it is now very unlikely that he will ever stand a thorough preparation.

Dunlop is tolerably sure to win a good T.Y.C. handicap before the season is over, and this colt must not be overlooked whenever he is started for a short distance race.

The winner of the Cesarewitch is said to have been seen out at Ascot, and the handicapper will, no doubt, be favoured with abundant warnings of the danger that may be expected from the horse in question unless he is "steadied" with a heavy weight.

I see it stated that Baron Rothschild's colt, Le Roi Soleil, has "numerous engagements in France" during the autumn, the fact being that he is entered for only one race, which is the Prix Royal Oak of £2,000, which is run at Longchamps on Sunday, September 18. Next year we shall, no doubt, see Le Roi Soleil going for the Ascot Cup.

Only thirty-five two-year-olds have been left in for the Champagne Stakes at Doncaster. It is shameful, at so rich a meeting, that the minor forfeit in the principal two-year-old race of the week should still be grabbed for the fund, which accordingly contributes only £265 of the £500 which is nominally added. The fact is that £1,000 ought to be added to the Champagne Stakes, and there should be reasonable penalties for winners of £1,000 or upwards. Desmond, Victoria May, Adornment colt, and Musa are all left in. The dark lot are usually dangerous in this race. Lord Rosebery is now represented only by Apennine, own sister to Velasquez. The Duke of Portland has Manners, own brother to Amiable. The Duke of Westminster has Calix, by Orme out of Petal, a mare that bred some good winners for the late Duke of St. Albans. Mr. L. de Rothschild, who so unexpectedly won the race last year with Ayah, has accepted with San Carlo, by St. Simon out of Biserta, dam of Goletta; and Guava, by Galopin out of Nellie. The Kingsclere stable is also represented by Mr. Low's colt by Right Away out of Hall Mark.

Eighteen three-year-olds have accepted for the Doncaster Stakes of £680, including Batt, Ninus, Purser, Airs and Graces, and Angus. There has been a lot of insane twaddle written about Angus, who is a stable companion of Disraeli. This colt has never yet run, and it is very unlikely that he will succeed in winning a race, for he appears to be a bad cripple, while there is not a worse-shaped horse at Newmarket. Nevertheless, many simpletons were gulled into backing him for the Derby.

Disraeli has done no work since his return to Newmarket from Paris, and it is not likely that he will be again seen out before Doncaster, although he has engagements at York and at Derby, where he won his first race last September. He ran very badly both at Epsom and at Longchamps, but he may have a resurrection in the autumn, and it is quite on the cards that he will prove a dangerous opponent to Jeddah in the Leger.

Donovan is about fortieth in the list of winning sires, but it now seems highly probable that he will fill the first place at the end of the season, for Velasquez appears certain to win at least two of the £10,000 races. Ayrshire and Janissary are now at the top of the list, followed by St. Simon and Galopin, and then come Common, Martagon, and St. Serf.

An owner who at present possesses a three-year-old that can gallop on its four legs is asinine and anserous if he does not run his steed for all its engagements, however hopeless its chance may appear on public form. It was on this principle that Lord Durham started Sherburn for the North Derby at Newcastle, although the colt had run deplorably against moderate horses on more than one occasion. Cauliflower, who was a great favourite, ran very badly, and so also did The Virginian, who had been in reserve for this race, and he was a great tip at Newmarket. The winner is well bred enough for anything, being by Sheen out of Primrose Day, and both sire and dam won the Cesarewitch, so he ought to be a stayer. The Jenny Howlet colt, who finished a very bad second, will win a handicap before the season is over, but at present he is hopelessly out of form.

The Duke of Portland and Lord Crewe have decided to remove their horses from Newmarket to Kingsclere, and it is highly probable that there will be some other important secessions from "headquarters" before long. There are far too many horses now in training at Newmarket, and things are getting hopelessly chaotic there. Both owners and trainers bitterly complain, moreover, of the vexatious and constant interferences of the Jockey Club officials, whose last bêtise was to forbid Elf II. and other French horses to be galloped on the heath—a reprehensible exhibition of eccentricity which the Stewards ought to have censured severely.

There will be racing next week at Stockbridge, Lingfield, Nottingham, and Pontefract, and the best sport will certainly be at the southern meetings.

The Bibury Club Stakes looks well for Eventail if the Prince of Wales cares to send her so far for a race of such small value. Collar is the best animal in the Hampshire Stakes of £500, but he has 14 lb. extra to carry, and Ninus and Purser have also heavy penalties. There is a good chance for Petty France (who cost 5,100 gs. as a yearling, and has never won a race), who will be receiving 21 lb. from Collar; but I expect the Duke of Westminster will win with Orpah. The Champagne Stakes may bring out Birkenhead, by Orme out of Tragedy. The public lot are very bad. The Stockbridge Foal Stakes is a good thing for Flying Fox, whose penalty of 10 lb. for winning the New Stakes at Ascot is reduced to 5 lb. by a breeding allowance. The Stockbridge Cup, which originally failed to fill, has obtained seventeen entries, including several very speedy animals, but Kilcock ought to win easily.

This is the last meeting which will be held at Stockbridge, and next year the Bibury Club fixture is to be removed to Salisbury, where the programme is miserably weak. Stockbridge has always been a very popular meeting, but the sport there has been falling off for a long time, though the two-year-old races have generally been interesting, and some of the best animals of the season have usually run there. It was in the Hurstbourne Stakes that Galtee More made a successful début two years ago.

The best sport next week will be at Lingfield. Fifty-three two-year-olds are left in for the Great Foal Stakes of £1,000, including Eventail, Blackwing, Fascination, and Trident. I shall plump for Blackwing, who has a 5 lb. breeding allowance, and he has by this time recovered from the ailment which prostrated him at Ascot. If Blackwing does not start the Bedford Cottage stable will, no doubt, be represented by Mr. Leigh's filly Clay Pigeon, half Sister, by Common, to that very disappointing animal The Wyvern.

The Imperial Stakes of £1,500 may be won by Lowood, who will be receiving 2 lb. from Nun Nicer; but I expect that the Duke of Westminster's filly will have come on since Ascot, when she won the Coronation Stakes so easily. In that race Lowood was receiving 14 lb. from Nun Nicer.

The conditions of the Derby for 1900 are advertised, and it remains a stake "for colts." The race does not close until July 19, and the Stewards of the Jockey Club ought forthwith to insist upon the conditions of this and the other great weight-for-age stakes being altered so as to exclude geldings. Let the clause be amended by the insertion of the word "entire" before colts, which is the Grand Prix de Paris condition, and it ought long ago to have been adopted in England.

A CHIEF CONSUL ON THE C.T.C.

The comments that I have made on the affairs of the Cyclist Touring Club do not seem one atom too severe, judging by the information concerning the club's management that has from time to time reached me. Thanks to a communication from a member I was recently able to expose the trick by which the club, after deeming it necessary to increase the subscription by eighteenpence, proceeded to give away handbooks said to cost two shillings. I have now had a letter from the Chief Consul for Inverness-shire and Nairnshire, Mr. W. E. Grant. His letter gives an interesting insight into the superhuman labours of the club secretary, Mr. Shipton. Mr. Grant encloses a printed letter from Mr. Shipton. The only type-written portion is the date, the statement that the communication relates to "the appointment of the Hotel——," and the name and address of Mr. Grant. The wording is so delightfully impertinent that I give it in full:—

> The enclosed communication relating to—— reached me this morning. As it comes more within your province as Chief Consul than mine as Secretary, I have acknowledged the receipt of the same in the usual stereotyped form, merely telling the writer that he will in all probability hear from you in due course.

This is the cool way in which the well-paid secretary of the club, Mr. Shipton, addresses a chief consul who gets not a penny piece by way of pay, and who finds work shoved on to him in this unceremonious manner. When I first called attention to the accounts of the C.T.C. I was taken severely to task, not merely for having done so, but also for wanting to know who took all the money in salaries, and how it came about that there was such a large sum spent in postage. I was told Mr. Shipton was ill from overwork. It must be very gratifying to his numerous friends to know that if the duties of secretary are carried on in this cavalier fashion such a misfortune is not likely to occur again. The printed letter to the chief consul, the stereotyped reply to the correspondent, all indicate that there is a quantity of correspondence which is mere routine work. Mr. Grant informs me that the C.T.C. have a large staff, judging from the "monthly pay-sheet." He says that hardly a day passes on which he does not get communications of different kinds that can be answered with far less trouble from London. He considers that care should be taken by those in authority not to see how much work they can get done for nothing, but how little. Apparently, Mr. Grant is sick of the whole concern, for he has resigned his post. I am not surprised at his doing so. I am only surprised that he did not do so after the handbook trick was exposed. It has apparently taken him a long time to discover that the whole policy of the C.T.C. is to see how much it can get out of its members whether in work or money. At one time the club was no doubt useful. But nowadays cycling is so universal that all this system of consuls is perfect nonsense. If a man is going on a walking or a driving tour, he does not join a mysterious organisation in order to find a place wherein to sleep or eat. He has no need to do so. Nor is there any need to join any such association for the purposes of cycling. To a good many people the sign of the C.T.C. over a public house or an inn is a warning to go the other way. A correspondent who has had some conversation with hotel proprietors about the C.T.C. signs, tells me of one case in which a proprietor signed the agreement, but was glad enough to get rid of it. The C.T.C. rider expected everything for nothing, just like those in authority, and he was not the sort of customer that was wanted. This is not a solitary experience. The majority of innkeepers throughout the country are only too pleased to cater well and reasonably for cyclists. Even innkeepers will one day grow sick of communicating with the secretary and receiving stereotyped replies. And what a lot of money must be wasted annually in the postage of these stereotyped communications!

One never likes to prophesy about the result of the University match. The man who last gets his blue has a knack of making runs, and the cracks as miserably fail. Taking a line through the Sussex match it would look any odds on Cambridge. But then Bannon, Champain, Fenn, Foster, Martin, and the new bat, but old bowler, Cunliffe, can all make runs. The Light Blues undoubtedly have a much greater variety in bowling than their opponents, and yet they failed wretchedly at Lord's against the M.C.C. Mitchell gave one of those brilliant displays which show what a dangerous bat he is when set. Unfortunately for his cricket, he can spare but little time away from his work, and so he has had practically to abandon all hopes of keeping on first-class cricket. In that match Winter, with his lobs, was treated very gingerly by both batsmen, and it is quite likely he will come off in the excitement of a University match. The Cambridge second innings on a wicket that was tricky against the bowling of Attewell and Davidson was much more satisfactory. On a wicket that helps the bowlers it looks as though Cambridge would win. On a fast wicket the strong Oxford batting should give the Dark Blues an advantage. The weather and the toss will most likely be the chief factors in a close match.

Judging by the play in the Eton and Winchester match the former have a very strong batting team. Lord F. Scott and Longman both batted well, and time alone saved the Winchester boys from a beating.

Never was such a mistake made in declaring an innings closed as that which the Manor Park team made. They were playing Thornton's team and had scored 195 for seven wickets. There was seventy-five minutes left for play. A. J. Webbe almost at once got out for 4. But G. Kemp, the Old Blue, and C. W. Wright between them knocked up 200 runs in fifty minutes and won the match. Kemp made 120 and Wright 97. This is, I should think, a record rate of scoring.

There has been quite an excitement in the cricket world owing to the fact that umpires have at last been found who will no-ball bowlers whose action is euphemistically called peculiar or doubtful. At Brighton Phillips no-balled C. B. Fry, and at Tonbridge Warwick tried a new bowler, Hopkins, who was treated in the same way by Titchmarsh. He subsequently bowled at the other end. Peculiar action in bowling is now so common that it is just as well that some umpires are found strong enough to express their convictions. As an amateur and a professional have suffered, there can be little doubt but that these incidents will act as a salutary warning.

The Tonbridge week was in every way a success. There never was a team like a Kent team, so the dwellers in Kent say. Well, both Warwick and Somerset were beaten, and in both matches Patterson made his century. Woods, whose hand was bad, hit finely for the Western county. Yorkshire smothered Leicester, but they narrowly escaped a bad beating by Notts. Surrey, as usual, had bad luck. Rain alone prevented them giving Middlesex a beating. Brockwell had the honour of scoring two consecutive centuries. Townsend, by a big score for Gloucester against Lancashire, showed that, although he may not be a pretty bat, he can run up a lot of runs.

The Rev. W. E. Lutyens has been doing some splendid work on the path. In an open 1,000 yards at the St. Mary's Hospital sports, in a gale of wind he got within three seconds of record time. He followed this up in the L.A.C. half by doing just over 1 min. 57 secs. in wretched weather. In the quarter, Davison, who has run second string at Cambridge, did a fine performance, getting home in even time from the six yards' mark. This makes him three yards faster than either of the Cambridge runners this year. Jupp, who is the novice of the season, did a yard worse than evens in the hundred. He should go very near winning the championship. The L.A.C. looks like doing very well in the championships, which are held next Saturday on the club ground at Stamford Bridge. In the Ravensbourne sports Burnett won the hundred yards scratch for the third year in succession, and so secured the challenge cup outright.

It would be just as well next year if the time for the swimming races in the University match were to be fixed half an hour later. This year the events were half an hour late in starting. The delay was most annoying. For 8.15, the appointed hour, spoilt one's dinner. The Bath Club was not crowded. At the same time the amount of enthusiasm that can be got out of a bath full of tepid water would do the heart of Sir Wilfrid Lawson good. The swimming was not good, but it was close. It is a pity that a race is not won by the first man home instead of by points. All the races become team races. Oxford won the swimming, but the Cambridge men had their revenge in a poor game of water polo. They scored rapidly in the first few minutes owing to their opponents utterly failing to play together.

What would have been an interesting bicycle gymkhana at Ealing was spoiled by the weather. A musical ride by ladies was well carried out. There were a large number of entries for the usual events. The prizes were not very valuable. This was very satisfactory, as pot-hunting is not encouraged. There are sure signs that a class of amateur trick-riding cyclists, male and female, will soon arise who will not hesitate to go to open meetings to see what they can devour.

MAMMON.

From MOSES MOSS to BENJAMIN BOSS.

Sunday.

My dear Ben,—Members of the Stock Exchange are still complaining of the general absence of business, and certainly very few transactions have taken place during the nineteen-day account which has now come to an end. The financial oracles are racking their brains to find a reason for this disinclination of the public to enter the stock markets, when money is plentiful, and rates of discount have fallen to quite a nominal level, while there have not been wanting favourable developments in various departments.

Waiting for the Public—Who Will Give a Lead?

It is, in fact, difficult to account for the prevailing stagnation, except on the supposition that the warnings concerning foreign politics, in which Lord Salisbury and more especially Mr. Chamberlain indulged a few weeks ago, have taken so firm a hold of the public mind, that speculative action is thereby being prevented. Yet much has occurred since to undo the mischief wrought by ill-considered speeches. Lord Salisbury himself has made reassuring statements, Mr. Chamberlain has tried to explain away a portion of his utterances, the West African Convention has actually been signed, and at Wednesday's dinner at the Mansion House, to the bankers and merchants of the City of London, the Chancellor of the Exchequer went out of his way to reassure his hearers on the political outlook. The Governor of the Bank of England, moreover, on the same occasion spoke of the strength of the central institution, implying the continuance of cheap money. Possible friction over the Far Eastern question appears in fact to be the only disturbing factor, and it is not likely that this will reach an acute stage again for some time to come. The Spanish-American war has, of course, had something to do with the interruption of business, but now that an American army corps has successfully landed in Cuba, and is about to storm Santiago, it may be assumed that the end of the war is not far off. At all events, the coming defeat of Spain in this struggle is so clearly indicated that business in the United States is going on quite in the usual way, and excellent traffics of the railroads show that considerable progress is being made. The capture of Santiago will probably give a strong impulse to the Yankee market, which has been hardening up during the last few days, and possibly some of the other departments of the Stock Exchange will then also display some semblance of animation. But without a lead being given, either by some of the important financial houses or by the Stock Exchange, it is not likely that business can be got out of the rut into which it has fallen. The public never enter upon any large buying operations in a dull or falling market, and during the past account there has been a general shrinkage, which is certainly not encouraging to the "Bulls," although it has in many instances brought prices down to a level at which profitable operations could be entered into. This, I am sure, the jobbers in the various sections have realised, and if, for instance, the dealers in the South African department, instead of trooping into the Trunk market, and there causing a complete congestion, were to attend to their own specialties, they would probably find the public following suit, especially as a number of very satisfactory dividend announcements are illustrative of the satisfactory condition of many of the leading mines. Then, again, in the West Australian market some operators are depressing quotations whenever they get a chance, even in cases where the results achieved by the mines are most satisfactory. If they were to change their banging tactics for a policy of encouraging an improvement in the sound and dividend-paying mines, they would soon reap the benefit. Newspaper attacks, too, are made on various properties, which in good times would be simply disregarded. In times like the present, even if entirely unfounded, such attacks very often have the effect of frightening holders out of stocks at prices at which they will never be able to buy again. In the Home Railway department the only active stocks have been Dover "A" and Chathams on the pooling negotiations, although many other securities in this market are worthy of attention, especially in view of the coming dividend-period. In the Industrial section business has shrunk to very small dimensions, and here, too, a period of greater activity would appear to be justified. That is likely to come as soon as the big operators make a start, for the public have quite taken to the idea of home investments. Amongst South American stocks movements have been irregular, and Argentines at one time showed weakness on the rise in the gold premium, but a more favourable tendency has now set in, and will probably communicate itself to the rest of this department, notwithstanding the disagreeable impression created by the Brazilian funding scheme.

MONEY AND GILT-EDGED INVESTMENTS—CONTINUED PROSPECTS OF CHEAP MONEY.

The Governor of the Bank of England stated at the Mansion House dinner on Wednesday that, "like the public purse, the Bank of England was at that moment very strong, and he feared that he would not conciliate his friends, the bankers of London, by stating that for the next few months their profits would be very small." This, of course, clearly shows that those in authority anticipate cheap money for some time to come. At present the rate of discount for three months bank bills has fallen to $1\frac{1}{4}$ per cent, while short money is to be had at $\frac{3}{4}$ per cent, and it is significant that the usual hardening of rates at the end of the half-year is not apparent this time. In fact, with the turn of the month further large sums will be released in dividend-payments and in Japanese funds. There is still a demand for gold for Russia, but this is being satisfied in the open market, while New York is not at present asking for gold shipments. Under all the circumstances, gilt-edged investment securities may probably maintain present values, although there will not, perhaps, be any substantial advance. On the contrary, I should think that whenever matters revive on the Stock Exchange, second and third class securities will receive most attention. Consols at $111\frac{1}{8}$ appear to be quite high enough, and so are, for the matter of that, Colonial Government bonds and British Corporation stocks. Silver every now and then receives an impulse by purchases for the Spanish Government for coining purposes, and has again improved to $27\frac{5}{16}$d, while the forward quotation is $26\frac{7}{8}$d. Rupee Paper is steady at $62\frac{1}{8}$, and the last Chinese Four and a Half per Cent. Gold Loan is slightly easier at 88, the Seven per Cent. Silver Loan at 98. Japanese Scrip has receded to $101\frac{3}{4}$. I am glad to see that the Bank of New South Wales, one of the leading institutions which weathered the banking crisis in Australia so successfully, continues on its prosperous career. A dividend for the half year ended March 31 has been paid at the rate of 9 per cent., out of the total profits of £104,692, a sum of £16,942 being carried forward.

HOME RAILS—MORE ABOUT THE SOUTH-EASTERN AND CHATHAM—AN IRREGULAR TONE.

Although an official statement has not yet been made as regards the terms of the proposed working arrangement between the South-Eastern and Chatham Companies, there is no doubt that some agreement is upon the point of being concluded. The Times is responsible for the statement that both boards have come to the conclusion that there is a wasteful expenditure, which nothing can arrest short of a working arrangement in relation to all branches of traffic on the two systems, and that it is therefore proposed that next session a Bill should be introduced providing for the constitution of an executive committee, which shall have absolute control over both railways, the affairs of the Companies being directed by one staff from a common centre. If this is the true version of the coming arrangement, it does not, as I anticipated, extend to an amalgamation, but will consist of the closest form of working arrangement possible. It is calculated that at least £100,000 per annum will be saved as the first result of the new arrangement, and this may well be so; but it should not be forgotten that the matter cannot be carried out until next year, so that the savings are somewhat in the future. I have so repeatedly urged the carrying-out of some such scheme, and have broken so many lances in its favour, that the success of the negotiations would give me the most lively satisfaction. One may, however, predict that the delay until next year will afford excellent opportunities for speculation to the jobbers in the Home Railway Market. Dover "A" have fluctuated somewhat, and are now quoted $114\frac{3}{4}$, while Chatham Ordinary stand at $22\frac{7}{8}$, the Second Prefs. at $102\frac{1}{2}$. On the principle of making hay while the sun shines, the Chatham Company has availed itself of the opportunity to make an issue of £300,000 of Debenture stock, which has been readily absorbed. Brighton "A" have been very steady in the neighbourhood of $177\frac{1}{4}$, while Great Eastern show very little change at $120\frac{7}{8}$. The stocks of the Heavy division have reacted slightly, but as stock continues scarce there is every prospect of a fresh improvement, now that we are in sight of the half-yearly dividends, which should, upon the whole, prove satisfactory when it is considered that there is already a total traffic increase of £635,000. North-Western, at all events, at anything like $199\frac{3}{4}$, seems to be deserving of the attention of investors. Great Central 1894 Ordinary have receded to 40, notwithstanding the announcement that the line will be opened for coal traffic on July 25. It is the fashion with some people to decry the Great Central, and to create the impression that the new extension will not obtain satisfactory traffics. I think that the contrary will be the case, and that this stock is a good lock-up. The line would, by the way, benefit greatly from coal traffic if the South Wales coal strike were not yet ended by the time it opened. Metropolitan have been fairly steady at $130\frac{1}{2}$, but Districts have declined to $28\frac{1}{2}$, there being a cessation of the talk about the introduction of electric traction. A traffic decrease of £2,779 for the week is, of course, the result of the comparison with Jubilee week last year, but it nevertheless represents a loss to the Company. The Scotch annual holidays commence next month, and preparatory to the cessation of business then to be expected there has been quite a rush of work. In the shipbuilding trade there is no lack of orders, the various yards being taxed to the utmost extent of their capacity. Iron and steel works are also busy, although the iron market is easier. Prospects are reported as favourable from Glasgow, and continued traffic increases of the Caledonian and North British are looked for. So far the Caledonian has an increase of £36,229, the North British one of £46,004. Caledonian Deferred Ordinary at 58¼, and North British Deferred at 45⅛ are meeting with a fair inquiry. As I anticipated, the official announcement is now made of the return of the subscriptions by the Great Northern and City Railway. It remains to be seen whether the Great Northern Company will take steps to either find the necessary capital itself, or make an issue under its guarantee. Waterloo and City stock fell at one time as low as 114½, but has now recovered to 122½, and there certainly does not appear to have been any reason for the persistent slump. Central London Railway stocks have shown a firm tone at the recent reduction, some business being reported at about 10 for the fully-paid Ordinary.

LONDON AND PARIS EXCHANGE, LTD., 24, Throgmorton-street, London, E.C. This Corporation is prepared to make Advances on Mining Shares, at 6 per cent. per annum, subject to a deposit of 20 per cent. Clients by this system save the heavy contangoes usually charged.

Yankee Rails—The American Advance on Santiago Strengthens the Market.

The fact that the American troops landed in Cuba with very little difficulty, and that their advance upon Santiago has been so rapid, has caused very sanguine views to prevail with reference to the early capture of that city. It confirms the impression created by the battle at Manila that whenever a strong attack upon Spanish positions is made the latter tumble to pieces. To these considerations a moderate improvement in Yankee Rails was due, but the recent reaction has by no means been recovered yet by this movement, and there is, therefore, ample room for a rise, especially as the position generally is most satisfactory. The exports of foodstuffs and manufactured articles from the States continue to largely exceed the imports, and according to all accounts crop prospects are excellent, wheat more especially promising a very large yield. The grain market is, moreover, settling down now that the Leiter collapse has been got over, and it appears that Mr. Armour has acquired a large proportion of the stock of wheat. Cable reports from the West are to the effect that the liquidation of stocks caused by the Leiter trouble has come to an end, and that Chicago is likely to go on the "Bull" tack in railroad stocks. This would mean that Chicago and Milwaukee would again come to the front. It is true that the last weekly traffic of this road showed a slight decrease of $15,000, but too much attention should not be given to this circumstance, when it is considered that the road has already earned $3,700,000 more this year than last. The comparison is, moreover, with heavy traffics last year, and if the Milwaukee merely maintains last year's traffics a dividend of nearly 8 per cent. will be earned on the Ordinary stock, and when the new crop comes forward in August bumper traffics will doubtless be the rule again. A great point is also that the farmers along the road have never been so rich as they are now. According to a statement in the New York Journal of Commerce, the Milwaukee is a large carrier of spring wheat. The acreage planted with this grain this year will be materially increased by from 10 to 15 per cent., and the crop has been favoured with ideal weather. But there has also been a marked increase in recent years in the growth of manufactures in the territory tributary to the road, and it is less dependent than ever upon the transportation of cereals. The same may be said of the other Granger roads. Nevertheless, this year's agricultural prospects have a most important bearing upon the prosperity not only of these lines, but of the whole country. In the big "boom" years, 1880 and 1881, the farm value of all wheat was 95·1 cents, and $1.19·2 per bushel respectively. In 1880 a crop of 500 million bushels yielded a value of 475 millions in round figures. In 1881 a crop of 383 million bushels yielded about 456 millions value. Under these circumstances the present price of Milwaukee appears to be fully justified, and, according to the dividends paid, there would be a margin for a rise. As regards the Louisville and Nashville, nothing more is heard now of the yellow fever "bogey," and the line continues to do exceedingly well. There is no doubt that dividends could now be resumed, and Wall street newspapers to hand by this mail mention a rumour that the Company is about to restore the 10 per cent. reduction in wages made in 1893, and at the same time to resume dividends on a 3 per cent. basis by the declaration of a 1½ per cent. dividend. This could easily be done, for notwithstanding the fact that the Company has spent large sums upon the improvement of the road, there is a considerable surplus. The following is the statement of gross and net earnings for the ten months :—

June 1 to April 30.

	1898.	1897.
Gross earn.....	$18,264,643	$17,027,621	Inc.	$1,237,022
Op. expenses	12,234,104	11,532,567	Inc.	701,537
Net earnings	$6,030,539	$5,495,054	Inc.	$535,485

It is really time that the Directors of the Louisville and Nashville should give their earnest attention to this matter, as they are losing the popularity which they enjoyed at one time by putting money into betterments which ought to go to the shareholders in dividends. As I have already stated, the Louisville is considered as an English-managed line, and dividends should be paid to the shareholders when they are earned, as they are in the present case. It is reported in American journals that Mr. Milton H. Smith, the President, is opposed to the resumption of dividends; but what is Mr. August Belmont—Chairman of the Board and agent for Messrs. Rothschild—about that he does not look after the interests of the stockholders? At the present price of 53¾ Louisville seem to be a fair purchase. Concerning the Union Pacific there is very little doubt that a dividend on the Preference stock is close at hand, and in that case we may look for a considerable advance also in the Common. This is what the Wall-street Daily News has to say on the subject:—

> Union Pacific Preferred have sold up to 62⅜, the highest price since February 2 last, when it touched 63⅜. The transactions in it were quite large, and the buying was mainly based on the unconfirmed rumour that dividends would be begun in July at the rate of 4 per cent. per annum. There is no question but that the Company is in shape to begin disbursements of profits to stockholders, but as yet there is nothing authoritative as to the time when these will be inaugurated. Mr. Keene is credited with being the moving spirit in these shares, and as is customary with him when he takes hold of a stock, he makes it quite active. His following is predicting much higher prices, and claims that when the stock slumped from 63 to 45 last March, it was absorbed by strong people, who now see their way clear to advancing the price to a basis justified by the company's earnings and dividend prospects.

Particulars of the reorganisation scheme of the Baltimore and Ohio are now published, and it is conceded on all hands that the plan is a complete one, and deals fairly with the various interests involved, while, from the point of view of investors in Europe, it is a satisfactory point that the assessment of $20 on the Common stock will fall chiefly on American holders, as very little of this stock is held on this side. It is true that a fall of $5 has taken place in the Common stock, but this is, perhaps, chiefly on sales by holders who cannot afford to pay the assessment. As the stockholders are to receive a quid pro quo in new Preference stock, they will do well to retain their holdings. The reorganisation is made under the auspices of Messrs. J. S. Morgan & Co., J. P. Morgan & Co., Baring Bros. & Co., and Brown, Shipley, & Co., while Messrs. Speyer & Co., and Kuhn, Loeb, & Co., of New York, and Messrs. Speyer Bros., in London, are more particularly in charge of the scheme. It will readily be seen, therefore, that the scheme is strongly backed, and so far there has not been a breath of opposition to it. On the contrary, the various bond issues have risen from $1 to $5. The scheme provides for the payment of the floating debt, and for the unification of the whole debt on the system of roads owned by the Company. The new securities to be issued will comprise $70,000,000 Three and a Half per Cent. Prior Lien bonds, secured on the main line; $63,000,000 Four per Cent. Mortgage bonds, secured by a first mortgage on all the property not covered by the Prior Liens; $40,000,000 Four per Cent. Non-Cumulative Preferred stock; and $35,000,000 Common stock. An assessment of $20 is to be levied on the present Common stock—which amounts to $25,000,000—an equal amount of Preferred being given in return. The annual fixed charges under the plan (including taxes) will be $6,250,000, and it is estimated that the net revenue of the current fiscal year, ending June 30, will be $7,975,000. A large reserve will be provided for future capital requirements. A syndicate has been formed to provide more than $30,000,000 of cash called for by the reorganisation scheme, and a voting trust will control the property for five years. Stock and bond holders will do well to assent to the plan and to at once deposit their securities. The new stocks are already being dealt in, and have attained very satisfactory prices. Thus the new Baltimore and Ohio Prior Lien bonds are quoted 96, the new First Mortgage bonds 88½, the new Preferred stock 57⅛. The Grand Trunk market has again been much perturbed by an unfavourable traffic return, which showed a decrease of £7,821. A slump in all Grand Trunk stocks followed, but there is a good deal of vitality in this market, and quotations have rallied again, although it is being realised that the old bumper traffics can no longer be looked for. My readers have, however, been fully prepared for the reactions which have occurred, and even now I do not think that Grand Trunk First Prefs. at 71¾ and the Guaranteed at 77¼ are a desirable speculation, although they may come right in the end. The Canadian Pacific traffic return was much more satisfactory, as it showed a gain of $13,000, and came on the top of a big traffic of 1897 over 1896, representing an increase of $99,000 over the corresponding week of two years ago. The price has rallied to 87, but has since eased off to 86½, although a further advance is likely, especially as there are renewed rumours that the rate war is about to be settled. Sir William Van Horne has arrived at Montreal from this side, and it is assumed that we shall soon hear of some favourable developments, in accordance with a promise which he made on this side.

FOREIGNERS AND SOUTH AMERICANS—TWO CLASSES OF SPANISH BONDS—WILL THE "BEARS" BE SQUEEZED?

The course of the foreign market, in a great measure, depended upon the solution of the Cabinet crisis in Paris. M. Peytral did not succeed, but M. Brisson has been more fortunate. The Bourse has not troubled itself much about the matter, and in due time it may be expected to become more active. What troubles it just now most is the decision of the Spanish Government that the coupon on Spanish Fours is only to be paid in future on foreign-held bonds. This really constitutes two classes of bonds, and makes the market in Paris and in London for the bonds much smaller, while it will also tend against further sales of Spanish-held bonds on the Foreign Bourses and in London. There is here, therefore, considerable material for a "Bear" squeeze in Spanish, which have been fluctuating between 34 and 35, and now stand at 33⅞. Spanish, moreover, are a bad "Bear," as at any time peace rumours may be set about, especially after Santiago has fallen. Considering that a Cabinet crisis is in progress in Rome, Italians have held up remarkably well at about 92⅞, and Turks have also remained steady, Group II. having improved to 45¾. Argentine Government stocks have shown weakness on a rise in the gold premium, which is said to be connected with the payment of the July coupon, but towards the last there has been a rally, the 1886 Loan being quoted 90¾, the Funding Loan 88, Buenos Ayres Water and Drainage bonds 71¾. Argentine Railway stocks have also shown dulness, Buenos Ayres Great Southern at 140, Buenos Ayres and Rosario at 71½, Central Argentine at 79½, Cordoba Central (Central Northern Section) Income Debenture stock at 51½. Mexican Sixes have displayed strength, while Brazilians have again moved fitfully on the opposition to the funding scheme. Peruvian Corporation stocks have been firm. Mexican Rails have shown a good deal of strength, the First Prefs. being quoted 75. Compared with these the Seven per Cent. "A" Debenture stock of the Inter-Oceanic of Mexico, which is pretty certain of a dividend of 4 per cent. for the current year, may be considered very cheap at 69½. I gave full particulars of the comparative merits in last week's issue. The rise in silver is of course in favour of all Mexican securites.

THE KAFFIR CIRCUS—A BATCH OF SATISFACTORY DIVIDENDS—AN INCIPIENT IMPROVEMENT.

The present dulness of the Kaffir Circus is an absolute anomaly when we take into consideration the satisfactory crushings which are announced from month to month, and the large dividends which are being earned and declared. Of political trouble one does not hear much, and the defeat of the Cape Government has been received with indifference. In fact, any change is expected to be for the better as far as the South African market is concerned. A batch of dividends of the Barnato group has been more particularly refreshing, and the shareholders in the New Primrose have every reason to congratulate themselves upon a dividend of 25 per cent., while the Glencairn Main Reef re-enters the dividend list with an interim dividend of 15 per cent. Two more Barnato companies are to the front with dividends, viz., the Ginsberg with 20 per cent., and the Rietfontein "A" with 15 per cent. In view of these announcements the recent weakness of Johannesburg Consolidated Investment shares is difficult to understand, and even their present price of 1 5/16 is undoubtedly far below the real value. Some comments having been made concerning the possible loss that might accrue to the Johnnies Company out of the loan to the Buffelsdoorn, Messrs. Barnato Brothers, in order to show that they will do their utmost to bring the Johnnies Company to the front, have guaranteed the latter against any loss arising out of this transaction. It is evident, moreover, that the strenuous efforts which have been made by those in charge of the Barnato group to place the mines on a thoroughly sound basis are now bearing fruit. The dividends above referred to already furnish evidence of this fact. The New Primrose again maintains its character for high returns, and is now on a 50 per cent. dividend-paying basis, while there is every prospect of increased dividends in the near future. The profits for the twelve months just closed amounted to £151,353, being an increase on 1896, which was chiefly caused by the reduction in working costs, which have fallen from 24s. ·885d. to 18s. ·811d. per ton, while on the other hand the yield from milling and cyanide has improved. The New Primrose has, in common with the Glencairn, suffered from a shortage of Native labour, and Mr. Harold Strange draws special attention to the fact that a loss of £300 per week has been experienced through the inefficient administration of the Liquor Law. As regards the Glencairn, the interim dividend of 15 per cent. already mentioned will no doubt gradually be increased. The mine has passed through some trying experiences, but it is now well on the road to success. The average yield of gold per ton since the resumption of crushings has been 7·65 dwt. The yield per ton was 21·60ls., the working costs 17·323s., so that a profit of 10s. per ton has been obtained from low-grade ore, a result which reflects great credit on the mine management. Of course, the payment of the dividend was really rendered possible by the issue of debentures. It may be assumed that if there had not been any labour trouble the returns would have been much better, as it was impossible to use fifty of the stamps on account of the shortage of "boys." The Ginsberg Company, another member of the Barnato group, has also obtained satisfactory results. The yield per ton of 61,372 tons crushed, inclusive of cyanide returns, was 44·347s. The working costs were 19·723s., and the profit was consequently 24·624s. per ton. The grade of ore practically averaged 12 dwt. to the ton, and thus the anticipations have been fully realised. The result is a gross profit of £76,836. The Johannesburg Estate has announced a dividend of 2½ per cent., the Witwatersrand Gold Mining Company (Knights), is to the front with an interim dividend of 15 per cent., the Geldenhuis Deep, with an interim dividend of 30 per cent., while the Ferreira again pays a dividend of 150 per cent., the Stanhope 10 per cent. Simmer and Jack have been a strong market, advancing to 3⅞, while East Rands have also maintained a firm front at $4\frac{13}{16}$, the only weak share having at one time been Consolidated Goldfields, but these have now also recovered to $4\frac{5}{16}$. This is not surprising, as Simmer and Jack, in which the Company has so large a holding, are firming up. Rand Mines, Limited, have displayed great strength, and remain in the neighbourhood of $29\frac{5}{8}$. No one is nowadays inclined to go on the "Bear" tack in these shares, which may at any time experience a sharp advance in view of the excellent prospects of the Deep Level mines owned by the Company. The Deep Level shares generally have been in demand, and prices are firmer, Goldfields Deep having improved to $8\frac{1}{2}$, while Crown Deep are quoted $11\frac{3}{4}$, Robinson Deep $9\frac{1}{2}$, Geldenhuis Deep $7\frac{7}{8}$, Rose Deep $6\frac{1}{8}$, Henry Nourse Deep 5, Durban Roodepoort Deep $3\frac{9}{16}$, Knight's Deep $1\frac{15}{16}$, Roodepoort Central Deep $1\frac{1}{4}$, Nigel Deep 1. Chartered shares have been dull at one time, recovering, however, to $2\frac{5}{16}$. Much interest is taken in the coming crushing of the Geelong, which is to prove the gold-bearing nature of the Chartered Company's property. It is a pity that there is so much delay. I think the Directors of the New African Company, Limited, would be well advised in accepting the recommendation of the meeting held on 27th instant to increase the representation of the English shareholders by the election of another English Director. Where the majority of the shares of the Company are held in England it is a ridiculous position that only one seat on the Board should be accorded to the English shareholders, while the French shareholders, who hold only about a quarter of the capital, should hold the remaining three seats. It is an excellent thing for the Company that it should have a Board composed of English and French elements, but it is, of course, necessary that there should be an equitable representation. A fall in De Beers is ascribed by some to a mud-rush, by others to the closing of a big block of shares. Whatever may have been the reason, the price touched at one time 26, and is $\frac{9}{16}$ lower for the week at $26\frac{11}{16}$. New Jagersfontein stand at $7\frac{1}{4}$. Rates at Saturday's carry-over were upon the whole light, with the exception chiefly of Consolidated Goldfields, on which 5 to 7 per cent. was exacted. On the other hand, Rand Mines and East Rands were carried over at 4 to 6 per cent., and on other mines the contangoes varied from 3 to 5 per cent. The extent of the account was shown to be exceedingly small, and there is a disposition to look for an early advance in prices.

GOLDEN WEST AUSTRALIA—HANNAN'S PROPERTIES PROMINENT—"BEAR" AND OTHER ATTACKS.

In times like the present, when the public are out of the markets and the investor sits on the fence or on his cash-box, undue importance is attached to attacks either in the Press or in the Stock Exchange upon this or that property. After recent speculative collapses even the strongest groups have to sustain these raids, and some of the jobbers in the "Kangaroo" department are only too pleased to lend themselves to the depreciation of such shares. These tactics may be effective for the present, but the time will come when they will recoil upon the originators. The advice I should like to give to those who hold shares in sound and substantial properties and finance companies is not to allow themselves to be frightened out, but to sit tight, and if they can afford to do so and to take the shares up, to average. In the meantime, even the most enterprising of "Bears" have been unable to depress the shares in leading Hannan's properties to any extent. In fact, if rumour be correct, the ursine party have been badly caught in Golden Horseshoes, which have advanced to $10\frac{3}{8}$, reacting, however, to $9\frac{15}{16}$, Lake View Consols stand at 9, Ivanhoe at $6\frac{5}{16}$, and although Hannan's Brownhill have reacted to 8, anyone selling a "Bear" of these shares would at present give hostages to fortune, as within the next fortnight the announcement of large crushings with the new machinery erected by the London and Hamburg Gold Recovery Corporation may be expected. Then there is the Great Boulder Proprietary Company, the shares in which have declined to 17s. 6d. on a somewhat acrimonious discussion of the promotion of the Boulder Milling and Mining Company, which is to treat the tailings of the Great Boulder. The directors have now issued a circular to the shareholders, and for my part I should think that it would be far the best plan to leave the matter to them, as being chiefly interested. The list of crushings is not a particularly long one for the past week, but it contains some important results. It is as follows:—

	Tons of Ore Crushed.	Oz. of Gold.	Assay of Tailings Per Ton.
Great Boulder Proprietary ...	1,440	3,025	—
Peak Hill Goldfield	346	1,258	—
Red Hill Gold Syndicate ...	5 cwt	550	—
Premier	472	516	—
Bayley's United (Tailings) ...	890	946	—
Belle Vue Proprietary	493	872	—
Hannan's Crœsus	52	53	—
Sugar Loaf (25 Mile)	53	155	$7\frac{1}{2}$ dwts.
Queensland Menzies	230	577	—
Brownhill Central	10	25	—

The Peak Hill return will at once attract attention. It is described as the result of treating by battery amalgamation only 346 tons of kaolin and quartz ore in their natural proportions, the yield being 1,258 oz. of smelted gold. The cablegram adds that the mill was immediately restarted on 500 tons of ore, and that a rich body of ore in the 120-ft. level has been struck. The Peak Hill Goldfield is the property which has more particularly been discussed in connection with alluvial mining, but the statements which found their way into the press concerning the "jumping" of the property have been grossly exaggerated, and there is reason for stating that a little clique in Perth (W.A.) did their very best to encourage a few alluvial diggers to make an attack on the Company, and to exaggerate this attack in reports which found their way to this country in order to engineer a "Bear" campaign. In this they have been unsuccessful, as shown by the present price of the shares of $2\frac{5}{8}$. Neither can it be said that this is a "rigged" market, as there are about 800 shareholders on the register, and at the carry-over the contango of 8 per cent. eased off to a sixpenny backwardation. It will be remembered that the Hon. E. H. Wittenoom, now on his way to this country to assume the duties of Agent-General, when the attack of the alluvial diggers was made, introduced a temporary regulation that alluvial diggers should not go below 10 ft. This has since been repealed, but the question must be dealt with in a complete manner. A Royal Commission has recently reported in Perth (W.A.), on the subject, and the following were its recommendations:—

1. That in future holders of leases for claims shall be entitled to all the gold within their boundaries.

2. That no leases be granted over exclusively alluvial ground, and that before any application for a lease is approved a careful inspection be made by the Government to ascertain whether the ground is likely to prove alluvial.

3. That, subject to the general principles of the foregoing recommendations, no lease be granted within twelve months from the passing of the proposed Amendments Act at the present goldfields where alluvial gold is known to exist, and that no lease be issued for future goldfields for twelve months after the proclamation of the field.

4. That alluvial gold be defined as all gold except that found in a seam, lode, dyke, vein, or quartz reef.

These recommendations, however, in no way solve the question. To begin with, it is imperative that the West Australian Government should safeguard the absolute security of English capital invested in mining properties in the Colony, and the security of the leases is the one condition upon which British capital would be forthcoming for the development of the country. Having consulted some experts on the subject, I am enabled to place the following suggestions before my readers, with regard precisely to the recommendations of the Commission:—

No. 1.—That the amendment of the Act should protect present leaseholders as well as all future leaseholders from any interference whatever from alluvial miners, and that the leases granted should give the owner an absolute title to all the gold within his boundaries, if the amended Act cannot be made retrospective, it should at any rate be made retrospective after a year has elapsed, during which time the alluvial miners may be able to exercise any of the rights that they now possess.

No. 2.—The granting of leases should certainly not be restricted on alluvial or any other ground. The country is large enough to give all the scope that is necessary to the nomadic tribe of alluvial diggers, and the more they are driven out of the centres that have become occupied by bonâ fide leaseholders, the more quickly will the country become opened up and developed, as they will be forced to go into pastures new. The Government had certainly better not interfere in the question of inspecting properties for determining whether alluvial exists.

No. 3.—If properly carried out this suggestion does not call for comment, as long as the nature of alluvial gold is properly defined.

No. 4.—It is thought that the only one thing that will bring peace and prosperity to Western Australia, having regard to what has been stated under No. 1, will be to frame Clause No. 4 in such a way that no gold shall be defined as alluvial below 10 ft. from the surface of the ground, and that no gold shall be considered alluvial that is contained within a matrix of quartz, cement, kaolin, or any other material which requires blasting, shooting, or crushing for the purpose of obtaining the gold. That really is what practically governs alluvial ground in Western Australia that can be of any service to the alluvial digger. The colony should not be legislated for as though it were a country which had been subject to the glacial period, and so forth, where rivers had been running centuries ago, and river beds had gradually accumulated immense alluvial deposits hundreds of feet below the present surface. No such state of affairs exists in Western Australia, and therefore the mining laws should not make the position ambiguous and uncertain by seeking to give opportunities to alluvial diggers for finding gold where it is known that it does not exist.

I feel sure that Sir John Forrest and the West Australian Government will duly weigh the important questions which are involved in the future mining regulations in the Colony. From the Golden Ridge Proprietary the discovery of a well-defined lode between walls of diorite is reported. From the Red Hill (West Australian) Gold Syndicate a cablegram sent by the manager states that 5 cwt. of ore cleaned up for 550 oz., and that pyrites rich in gold assaying 55 oz. per ton have been struck. The question is, of course, how much of this class of ore is obtainable, and whether it is merely a "pocket" or a reef. The West Australian Market Trust group has been steady, the shares of the Trust being quoted 1s. 9d., Northern Terrors $\frac{15}{16}$, West Australian Joint Stock Trust and Loan and General Finance $\frac{11}{16}$. Notices have been issued convening a joint meeting of the shareholders in the West Australian Joint Stock Trust and Finance Corporation and the West Australian Loan and General Finance Corporation, for the purpose of hearing a statement as to the position and future policy of the companies, and of considering the principle of consolidation of the two undertakings by means of an amalgamation scheme. It is stated that there is to be no assessment upon the shares. It would undoubtedly be desirable to bring about a consolidation of these shares, and more especially it is to be hoped that the Founders' will be merged in the others. In view of the various false and malicious rumours which have been propagated, an announcement has been made by the Directors of the London and Globe Finance Corporation to the effect that the Company has had a very prosperous year, that the balance-sheet will show handsome profits, and that a further dividend will be declared in due course. These shares are quoted 21s. 6d. to 22s., and I strongly advise holders not to part with them at these prices. Lady Shentons have been steady at $2\frac{1}{8}$ to $2\frac{1}{4}$, and it is rumoured that the next crushings will be even better than recent returns, in which case we shall no doubt see a further improvement. With reference to the Florence Mine the announcement is made that the clean-up from the plates for a yield of 131 oz. of gold refers to the bullion left on the plates from the ore crushed from other companies, which now reverts to the Florence, and the intention exists of crushing from the Company's own reef, which, as my readers are aware, is the Lady Shenton lode. This means that an early trial crushing of the Company's own ore on its 5-stamp battery is promised. Associated Gold Mines have improved to $3\frac{13}{16}$, and West Australian Goldfields have been fairly steady at $1\frac{1}{8}$, while Hampton Plains are dull at $\frac{1}{2}$. Londonderry have attracted a little more attention, being quoted 3s. 9d., and some business has transpired in Hannan's Props. at 10s. 3d. In both shares an advance is probable. The Sons of Gwalia mine is doing well, and the shares are firm at $1\frac{7}{8}$. It is strange that East Murchison United, now quoted $\frac{1}{8}$, should not yet have gone ahead. At Saturday's carry-over rates were lower than last time, ranging from 6 to 9 per cent. In fact, Golden Horseshoes were arranged at even, and Ivanhoe at 8 per cent, while London and Globe, on which the charge was at first heavy, finally eased off to 2 per cent. There is certainly no unwieldy account open in this market, and any recommencement of active purchases would doubtless produce a rise. By the way, there at last appears to be a prospect of Perth W.A. being equipped with an electric tramway. A concession was granted some months ago, but the concessionaires quarrelled amongst themselves, and the project ended in lawsuits. I am now told, however, that the concession has been taken over by responsible people, who have every intention of constructing the line. Had Perth been in America or in South Africa, it would no doubt already have been provided with an electric tramway some years ago. I certainly should think that a properly managed electric tramway in the very progressive capital of Western Australia would pay well if not over-capitalised.

INDIAN, AUSTRALASIAN, AND OTHER MINES.

In the Indian section transactions have been few and far between, and prices have eased off, with the exception of Mysore Reefs, which have improved. Ooregum and Mysore Gold, however, are lower. In Australian mines, other than West Australian, Aladdin's Lamp have been firmer, and there has been an improvement in Wentworth. On the other hand, Mount Lyell have continued to show great weakness, owing to the rumour mentioned last week, and quotations are again lower at 8 for Mount Lyell, while Mount Lyell North are down to $1\frac{11}{16}$, Mount Lyell South to $\frac{15}{16}$, Mount Lyell West to $\frac{7}{16}$. Mount Morgan have been steady at $4\frac{11}{16}$. In New Zealand mines Woodstock are firmer at $\frac{3}{4}$, and Waihi have hardened; but Taitapu, United New Zealand Exploration, and Waitekauri Extended are all lower. In British Columbian mines changes have been few and in the downward direction, Klondyke Mining, Trading, and Transport, and Klondyke Bonanza, and Klondyke North Western Territories having given way. British America Corporation shares have been unduly depressed, as advices from the Company's properties continue very satisfactory. The latest advices from the Le Roi Mine are to the effect that an entirely new ore chute has been struck at the west end of the 600 ft. level, which proves to be between 6 ft. and 12 ft. wide, and is described as of the same character as the ore found in the old chute, assaying from $20 to $30 in gold, and 4 per cent. in copper. It is added that the showing in the bottom of the shaft is the finest that has ever been disclosed in the mine, so that the property evidently gets richer as they sink deeper. Considerable interest has been aroused by the flotation of another British Columbian Company, viz., the Associated Gold Mines of British Columbia, with a capital of £500,000. The extent of the properties acquired by this Company is very large, the schedule of ninety-six properties covering 4,900 acres of auriferous ground in various districts, and if these have been carefully selected, it is more than probable that a large number will prove very valuable.

AN AUSTRALIAN EDEN—THE SEQUEL.

I am glad to see that my repeated strictures under the above heading, in which I urged some measure of compensation to settlers on the Mildura properties—whereby so many British and Colonial investors have been victimised through Messrs. Chaffey Bros., are at last bearing fruit. Not that the measure now proposed is at all an adequate one, but it at least shows a disposition on the part of the Colony of Victoria to recognise its responsibility in regard to an enterprise which was ostensibly carried on with its fulest sanction. Sir Andrew Clarke, Agent-General for Victoria, has now received a despatch from the Premier of that Colony, stating, with regard to the question of the issue of Crown grants to settlers at Mildura, who paid Messrs. Chaffey

Bros. in full for their land, but who failed to obtain titles, that he proposes to introduce a Bill into Parliament to authorise the issue of Crown grants to those persons and other purchasers who paid in full for their land. Any such persons as above mentioned must, if they have not already done so, at once apply to be included in the provisions of the proposed Bill, otherwise no claim on their account can be recognised. I draw the special attention of readers of TRUTH to this announcement, to which I hope, in the interests of the victims, every publicity will be given.

THE JUBILEE SELECT VIEWS AND LUNCHEON SYNDICATE, LIMITED.

Under this title a Company was started last year for the purpose of dealing in window seats, &c., on the route of the Royal Procession on Jubilee Day, with a capital of £10,000. Unlike the various Jubilee and Commemoration Syndicates, this enterprise hid its light under a bushel, with the result that very little is known concerning it. That, however, has not prevented those connected with this Syndicate obtaining money from the public, and I have before me particulars of a case in which the sum of £25 was remitted for twenty-five shares of £1 each. On examination of the register at Somerset House only the names of the usual seven signatories are found as original subscribers, six of whom are clerks, while the seventh is Thomas Fenwick. My correspondent has never been able to get a statement of affairs either from the secretary or directors, with the exception of a letter, dated March 22, in which Mr. Thomas Fenwick stated that although it is true he was a director of the Company his connection with it ceased several months before. He further stated that the sum subscribed by the public was very small, amounting to only two or three hundred pounds, and that this was expended in securing premises, no balance remaining to pay the cost of winding up, as the seats in some instances were let for only a few shillings each. Then followed on April 30 an offer from T. Fenwick & Co., of 63-64, New Broad-street, E.C., of two debentures of the Patent Gas Enrichment Syndicate, Limited, in order to make good the loss in the Jubilee Syndicate above referred to. This offer my correspondent very wisely declined, and on looking at the prospectus of the Patent Gas Enrichment Syndicate I have come to the conclusion that an investment in it is certainly most undesirable. Mr. Fenwick, however, will hardly get off so easily with reference to the Jubilee Select Views and Luncheon Syndicate, Limited. It is all very well to resign from the board, but he and his co-Directors are still responsible for the money obtained from the public. The Directors are A. McAuslane, Northolme, Highgate, London, N.; and T. Fenwick, 63-64, New Broad-street, London, E.C. The bankers are stated in the prospectus as the Economic Bank, Limited, 34, Old Broad-street, E.C.; contractors and grand stand builders, W. Humphrys & Son, Peckham Rye, London, S.E.; secretary, L. White, and the offices, 63, New Broad-street, London, E.C. I hope that the other shareholders who have been victimised in this Syndicate will at once take measures to call the directors to account, and it may be as well mentioned that Mr. T. Fenwick has been connected with a number of badly-conceived or undesirable promotions, such as the Insurances Corporation, the Merchants' Fire Office, the Non-Tariff Mutual Fire Insurance Company, &c. These have not by any means proved gold mines for the investor, and under the circumstances the heading of the prospectus of the Patent Gas Enrichment Syndicate, "Not a gold mine thousands of miles away, but should prove a gold mine in London," is particularly refreshing.

NEW ENTERPRISES AND ISSUES.

The prospectuses of the following new enterprises and issues have been placed before the public during the week:—

The Associated Gold Mines of British Columbia, Limited.—This Company is formed to acquire ninety-six promising mining properties in British Columbia, a large majority of which are gold mines, to acquire, as opportunities offer, other mining properties, and to carry on the business of transport and trading; also to form subsidiary Companies, to take over mining properties as they are developed, or any other business established by this Company. The capital is fixed at £500,000, in shares of £1 each, of which 125,000 are set aside for the provision of working capital. The present issue is of 205,000 shares.

This Company has acquired large properties, and some of the mines thereon have machinery already erected. The purchase price, £375,000, should not prove excessive when the number and importance of the claims are considered. Another source of profit will arise from the trading and transport business, and the Board is a strong one, so that the possibilities of the Company are considerable.

The Wolverhampton and Dudley Breweries, Limited.—This is an issue of £100,000 Four per Cent. Irredeemable "A" Mortgage Debenture Stock at par. The Company was incorporated in 1890, with a share capital of £150,000 in Preference and Ordinary shares of £10 each, and an issue of Four and a Half per Cent. First Mortgage Debentures of £100,000. Since the incorporation of the Company, dividends varying from 5 to 8 per cent. have been paid on the Ordinary shares, while over £27,000 has been written off for repairs, &c., £16,000 for depreciation, and a reserve fund of £20,600 has also been accumulated.

The Southport Opera House and Winter Gardens, Limited.—This Company has been formed for the purpose of acquiring a freehold property in Southport known as the Southport Winter Gardens, including the Opera House, Circus, Pavilion, Aquarium, Conservatories, and shop properties, &c. The share capital is fixed at £150,000, in Preference and Ordinary shares of £1 each, and an issue of £100,000 Four per Cent. Debenture stock, of which £75,000 is now offered for subscription.

The promoters of this concern appear to be depending upon outside support to make it a success. They must not forget that Blackpool, with many more attractions, is but a few miles off, and will always command the larger portion of visitors. The support from the town itself can be but small, as there are only about 42,000 inhabitants. The capital, too, is excessive.

The Continental Sparklets Company, Limited.—This Company has been formed to acquire and work "Aerators" (Système Sterné) in France, Russia, Belgium, Denmark, Norway, Sweden, Spain, and Luxemburg. The capital is £240,000 in Preference and Ordinary shares of £1 each.

This is an untried invention, which may possibly have others to oppose it. The capital is excessive, and until it is proved that it supplies a needed want, the success of the Company must be considered doubtful.

King & Mortimer, Limited.—With an authorised share capital of £160,000, divided into 16,000 Preference shares of £5 each, 80,000 Ordinary shares of £1 each, and a Four and a Half per Cent. Mortgage Debenture stock of £40,000, this Company has been formed to acquire high-class businesses and business premises either in London or the provinces with a view to their development as local centre stores. The business of Mr. Robert King, of South Kensington, and Mr. George Mortimer, of Fulham, with their branches have already been secured.

MY LETTER BOX.

The following are replies to inquiries from various correspondents:—

GOVERNMENT, &C., BONDS.

Roland.—There is every prospect of Argentines maintaining their present quotations, and I do not advise you to sell your stocks. D. F.—Yes, Uruguay bonds should be held, and you should certainly not part with your Mexican Sixes, as the country is making great progress. S. H., Stafford.—If you give me the numbers of the Paris Exhibition and Ottoman bonds you hold I shall be pleased to ascertain for you whether they have yet been drawn or not.

BANKS, TRUSTS, AND FINANCIAL.

Saint Vincent.—The Eastern Bank in question was very badly received; and the shares were not well placed. As far as I know, there is no market for them. Your friends should sell if they can, and you might write to the secretary of the Bank and ask whether he knows of any buyers. Alice.—Quite a fifth-rate insurance concern; have nothing to do with it, but insure only with large high-class offices. In the matter of life insurance, this is the first consideration. Croxley.—You cannot expect me to give information about every Australian life office, and I do not know enough of the one mentioned by you to express an opinion.

CHINA AND GLASS. — Messrs. GOODE, Artists and Designers, solicit an inspection of their collection in their recently-extended South Audley-street premises, now by far the largest and most important in Europe. Messrs. Goode guarantee the excellence of all their productions, and invite a comparison of their prices with those of any co-operative stores.

Be very careful. A. M., Manchester.—You cannot be a regular reader of TRUTH or else you would know my view with regard to the Provident Association of London. It does not fulfil the promises made in its prospectus, and I advise you not to have anything to do with it. Excelsior.—I do not think there is any prospect of an improvement in these shares, and you had better sell them for what you can get. P. M. G., Tralee.—If you were to read your TRUTH regularly, you would have known that J. Edwards & Co., the outside syndicate touts, late of Talbot House, Arundel street, W.C., decamped long ago, but not before I warned all my readers to have nothing to do with them.

HOME RAILS.

City W.—I. Spiers & Pond Ordinary shares are very cheap at the present price, and I certainly advise you to hold the same. II. I think that before committing yourself in Great Northern Deferred any further you should await the effect of the opening of the Great Central extension to London. III. I certainly advise you to hold Great Central 1894 Five per Cent. Prefs., but for any further purchase you should select the 1894 Ordinary. IV. This would be distinctly preferable to Midland Deferred, and amongst the Heavies I should consider North Westerns the best purchase. Glen B.—I. No; the Central London will not be in direct competition to the District, but the hope that some closer relations would be established between the Metropolitan and the District has so far not been fulfilled, and this is the reason why the stock has not further improved. 2. The comparison of the District traffic was with that for the week before the Jubilee last year, so that the decrease had no effect upon the quotation.

AMERICAN AND FOREIGN RAILS.

S. W. C.—I should certainly advise you to hold these bonds, which can only be affected in a favourable manner by the reorganisation in question. Pat.—I do not know that you will get so big a profit as that if you hold Missouri, Kansas, and Texas, but you will doubtless get a fair profit if you hold long enough. Widow.—Inter-Oceanic of Mexico Prior Lien bonds (1) are a good purchase, and although more speculative, the "A" Debentures of the same line at about 70 are also very promising. 2. These Mexican Government Six per Cent. bonds are promising. 3. No reason why you should not invest in Denver First Four per Cent. Mortgage bonds, but the Brazilian stock, No. 4, had better be left alone. I see no reason for selling Nos. 5 and 6, but if you have a profit on No. 7, it would be as well to take it. 8. Do not sell New York Central shares now, as directly the war is over there will be a big rise in all American Rails. Henricus.—The Delagoa Bay arbitration is still in progress, but there is every prospect of a decision being given at an early date. Junius.—Brazilian railway stocks have suffered together with the Government securities, but I should not advise you to sell out now.

MINING SHARES.

Wight.—Monger's W.A. Stores are apparently doing a fair business, but no dividend has so far been declared, neither has there been time to earn one. J. C. F.—1. I think you should consider seriously whether it would not be advisable to join this reconstruction. 2. I should certainly not sell W.A. Market Trusts at the present price, as after the assessment has been paid they are sure to go better. 3. Likely to recover. W. J.—Great Boulder Proprietary shares should certainly be worth their present price of 17s. 6d. J. G. S.—I really cannot give you any more information than that you will be able to obtain on application to the secretary of the Company. T.—I think your alarm is quite groundless. There is at present a tendency to unduly depreciate mining shares, even the very best, for which however there exists no foundation. Thus I think that, for instance, Glencairn and most of the other South Africans held by you should stand at much higher prices. This also applies to London and Globe and British America Corporation, which you should certainly hold, and you will do well not to be intimidated by the "Bearish" rumours. If you are a holder of Lady Shentons you should certainly disregard the lawsuit, which had nothing whatever to do with the property. Monmoor.—1. I cannot discover any reason for the decline in the shares of this Company, which is doing well. 2. I should not recommend the investment. 3. No, I cannot give you any information about the financial position of this West Australian Company. 4. You should stand where you are, although I think that the future of the Londonderry is favourable. 5. Leave these people alone. If you want to put your money into such concerns, you should deal only through respectable foreign bankers located in London. White Horse.—I have been unable to obtain any recent information about this Company. Shareholder.—I am afraid that prospects are not very bright, and I have heard no recent news with regard to the Company. Glenrosa.—It would be advisable to average, as you propose, as an important recovery is probable. Cornish.—I have no favourable opinion of either of the two West Australian mining Companies mentioned, and therefore should not like to advise you. Kinsale.—No; I do not consider that there is any ground for the criticisms in question, and I think that if you hold your shares and buy more to average you will eventually do well. Pen.—I certainly should not advise you to abandon your interest in this concern, as there is a possibility of an appreciation of the Company's assets. Provident.—1. You should hold all your mining shares Nos. 1 to 10, which are well selected. 2. There is every prospect of a recovery, and I still have a favourable opinion of No. 6. 3. No; I do not believe in the various Mount Lyell shares, and have never done so, their prices being excessive. Celtic.—1. It is a question which I must leave you to decide for yourself, as I have never recommended these shares. 2. There is every prospect of Randfontein improving again. T. W., Brighton.—1. The Witwatersrand Deep is a promising Company, and the shares stand at 1⅞. 2. Not yet. Carbon.—1. The Company is doing well, and I cannot understand the weakness of the shares, unless there is need of further capital. 2. A very fair prospect of an improvement. 3. Certainly; Hannan's Props. are worth picking up.

INDUSTRIAL SHARES.

Tobacco.—This Company has not been received very favourably, and there is no market for the shares at present, but there may be presently if the Company does well, and you had better wait. Wire.—Such Companies as the Wireless Telegraph are very speculative, and I should not like to advise you in the matter. Wimbledon.—I do not see exactly that your investment in No. 1 is hopeless, but the other stocks mentioned are certainly not promising, and you should realise if you can. Carnation.—There is no market for these shares. You might write to the secretaries of the respective companies and ask them if they can offer you a price for the same. T. T.—When some of the weak holders of Welsbach Ordinary have sold out the stocks will doubtless improve again. It is certainly a case for averaging. A. M., Accrington.—You might as well take your profit on A. B. I do not advise purchase of the cycle shares Nos. 1 to 3 for the present.

MIXED INVESTMENTS.

H. W. B.—With regard to your holding Nos. 1 to 9, I consider Nos. 5, 6, and 7 the most promising, but I have no favourable opinion of the others. With reference to Palmarejo I should not advise you to throw further good money after bad. Meteor.—The W.A. mining shares in question are fair value at the present price, and you should certainly hold your Louisville for an improvement and buy more to average. J. E. C., Leeds.—1. No; I have not a favourable opinion of the system of the British Natural Premium Insurance Company. 2. No. 3. No reason to buy. 4. Not yet. Woodcock.—I have no particular liking for any of the stocks mentioned Nos. 1 to 5, but if you are a holder I do not see that you will gain anything by selling now. What do you wish me to tell you? Border Boy.—1. Chatham Ordinary are full value at their present price. 2. No; there is absolutely no truth in any of the rumours of reconstruction of the London and Globe Finance Corporation, and this report has been officially contradicted. You should not believe all these rumours. 3. I must leave this to you.

MY CHAPTER ON INDUSTRIAL STOCKS.

This nineteen-day account has been a very unsatisfactory one in the Industrial market, and prices show an all-round decline. For all that, it is not by any means believed that investors will altogether forsake this section, and, on the contrary, after the very considerable shake-out which has taken place, rallies are anticipated. This should more particularly be the case with Welsbach stocks, after the fall in the Ordinary to 108, in the Preferred to 95½ xd, in the Deferred to 16s. 6d. I should certainly advise all holders of these stocks to stick tight to them, as an important recovery is certain to come about. The recent reaction in Welsbachs has no doubt been due partly to closing by a few stale "Bulls," and on the mistaken opinion that the new Hydro-Incandescent Gas Company was to be a competing concern, while it is really controlled by the Welsbach. The first batch of letters of allotment has just been issued. I hear of large orders resulting from the recent exhibition of the different Welsbach lights and burners in London and the provinces, and the street lighting has given great satisfaction where recently carried out. Anglo stocks, perhaps, alone in the whole market, have shown strength, in view of the large earnings which are accruing from the Spanish-American war. Anglo "A" are quoted 16⅞, the "B" stock 117. Oil shares have been lower all round, Russian Oil declining to 2 3/16, Schiabieff Ordinary to 1 1/16, the Prefs. to 4⅝. An attempt has been made to establish a market in Baku Ordinary, but so far the price is only quoted at par, with very little business. Threads have reacted to 1⅜, and Spinners are quoted 1/16 to ⅛ premium. Coats' Ordinary at 60½ are fairly steady. In Fish Oil shares business has been restricted, the quotation being 3¾, and Volenite shares have been dealt in at 4½. Bovrils have been steady, the Ordinary at 19s. 6d., the Deferred at 14s.; but very little business has been done in Schweppes, the Preferred being quoted 1 1/16, the Ordinary 1⅛, the Deferred ⅝. Even in Liptons very little business is doing, the being quoted $2\frac{1}{8}$, the Preferred at $1\frac{3}{16}$. Salmon and Gluckstein are being dealt in to a fair extent at 34s., and Lyons stand at $3\frac{7}{8}$. The new Lyons shares stand quite as high as the old ones, and are not fully-paid up yet, the last call of 10s. being due on Monday, July 4. Having been issued at 3, they are now quoted $\frac{13}{16}$ to $\frac{15}{16}$ premium. Apollinaris have rallied to $10\frac{1}{8}$. Some business is reported in tobacco shares, British Delhi Prefs. at $\frac{3}{4}$, the Ordinary at $\frac{1}{4}$, Sumatra Tobacco at 5s., United Lankat at 2. The tone for electric light shares has been somewhat steadier, holders having got over their fright as regards coming competition from the vestries. Westminsters have improved to $16\frac{1}{4}$, from which there has again been a reaction to 15. In cycle shares the tone has been unfavourable, and prices are generally lower. Dunlop Deferred are quoted 8s., the Ordinary being unaltered for the week at 15s. The Directors' report just issued makes a good showing, as, after paying 5 per cent. on the Deferred and all prior charges, £38,963 is carried forward. Humbers Prefs. have maintained themselves at 13s., but the Ordinary are slightly lower at 9s. 6d., the Extensions at 4s. Cycle Components are easier at $1\frac{1}{16}$, and Singer Ordinary at 7s. 6d. xd. have eased off, and Swifts at 9s. 9d. are slightly lower. Amalgamated Tyres at 3s. 6d. are neglected. A circular has been issued by the directors of the Hydraulic Jointing Company, Limited, stating that, as Mr. Hooley is not in a position to complete his contracts, they have resolved not to adopt the contracts for the flotation of the Company, and to return in full the subscriptions of the shareholders. It appears that the directors of the Hydraulic Joint Syndicate, Limited, have now arranged for the necessary working capital to carry on the business themselves, and the directors of the British Company have accepted seats on the board of the Syndicate. The capital of the Syndicate already issued is £400,000, which it is now proposed to increase by the addition of £50,000 in Ordinary shares. Hudson's Bay shares are not at all a bad market at $20\frac{5}{8}$, and with 13s. per share dividend off on Wednesday they will look very cheap, although the Directors' report is very colourless. It is, however, pointed out that the Klondyke traffic is only now passing through the Company's property, and that a good many settlers will be obtained in that way. Allsopps touched $154\frac{1}{2}$ last account, but reacted to $149\frac{1}{4}$, and on some influential buying rose smartly to $152\frac{3}{4}$, and now stand at 151. I hear good accounts of the Company's business, and some very sanguine people are talking the Ordinary up to 185 for the autumn. Theatre and music-hall shares have not been inquired for, this being the off-season, but prices are fairly well maintained. Gaiety Theatres one day last week touched $1\frac{9}{16}$ on the lease being renewed for twenty-one years, while "The Runaway Girl" is also going on well. A setback to 27s. 6d. subsequently took place, but the last price was about $1\frac{7}{16}$. Palace Theatre shares have been quite neglected at about $1\frac{3}{16}$, while Drury Lane, 15s. paid for the £1 shares, have been moderately inquired for at about 1. An interim dividend of 10 per cent. was paid in February last, and the market expects another 10 per cent. next month. Alhambra have been rather offered at about £19. Empires are dull, while Oxfords have been firm. Tivoli are always a very difficult market to deal in, and they now stand at 12, while shares are scarce. Millars' Karri and Davies' Karri Wood shares have been dull and neglected, Millars standing at 3, Davies at $1\frac{3}{8}$. Canning Jarrah shares are firm at $1\frac{3}{16}$, and it is stated that the Company has some very large orders in hand, one being for 6,000,000 sleepers. Natal Steam Coal seem inclined to go higher, the steady improvement in the output during the last month or two, and the higher price obtained for coal at Durban, having been very beneficial to this Company, whose shares now stand at $1\frac{1}{4}$ to $1\frac{3}{8}$. Jeremiah Rotheram & Co's shares, which have appeared in the market, seem to be "rigged" to some extent. For the £1 shares to be quoted $\frac{9}{16}$ premium at the outset, and the Prefs. at $\frac{3}{16}$ premium, is certainly making the most of a Shoreditch drapery business.—Your affectionate Uncle,

MOSES.

MAJOR HOWE & CO., LTD.—Fashionable BOOTS and SHOES.—16, Coventry-st., W.; 60, Strand, W.C.; 81, Gracechurch-st.; and 13, Queen Victoria-st., London. "Note Addresses." (Repairs)

All Rights Reserved.]

QUEER STORY.

THE LITTLE LADY AT LORD'S.

[This is another of the true "Queer Story" series, of which I promised further instalments in a previous issue. As I have already said in the columns of TRUTH, I do not vouch for these stories on my own account; for I have not the time, if I had the inclination, to take the necessary steps to test their veracity. All I can guarantee is that the authors, in each case, say that they are true And these ladies and gentlemen are, I suppose, entitled to as much credence as other people. Personally, I may add—and probably most of my readers would endorse this view—it is quite immaterial to me whether a story is vero or ben trovato, provided it is a good story. As far, therefore, as I am concerned, I simply offer these "true" stories as fiction, like the others.—Ed. TRUTH.]

SOME years ago, when I was first elected on the Committee of the M.C.C., Tom Tattenhall was still one of the club's ground staff—a veteran then, and already somewhat stiff in the joints for active service. But he was so famous, so popular, and so much respected, that he was kept on longer than he would otherwise have been, on sentimental grounds. He had his benefit—a mighty good benefit it was—during my tenure of office, and retired into private life as a publican in a Surrey village, where he now keeps (and long may he continue to keep!) the "Bat and Ball," in a manner unexceptionable, a credit to his calling and a source of unspeakable pride to the villagers, who are justly proud to have their glasses filled by a hand that, in its time, could make the ball "do" more than any other hand that ever trundled.

Sometimes, even now, of a summer's evening, old Tom will turn out on the village cricket-green, and puzzle the young idea, at the practice nets, with slow teasers that twist in all directions. When he takes off his coat and turns back his shirt cuff, it is a signal for all not actively engaged to gather round the net, and watch and admire and exclaim. "Look'ee there now!" "Good-night! Did 'ee ever see the loike of that?" "Ah! Jack, my lad, thee hast summat to do with those!" And old Tom, still as keen as ever to hit the stumps, or to catch and bowl his man, fights his famous battles over again as he trundles to the rustics. "Don't be downcast, Jim. That was the very ball I took Murdoch with at Lord's in '82"; or "Aha! No wonder you put up that one in the slips, Teddy. W.G. did the same at the Oval in '78; but Fred Morley fumbled the catch, and didn't I bless him!" or "Ah, Charlie, my boy, if you get your leg in front of those, yon'll have to make tracks for the Pavilion, as George Ulyett had to do on a memorable occasion. Good old George! How well I remember his saying to me, as he passed: 'Devil take you, Tom,' he sez, 'what the p'leeceman d'ye mean by not makin' it break away to leg, as I expected? And you curled your wrist and all,' he sez. 'It's a bloomin' case of false pretences.'" But there, if I once get telling these little anecdotes of Tom Tattenhall, I shall never stop; and the story which I have set myself to relate will be cramped and crowded out. Therefore will I put the curb upon my pen, and from henceforth confine myself to the episode (cujus pas magna fuit Tom Tattenhall) of the little lady at Lord's.

It was told to me by Tom himself in his private parlour at the "Bat and Ball," whereinto I, as a privileged acquaintance, was admitted one Sunday last summer (calling at that hostel a tea-desiring cyclist), to drink the cup that cheers, &c., in company with mine host and his comely little spouse, a model of plump good-temper and admiring wifeliness. Whatever Tom did was right; whatever Tom said was good. When my own fate overtakes me, may the wife of my bosom be another such.

Tom was in good vein that afternoon. I drew him on. He spun me many a cricket yarn, recounting his own most notable experiences. Some I had heard from his lips before, some I had not; and of these latter, that which interested and amused me far the most is the story which I am now about to reproduce. Tom's yarn in print is, of necessity, a vastly feebler thing than Tom's yarn as orally delivered. So much depended on his droll expression, his inimitable wink, his referential gesture. But even shorn of these, it should be found amusing; the more so as I report the incident, as nearly as possible, in Tom's own racy and original language.

That Sunday happened to be the Sunday preceding the 'Varsity cricket-match, in which I, an old Cambridge blue, was naturally interested, and I took the opportunity to ask Tom his opinion of the rival teams. This he expressed to me at some length and with his usual discrimination; and, having done so, he said to me, a sudden twinkle coming into his expressive eye:—

"By the way, sir, talking of the 'Varsity cricket match, I don't believe I've ever told you the story of the little lady at Lord's. Have I?"

"No," I replied; "so far as I recollect, you never have!"

"Oh, do tell it the gentleman, Tom," said Mrs. T.; "I know it will make him laugh!"

"Yes, do tell it me," I seconded.

Chuckling to himself—a good omen, I thought, of something amusing in store—the old cricketer filled and lighted his pipe. Then he said:—"All right, sir! You shall hear the story of my little lady; how I sat beside her the whole of the first day at a 'Varsity match, and basked, so to speak, in the light of her bright eyes all that time. Ah, what a pretty little thing she was! So trim and dainty; so lovely, tender and innercent! Her voice—don't be jealous, missus—was sweeter music than the click of a catch at the wickets, and her smile give me a thrill down my back more delicious than beating and bowling W. G. himself. What's more, she was under my wing, and I had to pull her through a pretty stiff ordeel. And how she come under my wing, and what this stiff ordeel was, I will tell yer." This is his tale:—

A few days before that 'Varsity match, being in fack the previous Friday, I happen to be up at Lord's, watching Oxford against the M.C.C. The Oxford captain that year was a young gent from the West—now well-known in county cricket, though I'll take leave to suppress his name. I knowed him well, and was much interested in him, having been down to Oxford in the summer term for some years past, and having bowled to him there at the nets three or four times every week. And a nice young feller he was, as frank and friendly as you please. In fack we become great pals, and he, with all the openness of youth, make a confidence of me in all sorts of ways.

His guv'nor was a nice gent, too, by all accounts—for I'd never met him—but a different sort. Rather haughty (I was told), rather stern, and just a little overbearin'. Would have his own way, and make other people give him his own way, too, or know the reason why. Come of a cricket family. Put cricket before all things. I don't say but what there was virtue in that. There ain't many things that is fit to be put before cricket. But still there's a meejum; and this gent went beyond the meejum. To be nuts on making his only son a fust-class cricketer, and to spare no pains to do so, was right enough. But when it come to implicating cricket with the young feller's love affairs, it was a bit too thick. If you'd told him he was doing that—which I guess would have taken a bold man—he would have ridiculed the imputashun, and said it was no such thing. He'd have said that honestly, too. But, like many another of us, he was blind as a mole to his own weaknesses; being that crazed on cricket, and that fond of talking cricket, so as nobody never interested him who couldn't talk cricket. The consekence was that, without his being aware of it, his judgment of folks was all warped and turned askew, so to speak, by this mania of his; and even the fair sex—what might have been made an exception of—was all judged by him (unconsciously, I don't doubt, but none the less ackshally) with a eye to this pertiklar circumstance.

Now, there was gals down in the West sharp enough to twig this; them demure little things not always being so innercent as they looks. And there was one gal in pertic'lar as not only twigged the fack, but, if I may so say, rose at it like a dace at a dragon-fly. If you was to ask me her name, I should answer, "I ain't a goin' to tell;" females being females all the world over, and having the right, in virtue of their sex, to claim from us a consideration which they often don't deserve in virtue of theirselves. But I'll call her Miss Mary Smith. Now, that young woman didn't, I believe, care a twopenny damn for cricket, nor knew nutthink about it. But she did care for young Mr. James (as I'll style 'im), being a fine, handsome feller; and even more did she care for his persition and prospecks. She know also that it was a matter of A 1 importance to sniggle in with his guv'nor. So what must she do but suddently go crazed on cricket herself, and spend all her spare time in learning the theery and langwidge of the game, and swot up Lillywhite and other handbooks, until (being an uncommon clever gal) she had a really fine stock of cricket conversashun.

Having got this, she wait her chance of using it. And when her chance come, she didn't throw it away. On the contrary, she make the most of it, and she soon succeed in renderin' herself interesting to Mr. James's guv'nor. She wasn't a bad-looking gal, neither, and, to add to things, she had a little oof. And Mr. James's guv'nor, he soon begin to be saying to his son: "Nice gal, that Miss Smith." "A lot in that gal, my boy." "We must ask Miss Smith over to lunch." "You'll excuse me, won't yer, Miss Smith; I have some letters I must write; but Jim will show yer round the garden," &c. All of which vex Mr. James no end, for he saw Miss S. was setting traps for him; which, of itself, would have put him off, even if there hadn't been no third party.

But there was a third party. Mr. James had a cousin—a gal cousin. I won't give her name, neither—and, in fack, no names, my conneckshun with these matters being privit and confidenshal—but I'll call her Miss Nellie Jones. I've describe her already; for she is my little lady. Mr. James was in love with her, and she with him. Indeed, I have every reason to believe they was secretly engaged. But Mr. James's guv'nor had a poor opinion of her. "Little Miss Milk-and-water" he often speak of her as; "wax-doll," "nothing in her," and so on. The fack simply being that she couldn't talk cricket, knowing nothing about it; and not being artful, like her rival, it never occur to her to get the subjeck up.

Now Miss Nellie's mother—Mr. James's aunt—was all in favour of the match between her daughter and her nephew, and she co-operate with Mr. J., as far as she could, and in the course of these co-operations—for I must cut this part short—she write to her brother-in-law, Mr. J.'s guv'nor (this was the young feller's own suggestion), asking him if he would be kind enough to—wot d'yer call it?—shappyrone Miss Nellie to the Oxford and Cambridge match; she and her daughter having come to London on purpose to see it, but she (the mother) being unfortunately laid up with a bad chill. Mr. James's idea, with which his aunt agree, was that if his guv'nor was thrown together, so to speak, with sweet Miss Nellie for three whole days, he could not fail to be influenced in her favour by her charming looks and ways. Which I don't wonder at Mr. J. thinking so, she being a little lady as might have melted the heart of a relievin' officer.

Well, of course, Mr. J.'s guv'nor couldn't possibly refuse this request of his sister-in-law's; but he consider himself tremenjus ill-used by having it made to him, and complain to Mr. James of his grievance in no measured terms.

"Tied to a little doll like that all through the 'Varsity match—a girl of no conversahun, who didn't know one end of a cricket-bat from the other, and who would worry him from morning to night with ridik'lus questions about the game. Why's this? Why's that? Why are those two men wearing white coats? Why are the fieldsmen all changing their places? Why is that man with the bat walking away to the pavilion? He knew what it would be very well. What the devil did girls like that want coming to see cricket-matches? If it had been Miss Smith, now," &c.

Mr. James hisself told me all this, when he come to ask my assistance, and explain to me how his guv'nor's words had set him thinking; and that was why he apply to me for help. Now, what do you suppose was the help he want me to give him? You'd never guess. So I won't tease yer by asking yer to make shots. I'll just tell yer straight out what the young feller say to me, in his own words.

Brighton.—Norfolk Hotel.—Old-established County and Family Hotel. The best situation. Replete with comfort, style, and luxury. Moderate charges.—Jules A. Creighton, Manager.

"Tom," he sez, "I want yer to do a chap a good turn."

"Always ready to oblige you, sir," I sez. "Show old Tom the way."

He give me a long rigmarole, telling me most of what I've told yer already. Then he go on:

"You're the one, Tom, as is to help my cousin Nellie turn the tables on Miss Smith."

"Now how on earth am I to do that, Mr. James?" I ask him.

"Listen to me, Tom," he sez. "I've made all the arrangements, if you're agreeable; as I believe you will be when you've heard my plan. I'm going to give you one of my member's tickets for the 'Varsity match, and you're to sit next my cousin Nellie."

"Only too proud, Mr. James," I sez, "but how can you be sure of my obtaining the seat next the young lady's, and what am I to do when I get there?"

"Oh, as to your first question," sez he, "I've fixed it up by the courtesy of the secretary. You see, the guv'nor has two tickets, as a member, which will account for hisself and Nellie. I also have two tickets, but (as the ballot fall out) for seats right at the other end of the show. However, I have seen Mr. Perkins, have found out from him the name of the Johnny who got the two seats next the guv'nor's, and have induced him to swop his places for mine—which, as mine were better, he was very willing to do. So you see that part of it's all right. And as to your second question,' he sez, 'just you give me your careful attention, Tom. You know my cousin is as ignorant of cricket as the babe unborn. Couldn't for the life of her tell the difference between point and short leg, or between a yorker and a long hop—bless her innocence! And the guv'nor's been lamenting, like one o'clock, that he's doomed to witness the match in the company of such an ignoramus. Now, if the guv'nor were to find that he'd been quite at fault in his estimate of Nell, and that she really can take a discriminating interest in the play, and can talk cricket shop like a perfessional, it would make all the difference, don't yer see?"

"Very likely, Mr. James," I sez. "But it's a tough nut, is that 'if,'" I sez; "for, from what you tell me, the young lady can't do that same at all."

"No, you old fat-head!" laugh Mr. James at me, in his playful way. "But you can."

And then he wink, and look at me so knowing, you can't think.

I begins to see his meaning, and as it dawn on me, I burst out laughin', the idea seem so rich.

"Oh, I see," I sez. "I'm to prompt Miss Nellie," I sez. "That's your game?" I sez.

"Precisely, Tom," he answer. "And fortunately, you see, the guv'nor's a little deaf, so he won't hear you if you pitch your voice in the pp tone," he sez. "But Nell will repeat what you say in the ff, so that he'll hear her right enough. What do you say, Tom? Are you on?"

I make a little demur, being of a cautious turn of mind. I ask him whether the game wouldn't be likely to go off better if he got a gentleman—one of his Oxford friends, say—to do the prompting. But he tell me he'd thought of that, and couldn't trust any of 'em, in such a matter, not to play him some practical joke, or give away the show through not being able to control hisself. But he knew he could rely on my discretion; that was why he appeal to me. Besides, when I'd got on my best topper and frock, I looked the equal of any gent. Might be a dook as far as any stranger could tell. And the guv'nor, who had only see me on the cricket-field, wouldn't never recognise me. Not that it would matter much if he did, for it was a thousand to one he'd not guess what I was there for. And on he go persuading and appealin', until at last I say 'yes,' and promise to do my best.

Then he grasp my hand in his hearty way, and he sez, sez he:

"'Tom, if you play the game successful,'" he sez, "it'll be worth more to you than takin' part in a England-Australia match,'" he sez.

"'Don't put it on that footing, Mr. James,'" I protest. "'I ain't a doing this in no commercial spirit, sir.'"

"'I know that, Tom. You're too good a sort,'" he was please to say. "'All the same, I don't forget them as does me good turns,'" he sez.

So it was arrange.

I went to Lord's on the Monday morning, feeling rather nervous and excited. I was afraid it might turn out that Mr. James's guv'nor would plant hisself in the chair next mine; in which case I should have found myself in a tight corner, having to talk across him. But my little lady had her buttons on, so to speak, and she come along first and flop herself into the chair next mine without a moment's hesitation. Then she glance my way, and I won't say she wink exackly, but she just droop one of her pretty eyelids, and I, without turning my head, just squint at her, as it were, round the corner. That was all that pass to show we understand each other and was ready. If Argosy hisself had been watching, he'd scarcely have twig it.

So, then, there we sit till play begin. Oxford win the toss, and, of course, take first knock. Mr. James's guv'nor, I see, hardly pay any attention to Miss Nellie, seeming not to think her worth talking to; "but," sez I to myself with a sort of inside chuckle, "we'll make you give the little lady her due before we've done; see if we don't, old cock."

Well, the two first Oxford batsmen come out, and play start. I watch every ball most careful and intent, being on the alert to pass the most knowing criticisms I could; nothing of the "Oh! Well hit!" or "Bravo!" style, of which any idjut is capable; but remarks as should show a real appreciashun of the niceties of the game. For I was quite determine, through the meejum of Miss Nellie, to make the little lady's supersil'us uncle open his eyes at her knowledge of cricket.

In about five minutes my first chance come. The bowler send down a good length ball—a real snorter—on the leg stump; and the batsman get it away cleverly for a single to the on. No one clap or take much notice, being only a single. But I mutter:

"Pretty!"

And Miss Nellie, she take it up, loud and clear:

"Pretty!" Not knowing who, or why, or what, but relying implicit on me.

Her uncle turn suddenly and look at her in surprise, but say nothing.

"Good." I thinks. "That's one to us, any way."

About two overs later, the same batsman, he cut at a ball, meaning to send it just behind point; but he mistime it and get it—lord knows how! I'll swear he didn't—between the wicket-keeper and short slip. Of course, it go to the pavilion-rails, and, of course, being a four, all the people clap.

"Flukey snick!" I murmurs.

"Flukey snick!" exclaim Miss Nellie.

Her uncle look at her again. He didn't say nothing, neither, this time. But there was more considerashun more respeck, I may even say, in the glance he turn on her.

By-and-by come another grand opportunity. One of the batsman give what look like a catch to extra-cover. And all the backers of Cambridge clap, thinking the man was out.

"Bump ball," I whispers.

"Bump ball!" cry out my little lady.

And right I was, as I knew; for, on appeal, the umpire give the man in.

This had a great effeck on Mr. James's guv'nor, who hisself had thought the man was out.

"God bless my soul, Nellie," he sez, turning to her in admiring astonishment, "I didn't know you was so well up in cricket. And what sharp eyes you have, my dear! Could you really see that at this distance?"

"Oh! I saw it quite distinctly, uncle," she sez, colouring and all confuse; which he take, naturally, as a sign of pleasure at the compliment; though old Tom know sumthink different.

Whitehall Court, S.W.—To Let, Bachelor and other Suites. Electric Light, Service, Bath-rooms. Meals in public or tenants' own rooms.—Apply, Manager.

After another dozen runs or so had been scored, the first Oxford wicket fall. It ain't no breach of confidence, I think, to say that Sammy Woods was the bowler, and he knock down the leg stump with that deadly fast yorker of his, which, when he was at his best, has cause the downfall of many a crack batsman.

"Yorkshire!" I murmurs.

"Yorkshire!" exclaim Miss Nell.

"Sammy Woods's pet pertiklar," I adds.

"Sammy Woods's pet pertiklar!" repeat the little lady; so artless and natural, as if I hadn't put her up to it myself, I'd have quite believe she'd said it on her own.

Well now, the "bump ball" had made a pretty average impreshun on her uncle, as I've said; but the "Yorkshire" combine with the "Sammy Woods's pet pertiklar" fetch the old boy a treat.

"Good heavens, child!" he exclaim, staring at her, as if he could hardly believe the evidence of his ears; "Why—why—where did you get your intimit knowledge of cricket? You—you—talk about it and—and seem to understand it like a professional!"

"Oh, Uncle!"—here little Miss colour again, and very taking she look in her confusion, I can tell yer—"I don't really understand it so very well. But—but—being so fond of it, make me grasp the points of the game better than some girls do, I think. Oh! I adore cricket" (cry pretty Miss Hypocrite, clasping her hands in front of her). "I'd—I'd—like to sit watching cricket matches all the summer."

"Do you know, my dear," said her Uncle, looking at her quite kind and affectionit, "when I brought you here to-day, I thought you'd care about nothing but watching the people and the dresses, and would simply treat a day at Lord's as a sort of smart picnic!"

"A picnic? Oh Uncle! And if there's one thing I grudge more than another on a day like this, it's the luncheon interval. I hate the name of luncheon at a cricket match, and I'm always in a perfect fever of impatience until they resume play. Oh, look! The—the—idiot!" Old T. had put in his oar again now, and she was repeating his words. "He's—he—'s gone forward to Sammy's slow ball. C and b, for a pony. There, didn't I say so?"

That put the cap on it, so ter speak. Mr. James's guv'nor was fair conquered. He pat my little lady's hand downright fondly, and he sez, sez he:—

"'Nell,' he sez, 'I never know what you was till this minnit. You're a girl in a thousand,' he sez."

At this point, Tom Tattenhall paused to rekindle his pipe, which had gone out in the course of narration. When it was fairly alight again, he finished off his story in the following laconic terms:—

"They was married a year later, with the old boy's warm approval. So far, they've been two girls. When it's a boy, I'm to stand godfather!"

MUSIC.

RATE-AIDED OPERA.

IF the various peers, politicians, and other distinguished persons, who signed the petition presented last week to the London County Council can have their way, paterfamilias may very shortly expect to see at the bottom of his rate paper—

Opera rate at 2s. in the £ ... ... £10.

Personally, of course my sympathies would certainly be with rate-aided opera if the scheme were only feasible. Nay, if these marquises and musicians would sign a petition to the County Council to pecuniarily assist me in my income tax, my cigar bill, and my annual vacation, as well as in the cost of my opera box, I should be infinitely happier. But the ratepayer has a knack of taking his own pocket into consideration. At County Council elections he is apt to throw out those who vote for extravagances, and therefore I fear I shall have to pay for my luxuries myself. One luminous writer, it is true, boldly suggests that the money should come out of the slender funds set apart for technical education. There is something about this of the smile that is childlike and bland. We shall perhaps next be told that the School Board rates might profitably be devoted to a subvention to bring out British operas, which do not pay (and therefore are not wanted), and to give the Duke of Westminster and his fellow petitioners their opera stalls cheap. Another writer talks of a rate of half a farthing in the pound. We all know those half-farthing rates, and how rapidly, under the fostering care of boards, councils, and committees, they mount up to shillings. Rate and tax payers already grumble about the cost of education, of the Navy, of water, and other necessaries. But a rate to enable the idle to enjoy opera is midsummer madness. To quote the example of Germany is an absurdity. Some German opera houses, it is true, are subsidised by the municipality, and poor things they are. But the best opera houses are subsidised by the monarch. Besides, Germany has a complete system of State accident insurance and of old age pensions, at a cost estimated next year at a million marks, or about £50,000 sterling for every working day. Not till we have something of the sort in England can we talk about helping out of the rates to provide opera for the wealthy.

What the petitioners really want is not quite certain. The text of the document, at any rate, is extremely cloudy upon the point. The first paragraph demands a subsidy "whereby the highest class of operatic music can be systematically brought within the reach of the great mass of the people." If this means anything at all, it must mean opera free, at any rate as to the gallery and the upper parts of the house. What this implies, probably the petitioners themselves have never considered. Opera as given at Covent Garden costs upwards of £4,000 a week, and yet the petitioners avowedly want something better. At the Paris Grand Opéra there is a subvention of £32,000 a year plus a house and lighting rent free—a total, perhaps, of £50,000 a year, And yet notoriously the Paris Grand Opéra cannot afford to engage the eminent artists who sing at Covent Garden. Moreover, this year (although only two operas have been mounted) it is declared to be a loss, and there is a demand for further subvention. At Vienna and Berlin the Sovereign pays the deficit. If they really want opera cheap, the impoverished peers and their associates should petition her Majesty to follow the example of her second son, who, on ascending the Ducal throne of Coburg, found that the expenses of the opera (a ridiculously poor one, as those who heard the troupe at Drury Lane will admit) came out of his private pocket. A rate-aided opera must imply a free, or partly free opera. No doubt, as to the more costly places, the public would be asked to pay for seats, but if the expenses of the opera are to come out of the rates at all, it is imperative that the poorer classes who cannot afford such luxuries should be provided with them gratuitously. The London County Council bands afford a precedent for such a step. The bands, who during an all tooshort time in the summer months play in various open spaces in the Metropolitan area, appeal to all classes. The poorest can hear the music gratis, while the aristocracy have seats provided for them at the not immoderate price of a halfpenny per diem. Yet even this costs something like £6,000 a year.

Opera, of course, is altogether another matter. It is an enterprise notoriously difficult and costly to manage, and although it is perfectly true that in Germany and France and in parts of Italy it is frequently subsidised, yet in many cases the grant is insufficient to cover the deficit. The loss on the Vienna opera, paid by the Emperor, would startle Her Majesty. Another example is that of La Scala, Milan. Here the house is given to the impresario rent free, and gas is provided by the municipality. Nevertheless the house has been closed for the past two years because it does not pay, and it is only to be reopened upon a subsidy of £14,000 for the winter, of which sum only £6,000 is being voted by the municipality. Yet Signor Sonzogno's rival opera in Milan seems to have paid very well, without the suffocating patronage of subsidy, simply because the thing was run for a profit and upon business principles.

When, however, we go into details more curious points arise. For example, this opera house must either be farmed out to a manager, in which event financial rather than an art profit will naturally be aimed at; or it must be directed by a committee of the County Council in much the same way as street paving, the fire brigade, and other departments are now. I can imagine the competition to secure a seat upon such a committee. The youngest members doubtless would be set to supervise the municipal operatic chorus. The ladies of an operatic chorus are notoriously no longer in the first blush of youth. The nymphs indeed, who waddle so blithely amidst a crowd of princes and nobles, or who form in semicircle and gaze unconcernedly upon the desperate tragedies which are enacted before them, could clearly best be trusted to the younger members of the opera committee. The older and staider members on the other hand must look after the municipal corps de ballet. The spectacle of a worthy County Councillor examining the supposed weals on Zæo's back would be nothing compared to the arduous duties of a middle-aged merchant, willy-nilly a member of the opera committee, in criticising the legs of the ballet and putting these worthy ladies through their paces. As to the first tenors and prime donne they would doubtless as now remain as Royalties apart—chiefs of the situation. A County Councillor might reprimand the Chief of the municipal fire brigade, but I pity the fate of even so sturdy and plain spoken a man as my friend Mr. John Burns if he ventured to criticise the acting of an eminent tenor, or to make a suggestion to the prima donna.

There are other little difficulties in the way which perhaps the County Council authorities and the signatories to the petition have not considered. For example, who is to choose the new operas? The petition I notice, is signed by a hundred or more of the leading (and other) musicians of the day. There is probably not one of these gentlemen who does not deem himself perfectly competent—and, indeed, more able than his fellows—to compose the whole of the repertory of the Municipal Opera House. It is quite possible that the average working-man who has to contribute towards the rates might prefer a comic opera; but these petitioners are extremely earnest about the matter, and no doubt nothing but a serious opera from a British pen—notoriously a very exhilarating performance—would be permitted. There is sometimes a difficulty about the pattern of a fireman's helmet. But imagine the feelings of a committee consisting of Sir John Hutton, Earl Russell, and Mr. McDougall appointed to decide upon the texture of the skirts of the dancers. Mr. Mapleson once had a similar difficulty which his solicitor settled by putting the following poser to Mr. Registrar Hazlitt—

> Pending the appointment of a trustee, which may take some eight or nine days, your Honour is in fact the manager of Her Majesty's Theatre, and my client only thinks it right to take your Honour's orders as to the production of "Lohengrin" on Saturday. Some new skirts, moreover, which might be of calico, but which your Honour would perhaps prefer of silk, are wanted for the ballet in "Il Trovatore" on Monday. But the "Lohengrin" matter is the more pressing of the two, and we should be glad if you would meet Herr Richter, who, though unwilling to tamper with the score of so great a composer as Wagner, thinks some cuts, already on another occasion authorised by the master, might be ventured upon in the long duet between Elsa and Ortrud. There is an obstinate tenor, moreover, whom your Honour, by adopting a decided tone towards him, might perhaps bring to reason.

Mr. Registrar Hazlitt's difficulty is, indeed, in the case of municipal opera, almost bound to be repeated in the County Council. Imagine Mr. Emden arguing with Sir A. C. Mackenzie whether a song should or should not be transposed, and Mr. John Williams Benn endeavouring to pacify an irate prima donna, who persisted in playing Lady Macbeth (in Dr. Stanford's forthcoming opera, sung, of course, in Latin) in "rationals." That Colonel Hughes might be called off to settle the troublesome question of pitch, and Mr. Sidney Webb to decide which of two lovely (and loquacious) ladies was entitled to the bouquet thrown at their feet, would be minor matters. Indeed, I am not quite sure whether the spectacle of Sir Blundell Maple asked to wield the baton in the temporary absence of the conductor, and of Mr. Harry Marks as a deputation to "Mabon" to temporarily replace a recalcitrant baritone, would not provide some compensation for ratepayers' money otherwise wasted.

No doubt certain English composers who are ambitious to produce operas which otherwise might have no chance of a hearing, and budding singers (and their teachers), hungry for engagements, will welcome the wild scheme of devoting the ratepayers' money to opera. If, however, the experience of France, Germany, and Italy be any criterion, even this will cause an immense amount of heart-burning. It is notorious that, even in music-loving Germany, no opera except by some very great man indeed stands the slightest chance of acceptance, unless the composer or his friends put down a certain amount of money to cover the risks to the management. Mr. Eugen d'Albert, only a year or two ago, thoroughly exposed this pernicious German system, which we do not desire to see introduced, at any rate, into municipal opera in England.

As a matter of fact, the British public at large do not appreciate opera. If they did, they would have supported such schemes as that put forward by the Carl Rosa Company, who last autumn offered them fairly good performances at theatrical prices. The British public have, however, shown time after time that nothing but the very best will suit them, and as the very best costs money, prices have to be raised to an extravagant point, and opera has become a fashionable luxury for a few months in the year only. It always will be so, or, at any rate, until the great middle-classes show by supporting a less costly scheme that such an entertainment is really required. Managers, without waiting for subsidies, would crowd to supply the article if there were any real demand for such things. But that a luxury intended for the few should be supported out of the rates is simply nonsense. Imagine the Nonconformist conscience on such a point. Fancy the feelings of a respectable Bishop, who holds the theatre in the same esteem as he does the Archfiend himself, being called upon to pay a rate for the support of an opera house.

The Wagnerian Elect must have suffered a terrible shock on Friday, when owing to the serious indisposition of both Mme. Nordica and Fräulein Ternina the promised performance of "Götterdämmerung" could not take place at all, and Covent Garden for the first time for many years was closed. Last year the opera house was shut up for one night owing to the Royal Jubilee, but although there have often been changes of performance I do not even recollect the last occasion on which the house had to be shut altogether owing to the illness of an artist. What therefore must have been the feelings of Mr. Dowdeswell and Mr. Schulz-Curtius when, instead of their precious seven hours in the dark, they found closed doors. The Empire, I am told, was afterwards particularly full for a Friday. But the obvious insinuation I spurn.

The curse of the "Ring" seems to be upon M. Jean de Reszke's appearance as Siegfried in "Götterdämmerung," for at the first cycle he himself was ill, and Herr Dippel had to take his part. Now at the intermediate cycle last week there was no Brünnhilde, and Covent Garden was shut. I believe M. Jean intends to have another shot for this part on Saturday, but on Monday he was too ill even to appear in the "Command" performance at Windsor, and M. Saleza played Roméo before the Queen instead. A further disappointment awaits the public on Thursday, when M. Jean has relinquished the part of Siegfried in that opera to Herr Dippel. A week or two ago the true Wagnerian declared he preferred anybody to M. de Reszke. I wonder now how he will like being taken at his word.

Ambroise Thomas's "Hamlet," revived last week, was a personal triumph for Mme. Calvé. The opera itself is now, of course, hopeless. It is rare, indeed, that French adaptations of Shakespeare are of any use as operatic libretti, but "Hamlet" has particularly suffered from the improvements of the French bookmakers. When we find Hamlet himself depicted as a sort of Richard III., with a shock of long auburn hair and much given to gesture and emphasis; when also we find the sable Prince replacing the address to the players by a drinking song—as though actors of any age were ever known to tipple—when "To be or not to be" is sung seated by Hamlet on a sofa; when the murderous Claudius turns prayerful, and the dead Ophelia floats down the river within full view of the audience, we know that the thing may be French, but it certainly is not Shakespeare. At Covent Garden, however, "Hamlet" nowadays is not finished at all, for the last act is struck out. The chief excuse for its revival is the "book" air so delightfully sung by Mme. Calvé last week, and the delicious scene of Ophelia's madness and suicide. The scene was last week made a little longer than usual, thanks to the restoration of an elaborate ballet, in which damsels in nineteenth century skirts dance round the hapless heroine before she sings the air de folie, an adaptation, by the way, from the Swedish. Accordingly, the opera closed with Ophelia's death, leaving the rest of the story to the imagination. In the French original, the death scene of Ophelia is followed by a funeral procession and a diverting colloquy between the gravediggers, while at the end the wicked Claudius is killed. Here the last we see of him is kneeling at a prie-dieu, actually praying before the portrait of the brother he has murdered. M. Renaud sang Hamlet better than he acted it, but the triumphs of the evening were essentially for Mme. Calvé. Nevertheless, I do not suppose we shall hear much more of "Hamlet" this season. The rest of the week has mainly been given up again to "Wagner," but last night (Tuesday) Mme. Melba's rentrée was announced in "La Traviata."

In a periodical of admittedly large circulation I read that on Wednesday last week "Mr. Astor entertained a large party to dinner, after which there was some music, the artists, all of whom sang in exquisite style, including Mme. Calvé and M. Paderewski." The celebrated pianist has certainly composed an opera, but I was not hitherto aware that he was coming out as vocalist.

M. Paderewski, by the way, was at the performance of "Siegfried" last week seated in the stalls. I am told there was an amusing conversation between two young ladies who were sitting immediately behind the great pianist. The damsels were particularly pained that the management refused to allow them to wear hats or bonnets in the opera house, "While look at that!" they indignantly exclaimed, as in their endeavour to see the stage they dodged the superabundant aureole locks. Those locks, which so completely won the hearts of the damsels of the United States, are out of place in the stalls. Whether it is possible to leave them at home I am not, of course, aware.

The Philharmonic season ended last week. The society has had its ups and downs this year, and at one time, I believe, there was a fear lest the guarantee would have to be drawn upon. But happily this was avoided. Nevertheless, the society would do far better if it cut itself adrift from the old crusted lines and altered its night of performance. Thursday is one of the most inconvenient of evenings for concert work, a fact which even the Royal Choral Society seem tardily enough to be discovering. Nevertheless, the Philharmonic people intend to have another try, and three Thursday evenings in November and December have been fixed for the Autumn concerts.

Among the other important concerts of the week may be mentioned the Coronation Festival at the Crystal Palace, at which Madame Patti appeared for the first time at Sydenham for eighteen years. There was an audience of nearly 23,000; much larger, indeed, than usual at these intermediate festivals. Apart from Madame Patti, who sang three songs and two encores, the programme included favourite excerpts from "Elijah," "Israel," and other oratorios, and a movement (with a battery of sixteen kettle-drums and four military bands) of Berlioz' Requiem. Somebody called this a "stunning" performance. Dr. Saint-Saëns has appeared at Mlle. Kleeberg's and also at the performance for the Spanish orphans, and about fifty other concerts of no special musical interest have likewise taken place. After this week the concert business bids fair to drop in a very marked manner.

The Leeds Festival prospectus is now issued. I learn that the prospects of the Festival are immensely good, and, indeed, all the £6 serial tickets are sold out, only a few single seats being now left. The week will be a trying one, not only to the audience but also to the forces engaged; for the number of novelties is much greater than usual. The Festival will start on Wednesday, October 5, with "Elijah," while in the evening we are to hear for the first time a new ode by Mr. Otto Goldschmidt, the "Vatergruft" of Peter Cornelius, Tschaikowsky's "Mozartiana" suite, and Mr. Elgar's cantata "Caractacus." This work is in four sections. On the morning of October 6 Professor Stanford's Latin "Te Deum" will be heard for the first time, and in the evening we are promised Dr. Alan Gray's new choral ode, "The Song of Redemption," with solo for Mme. Albani. The Friday morning will be mainly devoted to Bach's great mass in B minor, while in the evening we are promised Humperdinck's new Moorish Rhapsody in three parts, one an Elegy at Tarifa, another a Moorish Dance at Tangier, and the third "A Ride through the Desert" at Tetuan. The novelties on the morning of Saturday, October 8, are Mr. Cowen's new setting of Collins' "Ode to the Passions" and Gabriel Fauré's mythological ode "The Birth of Venus," for solos, chorus, and orchestra.

LETTERS ON BOOKS.

MY DEAR MR. WYNDHAM,—Mr. Douglas Sladen's "Admiral" (1) reminds me of panoramas like those of the Siege of Paris, where the art of the painter is so supplemented by real solid cannon, &c., that you can hardly tell where the fictive ends and the actual begins.

> A large part of the book is in Nelson's own words. Appreciating the importance—in treating a national hero—of keeping as close as possible to history, I have, wherever it was feasible, used, whether in dialogue or description, the actual words of Nelson and his contemporaries.

The italics are Mr. Douglas Sladen's, and betray his anxiety, perhaps even undue anxiety, to be as realistic as possible. Certainly the novel, considered as a work of art, would have gained immeasurably by Mr. Douglas Sladen's using these materials in the way painters use photographs or studies, as suggestions merely for the painting of the great portrait. As it is, you have letters, conversations, memoirs, and history patched in everywhere, instead of being, so to say, first ravelled into threads and then rewoven into a coherent and homogeneous pattern. On the other hand, Lady Hamilton is far indeed from being painted equally realistically, since the most authentic accounts show her to be the reverse of the refined and ideal heroine of Mr. Douglas Sladen's imagination. "The Admiral," however, is a fascinating book, if only for the singularly vivid pictures it gives you of Nelson's character and conduct at the most interesting crisis of his life. The style of the narrator of the story, being "founded upon unpublished journals and letters of the time in the possession of the author's father," deepens its verisimilitude. As for Nelson's relations with Lady Hamilton, to which scandal returns with the fretful persistence of a wasp to the bruised spot in a peach, we should like to know which of all the contemporary commanders, Napoleon, Wellington, and the rest, could for a single moment be compared with the hero of the Nile in moral purity? Yet who thinks of dragging Wellington's "frailties from their dread abode" in the way Nelson's single and comparatively pardonable lapse has been gibbeted.

(1) "The Admiral." A Romance of Nelson in the Year of the Nile. By Douglas Sladen. (London: Hutchinson & Co. Price 6s.)
(2) "Leddy Marget." By L. B. Walford. (London: Longmans, Green & Co. Price 6s.)
(3) "Where Three Creeds Meet." A Tale of Modern Indian Life. By J. Campbell Oman. (London: Grant Richards. Price 3s. 6d.)
(4) "As a Man Lives." By E. Phillips Oppenheim. Illustrated by Stanley L. Wood. (London: Ward, Lock & Co., Limited. Price 6s.)
(5) "A Widow's Tale." By Mrs. Oliphant. With an Introductory Note by J. M. Barrie. (London: William Blackwood & Sons. Price 6s.)
(6) "Flaunting Moll," and other Stories By R. A. J. Walling. (London: Harper Brothers. Price 6s.)
(7) "The Fall of a Star." By Sir William Maquay. (London: Macmillan & Co.)

What will you say to a novel with an octogenarian heroine? And what will you say to an octogenarian heroine whose wildest delight is to climb an apple-tree, > to sit and munch apples, looking far and wide from over the canopy of moss-barked branches, beaten flat by the sea-wind; to swing her feet, and wonder what people would have thought, and how horrified Gibbie and the rest would have been had they known. What prospect could be more exciting, more alluring?

You would certainly say that the old body was daft or doting; yet "Leddy Marget" (2) plays this and a hundred other school-boy pranks, not sanely only, but charmingly—according to Mrs. Walford. "We must not," says Goethe, "take the faults of our youth into our old age, for old age brings with it its own defects;" but to take the follies of our youth into our old age is even less excusable since it is less inevitable. For the rest Leddy Marget is a sweet old lady, while her maid, Gibbie, is an admirable character.

"Where Three Creeds Meet" (3) gives you a vivid picture of Indian and Anglo-Indian life and of their mutual insulation. The English and the natives seem to live in elements as different as the air from which a swarm of gulls swoops down upon a shoal of herrings and the water in which the densely-packed fish pursue the even tenor of their way, only occasionally perturbed by the inscrutable visitation. What Mr. Campbell Oman has proposed to do he has done excellently—"to give a sketch of the religious aspect of the complex, many-sided life of the natives of Upper India, with its many amiable traits, its picturesqueness, its blind prejudices, its occasional fanaticism, and its almost complete absence of sympathy with Western feeling and sentiment." I shall look forward to the two supplementary tales illustrating the social life and the political movements and aspirations of the natives, which Mr. Campbell Oman promises, with great expectation, not, indeed, of exciting fiction, but of interesting and instructive pictures of the esoteric mind of those dim millions. "Where Three Creeds Meet" is not exciting as a story, and if you feel the need of a stimulant of this kind I can recommend to you a singularly stirring sensation novel, "As a Man Lives" (4). It is the story of a clergyman with a past, who keeps a silence like the silence of Dean Maitland, and, like him,

> Preached as never sure to preach again,
> And as a dying man to dying men.

Not only, indeed, has he a mysterious past and a haunted present, but a double present and personality—a decorous clergyman in the country; in London an East End rough preaching to roughs. The love interest centres in his illegitimate daughter, who has the double cross in the course of true love of the consciousness of her own illegitimacy, and of the knowledge of her father's crime. However, the death of her father in the act of preaching and in the odour of sanctity, smooths the way to her happy marriage. "As a Man Lives," which strikes me as the work of a woman, is an excellent novel of its melodramatic kind. With all due deference to Mr. Barrie, who supplies the graceful introductory note to the late Mrs. Oliphant's collection of short stories, "A Widow's Tale" (5), there is but one of these pot-boilers—"Mademoiselle"—worthy of that light, bright, but too facile pen. On the other hand, the short stories in "Flaunting Moll" (6) are of fairly uniform excellence and of much promise. In "Flaunting Moll" itself Mr. Walling takes with pathetic effect adequate time and space for the development of his little tragedy; but in the majority of the tales in the collection he has to make all the running he can in the very short course he allows himself, and he does it effectually and effectively. Finally, as though I had not enjoyed a sufficient feast of fiction for one week, I have read yet another novel, "The Fall of a Star" (7). It can hardly be called new, as newness is reckoned nowadays, but it had hitherto escaped my attention. The central character in it is a light of the political world, and it is his descent that is depicted in an exciting and dramatic story.—Believe me, my dear Mr. Wyndham, ever yours very sincerely,

DESMOND B. O'BRIEN.

GIRLS' GOSSIP.

DEAREST AMY,—The Ladies' Kennel Show at the Botanic was one of the prettiest sights I have ever seen. The lovely lawns and trees were at their grandest, and the sunshine flooded the scene, making the light gowns and flowery hats look their very best. This was on the first day of the Show, when the weather, for once, was kind to a Botanic function. Jupiter Pluvius generally rules triumphant.

We went on both days, and had every opportunity of appreciating the contrast between the two, and for the thousandth time of remarking to each other, "What a marvellous difference good weather makes!"

The garden party-like aspect of affairs on the Thursday, if unappreciated by the cats and dogs, was very pleasant for their human friends. There was a good band, and the rhododendrons were perfectly lovely. Is there such good turf anywhere near London as at the Botanic? What splendid tennis courts could be made there.

We were punctual to our appointment to keep Lilla's dogs company, and cheered them up as much as we could. Her pug and her poodle thanked us continuously in the most gentlemanlike manner, and restrained their feelings of woe out of pure courtesy; but her sharp-nosed Pomeranian ignored us completely, and kept staring outwards, and barking furiously in a most aggravating way. Was it not uncivil of him? I do not like that dog.

On the second day the Princess of Wales and Princess Victoria visited the Show, braving the wet and mud-trampled misery of the grounds. The Princess was looking very nice in a black broché silk trimmed with cream-coloured lace. She wore a boa with a few Parma violets in it, an article of dress that is peculiarly becoming to the Princess. Her black bonnet was trimmed with feathers and violets to match the boa. It was lovely to see how her dogs welcomed her, and showed frantic joy at the sight of her. Her famous borzoi, Alex, won three first prizes, one of them being a large mirror framed in silver.

The Princess traversed the muddy interval between the dog-show tent and that of the cats, where the Duchess of Bedford received the Royal party, with whom was the pretty little Miss Knollys, who bore H.R.H.'s train at the Devonshire fancy ball last season. During the tour of the tent the Princess was presented with three bouquets, one from the dogs, one from the cats, and the third, consisting of a bunch of shamrocks, from Leo, the dog that collects money for the Cork Hospital.

The Novelty classes were again very successful. Miss Mary Moore's little Jap secured a first prize, and Miss Ellaline Terriss' Jap also succeeded in the same class.

The Duchess of Sutherland will hold an exhibition of tweeds and other articles in connection with the Scottish Home Industries on July 4 in the gardens of Stafford House, from 3 p.m. to 7. Admission will be by invitation cards only.

With garden parties in full swing, weddings, bazaars, dear Sandown, &c., you may imagine that new gowns are wanted very frequently. I must tell you of some delicious ones we saw at Redfern's, though I fear they will make you want to be extravagant and secure some for your own wear. In the tailor-made regions downstairs there were sweet little coats in the palest fawn-coloured cloth and also in the ever smart blue serge. One of the former was finished with embroidery of the finest kind in lace and beads and fawn-tinted silk cord, part of the design being open work. It was held in at the waist by an embroidered belt, from under which the basque appeared in little frills. Of almost monastic severity—but of such incomparable style—was a fawn-cloth skirt and cape, absolutely simple, but telling beyond description. Any one wearing it would immediately make her mark on the crowded lawn at

IMPORTANT.—Messrs. REDFERN will offer, during the first two weeks in July, a number of Summer Gowns in Foulard, Muslin, and other light materials, at greatly reduced prices, in order to make room for the New Season's Models.—26, Conduit-street, W

Sandown. In fact, it was an excellent illustration of the simplicity of true chic.

You would have liked a dear little blue cloth coat, the revers of which were faced with white corded silk. And we fell in love with a black cashmere dress embroidered all over with detached flowerets in white chain stitch. The yoke was pale blue velvet, on which the embroidered cashmere was carried up in curves embroidered in silver.

A most attractive Henley dress was in red serge, the skirt finished with one row of white braid. The rounded collar was white with a deep hem of the red serge dotted with white buttons.

A red cloth gown was of that texture which drapes most perfectly, so soft and light and yet so "clothy," to coin a word. The basque was round and cut away in front, and the coat had wide revers and a high collar in silk with a design in white cloth. A dainty white cravat finished it at the throat.

Very smart was a putty cloth with five flounces, made by cutting the skirt round in five sections, each of which forms a flounce finished with rows of stitching. The revers of the coat were faced with white satin, and on the shoulders was a small, shallow cape of the cloth, very smart indeed. Brass buttons were a feature of this little coat.

Upstairs are the showrooms for the more elaborate costumes for visiting, reception, garden party, wedding, and evening wear. Here are the latest whispers of the mode, and we passed from one model to another deeply interested, as you may guess. For the races, there was a black embroidered Russian net over white silk, the tablier-front being embroidered with jet and Chantilly. The bodice was all jet embroidery over white, with a pretty yoke and a black velvet belt, such a becoming touch.

Most tempting, too, was a biscuit-coloured taffetas with a very wide band of guipure appliqué round the very centre of the skirt, which was made quite long and finished with three deep tucks. There were narrower tucks round the bodice, which was trimmed with guipure at the top and fastened over on the left side. A black chiffon sash completed this, the smartest frock I have seen this season.

You would have delighted in a pink muslin-gauze with bands of white insertion down the front of the skirt edged with narrow pink ruching at either side. The bodice was trimmed to match, and a red sash supplied the exact satisfactory bit of colour needed to emphasise all the pale pink. Another gauze was in china blue, just the tone of the hawthorn pattern vases. The skirt was gauged and gathered very fully into a tightly fitting yoke of white muslin over black. A smaller yoke finished the bodice, which opened slightly at the waist to show a vest of the finest muslin and embroidery. A black velvet bow on the bodice imparted that valuable finishing touch which seems to be one of the characteristics of the Redfern gown.

You may feel reassured about your beloved blouse, for we saw several. The favourite form seemed to consist of strips of silk connected by openwork embroidery in white sewing silk, transparent on both bodice and sleeves.

We have been to the opera three or four times this season, and have consequently enjoyed opportunities of criticising tiaras and interrogating the faces beneath them as to the becomingness or otherwise of this ornament. I do not like the fender style. Bee declares that there is only one woman in England who can wear the all-round tiara without losing her good looks, and Richard votes for stars in the hair as far more becoming and effective than any tiara. One night we saw the very perfection of a jewelled head, simply a spray of exquisitely modelled wild roses in brilliants laid along one side of the elaborately simple coiffure. It looked lovely in the bronze-gold hair.

FRANCES MOORE has now on view the latest Models from Paris in Hats, Bonnets, &c. Special and exclusive designs in Toques.—8, Maddox-street, Regent-street, W.

Have you ever observed that the success of a tiara depends very much upon the shape and poise of the neck and the form of the shoulders? It is so. There is a beautiful marchioness whose stately head is poised to perfection upon a neck that would rejoice a sculptor. Her jewels are among the finest in the world. A young American duchess has a neck so long and swanlike that she can with ease hang half-a-dozen necklaces round it. She often does. But the poise of neck is not erect enough to suit a tiara, which, consequently, has a top-heavy effect. Another American duchess, on the contrary, has a very plump white throat, and a diadem in her dark brown hair looks charming, when it is not too large.

Then, again, a big tiara and a very small nose go badly together. And a very red nose looks very red indeed in the proximity of diamonds and their bright, white light. All these things have to be thought of, and it is, after all, small wonder that tiaras are occasionally found to be extremely trying ornaments.

The prettiest we have seen this season, by the way, was not on any head, but in the wholesale house of Hardebeck & Bornhardt in Rosebery-avenue. It is a spray of maidenhair, rising rather wavily in the centre, so that all stiffness is avoided, and arranged so that two leaves lie horizontally above the brow, the petals growing gradually smaller as they recede from the middle. It is a lovely thing. We also saw a marvellous necklace and pendant, the novelty of which lies in the addition of what may be described as a ball fringe made of large round brilliants hung round the outer circle of the necklace. Those in front are very large indeed, and exquisitely cut. Each is suspended from two smaller diamonds. At the sides the fringe diamonds are not so large, and are hung from one smaller; and at the back there is only the silver wire, with no small diamond above. I have never seen flowers so beautifully imitated in jewels as here.

The Empress Club is going strong. Its cheque for the Prince of Wales's Hospital Fund this year is £136 15s. As this sum is made up by one shilling out of each member's subscription, it satisfactorily spells prosperity, does it not?

Yes, tell "Nuisance," as she calls herself, that the little fringed napkins are a very agreeable addition to the paraphernalia of afternoon tea—not only in muffin season but in strawberry season, and in fact all the year round. We might call the whole twelvemonth "bread and butter season," for, like gorse in bloom, it is always to be had. In fact, we might alter the old proverb to something like the following:—"Kissing's out of fashion when the tartine's out of season."

"Nuisance" also asks for my advice on several other points, but I think she might easily satisfy herself by consulting some reliable book on étiquette.

Christabel writes from Paris about some pretty gowns she has seen at garden parties:—

A dress of unbleached or écru lawn was striped with lace insertion, and the intervals between the insertion were embroidered with sprays of shaded roses in their natural colours. The bodice was entirely in guipure over pink silk with a yoke of pleated pink silk muslin. The collar and waistband were of red velvet. A black straw hat, with black feathers, trimmed with red velvet and pale pink roses, completed the costume.

A gown of Parma violet Liberty satin had a deep crossway flounce of the same, with a little edging of Irish guipure. The bodice had a yoke of Irish guipure, forming a point in front, with a very pretty fichu of Parma silk muslin going round it. The sleeves were made with folds of the same muslin, as also the sash, edged all round with tiny ruches, and falling to the ground, fastened at the back of the waist with a paste buckle; the hat worn with this was black, with black feathers and mauve and white irises.

Another gown that looked well was of beige muslin, with a great deal of lace insertion on the skirt, and also on the bodice, which opened over a front of blue tulle, crossed with very narrow rows of black velvet; the very pretty hat was of white tulle, worked with straw, and a tuft of white feathers on one side. The white parasol had lace insertion.

HUNTING.—An elegant and graceful up-to-date figure is created by the easy and perfect fit of the ingenious and appropriate Stays built by Mesdames SYKES, JOSEPHINE, & Co., The Celebrated Anatomical Corsetières, 280, Regent-st., Oxford-circus, London, W.

Piqué will be much worn at the seaside and in the country, made either quite plain, with short jacket, or else ornamented or enhanced as follows:—Jacket bodice of white piqué embroidered or braided with white, the basque cut out in tabs bordered round with a narrow cross-cut of blue linen below; the collar is finished with blue in the same way, and cut out in tabs or scallops, and in front there is a jabot of tulle edged with lace. The skirt is embroidered or braided; if a band is worn over the jacket it should be of white leather with a steel buckle.

I must now tell you of a lovely evening dress I saw lately. It was ivory satin covered with tulle spangled with silver; the square-cut bodice had mauve orchids as shoulder straps, and a splendid spray of the same flowers falling on the skirt on one side, while across the front of the bodice was a branch of diamond leaves; round the neck was a diamond dog-collar on cerise velvet, and aigrette of similar jewels in the hair. The evening cloak worn with this was white muslin woven with a gold thread, trimmed with ruches of silk muslin and flounces, beaded with orchids. This was worn at the first performance of "La Cloche du Rhin."

You will find these tartlets with tomato cream both novel and delicious:—

Rub a tin of preserved tomatoes through a hair sieve, reduce the purée over the fire until it is a stiff paste and allow it to cool. When the purée is quite cold mix it with 1½ gill of whipped cream, add a tablespoonful of chopped capers, 3 or 4 minced anchovies, and a sprig each of chopped tarragon and chervil. Fill seven or eight of the little pastry cases with the cream, bringing it up in conical form, sprinkle it with passed, hard-boiled yolk of egg, and put a sprig of chervil on the top of each. Arrange the tartlets on a fancy paper and garnish them with picked watercress.

The tartlet cases may be made in this way:—

Rub 2 oz. of butter into 4 oz. of flour, add a pinch of salt and cayenne pepper, and 1 oz. of grated Parmesan cheese. Mix this into a paste with the yolk of an egg and a very little water, roll it out, and line about eight small tartlet moulds, brush the interior with beaten egg, prick it well with a fork, and bake it to a nice golden colour.

Ever, dear, your loving cousin, MADGE.

DIAMONDS OR OLD SILVER
For PRESENTS.
SPINK & SON

SPOONS AND FORKS 2/11 oz. BELOW STORE PRICES.
17 & 18, Piccadilly, W.
AND AT
1 AND 2, GRACECHURCH STREET, CORNHILL, E.C. Est. 1772.

"SANITAS EMBROCATION."
For Aches, Pains, Sprains, Strains, Bruises, Stiffness, Neuralgia, Lumbago, Rheumatism, and for Veterinary purposes.

"I have little doubt that 'Sanitas Embrocation' will come into prominent favour as a table requisite and for various other purposes, human and veterinary." (Prof.) WOODROFFE HILL, F.R.C.V.S.

In Bottles, 8d., 1s., and 2s. 6d. Of all Chemists, Stores, and
THE SANITAS CO., LIMITED, BETHNAL GREEN, E.

THE
GOLDSMITHS & SILVERSMITHS COMPANY, LTD.
Show Rooms: 112 REGENT STREET, LONDON, W.,
invite inspection of their magnificent Stock of
NOVELTIES IN SOLID SILVER,
specially suitable for Wedding and Complimentary Presents.
Each article is marked in Plain Figures at a fixed moderate Cash Price.
The Company's large staff of Assistants are instructed to show Goods and answer any enquiries, but on no account to importune a visitor to purchase.
SOLID SILVER PRESENTS.
SOLID SILVER PRESENTS.
ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE POST FREE.
GOODS FORWARDED ON APPROVAL.
Goldsmiths Company, 112 Regent Street, W.

CHUBB'S SAFES
WEST END BRANCH:
68, St. James's Street, S.W.
HEAD OFFICE:
128, Queen Victoria Street, E.C.
PRICE LISTS POST FREE.

A Feature of the Metropolis. SPIERS & POND's
CRITERION RESTAURANT, Piccadilly Circus, London, W.
EAST ROOM. Finest Cuisine unsurpassed by the most renowned Parisian Restaurants. Luncheons, Diners, and Suppers, à la carte and prix fixe. Viennese Band.
GRAND HALL. Musical Dinner 3/6 per head. Accompanied by the Imperial Austrian Band.
WEST ROOM. Academy Luncheon 2/6 Diner Parisien 5/-, during both of which the renowned Mandolin Quartette performs.
BUFFET & GRILL ROOM. Quick service à la carte and moderate prices. Joints in each room fresh from the Spit every half-hour.
AMERICAN BAR. Service of special American Dishes, Grills, &c.
Splendid Suites of Rooms for Military and other Dinners.

TRELOAR'S ORIENTAL CARPETS

TURKEY, PERSIAN, & INDIAN CARPETS, DAGHESTAN RUGS, &c., ANTIQUE CARPETS AND RUGS.

Illustrations of Turkey Carpets sent free on Application.

TURKEY CARPETS have lately been supplied by

TRELOAR & SONS

to the following Institutions, &c.:—

The CONSERVATIVE CLUB, St. James's Street.
The UNITED SERVICE CLUB, Pall Mall.
The ROYAL MARINES, Chatham.
The FRENCH HOSPITAL, Victoria Park.
The LAW SOCIETY CLUB, Chancery Lane.
The ROYAL MARINES, Devonport.
The 2nd ROYAL WILTS REGIMENT, Portsmouth.
The 4th BATTALION KING'S ROYAL RIFLES, Aldershot.
The ROYAL MARINE ARTILLERY, Eastney.
The ROYAL MARINES, Gosport.

If favoured with inquiries we will quote price and forward on approbation any Carpets or Rugs upon receipt of reference or remittance.

TRELOAR & SONS,

68, 69, & 70, LUDGATE HILL, LONDON, E.C.

USERS OF THE

ELECTRIC LIGHT

SHOULD SEE THAT THEIR

ELECTRIC LAMPS

BEAR THE WORLD-RENOWNED TRADE MARK

EDISWAN

EFFICIENCY ECONOMY

The Best and Cheapest in the End.
Sold by the Principal Contractors, Stores, &c.
Head Office: Ediswan-buildings, Queen-street, E.C.

DURING SUMMER

You should never be without a bottle of

ROWLAND'S KALYDOR,

Which cools and refreshes the face and hands, removes Freckles, Tan, Sunburn, Redness and Roughness; heals and cures Irritation, Eruptions; it imparts a radiant beauty to the Complexion, and arrays the face, neck, and arms in matchless whiteness, unobtainable by any other means. Bottles, 2s. 3d. and 4s. 6d.

ROWLAND'S ODONTO

is of inestimable value in preserving and beautifying the teeth, strengthening the gums, and giving a pleasant fragrance to the breath; it eradicates tartar from the teeth, prevents and arrests decay, and polishes and preserves the enamel, to which it imparts a pearl-like whiteness. 2/9.

Ask Stores and Chemists for ROWLAND'S Articles.

HAMPTON & SONS LD

Decorations. Furniture.

For the most satisfactory means of Furnishing throughout in best manner at any degree of cost, see Hampton & Sons' extensive and unrivalled Stocks of all the latest and most tasteful productions in Furniture, Carpets, Fabrics, &c.

SUGGESTIVE SCHEMES, ESTIMATES, AND ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUES SENT FREE.

Carpets. Fabrics.

Fine Arts.

PALL MALL EAST, TRAFALGAR SQUARE, S.W.
Works: Belvedere Road, Lambeth, S.E.

FOOT'S PATENT TRUNKS

THE TRAVELLERS' DELIGHT.

EVERYTHING AT HANL WHEN WANTED.

A perfected system of sliding drawers, whth reuders every part of Trunk equally accessible, and enables any article to be instantly removed without disturbing remainder of contents. Avoids confusion, saves time, prevents articles being crushed. Drawers divided and made any depth to suit requiremens.

Made various sizes in Compressed Cane, Wood Fibre, &c.

Prices from 40s.

ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE POST FREE.

T. J. FOOT & SON, 171, New Bond St., London, W.

HOSPITALS & APPEALS.

GREAT NORTHERN CENTRAL HOSPITAL, Holloway. VERY POOR and DEPENDENT ENTIRELY UPON VOLUNTARY SUPPORT

PATIENTS ADMITTED FREE, sickness nd poverty the only qualifications for relief.

£10,000 needed annually to support the work of relieving 1,500 in-patients and 25,000 out-patients.

LEWIS L. GLENTON KERR, Secretary.

CHATTO & WINDUS'S NEW BOOKS.

SNAZELLEPARILLA. Decanted by G. S. EDWARDS. With Portrait of G. H. SNAZELLE, and 65 Illustrations by CHARLES LYALL. Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d. [July 4.

THE JACOBITE. By HARRY LINDSAY, Author of "Methodist Idylls." Crown 8vo, cloth, 6s.

SOME LATER VERSES. By BRET HARTE. Crown 8vo, cloth gilt, 5s.

"In this delightful volume he . . . is still master of the two moods of humour, the pure comedy and the bouffe, in which he first showed his extraordinary range."—Daily News.

MERIEL: A Love Story. By AMÉLIE RIVES, Author of "Barbara Dering." Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d.

"'Meriel' has something of the glowing warmth and passionate abandon of Mrs. Browning's love-poems."—Echo.

THE HERITAGE OF EVE. By H. H. SPETTIGUE. Crown 8vo, cloth, 6s.

"Sometimes you are quite charmed at the author's cleverness, insight, and truthfulness. . . . The author compels your attention. If it is her first book, then it must be pronounced a success."—Pall Mall Gazette.

ON THE BRINK OF A CHASM. By L. T. MEADE, Author of "Dr. Ramsey's Patient." Crown 8vo, cloth, 6s.

"The story is of unfailing interest."—Scotsman.

ONE-VOLUME NOVELS AT 6s.

A WOMAN TEMPTED HIM. By WILLIAM WESTALL.
WAS SHE JUSTIFIED? By FRANK BARRETT.
MISS BALMAINE'S PAST. By B. M. CROKER.
FORTUNE'S GATE. By ALAN ST. AUBYN.
A WOMAN WORTH WINNING. By G. MANVILLE FENN.
COLONEL THORNDYKE'S SECRET. By G. A. HENTY.

London: CHATTO & WINDUS, 111, St. Martin's-lane, W.C.

ON THE STŒCHIOLOGICAL CURE OF

CONSUMPTION,

ASTHMA, BRONCHITIS, INFLUENZA, AND ALL THROAT AND LUNG COMPLAINTS.
By JOHN FRANCIS CHURCHILL, M.D.
One Shilling, Post Free.

T. BURLEIGH, LATE DAVID STOTT, 370, OXFORD STREET.

SMITH, ELDER, & CO.'S NEW BOOKS.

"This delightful volume."—DAILY NEWS.

NOTICE.—A SECOND EDITION of "COLLECTIONS AND RECOLLECTIONS," by "ONE WHO HAS KEPT A DIARY," is Now Ready. With Frontispiece. Demy 8vo, 16s.

The Westminster Gazette: "One of the most remarkable books of the year. . . . Mr. Russell knows how—and when—to tell an anecdote, and hardly ever tells a poor one. The book has scarcely a dull page, and readers who take it up will undoubtedly have a treat in store."

MRS. HUMPHRY WARD'S NEW NOVEL.

At all Booksellers' and Libraries, crown 8vo, 6s.

HELBECK OF BANNISDALE,

By Mrs. HUMPHRY WARD,

Author of "Robert Elsmere," "Marcella," "Sir George Tressady," &c.

The New Age: "A memorable addition to the not very numerous class of first-rate novels. It is a novel to keep, and to place when read on the library shelf."

The Manchester Guardian: "Notwithstanding the height of its theme, the most simply and effectively told story of any that have yet come to us from her hand."

NEW VOLUME OF "THE DICTIONARY OF NATIONAL BIOGRAPHY."

NOW READY.—Royal 8vo, 5s. net, in cloth; or in half-morocco, marbled edges, 20s. net.—VOLUME LV. (STOW-TAYLOR) of

THE DICTIONARY OF NATIONAL BIOGRAPHY.

Edited by SIDNEY LEE.

 Vol. 1. was published on January 1st, 1885, and a further volume will be issued Quarterly until the completion of the Work, which will be effected within two years from the present time.

NOTE.—A Full Prospectus of "The Dictionary of National Biography," with Specimen Pages, will be sent upon application.

NEW NOVEL.

At all Booksellers' and Libraries. Crown 8vo, 6s.

THE AMBITION OF JUDITH. By OLIVE BIRRELL, Author of "Anthony Langsyde," "Behind the Magic Mirror," &c.

"The story of Judith's almost unconscious fall from rectitude, and her bitter atonement, is told with a sympathy and vividness which maintain our interest to the end."—Manchester Guardian.

London: SMITH, ELDER, & CO., 15, Waterloo-place, S.W.

JUST PUBLISHED.

AN ENTIRELY NEW WORK.

THE

MUSIC DRAMAS OF RICHARD WAGNER.

AN ELUCIDATION.

By PROFESSOR LAVIGNAC,

of the Paris Conservatoire.
Fully Illustrated.
Crown 8vo, gilt top, 10s. 6d. net.

"The book has great value and certain points of view, such as the way in which the leading motives should be studied, are admirably expressed."—The Times.

"The present work of M. Lavignac is the best that we have seen."—The Outlook.

"No one who peruses it can miss learning a great deal about Wagner."—The Scotsman.

"Very systematic, minute, and careful, and, besides being very readable, should be of distinct utility; altogether this is an excellent achievement and most praiseworthy."—The Globe.

SERVICE & PATON, 5, Henrietta-st., London, W.C.

WM. BLACKWOOD & SONS' NEW PUBLICATIONS.

SOLDIER AND TRAVELLER.

Now Ready at all Libraries.

MEMOIRS OF

ALEXANDER GARDNER,

Colonel of Artillery in the service of Maharaja Ranjit Singh. Edited by Major HUGH PEARSE, 2nd Battalion East Surrey Regiment. With an Introduction by the Right Hon. Sir RICHARD TEMPLE, Bart., G.C.S.I. With two Portraits and two Maps, demy 8vo, 15s.

"Between the covers of this book there are incidents enough for a dozen novels of adventure."—Daily Chronicle.

"Full of strange stories and astonishing experiences of life in Central Asia. Many of his adventures and experiences would seem almost incredible if they were not so completely authenticated."—Daily Mail.

"What a life his had been in its first sixty years. Perhaps none so fierce and troubled will be lived by European again; certainly none fiercer and more troubled can be."—Pall Mall Gazette.

A NEW WRITER OF FICTION.

LIFE IS LIFE: And other Tales and Episodes. By ZACK. Crown 8vo, 6s.

"A very distinguished critic said to me that Zack's work recalled Emily Brontë's. That seemed an extravagant saying, but a story of hers, 'The Storm,' published a week or two back in the Outlook, went far to convince me that he was right. The thing was quite short—a scene in a cottage—but strung to a fierce intensity of passion, and, one might almost say, shaken by the storm throughout. It was indeed a masterpiece of tragic suggestion."—Pall Mall Gazette.

RE-ISSUE OF POPULAR EDITION.
Printed on Fine Laid Paper, and uniformly bound in green cloth.

George Eliot's Novels.
George Eliot's Novels.

At all Booksellers.

ADAM BEDE	3s. 6d.	SILAS MARNER	2s. 6d.
THE MILL ON THE FLOSS	3s. 6d.	SCENES OF CLERICAL LIFE	3s.
ROMOLA	3s. 6d.	MIDDLEMARCH	7s. 6d.
FELIX HOLT	3s. 6d.	DANIEL DERONDA	7s. 6d.

At all Bookstalls.

George Eliot's Novels.
George Eliot's Novels.

BLACKWOOD'S MAGAZINE.

No. 993.—JULY, 1898.—2s. 6d.

SEVENTY YEARS AT WESTMINSTER. By the Right Hon. Sir John R. Mowbray, Bart., M.P.
SIENA. By Mrs. Oliphant.
CHECKMATED: A LINNÆUS OF THE HINDU KUSH.
THE SPECIAL ATTRACTION OF GOLF.
A GREAT NATURALIST.
JOHN SPLENDID. By Neil Munro. Chaps. XXIX.—XXXI.
KARIM: A MODEL SHIKARI.
THE MEDICAL WOMAN IN FICTION.
"THE RING" AT COVENT GARDEN. By Ian Malcolm, M.P.
A SOLDIER OF FORTUNE IN THE EAST.
AT THE FALL OF THE CURTAIN. By J. B. S.
PIONEERS OF COMMERCE.
MR. GLADSTONE.

WILLIAM BLACKWOOD & SONS, Edinburgh and London.

Messrs. HURST & BLACKETT will publish next week A NEW AND IMPORTANT WORK, entitled

PERSONAL FORCES of the PERIOD,

by T. H. S. ESCOTT, Author of "England: its People, Polity, and Pursuits," "Social Transformation of the Victorian Age," &c., in 1 vol., large crown 8vo, extra cloth, price Six Shillings.

HURST & BLACKETT, (Limited), 13, Great Marlborough-street.

THREE NEW NOVELS

AT ALL LIBRARIES.

SECOND EDITION NOW READY.

THE PRIDE OF JENNICO. By EGERTON CASTLE, Author of "Consequences," &c. Second Edition. 1 vol. crown 8vo, 6s.

By S. MACNAUGHTAN.

SELAH HARRISON. By S. MACNAUGHTAN. In 1 vol. crown 8vo, 6s.

By LESLIE KEITH.

The MISCHIEF-MAKER. By LESLIE KEITH, Author of "A Rash Verdict," &c. In 2 vols. crown 8vo, 10s.

RICHARD BENTLEY & SON, New Burlington Street.

New Novel by CHAS. J. H. HALCOMBE.

THE LOVE OF A FORMER LIFE.

"The story proceeds in the most interesting manner, and proves the brilliancy of the author's imagination, his ability to handle character and scenes, and his possession of a free command of graceful diction. The theory advanced is worked into a well-told tale."—Scotsman (First Review).

London: JOHN LONG, 6, Chandos-street, Strand.

CHAPMAN & HALL'S NEW BOOKS.

NEW WORK ON CUBA.

CUBA: Past and Present. By RICHARD DAVEY. Author of "The Sultan and His Subjects." With Portraits, Illustrations, and Maps. Large crown 8vo. [In a few days.

NEW VOLUME OF THE GADSHILL DICKENS.

HARD TIMES, A HOLIDAY ROMANCE, HUNTED DOWN, and GEORGE SILVERMAN'S EXPLANATION, with the Original Illustrations by FRED WALKER, and additional ones drawn specially for the volume by Mr. MAURICE GREIFFENHAGEN. Square crown 8vo, 6s. [Ready.

THE NEW VOLUME OF THE CENTENARY CARLYLE.

FREDERICK THE GREAT, VOLUME VIII., with two Photogravure Portraits. Square crown 8vo, 3s. 6d. [Ready.
Completing "FREDERICK THE GREAT."

CHAPMAN & HALL, Limited, London.

SAINT PETER'S,

PRICE 6d.

AN ILLUSTRATED MONTHLY FAMILY MAGAZINE.

CONTENTS. JULY.

FRONTISPIECE—THE GIUDECCA, VENICE.
THE CATACOMBS OF SYRACUSE. Illustrated. — A. F. SPENDER.
STYLE. — Very Rev. H. I. D. RYDER, D.D.
THE HEATHEN. Illustrated. — M. L. HANDLEY.
CONVENT LIFE. Illustrated. — DARLEY DALE.
CHINESE SUPERSTITIONS.
A SHEAF OF CORN. Illustrated. — PATRICIA DILLON.
THE POPE'S TRIPLE CROWN. — Rev. H. THURSTON, S.J.
THE CHILDREN OF THE CHURCH (Continued). — L. E. DOBRÉE.
OUR BOOKSHELF, NEEDLEWORK, &c., &c.

OFFICE: 341, STRAND, LONDON, W.C.

1/- (BY POST, 1/2½.) 1/-

QUEER STORIES

—FROM—

"TRUTH."

Vols. I. and II., in cloth, 2s.

"TRUTH" PUBLISHING OFFICE,

10, BOLT COURT, FLEET STREET, LONDON, E.C.

Fourth Edition (Sixth Thousand), crown 8vo, 3s. 6d.

HEALTH and CONDITION in the ACTIVE and the SEDENTARY, by N. E. YORKE-DAVIES, Royal Coll. Phys. Lond., Author of "Foods for the Fat."—Contents:—Perfect health, how to attain. Deviations from health. Insidious causes of disease. Causes of premature decay. Diseases due to diet only curable by diet. Epochs in life. Exigencies of modern society. Idiosyncrasies. The foundation of health. Tight lacing, diseases from. Preservation of female beauty. A short life and a merry one. Constitutional flaws. Aristocratic ailments. The London season. The débutante. The diet of grief. Vegetarianism injurious. Ailments of mal-nutrition and of excess. Obesity, gout, acidity, leanness, indigestion, &c., &c.

Opinions of the Press.

"Those who desire a long and healthy life will perhaps find their best means of obtaining it in the study and observance of such rules as are laid down here. The book is a rational and practical guide to 'Health and Condition.'"—Morning Post.

"Full of valuable hints and suggestive warnings as to the results of improper food and insufficient exercise."—Daily Telegraph.

London: SAMPSON LOW, MARSTON, & CO., St. Dunstan's House, Fetter-lane, Fleet-street, E.C.

Post free, 1s 1d.

EXHAUSTION AND PREMATURE DECLINE IN MAN. A treatise on the restorative effects of Electrolysis.

HENRY RENSHAW, 356, Strand, London.

STERILITY IN WOMEN: Its Causes and Curative Treatment. An Illustrated Treatise based on the special practice and observation of the last 15 years. Price 3s. 6d.; post free, 3s. 8d.

London: HENRY RENSHAW, 356, Strand.

MUDIE'S SELECT LIBRARY.

For the CIRCULATION and SALE of all the BEST

ENGLISH, FRENCH, GERMAN, ITALIAN, RUSSIAN, & SPANISH BOOKS.

TOWN SUBSCRIPTIONS from ONE GUINEA per annum.

LONDON BOOK SOCIETY (for weekly exchange of Books at the Houses of Subscribers) from TWO GUINEAS per annum.

COUNTRY SUBSCRIPTIONS from TWO GUINEAS per annum.

N.B.—Two or Three Friends may UNITE IN ONE SUBSCRIPTION, and thus lessen the Cost of Carriage.

SURPLUS LIBRARY BOOKS NOW OFFERED AT GREATLY REDUCED PRICES.

A NEW CLEARANCE LIST (100 PAGES) SENT GRATIS AND POST FREE TO ANY ADDRESS.

The List contains Popular Works in Travel, Sport, History, Biography, Science, and Fiction. Also New and Surplus Copies of French, German, Italian, and Spanish Books.

MUDIE'S SELECT LIBRARY, LIMITED,

30—34, NEW OXFORD ST.; 241, BROMPTON ROAD, S.W.; 48, QUEEN VICTORIA ST., E.C. LONDON; AND AT BARTON ARCADE, MANCHESTER

GREAT NORTH OF SCOTLAND RAILWAY.

THE ROYAL ROUTE TO THE NORTH OF SCOTLAND IS viâ ABERDEEN AND THE GREAT NORTH OF SCOTLAND RAILWAY. This route serves Ballater—for Balmoral and Braemar—Peterhead, Fraserburgh, Inverurie, Turriff, Banff, Macduff, Huntly, Keith, Dufftown, Craigellachie, Buckie, Elgin, Forres, Nairn, Inverness, Dingwall, Strathpeffer, Kyle of Lochalsh—for Skye and the Western Isles—Wick, Thurso, and all places in the North of Scotland.

EXPRESS TRAINS, equipped with first and third class corridor carriages with lavatory accommodation and lighted by electricity, run from and to Aberdeen in direct connection with the West Coast and East Coast Companies' fast trains to and from London and all parts of England and Scotland.

THROUGH CARRIAGES are run between ABERDEEN and INVERNESS by all trains, and Conductors in uniform travel with the through carriages viâ Elgin.

Passenger are requested to ask for Tickets routed viâ Aberdeen.

ALTERNATIVE ROUTES.—Passengers from all through booking Stations in England and from through booking Stations in Scotland south of Perth or Dundee, to Forres, Nairn, Inverness, Strathpeffer, Wick, Thurso, and other Stations on the Highland Railway, may on request at the time of booking have tourist or ordinary return tickets made available to travel viâ Aberdeen on the outward journey and viâ Dunkeld on the return journey; or the tickets may be made out to go viâ Dunkeld and return viâ Aberdeen. In travelling viâ Aberdeen passengers have the choice in either direction of four routes on the Great North of Scotland Railway:—

(1) By the Moray Firth Coast Line, viâ Grange and Buckie.
(2) Viâ Keith Town and Craigellachie.
(3) Viâ Keith Junction and Mulben.
(4) Viâ Turriff to Banffbridge or Macduff, resuming the journey from Banff Harbour Station and travelling by the Moray Firth Coast Line viâ Buckie. There is no railway connection between Banffbridge or Macduff and Banff Harbour Station, distance about a mile.

SCENERY.—The Great North of Scotland Railway passes through some of the finest scenery in Scotland. The variety is most pleasing. At one part the Tourist traverses some of the finest agricultural districts in Scotland, with beautiful sylvan and river scenery; at the next he is surrounded by high imposing hills, rising here and there to mountains; while, if he has an eye to coast scenery, nothing could be finer than the prospect from the Coast Line, which skirts the southern shore of the beautiful Moray Firth. The famous Deeside Line, which runs along the picturesque valley of the Dee, carries one through the grandest mountain scenery in the Kingdom. BALMORAL, the Queen's Highland home, where the Court is in residence for four months each year, is within nine miles of Ballater, the terminus of the Deeside Railway. Coaches run daily during Summer between Ballater and BRAEMAR viâ Balmoral through magnificent Highland scenery.

GOLF.—There are large and excellent Golf Courses at all the important places on the Railway. A full list may be obtained on application.

CRUDEN BAY, ABERDEENSHIRE.

A New Seaside Resort. Rail from Aberdeen by the new Cruden Railway. Sheltered Beach. Golf, Bathing, Sea Fishing. Fine Coast Scenery. The Company's splendid new Hotel at Cruden Bay will be ready for the reception of visitors shortly.

Full information and copies of Time Tables, Tourist Programmes, List of Country Lodgings, &c., can be obtained by applying to Mr. A. G. REID, Passenger Superintendent, Aberdeen, or to W. MOFFATT, General Manager.

THE PALACE HOTEL, within the Passenger Station, Aberdeen, owned by the Great North of Scotland Railway Co. Lifts; electrically lighted; mechanically ventilated; covered way from Station. Hotel porters at all trains.

GAZE'S UNIVERSAL TOURS.

DIRECT TRAVEL and Circular Tours. Tickets issued in advance throughout Great Britain, the Continent, and America.

HOTEL COUPONS for 1,000 Hotels.

CONDUCTED TOURS, Paris, Belgium, The Rhine, Switzerland, &c.

PLEASURE CRUISES: Scotland, Norway, &c.

BAGGAGE, Forwarding and Insurance.

GAZE'S TOURIST GAZETTE, Monthly, gives Summary of all Arrangements and facilities.

HENRY GAZE & SONS, Ltd.,

142, STRAND; 18, WESTBOURNE GROVE; and PICCADILLY CIRCUS,

London.

NORWAY, SWEDEN, and DENMARK.—Improved Service by the ROYAL MAIL HARWICH-HOOK OF HOLLAND route. Daily (Sundays included) service to the Continent. Cheapest Route to Germany and Quickest to Holland—to Amsterdam 11 hours.

ANTWERP, viâ HARWICH, for Brussels, Spa, The Ardennes (Cheapest Continental Holiday), Germany, Switzerland, &c., every week-day.

Passengers leave London (Liverpool-street Station) at 8.30 p.m. for the Hook of Holland, and at 8.40 p.m. for Antwerp. Direct service to Harwich from Scotland, the North and Midlands. Restaurant car from York. HAMBURG by G.S.N. Co.'s fast passenger steamers "Peregrine" and "Seamew," Wednesdays and Saturdays. Cheap tickets and tours to all parts of the Continent. Read the G.E.R. Co.'s "Tourist Guide to the Continent," illustrated, price 6d., post 8d. Particulars at the G.E.R. Co.'s American Rendezvous, 2, Cockspur-street, S.W.; or of the Continental Manager, Liverpool-street Station, E.C.

ORIENT COMPANY'S PLEASURE CRUISES

by their

Steamship "LUSITANIA," 3,912 tons register.

For COPENHAGEN, WISBY, STOCKHOLM, ST. PETERSBURG, BALTIC CANAL, &c.,
leaving London 17th August, returning 14th September.

For SICILY, CONSTANTINOPLE, the CRIMEA, GREECE, MALTA, ALGIERS, &c.,
leaving London 20th September, returning 8th November.

String Band, Electric Light, High-class Cuisine.

Managers { F. GREEN & CO. / ANDERSON, ANDERSON, & CO. } Head Offices: Fenchurch-avenue.

For passage apply to the latter firm at 5, Fenchurch-avenue, London, E.C.; or to the West End Branch Office, 1, Cockspur-street, S.W.

SIX GUINEAS.—GENEVA TOUR, nine days, extensions to Chamounix (Mont Blanc), Zermatt (Matterhorn), St. Gothard, Oberland, &c. Lecturers, Sir Robert Ball, Mr. Edward Whymper, Dr. Lunn. Departures weekly from May 10.—Details from Secretary, 5, Endsleigh-gardens, Euston, N.W., 32, Piccadilly, W.; 47, St. Paul's-churchyard, E.C.; 3, Charing-cross, S.W.

AMUSEMENTS.

"DR. BARNARDO'S HOMES FOR ORPHAN WAIFS."

THE 33RD ANNUAL MEETING

Will (D.V.) be held at the HOMES, Stepney Causeway, LONDON, E.,

On FOUNDER'S DAY, SATURDAY, 9th JULY, 1898

When an Exhibition and Entertainment will be given at 1.15 p.m. closing at 8 p.m.

Among the items of the day's proceedings will be the following:—

1. Battalion Drill, Manual Firing, Company Drill, and Bayonet Exercises.
2. Emigrants' March Past, en route for Canada.
3. Musical Drill and Gymnastics by little men and women.
4. The Maypole on the Village Green and Girls' Games.
5. Fire Alarm—Saved by the Fire Escape.
6. A Tiny Flower Fete, with Mimie Bataille des Fleurs.
7. Naval Cutlass Drill.
8. Aquatics in the Swimming Bath.
9. Tug of War and Flag Races.
10. All the Workshops will be open to view, showing in full operation the following Trades:—Tinsmiths, Bootmakers, Cooks, Engineers, Bakers, Blacksmiths, Wheelwrights, Carpenters, Brush-makers, Mat-makers, Harness-makers, Tailors, Printers, Woodchoppers, and Laundresses.
11. Her Majesty's Hospital for Sick Waifs will be open between 1 and 5 p.m.
12. Opening Ceremony of the New Chapel in the Boys' Home.
13. A Bazaar of Useful and Fancy Articles will be carried on during the afternoon. It is hoped that Visitors will purchase largely from the stalls, and so benefit the Great Family of nearly 5,000 Waif Children always being maintained in the Homes.
14. The Thirty-third Annual Meeting will be held at 3.30 p.m., presided over by HIS EXCELLENCY LORD BRASSEY, K.C.B., Governor of Victoria, and supported, it is hoped among others by Her Grace The "Duchess of Somerset"; The Japanese Minister; Lady Hope, and T. A. Denny, Esq.; Arnold F. Hills, Esq., D.L.; Rev. Canon Fleming, B.D.; Rev. Dr. Monro Gibson; Sir James Rankin, Bart., M.P.; Rev. Prebendary Barker, M.A.; Rev. George Hansom; William Fowler, Esq.; Howard Williams, Esq.; Dr. Harry Guinness; Rev. D. B. Hankin, M.A.; and Dr. Barnardo.

FOUNDER'S DAY, being also SHILLING DAY,

It is hoped that friends of the Institution and members of the public generally will contribute not less than One Shilling towards the funds. Special Cards for collecting (One Shilling each) have been devised, which will be sent to any address on application, and which must be returned on or before "Founders' Day."

PRIZES WILL BE PRESENTED BY THE LADY BRASSEY.

Admission Tickets (price One Shilling) will be supplied on application to the General Secretary, or at the doors on Founder's Day.

For the Swimming Contests, Special Tickets will be issued of two colours: Red Tickets for the first entertainment at Five o'clock; and Blue Tickets for the second entertainment at Half-past Six.

Refreshment Tickets, to be obtained on arrival, will also be supplied at Sixpence per head.

THERE WILL BE A COLLECTION IN AID OF THE FUNDS DURING THE PROCEEDINGS. JOHN ODLING, General Secretary.

Offices of the Homes: 18 to 26, Stepney Causeway, London, E.

HOLIDAYS ABROAD.

DIEPPE.

AN IDEAL SEASIDE RESORT FOR ENGLISH VISITORS,

ONLY FIVE HOURS FROM LONDON.

Two English Churches. Superb cycling roads. Excellent Golf Links (Sunday play). Best Casino in Europe (June to October). Dancing, &c.

Information free from L. BRAU, 140, Grand Rue, Dieppe, France.

NORWAY AND BALTIC CRUISES.

The S.Y. VICTORIA sails JULY 2nd, for 25 days, to NORTH CAPE and NORWEGIAN FIORDS.

To be followed by other cruises on July 30th, and August 18th.

The only modern pleasure cruiser with large airy cabins.

For particulars, apply Manager, 4, Regent-street; GRINDLAY & CO., 55, Parliament-street; or any of THOS. COOK & SONS' Offices.

---

12 GUINEA NORWAY CRUISES from NEWCASTLE-ON-TYNE—FORTNIGHTLY.

"MIDNIGHT SUN," 3,178 Tons, 3,500 H.P.

Finest YACHTING STEAMER afloat. NO UPPER BERTHS.

Sailings:—May 28; June 11, 25; July 9, 23; and August 6, 20.

Special Cruises, September 3rd and 17th.

Fares from 12 Guineas, including first-class table.

For itinerary, &c., apply to the PASSENGER AGENT, ALBION S.S. Co., Ltd., Mercantile Chambers, Newcastle-on-Tyne.

JAPAN, CHINA, AUSTRALIA, HONOLULU, FIJI, NEW ZEALAND, and ROUND THE WORLD.

CANADIAN PACIFIC ROUTE,

For berths or descriptive pamphlets, apply CANADIAN PACIFIC RAILWAY, 67 and 68, King William-street, London Bridge, or 30, Cockspur-street, Trafalgar-square, S.W.

A REMARKABLE PIPE! Why? Because

The "MASTA" Pipe

Absolutely carries out what is claimed for it—viz., Simplicity of Construction, Perfect Freedom from Nicotine, No Choking, Cool, Dry, Sweet, Clean, & Healthful Smoking.

Prices from 1/6, 2/6, 3/6. Your Tobacconist will supply it. If any delay, write The "Masta" Patent Pipe Co. (Dept. 18), 153, Fleet-street, London, E.C.

Mr. THOMAS VOSS, Post Office, New Tredegar, via Cardiff, April 1st, 1898:—"I am very pleased with the 'Masta'; is is all that is claimed for it. I shall recommend it to all my friends."

AMUSEMENTS.

HAYMARKET THEATRE.
Sole Lessee, Mr. Frederick Harrison.
Managers, Mr. Frederick Harrison and Mr. Cyril Maude.
EVERY EVENING (except on Saturdays), at 8.30,
THE LITTLE MINISTER, by J. M. Barrie.
Miss WINIFRED EMERY and Mr. CYRIL MAUDE.
MATINEES EVERY WEDNESDAY and SATURDAY, at 2.30.

LEEDS MUSICAL FESTIVAL, Wednesday, Thursday, Friday, and Saturday, October 5, 6, 7, and 8, 1898.

FIRST SEAT SINGLE TICKET (Ground Floor only), Morning .. £1 1 0
FIRST SEAT SINGLE TICKET (Ground Floor only), Evening .. 15 0
Plans open in the Festival Office on Monday next, June 27, and following days, at 10 a.m.

SERIAL TICKETS have all been SOLD.
Second Seats cannot be purchased before September, and will not then be guaranteed, except for Saturday Night.
All applications for First Seat Single Tickets, as above, must be accompanied by a remittance for the full value of the Tickets required.
Cheques and Orders payable to FRED. R. SPARK, J.P., Hon. Sec.
Festival Office,
42, Great George-street, Leeds.

CRYSTAL PALACE.
CAFÉ CHANTANT ON OPEN-AIR STAGE,
Twice daily at 4.0 and 8.0
Frequent Change of Programme.
Entertainment in Theatre at 5.30 every Afternoon, concluding with the Grand Allegorical Ballet from Brussels, entitled GLITTERING GOLD.
Seats, 6d. to 2s.

MAGNIFICENT DISPLAY of FIREWORKS, by C. T. Brock & Co., Every Thursday at 9.15. Colossal Set Piece, an eighth of a mile long, depicting
THE BATTLE OF MANILA BAY.
Can be witnessed by tens of thousands, without extra payment.

GREAT ROSE SHOW,
Saturday, July 2nd, from 12 till 6.
Also THE NATIONAL VIOLA SOCIETY SHOW.
Admission, Monday to Friday, 1s.; Saturday, 2s. 6d., from 12 till 6. 1s. after 6.

THE QUEEN'S DIAMOND JUBILEE PRESENTS
On View at the
IMPERIAL INSTITUTE
From 1 p.m. to 11 p.m.

IMPERIAL INSTITUTE.
EXHIBITION of ACETYLENE GAS.
APPARATUS and PRODUCTION.
ILLUMINATION of GALLERY by ACETYLENE.

IMPERIAL INSTITUTE.
THE CONCERT ORCHESTRA,
From the THEATRE LA SCALA, MILAN,
Director, LEANDRO CAMPANARI.
CONCERTS DAILY, at 4 p.m. and 8.45 p.m.
Covered way communication with the South Kensington Subway.
Admission 1s., from 1 p.m. to 11 p.m., except Wednesdays (Fellows' Day), when admission is by ticket only, to be obtained from Fellows.

IMPERIAL INSTITUTE.
COLLECTIONS of PRODUCTS from all parts of the EMPIRE.
Open free to the Public from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m.

IMPERIAL INSTITUTE.
DINNERS from 6.30 p.m. Luncheons, &c. Orders addressed to Superintendent, Catering Syndicate. Telephone No. 623 Kensington.

INTERNATIONAL UNIVERSAL EXHIBITION,
EARL'S COURT, West Brompton, and West Kensington.
IMRE KIRALFY, Director-General.
Admission Daily, 1s. Open 11 a.m. to 11 p.m.
BAND of the 1st GRENADIER GUARDS.
BAND of the HONOURABLE ARTILLERY COMPANY.
The LONDON EXHIBITIONS' ORCHESTRAL BAND.
THE EMPRESS THEATRE.
GRAND PATRIOTIC NAVAL SPECTACLE.
Peace and War. Naval Manœuvres. The Fleet at Night.
Attack on the Enemy's Forts.
TWICE DAILY, at 3.30 and 9 p.m.
Thousands of Reserved Seats at 6d., 1s., 2s., and 3s.
The Imperial Japanese Troupe. American Liliputian Troupe.
Grand Hungarian Feszty Panorama. Royal Javanese Troupe.
Hagenbeck's Zoological Kindergarten. Moorish Camp.
Bella Napoli Troupe. Electric Theatre. Captive Balloon.
THE GREAT WHEEL, 300 ft. HIGH.
South Sea Islanders. "Astarte." Belvedere Tower. Electrophone.
Switchback. Electric Launches.
WET or DRY, London's one place to spend an ENJOYABLE 12 HOURS.
THE FLORAL LOUNGE.
The Most Delightful Entertainment Hall in the World.
The Chamounix Minstrels and other Novel Attractions Daily, Free.

PALACE, Shaftesbury-avenue. — The HANDSOMEST THEATRE in EUROPE. The finest Variety Entertainment in London. Full Licence. Prices from 6d. Doors open 8.—Manager, Mr. CHARLES MORTON.

TIVOLI, Strand, London.—The Greatest Combination of Talent in London.—Open EVERY EVENING, at 7.30, and SATURDAY MATINEE, at 2.30, with a STAR PROGRAMME, embracing every Artiste of note.—Manager, Mr. VERNON DOWSETT.

MADAME TUSSAUD'S EXHIBITION, Baker-street Station.—Gordon's Last Stand at Khartoum. New Portrait Models of the late Mr. W. E. Gladstone, Emile Zola, &c.

OPERA and THEATRE TICKETS.—Boxes, Stalls, Dress Circle, and Upper Circle in good positions for "The Opera," and every Theatre in London, can be had at any office of the DISTRICT MESSENGER AND THEATRE TICKET COMPANY. Branches City and West-end. Letters and telegrams to 193, Piccadilly, next to Prince's Hall.

AMUSEMENTS.

LYCEUM.—THE MERCHANT OF VENICE, TO-NIGHT (Wednesday), at 8, and Next Friday Night (Last Night of the Season).
HENRY IRVING. | Miss ELLEN TERRY.
NANCE OLDFIELD and THE BELLS, To-morrow (Thursday) Night.
M. COQUELIN in CYRANO DE BERGERAC, Two Weeks, commencing Monday Next, July 4. Matinées July 9 and 16.
Box-office (Mr. J. Hurst) open 10 to 5, and 7.30 to 10. Seats booked by letter or telegram.

HER MAJESTY'S THEATRE.
Proprietor and Manager, Mr. HERBERT BEERBOHM TREE.
EVERY EVENING, at 8.30 (doors 8).

RAGGEDY ROBIN.

Adapted by Louis N. Parker
from "Le Chimineau," by Jean Richepin.
MATINEE EVERY WEDNESDAY and SATURDAY, at 2.30.
Box-office (Mr. F. J. Turner) 10 to 10. Seats booked from 2s.

GAIETY.—Lessee and Manager, GEORGE EDWARDES.
EVERY EVENING, at 8 o'clock (doors open 7.40),
A RUNAWAY GIRL.
Box-office open daily from 10 till 6.
MATINEE SATURDAY NEXT, at 2. Doors open 1.40.

SAVOY THEATRE.—Every Evening at 8.10, and Every Saturday Afternoon at 2.15, the New Romantic Musical Drama, THE BEAUTY STONE, by A. W. Pinero, J. Comyns Carr, and Arthur Sullivan. Box-office 9 a.m. to 11 p.m.—R. D'OYLY CARTE, Manager.

GARRICK.—Lessee and Manager, H. T. BRICKWELL.
WEDNESDAY, June 29, and EVERY EVENING, at 8.30,
Mr. Charles Frohman's Company, including Miss Annie Russell, in SUE, by Bret Harte and J. Edgar Pemberton.

DALY'S THEATRE.—EVERY EVENING, at 8.15, Matinée EVERY SATURDAY, at 2.30. Mr. George Edwardes' Company in a New Musical Play, A GREEK SLAVE. The book by Owen Hall, with Lyrics by Harry Greenbank and Adrian Ross, the Music by Sidney Jones.

COURT THEATRE, Sloane Square.—Sole Lessee and Manager, Mr. ARTHUR CHUDLEIGH.—TO-NIGHT, at 9 p.m., HIS EXCELLENCY THE GOVERNOR, by R. Marshall. Preceded, at 8.30, by MRS. RAWDON'S REHEARSAL. Doors open 8. MATINEE EVERY SATURDAY, at 3, and SPECIAL MATINEE Wednesday, July 6, at 3.

LYRIC THEATRE.—SARAH BERNHARDT.
Lessee, Mr. WILLIAM GREET.
MADAME SARAH BERNHARDT'S SEASON
(Under the Direction of Mr. MAURICE GRAU).
TO-NIGHT (THURSDAY), at 8 ..... { JULIE AND
TO-MORROW (FRIDAY) ..... { LA FEMME DE CLAUD.
SATURDAY NEXT, July 2 ..... LA DAME AUX CAMELIAS.
MATINEE at 2.30.
SATURDAY NEXT, July 2, at 2 ..... ADRIENNE LECOUVREUR.
Box-office open 10 till 10. General Manager, Mr. CHAS. J. ABUD.

ST. JAMES'S.—Mr. GEORGE ALEXANDER,
Sole Lessee and Manager.
TO-NIGHT, and EVERY EVENING, at 8.30,
THE AMBASSADOR,
A Comedy, in Four Acts, by John Oliver Hobbes.
MATINEE SATURDAY NEXT, at 2.
Box-office open 10 to 10. ST. JAMES'S THEATRE.

COMEDY THEATRE, Panton-street, Haymarket.
Sole Manager, Mr. CHARLES HAWTREY.
TO-NIGHT, and EVERY EVENING, at 8.30,
LORD AND LADY ALGY,
an Original Light Comedy, in Three Acts, by R. C. Carton.
Mr. CHARLES HAWTREY and Company.
At 8, a Duologue, entitled CONSTANCY, by Cyril Hallward.
MATINEES, WEDNESDAY NEXT, July 6, at 3, and WEDNESDAYS July 13 and 20. Box-office open 10 to 10. COMEDY.

CRITERION THEATRE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. CHARLES WYNDHAM.—EVERY EVENING at 8.15, THE LIARS, by Henry Arthur Jones. Mr. CHARLES WYNDHAM, Miss MARY MOORE, and Company. N.B.—Next Wednesday's MATINEE of THE LIARS is unavoidably POSTPONED. The LAST MATINEE of the PRESENT SEASON will take place on Wednesday, July 6, at 2.30.

SHAFTESBURY THEATRE.
Directors, WILLIAMSON and MUSGROVE, Limited.
EVERY EVENING, at 8, Casino Theatre Company, of New York, in
THE BELLE OF NEW YORK.
"The subject of all the town talk."
Box-office now open at the Theatre from 10 till 10.
MATINEE WEDNESDAY and SATURDAY at 2.

VAUDEVILLE.—A. & S. GATT, Sole Lessees and Managers. THE FRENCH MAID. TO-NIGHT, at 8.20. LAST WEEKS. Doors open 8. MATINEE EVERY WEDNESDAY at 2.30.

EMPIRE THEATRE.—EVERY EVENING, New Ballet, THE PRESS, and Sporting Sketch, THE RACE. Grand VARIETIES. Doors open at 7.45.

LONDON PAVILION.—TO-NIGHT, at 9.30,
An entirely New and Sporting Stage Novelty.
A MILE BICYCLE RACE FOR LADIES,
To be ridden in Two Heats and a Final. A genuine Race, with Illusive Scenery.
To-night and Every Evening, at 9.30.

LONDON PAVILION.—Vesta Tilley, Eugene Stratton, Bertoldi, Chirgwin, Brothers Griffiths Geo. Robey, Rachael Walker, T. E. Dunville, and many others. Prices from 1. to £3 3s.—Manager, Mr. FRANK GLENISTER.

"TRUTH" HOTEL LIST.

ABERYSTWITH.—The QUEEN'S HOTEL faces the sea, and is lighted by electricity. The late Sir Jas. Clarke, M.D., says: "A fortnight at Aberystwith is equal to a month at most watering-places." For tariffs, &c., apply to W. H. PALMER, Proprietor. Soft Atlantic breezes. Pure water from Plinlimmon, and excellent drainage.

BATH.—LANSDOWN GROVE HOTEL.—Desirable residence, in beautifully wooded grounds, 400 feet above sea level, facing south, and protected from north and east. Air dry and bracing. Assembly and Pump Rooms within easy distance. Omnibus free to and from Hot Mineral Baths. Billiards. Tennis Lawn.

BOURNEMOUTH.—HOTEL MONT DORE.—South aspect. 150 rooms, electric light throughout, passenger lift, first-class cuisine, winter garden and lounge, covered tennis court. Turkish, sea-water, and medicated Baths. The Hotel is within two minutes' walk of the Golf Links.—For tariff, address W. KNEESE, Manager.

BOURNEMOUTH.—HIGHCLIFFE HOTEL. Unrivalled position, West Cliff, full south. Splendid sea view. Table d'hôte (separate tables). Supplies from Alderney Dairy Farm. Telephone 27.—J. KILNER, Proprietor.

BRIGHTON.—BEDFORD HOTEL.—Old-established. Unequalled in situation; opposite West Pier. Spacious coffee and reading rooms; sea-water service; unequalled cuisine; great variety of excellent wines. Moderate tariff. Electric light in all rooms. Passenger lift to all the floors.
GEO. BECKFORD, Manager.

BRIGHTON.—GRAND HOTEL.—Centre of sea front. Electric Light throughout. Lift to all floors. Bicycle room. Inclusive terms if desired from 10s. 6d. to 15s. per day.—For particulars apply to A. D. HOOK, Manager.

CARBIS BAY HOTEL, Cornwall. The very spot to obtain rest and quietude. Overlooking the finest bay in England. Mild yet bracing climate. Within easy distance of London by G. W. R. Splendid Golf Links. "A more beautiful spot for residence could hardly be imagined."—Truth.

EXMOUTH.—IMPERIAL HOTEL.—Private Gardens, facing Sea. Beautiful views. Faultless accommodation. Excellent cuisine. Good stabling. Perfect sanitation. Sea bathing. Trout and sea fishing. Boating, yachting, steam launch, tennis, golf. Under entirely new management.

FOLKESTONE.—BATES' HOTEL, West Cliff Gardens, and LONGFORD PRIVATE HOTEL, The Lees. Oldest established and most select Family Hotels in Folkestone. Reduced terms during Winter and Spring months. Pension (new Coffee-room) at Bates' Hotel.—G. L. HART, Proprietor. Sanitation Certified.

FOLKESTONE.—The LEAS HOTEL.—Situated in private grounds. Adjoining fashionable promenade. Sea views. Refurnished throughout. Passenger lift. Certified sanitation. Excellent cuisine. Moderate tariff. Good golf links and tennis court.

GRAND CANARY.—The Newest and Best Hotel is The METROPOLE. Facing the sea. Delightful position.
Terms most moderate.
Agents, ELDER, DEMPSTER & CO., 14, Castle-street, Liverpool, and 4, St. Mary Axe, London, E.C.

JERSEY.—GRAND HOTEL.—The only first-class modern Hotel facing the sea, and full south, the largest, the best appointed, and the up-to-date Hotel in the Channel Islands. Liberal Management.
D. DE LEIDI, Manager.

MALVERN—The IMPERIAL HOTEL occupies the best position, and receives visitors en pension. The golf-links (18 holes) are one of the best in England. Capital stabling for hunters. Droitwich Brine, Turkish and large Swimming Bath in separate buildings.—For tariff, apply to the Proprietor, F. MOERSCHELL.

SANDGATE.—ROYAL KENT HOTEL, a favourite resort of Ruskin. An ideal summer and winter residence, delightfully situated in its own grounds, facing the sea. Redecorated and refurnished. New Coffee-room, Smoking-room, and Conservatory have recently been added. Fifteen minutes from Folkestone. Omnibus meets all trains Sandgate Station.—J. E. TANARI, Prop.

SOUTHSEA.—ROYAL BEACH MANSIONS HOTEL.—Largest in Southsea, splendidly situated on the beach; 300 yards nearer the sea than any other public hotel on the line of marine terraces. Passenger lift. Inclusive terms from £3. 13s. 6d. per week. Entirely under new management.—M. ECCLES, Manageress.

TORQUAY.—IMPERIAL HOTEL.—Under entirely New Management. New sanitary arrangements throughout. It is the largest and best-situated Hotel in Torquay, and the best winter residence on the South Coast. Visitors received en pension or à la carte. Terms moderate.
F. FISCHER, Manager.

BUXTON DERBYSHIRE.

Highest Town in England.
On the Mountain Limestone.
1,000 feet above sea level.

Centre of the picturesque Peak District. Pure Air. Charming Scenery.

HOT MINERAL-WATER BATHS FOR GOUT, RHEUMATISM, SCIATICA, &c.

NATURAL TEMPERATURE 82° FAHRENHEIT.

Finest Public Gardens at any Health Resort in Europe, with Pavilion, Theatre, Concert-Hall, Tennis, Bowls, etc. Golf Links (18 holes).

For ILLUSTRATED GUIDE, with Tariffs of the leading Hotels, Hydropathics, Boarding and Lodging Houses, send postage-stamp to THE CLERK, COUNCIL OFFICES, TOWN HALL, BUXTON, DERBYSHIRE.

AVONDALE HOTEL & RESTAURANT

(Corner of Dover-street and Piccadilly).
MAGNIFICENT SUITES of ROOMS, including Ladies' Reception-room.
KANDT'S ROYAL ORCHESTRA
plays nightly during Dinner and Supper.
LUNCHEON, 4s.; DINNER, 10s. 6d.; SUPPER, 4s.
A SPECIAL ROYAL ACADEMY LUNCHEON at 2s. 6d. served daily.
The Wines have been most carefully selected by connoisseurs.
Manager: Mons. GARI } late of the Savoy Hotel.
Chef de Cuisine: Mons. DUTRU. }

AND

HATCHETT'S RESTAURANT.

UNDER AVONDALE HOTEL.

Under entirely new management. First-class Cuisine and Unrivalled Cellar of Wines. Moderate Prices. Luncheons, Dinners, and Suppers, Table d'Hôte, Grill-room, and à la Carte. Arrangements are being made for a String Band to play nightly during Dinner and Supper.
Manager: Mons. EUGENE.

LONDON.—BRUNSWICK HOTEL, Jermyn-street, Piccadilly. New Sanitation and Redecoration by Warings. First-class cuisine. High-class Family Hotel. Moderate tariff. Under new management.

HASTINGS. Due South, Facing Sea.

QUEEN'S HOTEL,

LARGEST AND BEST APPOINTED.
Sunny, and most sheltered position in Hastings and St. Leonards.
ELECTRIC LIGHT. PASSENGER ELEVATOR.
Moderate Tariff. Hotel Flys attend the trains.
WILLIAM GLADE, Manager.

SAVOY HOTEL OVERLOOKING RIVER AND EMBANKMENT GARDENS.

By day the most beautiful garden and river view in Europe. By night a fairy scene. All charges for rooms include baths, lights, and attendance.

Savoy Restaurant.

Of Gastronomic Fame. Dinners à la Carte. Private Rooms for Parties.

The Savoy Dejeuner à prix fixe, 5s., served on the Balcony overlooking the Gardens and River from 12 to 3.

"The Opera Supper," 5s. The Orchestra plays during Dinner and Supper.

The Restaurant is under the direction of the famous Maitre d'Hôtel, "Joseph," of the Restaurant Marivaux, Paris. Chef, Maître THOURAUD.

Prix Fixe Dinner (7s. 6d.) is served in the new Salle à Manger, on the Restaurant Floor, at Separate Tables, from 6 to 8 30.

The GRAND HOTEL, ROME, is under the same direction.

MARGATE.—WHITE HART HOTEL.
Sixty Bedrooms, many commanding magnificent sea views. Famous for its perfect English cooking and choice cellar. Most invigorating sea air in England. Under supervision of Proprietor—G. MARSHALL.

ILFRACOMBE.

ILFRACOMBE HOTEL.

Famous for its high-class Cuisine and general comfort.

The PRINCIPAL and ONLY HOTEL on the SEASHORE.

An ideal position. 250 rooms. Grounds five acres. Tennis, Croquet. Splendid Swimming Bath. Elegant Lounge Hall. Passenger Lift. Moderate tariff. Terms "en pension."
H. R. GROVER, Manager.

HOTELS, &c.

WALSINGHAM HOUSE
HOTEL AND RESTAURANT,
PICCADILLY, W.

THE MAGNIFICENT NEW RESTAURANT, with Reception Rooms, Private Dining Room, &c., exquisitely decorated and perfect in every detail, WILL BE OPENED SHORTLY. WALSINGHAM HOUSE occupies the most unique and central position in Fashionable London. THE RESTAURANT AND PUBLIC ROOMS overlook the celebrated Green Park, Piccadilly, and command a magnificent pastoral view, although in the heart of London.
A CHARMING TERRACE AND GARDEN are also attached to the Hotel. Each single Room and each Suite of Rooms provided with a luxurious Bath Room.

Telegrams: "SOIGNÉ, LONDON." G. GELARDI, Manager.
WALSINGHAM HOUSE (opposite Devonshire House), PICCADILLY, LONDON, W.

A FINE HOTEL] DOVER [IN DOVER BAY

Accommodates 400 guests. Is superbly appointed, with all the comforts of a well-arranged mansion at moderate cost. Perfect cuisine. The Dover Golf Links for use of Hotel Burlington visitors. The finest coast hotel in England. Brochure and Tariff free.

Facing the Pleasure Pier and in centre of Dover Bay.

HOTEL BURLINGTON

FURNESS ABBEY
HOTEL

SPACIOUS COFFEE, DRAWING, AND SMOKE ROOMS. WELL-APPOINTED BILLIARD ROOM.

IN THE CENTRE OF LAKELAND.

ENTIRELY REFURNISHED AND REDECORATED.

SPIERS & POND, Ltd.

BUXTON, DERBYSHIRE.

THE PALACE HOTEL.

200 rooms. Finest position. Own grounds. American elevator. Tariff, with plan of rooms and sketch map of Buxton, on application. A. CROSS, Manager.

RAMSGATE.

THE GRANVILLE.

SEA BATHING. Finest Sands in Brittany.
GRAND HOTEL DE PARAME, ST. MALO, France.
First-class Hotel, on the Beach. Much favoured by the principal English families. Reading and Ladies' Rooms, Lawn Tennis, &c. Next to the Casino. Reasonable terms. Tariff sent gratis.

THE NEW FOREST: 90,000 acres of magnificent woodland scenery, intersected by good cycling roads. The CROWN HOTEL, rebuilt 1897, is situated on high ground in the best part of lovely LYNDHURST, the village capital of the NEW FOREST. Large gardens. Posting stables. Electric light. Nearest station, Lyndhurst-road.

CLIFTON GRAND SPA HYDRO., BRISTOL.

Now open. The Premier Hydro. Sumptuously equipped. Pump Room. Unrivalled Turkish, Russian, and other baths. Sea trips. Drives. Golf. Tennis. Resident Physician. Address Manager. Telegrams, "Spa, Bristol."

CLARENDON HOTEL, Princes-street, Edinburgh.—First-class Family Hotel. Opposite Castle, and overlooking the gardens. Kitchen lately fitted up on top of Hotel. Recommended to American visitors. Under the personal management of the new Proprietor.

FOLKESTONE. — QUEEN'S HOTEL. Centrally situated, Within Two Minutes' Walk of THE LEAS.
Inclusive Terms, 10s. 6d. Daily.
Boulogne Return Boat Fare (Sundays) 6s. 6d.

THE INTERNATIONAL PALACE HOTELS.

OSTEND ..... Hotel de la Plage.
ARDENNES..... Chateau d'Ardennes.
(Palace of Leopold II.)
LISBON ..... The Avenida Palace.
THERAPIA ..... Bosphorus Summer Palace.
London Office, 14, Cockspur-street, S.W.

PITLOCHRY.
THE ATHOLL HYDROPATHIC (Macdonald's).

The ORIGINAL and very much the LARGEST.
500 feet above sea level. Pure, dry, bracing air. Extensive pleasure grounds (36 acres). Tennis—Croquet—Cycling—Golf—Archery—Fishing.
Inclusive Terms from 2½ Guineas each per week. To prevent disappointment, address all communications "THE ATHOLL, PITLOCHRY."
Telegraphic Address "ATHOLL." SEASON COMMENCES 26th MAY.

LIQUEURS OF THE GRANDE CHARTREUSE.

These delicious Liqueurs, which have come so much into public favour on account of their wonderful properties of aiding Digestion and preventing Dyspepsia, can now be had of all the principal Wine and Spirit Merchants, and all good Hotels and Restaurants throughout the Kingdom.
Sole Consignee: W. DOYLE, 35, Crutched Friars, London, E.C.

ESTATES, AUCTIONS, &c.

ALDRIDGE'S.—Excelsior Coach Horses.—THIS DAY, WEDNESDAY, JUNE 29th, Messrs. W. & S. FREEMAN will SELL, without reserve, at ALDRIDGE'S, St. Martin's-lane, London,
40 high-class COACH-HORSES that have been running in the Excelsior Coach during the last winter from Brighton to Portsmouth and London to Lingfield up to the present time, the property of E. B. Hasclden, Esq., of Broadwater, Beckenham, Kent. They have been selected with the greatest care and judgment from the principal fairs in England and Ireland, and consist of match teams, pairs, single-harness horses, with nice mouths, manners, and good action, and good hunters, showing much quality.
Two skewbald Geldings, Fashion and Foster, make a grand pair, also fine tandem team, fit for a lady to drive. Several sets of four-horse Harness will also be included in the sale.
Full catalogue of CHARLES WEBLING, Professional Coachman, Langley Park, Beckenham, and of the Auctioneers, V. & S. FREEMAN.

TATTERSALL'S THURSDAYS' SALES at ALBERT GATE.

Messrs. TATTERSALL beg to give notice that their THURSDAYS' SALES have commenced, and will be continued during the season.
SALES ON MONDAYS AND THURSDAYS.

TO INVALIDS.—A LIST of MEDICAL MEN, in all parts, receiving RESIDENT PATIENTS sent gratis, with full particulars, Schools also recommended.—Medical, &c., Association, Ltd., 8, Lancaster-place, Strand, W.C. Tel. Add., "Triform, London." Telephone No. 1,854 (Gerrard).

SALARIED APPOINTMENT VACANT.—A large Financial Corporation require the SERVICES of a GENTLEMAN of good social position to fill the above. Only those of undoubted standing need apply.—Address, L. H. S., 71, Piccadilly.

HAVE YOU TRIED . .
CEPHALIA
For HAY FEVER, NEURALGIC PAINS, & COLDS in the HEAD, &c.?
If not, send 13½d. for a Box to
REECE & CO., Medical Hall, Piccadilly, London.
EFFECT SIMPLY MIRACULOUS.

"COOPER" CYCLES.

From £5 10. Competition Defied.
Latest design Frame, large Weldless Steel Tubes, Ball Bearings, Tangent Wheels, Brake, and Mud-guards, Cushion Tyres, £5 10; Pneumatic, £7 10; Ladies', with Dress and Gear Guards, from £6 Twelve months' warranty. Lists free. AGENTS WANTED
Wm. Cooper, 713, Old Kent Rd., London, S.E.

MAPLE & CO

LONDON and PARIS

GARDEN AND LAWN
FURNITURE

TENTS UMBRELLAS
CANOPIED SEATS
"UMBRA" CHAIRS 6s 10d
LAWN CHAIRS 3s 6d
MADEIRA CHAIRS 6s 9d
HAMMOCK CHAIRS 3s 3d
DUNSTER TABLES 7s 6d
UMBRELLA TENTS with Iron Tables 34s 6d
PLAIN and FANCY HAMMOCKS 2s 6d to 50s

LAWN MOWERS ROLLERS
ENGINES HOSE AND REELS
CYCLES BABY CARRIAGES

CUSHIONS for LAWN or RIVER 2s 6d each

"GF" Illustrations of Useful Articles for Outdoor Use Post free "GF"

LONDON and PARIS

MAPLE & CO

Bulmer's Cider

Guaranteed Pure Juice of the Apple.

Price Lists and Testimonials from

H. P. BULMER & CO., Hereford

or of Wine Merchants Everywhere.

Madame Marie Mathieu,

Who has been privately patronised by the highest ladies in England and abroad, begs to state that BY THEIR DESIRE she has now taken additional rooms at

23, CONDUIT STREET, W.

She wishes it to be known that she is the SOLE OWNER and IMPORTER of the OIL which she uses in her treatment for the removal of wrinkles and in all her preparations for the skin.

Prices: Derma Paste, 10/6; Crème Roma, 5/-; Avoinine Powder, 3/6.

All these preparations are harmless, healthy, and most beneficial to the skin.

Hours: 11 a.m. to 6 p.m.

THE ESMOND SADDLE

15/- (moveable). 17/6

For Ladies and Gentlemen.

Absolute freedom from all Saddle Discomforts and Increased Power Guaranteed.

TRY ONE FOR A WEEK.

Botolph House, Eastcheap, London.

WATER ABSOLUTELY FREE FROM DISEASE GERMS, BY USING THE

BERKEFELD FILTER.

Full Illustrated Price List and Testimonials free on application.

FILTER H. AS SKETCH, 42s.

SMALLER SIZE, 30s.

Extract from the Special Report to the British Medical Journal on "The Relative Efficiency of Water Filters," by Drs. Sims Woodhead and Cartwright Wood, Jan. 22nd, 1898. "Experiments were carried out with the Filter H, an exceedingly good model which seems to subserve the functions of a Filter better than any we have yet seen described. . . . The output is so large that there is no reason why such Filters should not supply sufficient water for all household requirements. These Berkefeld Filters afford complete protection against the communication of waterborne disease."—Offices and Showrooms:—

THE BERKEFELD FILTER CO., Ltd., 121, Oxford-street, London, W.

City Depot: W. SCHACHT & CO., 26, Finsbury-pavement, London, E.C.

LOSS OF HAIR

Now Ready, post free, 1s. "The Truth and Facts about the Causes and Cure of BALDNESS GREYNESS, SUPERFLUOUS HAIR, &c." 60 pages. Illustrated. From the Author, O. E. HORN, D Sc., Bournemouth.

PRESS OPINIONS.—"Dr. Horn is a wonderfully clever Hair Specialist."—Editor, St. Paul's, 3/7/97. "Remarkable success has attended Dr. Horn's plan of treatment."—Whitehall Review. "We are quite convinced of the soundness of his fundamental principles."—The Queen.

21/- Post Free

The "Osoezi" Saddle

21/- Post Free

Is at once hygienic, anatomically correct, and pressure upon the perineum is avoided. No Saddle-Soreness, even after the hardest and most continuous riding.

Suitable for Ladies or Gentlemen. Easily adaptable to any Machine.

A. W. GAMAGE,
LTD.,
126 to 129, Holborn, E.C.

Mülhens' "Rhine Violets"

MÜLHENS TRADE MARK.

READ THIS From the "ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS."

. . . One cannot but feel eternally indebted to Mr. Ferd. Mülhens for having invented so altogether delicious and delightful a perfume as the "Rhine Violets." . . . Little wonder indeed that this king of scents should be imitated as widely and piratically as it assuredly is, for no essence of modern times has approached its well-merited fame and favour. . . . Rhine Violets perfume is one thing and Mülhens' "Rhine Violets" (as sold by all good Chemists) is another, and if all who have tested the fragrant and delicious essences which bear this inventor's name would insist on seeing it on the labels, there would be fewer ensuing disillusionments. . . . Mülhens has, in fact, discovered and perfected the following special perfume of "Rhine Violets"—"Maréchal Niel," "Rhine Gold," and "Malmaison," and without the magic prefix of his name, it may be taken that all such so-called scents are but "base-born counterfeits." . . .

3/-, 5/6, 9/-, 20/- per bottle.

"Rhine Violet" Sachets, 2/6 each.
"Rhine Violet" Soap, 2/6 per tablet, or 7/- per box of 3 tablets.

Of most dealers in first-class Perfumes, or from

4711 Depot, 62, NEW BOND STREET, W.

A Cup of Chocolat Suchard

accurately prepared, contains all the delicious, soothing, and restorative properties known to exist in Cocoa. Cup for cup, "Chocolat Suchard" is noted for its superiority of flavour and aroma over all other like preparations.

Chocolat Suchard

owes these characteristics not only to the choice materials it is made of, but equally so, perhaps, to the clean and careful methods by which it is uniformly prepared. The recognition of these sterling qualities has led to a largely increased consumption of Chocolat Suchard all over the world.

BEWARE OF IMITATIONS

All Chocolates, Cocoas and Bonbons bearing the name of Suchard are of the highest quality only.
70 YEARS' REPUTATION.

VINOLIA TOILET REQUISITES.

4d PREMIER VINOLIA SOAP
(For Family Use).

For Delicate, Sensitive, Irritable Skins.

The CHEMIST AND DRUGGIST reports:
"An ideal soap, delightfully perfumed."

1/- per box of 3 Tablets.

6d FLORAL VINOLIA SOAP
(For Private Use).

Keeps the Skin as soft as Velvet.

The MEDICAL NEWS reports:
"Beautifully emollient and softening to the skin."

1/6 per box of 3 Tablets.

10d TOILET VINOLIA SOAP
(OTTO)

Scented with Choice Otto of Rose Perfume.

Beautifies the Complexion.

The GENTLEWOMAN reports:
"Strongly recommended to keep the skin smooth and free from roughness."

2/6 per Box of 3 Tablets.

6d BLONDEAU PERFUMES
Concentrated, Delicate, Pure.

*Vinolia Bouquet,	Rondeletia,
*Marequil,	Hyacinth,
*Jequilla,	Ylang Ylang
*Losaria,	Stephanotis
Wood Violet,	Opoponax,
White Heliotrope,	Patchouli,
Ess. Bouquet,	Musk,
Frangipanni,	Ambergris,
Jockey Club,	Amaryllis,
Maréchal Niel,	White Lilac,
Millefleur,	Narcissus,
White Rose,	Chypre,
Jasmin,	Violette de Parme,
Musk Rose,	Miguonette,
Honeysuckle.	Clematis,
New Mown Hay,	Wallflower,
Lily of the Valley,

Violet, | *Rhine Violets, | Peau d'Espagne.

6d., 1/-, 2/-, 3/-, and 5/- per bottle.

*These perfumes are not supplied in the 6d. quality.

1/- VINOLIA HAIR WASH

DRY. Freshens and cleanses the Hair, and preserves it free from any oily moist appearance.

MOIST. Imparts a natural gloss to the Hair

1/- per Bottle.

Each in 3 odours: Portugal, Rose, and Violet.

1/1½ VINOLIA CREAM

For Itching, Face Spots, Sunburn, &c.

The LANCET reports:
"An emollient cream for the skin in eczema, rash, eruptions, &c."

1/1½, 1/9, 3/6, and 6/- per Box.

1/- VINOLIA POWDER

For Redness, Roughness, Toilet Nursery, &c.

The LADY'S PICTORIAL reports:
"Superseding the old-fashioned toilet powders which are apt to cause acne spots on the face by blocking up the pores of the skin."

In White, Pink, and Cream Tints.
1/-, 1/9, 3/6, and 6/- per Box.

VINOLIA SHAVING SOAP.
6d

(STICKS AND FLAT CAKES.)
Causes no Blotches.
STICKS: Premier 6d., Toilet 1/-, 1/6, 2/6, Vestal 2/-.
FLAT CAKES: Premier 1/-, Toilet 2/-, Vestal 2/6.

6d LYPSYL.

A Coralline Emollient for Dry, Rough, Cracked, or Pallid Lips.

In Rose-Red and White Tints, 6d. and 1/- a Tube

6d VINOLIA LAVENDER WATER.

Natural and Very Lasting.

Contains the finest Essential Oils, Concentrated, therefore the Most Economical.

6d., 1/-, 2/-, and 3/6.

1/6 VINOLIA TOILET WATER.

This is prepared with delicate, refreshing perfumes, and is a most exquisite and delightful preparation to use either clear or in water for the Toilet or in the bath.

1s. 6d. per Bottle.

4d PREMIER VINOLIA DENTIFRICE

Aromatic, Tonic, Refreshing, Preservative.
Keeps the Teeth Ivory White.
Premier in Round Box and Glass Bottle, 4d.
English—2/6.
American—1/6.

6d VINOLIA TOOTH SOAP.

An exquisite preparation for the Teeth. Delightfully perfumed and free from any injurious ingredients.

In Round Metal Box, 6d.

6d VINOLIA TOOTH PASTE.

Delicately Perfumed.

Whitens and Cleanses the Teeth, without in any way injuriously affecting the dental structures.

In Collapsable Tube, 6d.

6d BLONDEAU Inexhaustible Lavender SMELLING SALTS.

These Smelling Salts are of exceptional Strength and most Refreshing. They are agreeably scented, the pleasant odour of Lavender being very pronounced.

6d. and 9d. per Bottle.

6d VINOLIA EAU DE COLOGNE.

Fragrant. Refreshing.
As fine as can possibly be made.

The "Court Circular" reports:
"Vinolia Eau de Cologne we consider is absolutely unequalled for strength, purity, and delicacy of aroma."

6d, 1/-, 2/-, 3/3, and 5/6.

3d per 2-oz. Packet. VINOLIA VIOLET POWDER.

Sanitary. Antiseptic. Soothing.

Specially prepared for Toilet and Nursery use.

In 2-oz. and ¼-lb. Packets, 3d. & 6d.
In ½-lb. Tins, 6d.
In ½-lb. Tins, 9d.

VINOLIA COMPANY, LIMITED, MALDEN CRESCENT, LONDON, N.W.

The newer preparations above may be ordered direct, providing cash is sent with order. This only applies when they cannot be obtained locally.

MELLIN'S FOOD

is known

Throughout the World

as a perfect diet for children, but

MELLIN'S EMULSION

COD LIVER OIL

is unknown to

Hundreds of Thousands

who are troubled with Coughs, Colds, Loss of Flesh, and General Malnutrition, and who would benefit by using it.

MELLIN'S FOOD WORKS, PECKHAM, S.E.

For Longhand, Shorthand, Pen-and-Ink Drawing, Music-Writing, indeed, whenever a Pen is necessary, use only a "SWAN."

Adds immeasurably to Celerity and Comfort in writing. Of all Pens most famous.

Made in 3 sizes at

10s. 6d.
16s. 6d.
25s.

UP TO £18 18s.
POST FREE.

MABIE, TODD & BARD,
DEPT. C. I.
93, Cheapside, London, E.C.
95a, REGENT ST., W., and 3, EXCHANGE ST., MANCHESTER.

"Captol"

SOMETHING NEW

FOR THE HAIR

BY A LEADING PHYSICIAN.

"CAPTOL" is the latest discovery by the well-known authority on skin disease, Dr. J. Eichhoff. The fact that such a prominent physician allows his name to be associated with it is a guarantee that "CAPTOL" will not cause disappointment to those who give it a trial. "CAPTOL" removes the densest growth of scurf and dandruff with greater speed than any other preparation. It is, therefore, the safest preventive of falling hair yet discovered.

"CAPTOL" is made from vegetable ingredients; it is quite free from lead, mercury, and other poisons. Whilst imparting to the hair a glossy and pleasing appearance, it does not in the slightest degree affect the ORIGINAL SHADE, AS IT IS NOT A DYE, and, unlike other Hair Washes, it does not make the hair the least greasy or sticky.

Many preparations before the public are most dangerous. "CAPTOL" is NON-EXPLOSIVE, and can be used with perfect safety.

3/9 per bottle, of most chemists and stores.

If you cannot obtain "CAPTOL" from your usual chemist, do not be put off with other kinds, which are recommended as "JUST AS GOOD," "CHEAPER," &c., &c., but write to Mulhens' 4711 Depot, 62, New Bond Street, London, who will either give you the name of the nearest dealer keeping it, or will send you a bottle post-free for 4/-

HEAL & SON'S

New Wood Bedsteads

With Iron Lath Bottoms or Wire Spring Bottoms.

HYGIENIC. ARTISTIC. INEXPENSIVE.

195, 197, 196, 198, TOTTENHAM COURT RD. W.

"The Old Favourite."

MAX GREGER'S CARLOWITZ

SAFEST, SOUNDEST

Dinner Wine.

PURE HUNGARIAN BURGUNDY.

From 15/- per doz.

Of all Wine Merchants and Grocers.

See that every cork bears the brand 'Max Greger.' Without it the wine is not genuine.

"A Clean and Easy Shave once a day makes all men, and a few women also, quite happy."—GORDON STABLES, M.D., R.N.

The delightful sensation of shaving at home with a really sharp razor cannot easily be described, there should be no cutting of the skin, no dragging of the beard, simply an indescribable sense of freshness, nothing else.

The Proprietor of the "RIGID-CURVE" STROP warrants his Invention to produce an edge upon a razor so sharp as to readily sever a hair held loosely between finger and thumb.

Price, with full instructions, 3s. 6d., carriage paid. Money returned any time within a month if not approved.

A. HOWARTH, 53, Penn-road, Wolverhampton.

SERVANTS! SERVANTS!! SERVANTS!!!

FOR THOROUGHLY RELIABLE SERVANTS,

With personal characters for London or country, also foreign servants.

Apply to the BELGRAVE LADIES' AGENCY,
SOLE OFFICES,
83, EBURY-STREET.

Also job servants with references taken up before recommendation can be had on the shortest notice.

SPECIAL NOTICE TO ARCHITECTS.

AN IMPORTANT INVENTION.

The HOMACOUSTIC APPARATUS (Cutmore's System).

A REVOLUTION IN SPEAKING TUBES

Patented throughout the World. The Telephone superseded for Short Distances. The Homacoustic System is being universally adopted, and is a Leading Feature in all New Buildings.

THOUSANDS ARE IN USE.

The following are a few of the large establishments where the Homacoustic Speaking Tubes are in use:—

W. & A. GILBEY, Pantheon, Oxford-street.
JAMES WILLING, Junr., 125, Strand.
GAZE & SONS, Tourists' Bureau, Strand.
B. A. MOORE, "Cheshire Cheese," Fleet-st.
"TRUTH" Offices, Westminster.
SPIERS & POND, Limited, Head Offices.
ROBERTS & LEETE, 19 to 25, Bermondsey-street, S.E.
R. WAYGOOD & CO., Falmouth-road, S.E.
E. P. SAUNDERS & SON, 81 to 83, Cannon-street.
ALLIANCE ASSURANCE CO., Bartholomew-lane, E.C.
LONDON ASSURANCE, Royal Exchange.
OETZMANN & CO., 67 to 79, Hampstead-road, N.W.
LLOYD'S BANK, Limited, 189, Fleet-street.
— LITHGOI, Esq., 39a, Wimpole-street Oxford-street.
CAPITAL AND COUNTIES BANK, Threadneedle-street, E.C.
STRAITS INSURANCE, Change-alley, Cornhill.
KELLY & CO., London Directory. Holborn.
LONDON AND BIRMINGHAM AND SOUTH WALES BANK, Gracechurch-street, E.C

TESTIMONIALS.

Atlas Assurance Company, Fire and Life,
92, Cheapside, London, E.C.

Dear Sir,—I have pleasure in stating that I have had one of your Homacoustic Speaking Tube Commutators and Instruments in my room, communicating with seven departments in this office, and that I find the same to work admirably. It is a vast improvement on the old method of a separate mouthpiece for each tube, and it is an invention which I think needs only to be known to command very wide adoption.—I am, dear sir, yours faithfully,

SAML. J. PIPKIN
Secretary.

The Central London Throat and Ear Hospital,
Gray's Inn-road, W.C.,
December 14, 1891.

I have much pleasure in testifying to the excellence of the principle of the Homacoustic Speaking Tube Instruments, as well as to the perfect workmanship of the tubes fitted at this Hospital.

Quite independently of sanitary reasons it is decidedly more agreeable to have a Speaking Tube by which all blowing and breathing into the face are avoided. There is no difficulty whatever in its employment.

LENNOX BROWNE, F.R.C.S.E.,
Senior Surgeon to the Hospital.

Beware of Fraudulent Imitations. Infringers will be prosecuted. Send for Explanatory Pamphlet and Pric List Free by Post.

THE HOMACOUSTIC COMPANY, Head Offices and Showroom. 6, Bruton-street, New Bond-street, W.

THE MEXICAN HAIR RENEWER

Prevents the Hair from falling off.
Restores Grey or White Hair to its ORIGINAL COLOUR.
Being delicately perfumed it leaves no unpleasant odour.
IS NOT a dye, and therefore does not stain the skin or even white linen.
Should be in every house where a HAIR RENEWER is needed.
Ask your Chemist or Hairdresser for

THE MEXICAN HAIR RENEWER.

Price 3s. 6d. per large Bottle.
Prepared only by the
ANGLO-AMERICAN DRUG COMPANY, Ltd.,
33, FARRINGDON ROAD, LONDON, E.C.

FLORILINE

FOR THE TEETH AND BREATH.

IS THE BEST LIQUID DENTIFRICE IN THE WORLD.

Prevents the Decay of Teeth.
Renders the Teeth Pearly White.
Is perfectly Harmless and Delicious to the Taste.

Of all Chemists and Perfumers throughout the World
2s. 6d. per Bottle.

FLORILINE TOOTH POWDER.
Put up in Glass Jars, price 1s.

A RECORD IN SAUCE.

OVER 8,000,000 BOTTLES SOLD IN ONE YEAR.

YORKSHIRE RELISH

THE MOST DELICIOUS SAUCE IN THE WORLD.
Makes the Plainest Viands Palatable, and the Daintiest Dishes more Delicious.
Enriches Soups, Stews, Chops, Steaks, Fish, etc.
Sold in Bottles, 6d., 1s., and 2s. each.
Sole Proprietors: GOODALL, BACKHOUSE, & CO., LEEDS.

LEWIS & ALLENBY, LTD.

beg to announce their

SUMMER SALE OF HIGH-CLASS GOODS

AT CLEARANCE PRICES,

for JULY 4th, and FOLLOWING DAYS.

LEWIS & ALLENBY, LTD., Regent-street, and Conduit-street, W.

The VICTORIA DATE CO., Ltd., Food and Condiment Specialists, beg to draw attention to the following preparations, for the purity and general excellence of which they have obtained numerous awards—Gold Medals, &c.

Victoria Date Vinegar.

The New Vinegar. This condiment is prepared exclusively from dates. It is absolutely pure. Culinary experts pronounce it far superior for Cooking and Pickling purposes to Malt or White Wine Vinegars, as, though of a similar flavour to these, it is non-injurious, and can therefore be used with impunity by the most dyspeptic. It is far and away the best for table use. The leading Pickle and Sauce Manufacturers use it exclusively, among others, POTTER'S PERFECT PICKLES are prepared in Victoria Date Vinegar.

Derby Sauce.

This new Sauce has rapidly taken the first place in popular favour. A trial is sufficient to give it a permanent place in the cruet. Prepared from a Persian recipe of wide reputation in the East, it is a delightful appetiser. It is intended for use with Cold Meats, Chops, Steaks, &c.

Worcester Sauce.

This resembles other sauces of the same name in flavour, but possesses the unique quality of absolute purity.

The VICTORIA DATE CO., Ltd., will have much pleasure in forwarding tasting samples, post free, to applicants who will write to them, mentioning this paper, to Victoria Works, 112, Belvedere Road, Lambeth, London, S.E.

PHILLIPS'S

HER MAJESTY'S POTTERS AND GLASS MANUFACTURERS,
17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, MOUNT ST., GROSVENOR SQ., W

WEDDING PRESENTS.

Small Water Set, Fine Crystal, 1 Jug and 2 Tumblers, 1s. 6d. set.

Breakfast Sets.
Luncheon Sets.
Dinner Sets.
Dessert Sets.
Tea Sets.
Glass Sets.
Toilet Sets.

Samples on Approval Carriage Paid.

HILDITCH'S SILKS.

Great Reductions.
Patterns forwarded.

SUMMER SALE.

COMMENCING JULY 4th.
11 & 12, CHEAPSIDE, LONDON.

NOTICE. THE NEW

"CRICKLITE" LAMPS

FOR DINNER TABLES AND DRAWING ROOMS.
Can be SEEN and purchased ONLY at
75, REGENT STREET, next door to St. James's Hall, and
156, REGENT STREET, AND NOWHERE ELSE.

A Special Set of CRICKLITE LAMPS expressly made for HIS IMPERIAL MAJESTY the SULTAN of TURKEY is now on view.

N.B.—Please write for the new Book of Designs, Now Ready.

Solid Silver, £4 4s.

Substantially made afternoon tea set on approval. If you decide within two weeks that you do not want it, the money will be returned. Every piece is the highest strength consistent with neatness, and will last a life-time. English Hall Marked.

Delivered safe and secure on receipt of

£4 4s.

WATCHMAKERS' ALLIANCE LTD.,
227, Regent-st., & 184, Oxford-st., London.

CARTER 6A NEW CAVENDISH ST. PORTLAND PLACE, LONDON.

ONLY ADDRESS OF ORIGINAL CARTER
LITERARY MACHINE.

For holding book, lamp, meals, &c., in any position over an easychair, bed, or sofa. Deliciously luxurious. A most useful gift. Prices from 17/6

INVALID FURNITURE.
ADJUSTABLE COUCHES and BEDS from £1. 10/-

Bed Lift £3. 10/-
Reclining Boards, 25/-
Walking Machines
Portable W.C.'s.
Electric Bells, Urinals, &c.
Air & Water Beds.

Bed Rests 7/6
Leg Rests 10/-
Crutches 10/6
Bed Baths 12/6
Commodes, £1. 5/-

Carrying Chairs from £1.
Breakfast in Bed Tables from 30/-

Self-Propelling Chairs from £2

BATH CHAIRS FROM £1. 5/-

ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUES POST FREE.

JOHN CARTER, 6a, NEW CAVENDISH ST. Portland-pl. London, W.

FOR COMPLAINTS of the STOMACH, LIVER, etc., DRINK

VICHY CELESTINS Spring

Caution: See that each bottle has a neck label with VICHY-ÉTAT & the name of the Sole Importers: INGRAM & ROYLE, Ltd, 26, Upper Thames Street, LONDON, E.C.

Hovis Bread

The Purest and the Nicest.

Perfectly Self Digestive.

Hovis Bread is baked and delivered daily by all good class Bakers in the British Isles; Hovis Biscuits are sold by most Grocers and Bakers; or 6d. and 1s. Samples of Bread and Biscuits will be sent on receipt of stamps by THE HOVIS-BREAD FLOUR CO., LTD., Millers, Macclesfield.

PRUDENTIAL ASSURANCE COMPANY, LIMITED.—
Holborn Bars, London.

EVERY DESCRIPTION OF LIFE ASSURANCE AND ANNUITY BUSINESS TRANSACTED.
REVERSIONS PURCHASED.

Invested Funds, £30,000,000.

The last Annual Report can be obtained on application to the Secretary.

THE
LIVERPOOL & LONDON & GLOBE
INSURANCE COMPANY.
Invested Funds ... ... £9,575,342.
FIRE. LIFE. ENDOWMENTS. ANNUITIES.
Fire Insurances Effected on Most Favourable Terms. Life Bonuses Large, either in Cash or Additions to Sum Assured. Life Policy-holders may so insure as to participate in NINE-TENTHS OF THE PROFITS of their class.
EQUITABLE RATES. MODERATE EXPENSES.
Head Offices: 1, DALE STREET, LIVERPOOL; 7, CORNHILL, LONDON.

SUN INSURANCE OFFICE
63, Threadneedle-street, London, E.C.
THE OLDEST PURELY FIRE OFFICE IN THE WORLD
SUN FIRE OFFICE FOUNDED 1710.
SUM INSURED IN 1897 EXCEEDS £425,000,000.

SPECIAL ADVANTAGES TO PRIVATE INSURERS.
THE IMPERIAL INSURANCE COMPANY, LIMITED. FIRE. Est. 1803, 1, Old Broad-st., E.C., & 2, Pall Mall, S.W. Subd. Capital, £1,200,000. Paid-up, £300,000. Total funds, over £1,500,000.—E. COZENS SMITH, Gen. Man.

BIRKBECK BANK (Estab. 1851), Southampton-buildings, Chancery-lane, London. Two and a-half per cent. interest allowed on deposits, repayable on demand. Two per cent. on current accounts, on the minimum monthly balances when not below £100.
The BIRKBECK ALMANACK with particulars, post free.
FRANCIS RAVENSCROFT, Manager.

H. HALFORD and COMPANY,
70 and 71, Palmerston Buildings, Old Broad Street, London.
ESTABLISHED 1869.

Business in Stocks and Shares at close prices.
Dealings reported by wire if required.
Prompt Settlements.
Thousands of Testimonials from Clients.
Americans and Canadians a Speciality. Also Westralians and Kaffirs.
Lists of Closing Prices gratis.
Telegrams: "Monitor, London."
NO CONNECTION WITH ANY OTHER FIRM.

ALLAN'S ANTI-FAT
PURELY VEGETABLE, Perfectly Harmless. Will reduce from two to five pounds per week: acts on the food in the stomach, preventing its conversion into Fat. Sold by Chemists. Send stamp for pamphlet.
Botanic Medicine Co., 3 New Oxford-street, London, W.C.
BEFORE AFTER

"FOR THE BLOOD IS THE LIFE."
CLARKE'S
WORLD-FAMED
BLOOD MIXTURE
Warranted to cleanse the blood from all impurities from whatever cause arising. For Scrofula, Scurvy, Eczema, Bad Legs, Skin and Blood Diseases, Pimples and Sores of all kinds, its effects are marvellous. It is the only real specific for Gout and Rheumatic Pains, for it removes the cause from the blood and bones. Thousands of Wonderful Cures have been effected by it. In bottles, 2s. 9d. and 11s. each, of Chemists everywhere.
BEWARE OF WORTHLESS IMITATIONS.

THE LATE EARL OF BEACONSFIELD,
SIR MORELL MACKENZIE,
OLIVER WENDELL HOLMES,
MISS EMILY FAITHFUL,
THE LATE GEN. W. T. SHERMAN, and many other persons of distinction, have testified to the remarkable efficacy of Himrod's Cure for Asthma.
Established over a Quarter of a Century.
Prescribed by the Medical Faculty throughout the world. It is used as an Inhalation and without any after bad effects. A free Sample and detailed testimonials free by post. In tins, 4s. 3d. British Depôt—46, Holborn Viaduct, London; also of NEWBERY & SONS, BARCLAY & SONS, LYNCH & CO., J. SANGER & SONS, W. EDWARDS & SON, MAY, ROBERTS, & CO., BUTLER & CRISPE, JOHN THOMPSON, Liverpool, and all wholesale Houses.

ABRIDGED PROSPECTUS.

The SUBSCRIPTION LIST will be CLOSED at FOUR p.m. (to morrow) WEDNESDAY, for London and Country.

THE WOLVERHAMPTON & DUDLEY BREWERIES, Limited.
Incorporated under the Companies Acts, 1862 to 1886.
SHARE CAPITAL - - - - £150,000,
divided into

7,500 £6 per Cent. Cumulative Preference Shares of £10 each	£75,000
7,500 Ordinary Shares of £10 each	£75,000
	£150,000

Four and a-Half per Cent. First Mortgage Debentures £100,000

The Company can redeem these Debentures on or after 31st December, 1910, at £105 per £100 Debenture, or the holder can insist on payment on or after that date at par.

FOUR PER CENT. IRREDEEMABLE "A" MORTGAGE DEBENTURE STOCK, £100,000.

ISSUE of £100,000 FOUR PER CENT. IRREDEEMABLE "A" MORTGAGE DEBENTURE STOCK at PAR, payable as follows:—
10 per cent. on Application.
40 per cent. on Allotment.
50 per cent. on 1st November, 1898.

The Stock will be issued in sums of not less than £50 and in multiples of £10 above that amount, and will be transferable in any sums not involving a fraction of a pound.

The interest on the Stock will be payable half-yearly, on the 1st day of February and the 1st day of August in each year. The first payment of interest calculated from the dates fixed for payment of the various instalments will be made on the 1st day of February, 1899.

TRUSTEES FOR THE DEBENTURE STOCK HOLDERS.
James Forsyth, J.P., Tettenhall, Wolverhampton. } Directors of the Birmingham
Rupert Turberville Smith, Tettenhall, Wolverhampton. } District and Counties Banking Company, Limited.

SOLICITORS TO THE DEBENTURE TRUSTEES.—Warmington, Thompson, & Warmington, Castle-street, Dudley.

DIRECTORS.
James Forsyth, J.P. | Alexander Horsley.
E. T. Hargraves. | G. F. Thompson.
E. J. Thompson, Managing Director.

BANKERS.
The Birmingham District and Counties Banking Company, Limited, Wolverhampton, Birmingham, and branches;
And their London Agents, Williams, Deacon, and Manchester and Salford Bank, Limited, Birchin-lane.

SOLICITORS TO THE COMPANY.—H. and J. E. Underhill and Thorneycroft, Darlington-street, Wolverhampton.

AUDITORS.—Charles Eves & Co., 50, Gresham-street, London, E.C.

BROKERS.
In London.—Snell & Swaffield, 9 and 10, Tokenhouse-yard, E.C., and Stock Exchange, E.C.
In Manchester.—Lawson & Ormrod, 10, Half Moon-street, and Manchester Stock Exchange.
In Leeds.—Hirst, Turner, & Tennant, 5, East-parade, and Leeds Stock Exchange.
In Wolverhampton and Birmingham.—Payne, Turton, & Payne, 9, King-street, Wolverhampton, and Birmingham Stock Exchange.

SECRETARY AND REGISTERED OFFICE.—W. Whitfield, Park Brewery, Wolverhampton.

The Wolverhampton and Dudley Breweries, Limited, was incorporated on the 14th day of May, 1890. The whole of the share capital has been issued, and is fully paid, and the debentures are all taken up. All classes of capital are quoted in the official lists of the London and Birmingham Stock Exchanges.

The Company has paid the following dividends on its Ordinary Shares for the last three and a-half years:—1894-5, 5 per cent.; 1895-6, 6 per cent.; 1896-7, 8 per cent.; 1897-8 (interim half-year), 8 per cent.

A reserve fund of £20,600 has also been accumulated.

A certificate by the Company's Auditors as to the Company's profits for the last three and a-half years is appended, from which it will be seen that the average yearly profit is £22,176 12s. 0d.

The existing Debentures of the Company are charged on the following properties, namely:—The Park and Fox Breweries, Wolverhampton, and the Dudley and Victoria Breweries, Dudley, and 56 freehold, five leasehold licensed houses, and certain unlicensed property of the Company; in addition these Debentures have a floating charge on the stock-in-trade, book debts, and effects of the Company. The total assets on which these Debentures for £100,000 have a first charge are valued by Messrs. Alfred Thomas Peyer and Miles, of 2, Adelaide-place, London, E.C., the well-known Valuers, at the sum of £179,315 1s. 1d., as per their certificate appended to the Prospectus.

For the purpose of paying off the various mortgages existing on the Company's properties which have been acquired since the issue of the Debentures, and finding the money for the rebuilding of the Park Brewery and Stables, it has been determined to issue £100,000 Irredeemable Four per Cent. "A" Mortgage Debenture Stock, out of the proceeds of which issue the mortgages will be discharged.

The Irredeemable Four per Cent. "A" Mortgage Debenture Stock will have a specific first charge on 93 freehold, 2 copyhold, 1 long leasehold licensed houses, and certain unlicensed property of the Company, all acquired since the incorporation of the Company, and valued by Messrs. Alfred Thomas Peyer & Miles at £140,485, and will also have a floating second charge on the whole of the assets charged to secure the £100,000 4½ per cent. Debentures, making a total of over £200,000.

Application should be made direct to the Company's bankers, or their London agents, together with a cheque for the amount of the deposit, payable to the order of the bankers to whom the remittance is made.

Prospectuses may be obtained from the Bankers, Solicitors, or Brokers, and at the Offices of the Company.

COPY AUDITORS' CERTIFICATE.

50, Gresham-street, E.C., 20th June, 1898.

To the Directors of the Wolverhampton and Dudley Breweries, Limited.

Dear Sirs,—As Auditors of the Company we have pleasure in certifying that the net profits on the trading for the three and a-half years ending 31st March, 1898, as shown by the audited accounts, have been as follows:—

Year ending 30th September, 1895	.....	£15,098 2 10
" " 1896	.....	20,178 3 5
" " 1897	.....	27,973 18 9
Half-year ending 31st March, 1898		£14,367 17 0

These profits have been arrived at after charging all trading expenses, including management, salaries, and Directors' fees, and making ample provision for bad debts, depreciation and up-keep of the properties, but before charging interest on debentures, mortgages, or loans.—Yours faithfully,
CHAS. EVES & CO., Chartered Accountants.

CENTRAL PACIFIC STOCK.

The Southern Pacific Company will, after JULY 1st, 1898, against delivery to it, at its office in New York, of Dividend Warrants No. 34, appertaining to Certificates of Stock of the Central Pacific Railroad Company, pay to the persons presenting the same, one-half of 1 per cent. of the par value of the stock represented by such certificates respectively.

Holders of the London Committee's certificates in England can obtain the amount referred to above on presentation of their certificates at Messrs. GLYN, MILLS, CURRIE & CO.'S, 67, Lombard-street, London, E.C., where they will be stamped as follows:—"Five dollars ($5) received from the Southern Pacific Company against delivery of Dividend Warrant No. 34."

The certificates may be left any day (except Saturday) between the hours of TEN and TWO.

The Subscription List will be Closed at 4 p.m. on Wednesday, the 29th of June.

This Company is formed to acquire Ninety-six Valuable Properties (see enclosed Schedule), which are partially developed and proved. Ore can be shipped immediately. Several of the Properties are ready for bringing out as Subsidiary Companies.

The Mining Laws of British Columbia are free from the stringent and costly provisions as to labour and pecuniary outlay which prevail in Australia and South Africa. Attention is called to the fact that Mr. Pellew-Harvey, whose reputation is known to some of the Directors to be of the highest order, has consented to act as Consulting Mining Engineer. There are no Founders' Shares.

THE ASSOCIATED GOLD MINES OF BRITISH COLUMBIA,

LIMITED.

Incorporated under the Companies Acts, 1862 to 1893.

CAPITAL - - - - - £500,000,

IN 500,000 SHARES OF £1 EACH,

OF WHICH 125,000 ARE SET ASIDE FOR THE PROVISION OF WORKING CAPITAL.

ISSUE, £405,000, of which 200,000 shares are taken by the vendor, in part payment of the purchase consideration—95,000 of the 125,000 for working capital being reserved for future issue—and the balance, viz. :—

205,000 SHARES, are now offered for subscription at par, payable 2s. 6d. on Application, 2s. 6d. on Allotment, and the balance in calls of 5s. each, at intervals of one month from Allotment.

DIRECTORS.

Sir William Des Vœux, G.C.M.G., 7, Cromwell-gardens, S.W. (late Governor of Newfoundland), Chairman.
The Earl of Yarmouth, 19, King-street, St. James's, S.W.
William J. Goulding, Esq., D.L., 5, Fitzwilliam-square, Dublin (Director Great Southern and Western Railway, Ireland).
C. A. Cosmo Hamilton, Esq., 11, Park-place, St. James's, S.W.
Major J. Eustace Jameson, M.P., 75, Harrington-gardens, S.W. (Chairman Menzies Mining and Exploration Company, Limited).
G. Mure Ritchie, Esq., B.L., 123, St. Vincent-street, Glasgow (Chairman Millom and Askam Hematite Iron Company, Limited).
Sir Edward Sullivan, Bart., 2, Harewood-place, W.

ADVISORY BOARD IN BRITISH COLUMBIA.

Capt. R. E. Bourchier, Vancouver (Director British Columbia Mining Prospectors' Exchange, Limited).
C. Cattell, Esq., Vancouver (Director Cayoosh Creek Mining and Milling Co.).
T. R. Hardiman, Esq., Vancouver (Director British Columbia Mining Prospectors' Exchange, Limited).

AGENTS IN VANCOUVER.—London and B.C. Gold Venture Syndicate, Limited. Associated with the B.C. Mining Prospectors' Exchange, Limited.

CONSULTING MINING ENGINEER.

W. Pellew-Harvey, Esq., F.C.S., Memb. North Eng. Inst. M., and M.E., Vancouver.

BANKERS.

Lloyds Bank, Limited, 222, Strand, London, W.C., and other Branches.
National Bank, Limited, Dublin, and all Branches in Ireland.

BANKERS IN BRITISH COLUMBIA.

Bank of British North America.

BROKERS

Messrs. Dean Swift & Co., 19, Old Broad-street, and Stock Exchange, London, E.C.
Douglas Cairney, Esq., 141, West George-street, and Stock Exchange, Glasgow.
Messrs. John Robertson & Co., 31, George-street, and Stock Exchange, Edinburgh.
J. F. Magnire, Esq. 2, St. Andrew-street, and Stock Exchange, Dublin.

SOLICITOR.—H. Percy Becher, Esq. 26, Bedford-row, W.C.
GENERAL MANAGER AND SECRETARY.—W. H. S. Aubrey, Esq., LL.D.
OFFICES.—1, Northumberland-avenue, London, W.C.

The Auditors will be appointed by the Shareholders at the first meeting.)

ABRIDGED PROSPECTUS.

OBJECTS.—1. To acquire 96 of what are believed to be among the most valuable and promising Mining Properties in British Columbia, the large majority of which are gold mines.
2. To acquire from time to time, as opportunities offer, other mining properties.
3. To carry on the lucrative business of transport and trading.
4. To form subsidiary Companies to take over mining properties as they are developed, and any trading or other business established by this Company.

EXTENT OF THE PROPERTIES.—Full particulars of the said 96 mining properties are set forth in the Schedule accompanying the Prospectus.

CAREFUL SELECTION.—Arrangements were made by the Vendors through competent and reliable agents in the earliest stages to select the most valuable claims, after thorough inquiry and investigation. The agents state that in this way the first choice has been exercised, after adequate tests, among the most promising gold fields that have been recently opened up, and the properties are therefore acquired by the Associated Gold Mines of British Columbia on exceptionally favourable terms.

LOCATION AND CONTIGUITY TO PROVED MINES.—A sketch plan accompanies the Prospectus, showing the approximate location of the various properties. One important and promising feature is their proximity to those which have yielded, and are continuing to yield, large profits.

PROPOSAL TO FORM SUBSIDIARY COMPANIES.—It is not intended, nor indeed would it be possible, for this Company to develop adequately and retain the 96 properties, nor those which will doubtless be acquired hereafter as favourable opportunities occur. In the first instance some of these properties, already partly developed, will be at once further developed, and immediately they have been proved to be of the permanent dividend-earning capacity, confidently anticipated by the Company's Agents, subsidiary Companies will be formed to take them over and work them. Having regard to the very moderate price at which the 96 mining properties are to be acquired by this Company, the profit on the re-sale of these alone should be very considerable.

It is intended as soon as possible to constitute several such Companies in succession to work the following mines, either singly or in groups, as may be deemed advisable:—No. 55, "Robert E. Burns"; Nos. 3 to 5, the "Mabel Group"; Nos. 19 and 20, "Willie" and "Georgina"; Nos. 23 to 31, the "Lytton Group"; Nos. 38 and 39, "Yukon" and "Clondyke"; Nos. 47 to 49, "I.X.L. Group"; and Nos. 50 to 54, the "Badshot Group." The agents state that these properties are in such a forward state that the clean, solid ore in sight can be shipped in large quantities immediately, with most satisfactory results.

Arrangements will be made, on the flotation of these subsidiary companies, and on the issue of new capital in any companies in which this Company may be interested, for its shareholders to have, wherever practicable, a prior right to an allotment of shares pro rata.

LARGE DIVIDEND-EARNING CAPABILITIES AND PROSPECTS.—It is intended as soon as possible to establish stores and a general trading business in machinery, tools, mining implements, food, clothing, and all the necessaries of life and industry, with branches at such places as the Directors may deem advisable. A subsidiary Company may be formed to take over this business, when it has been thoroughly established.

The Memorandum of Association of the Company contains wide powers, enabling the Directors to enter into such transactions as, in their opinion, offer suitable opportunities of profit making for the Shareholders. In such a country as British Columbia, yet only in its infancy, there are many ways in which, with care and judgment, a portion of the capital may be safely and profitably employed. It will thus be seen that the Company has capabilities and prospects of earning handsome dividends and bonuses for the Shareholders, without reference to any premium value which may be reasonably expected to accrue.

WEALTH OF BRITISH COLUMBIA.—According to the last report of the Provincial Minister of Mines, the total amounts paid in dividends by the following Mines are:—

	1897. Dols.	Total. Dols.		1897. Dols.	Total. Dols.
"Whitewater," Kaslo	87,000	123,000	"Idaho," Slocan	—	220,000
"Payne," Slocan	960,000	1,800,000	"Last Chance," Slocan	—	37,000
"Slocan Star," Slocan	—	400,000	"Le Roi," Rossland	400,000	725,000
"Reco," ,,	100,000	287,500	"War Eagle," ,,	—	187,000
"Hall Mines," ,,	133,750	160,000	"Rambler Cariboo"	—	40,000

The same report gives the total value of gold, silver, copper, and lead produced during 1897 as 7,565,951 dols., the greater portion being from West Kootenay. This important district, which includes the Ainsworth, Nelson, Rossland or Trail Creek, and Slocan divisions, has paid dividends exceeding 4,000,000 dols.; and it yielded during the month of January, 1898, according to the Customs returns, minerals valued at 1,193,458 dols., or nearly double the amount of January, 1897.

It is intended to apply for a special settlement on the London Stock Exchange in due course.

Applications for shares should be made on the accompanying form, and sent with the required deposit to the Bankers of the Company.

This form to be filled up and forwarded with cheque to bearer for the amount of the Deposit, either to LLOYDS BANK, Ltd., 222, Strand, London, W.C., or any other Branch, or to the NATIONAL BANK, Limited, Dublin, or any Branch in Ireland.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR SHARES.

THE ASSOCIATED GOLD MINES OF BRITSH COLUMBIA, LIMITED.

CAPITAL £500,000, in 500,000 Shares of £1 each.

205,000 Shares offered for subscription at par. Payable 2s. 6d. on Application, 2s. 6d. on Allotment, and the balance in calls of 5s. each at intervals of one month from Allotment.

To the Directors of THE ASSOCIATED GOLD MINES OF BRITISH COLUMBIA, Limited.

GENTLEMEN,—I request you to allot me.....Shares of £1 each in the above-named Company, and I agree to accept the same, or any smaller number that may be allotted to me, subject to the Memorandum and Articles of Association, and upon the terms of the prospectus issued by you, dated the 18th day of June, 1898, and I authorize you to place my name upon the register of members in respect of the Shares so allotted to me; and I agree to pay the further instalments upon such allotted Shares as the same shall become due; and I agree with the Company, as trustee for the directors and other persons liable, to waive any claims I may have against them for not more fully complying, in the said prospectus, with the requirements of Section 38 of the Companies Act, 1867.

I enclose a cheque for.....being the deposit of 2s. 6d. per Share payable on application.

Please write distinctly, and give full permanent address.

Full Name .....
Ordinary Signature .....
Description or Occupation .....
Permanent Address.....
.....
Date ....., 1898.

All cheques to be made payable to Bearer an crossed "Lloyds Bank," or "National Bank." No receipts for the amounts paid on application will be issued. Allotment Letters and Letters of Reret will be posted with as little delay as possible.

REORGANIZATION

OF

THE BALTIMORE AND OHIO RAILROAD COMPANY.

The undersigned Committee, at the request of holders of a large amount of the securities, has been for a long time past engaged in an examination of the affairs of The Baltimore and Ohio System and the relative value and earning capacity of the various lines comprised therein, with a view to formulating a plan of reorganization therefore which should fairly recognise the rights of all security holders, and at the same time bring the fixed charges of the reorganized Company safely within the net earning capacity of the system. Much time and attention have been devoted to acquiring full and accurate information as to all details, including a careful examination of the Company's accounts for the period of nine years and six months, made by Mr. Stephen Little on behalf of the Committee. The aim of the Committee has been to formulate a plan for the reorganization of the system which should accomplish the following results:

(a) The reduction of the fixed charges to a limit safely within the net earning capacity of the reorganised properties;

(b) Adequate capital for present and future requirements;

(c) The payment of floating debt and provision for existing car-trust obligations;

(d) The preservation of the integrity of the system as far as the same can be economically and advantageously accomplished and such control of the reorganized Company as shall secure a satisfactory management of the property for a period of years.

Having these objects in view, a plan has been prepared and Messrs. Speyer & Co., and Messrs. Kuhn, Loeb & Co., of New York, and Messrs. Speyer Brothers, of London, have been selected by the Committee to act as Reorganization Managers to carry out the plan.

Messrs. Louis Fitzgerald, Henry Budge, Edward R. Bacon, and William A. Read, have been appointed an Advisory Committee to continue and complete the work of the Reorganization Committee and to consult and co-operate with the Reorganization Managers. Any vacancy in the Advisory Committee occasioned by death, resignation, or otherwise, may be filled by the joint action of the Reorganization Managers, and of the remaining Members of the Advisory Committee.

The undersigned recommend the prompt acceptance of the plan, believing that its consummation will result to the best interests of all security holders, and will place this important property upon a sound and conservative basis.

NEW YORK, June 22, 1898.

LOUIS FITZGERALD,
AUGUST BELMONT,
EDWARD R. BACON,
HENRY BUDGE,
EUGENE DELANO,
WILLIAM A. READ,
HOWLAND DAVIS,

Reorganization Committee.

To the Holders of the following Bonds, Coupons, and Stocks:

Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company Bonds, Loan of 1853, Extended to 1935 at Four Per Cent.
Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company 100-Year Five Per Cent. Consolidated Mortgage Bonds of 1888.
Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company Sterling Six Per Cent. Loan of 1872, Due March 1, 1902.
Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company Sterling Six Per Cent. Loan of 1874, Due May 1, 1910.
Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company Six Per Cent. Loan of 1879, Due April 1, 1919 (Account Parkersburg Branch Railroad Company).
Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company Five Per Cent. Bonds, Loan of 1885 (Account Pittsburgh and Connellsville Railroad Company).
Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company Four and One-Half Per Cent. Terminal Mortgage Bonds of 1894.
Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company Sterling Four and One-Half Per Cent. Loan of 1883, Philadelphia Branch.
Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company Sterling Five Per Cent. Loan of 1877, Due June 1, 1927 (Account Baltimore and Ohio and Chicago Railroad Company).
Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company First Preferred Stock.
Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company Second Preferred Stock.
Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company Common Stock.
Pittsburgh and Connellsville Railroad Company First Mortgage Bonds, Extended to 1946 at Four Per Cent.
Pittsburgh and Connellsville Railroad Company First Mortgage Seven Per Cent. Bonds, Due July 1, 1898.
Pittsburgh and Connellsville Railroad Company Six Per Cent. Consolidated Mortgage Bonds.
Akron and Chicago Junction Railroad Company First Mortgage Five Per Cent. Bonds.
Akron and Chicago Junction Railroad Company Preferred Stock.
Washington City and Point Lookout Railroad Company Six Per Cent. Bonds.
Matured and Unpaid Coupons, and claims for interest on registered bonds, appertaining to any of the above-named Bonds, except those of the Washington City and Point Lookout Railroad Company may be deposited separate from the Bonds as hereinafter stated.

As stated in the foregoing announcement of the Reorganization Committee, a plan has been prepared, with our joint approval and co-operation, for the reorganization of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company's System; and in conformity with an arrangement with the Committee, the undersigned have undertaken to act as Reorganization Managers to carry out the plan.

The plan provides for the creation of the following new securities:—

FIRST

70,000,000 Dols. PRIOR LIEN THREE AND ONE-HALF PER CENT. GOLD BONDS, DUE 1925.

These bonds will bear interest from July 1, 1898, and are to be secured by a mortgage upon the Main Line and Branches, Parkersburg Branches and Pittsburgh Division when acquired by the New Company, covering about 1,017 miles of first track, and about 964 miles of second, third and fourth tracks and sidings and also all the equipment now owned by the Company of the value of upwards of 20,000,000 dols. or hereafter acquired in any manner except by the use of the 34,000,000 dols. reserved First Mortgage Bonds, as hereinafter stated.

The right will be reserved to issue, after January 1st, 1902, not to exceed 5,000,000 dols. additional of these bonds, at the rate of not exceeding 1,000,000 dols. a year, for the enlargement, betterment or extension of the properties covered by the Prior Lien Mortgage, or for the acquisition of additions thereto.

In case delay should occur in acquiring any of the said lines of railway, the execution of the plan will not for that reason necessarily be postponed, but the existing bonds upon such line deposited under the plan may be pledged under the Prior Lien Mortgage, as security for the bonds issued thereunder, until such line of railway shall be acquired by the New Company and subjected to the lien of said mortgage.

The Prior Lien Bonds are to be applied as follows:—

	Dols.
In partial exchange for existing bonds	60,073,090
Purchased by Syndicate to provide cash requirements of plan ...	9,000,000
	69,073,090
For contingencies (any surplus to New Company)	926,910
	70,000,000

SECOND.

63,000,000 Dols. FIRST MORTGAGE FIFTY-YEAR FOUR PER CENT. GOLD BONDS.

These bonds will bear interest from July 1st, 1898, and are to be secured by a mortgage which will be a first lien on the Philadelphia, Chicago, and Akron divisions and branches, and the Fairmont, Morgantown, and Pittsburgh Railroad, covering about 570 miles of first track, and about 332 miles of second, third and fourth tracks and sidings, and also on the properties now included in the present Baltimore and Ohio Terminal Mortgage of 1894, when said lines and properties are acquired by the New Company: also on the Baltimore Belt Railroad, if and when the same shall be acquired by the New Company; and a lien subject to the Prior Lien Mortgage upon the lines, property and equipment covered by the latter.

The right will be reserved to increase the amount of these bonds to 90,000,000 dols. for the enlargement, betterment, or extension of the railroads and properties covered by the Prior Lien Mortgage and also those covered by the First Mortgage, or for the acquisition of extensions or additions thereto or equipment for use thereon, at the rate of not exceeding 1,500,000 dols. a year for the first four years after the organization of the New Company and at the rate of not exceeding 1,000,000 dols. a year thereafter. The right will also be reserved to call in and redeem all or any part of the First Mortgate Bonds after twenty-five years, at 105, and also to issue not to exceed 75,000,000 dols. additional of said bonds or such lesser amount as may be required to retire the Prior Lien bonds when due.

In case delay should occur in acquiring any of the said lines of railway or properties to be included under the First Mortgage as above stated, the execution of the plan will not for that reason necessarily be postponed, but the existing bonds upon such line or property deposited under the plan may be pledged under the First Mortgage, as security for the bonds issued thereunder, until such line or property shall be acquired by the New Company, and subjected to the lien of said First Mortgage.

The First Mortgage Bonds are to be applied as follows:—

	Dollars.
In partial exchange for existing bonds	36,384,535
Purchased by Syndicate to provide cash requirements of plan ...	12,450,000
For contingencies (any surplus to New Company)	1,165,465
	50,000,000
Reserve for New Company	7,000,000
	57,000,000
Reserve to be issued only to retire Baltimore Belt Line 5s. ...	6,000,000
	63,000,000

NOTE.—The properties covered by the Baltimore Belt Line mortgage will be leased at a rental equivalent to interest at 4 per cent. on the existing Belt Line 5 per cent. bonds which is to be in full payment of said interest. The rental agreement will provide that in consideration of the rental the New Company shall have an option to purchase all the said Belt Line 5 per cent. bonds at par and accrued interest at any time within five years on sixty (60) days' notice, and that, in case the Company shall not purchase such bonds within the five years specified, it will at the termination of that period assume the ultimate payment, when due, of the principal of such bonds.

THIRD.

40,000,000 Dols. FOUR PER CENT. NON-CUMULATIVE PREFERRED STOCK.

This stock will be entitled to receive non-cumulative dividends at the rate of 4 per cent. per annum before the payment of any dividend on the Common Stock. This stock will be applied as follows:—

	Dols.
For Reorganization purposes	17,218,700
Purchased by Syndicate to provide cash requirements of plan ...	16,450,000
For adjustment with various outstanding bondholders' and stockholding interests, contingencies, &c., &c. (any surplus to New Company)	1,331,300
	35,000,000
Reserve for New Company...	5,000,000
	40,000,000

FOURTH.

35,000,000 Dols. COMMON STOCK.

This stock will be applied as follows:—

	Dols.
For Reorganization purposes	31,178,000
For adjustment outstanding securities, contingencies, &c. (any surplus to New Company)	3,822,000
	35,000,000

In order to establish such control of the Reorganized Company as shall secure a satisfactory management of the property for a period of years, both classes of stock of the New Company (except such shares as may be disposed of to qualify directors) shall be vested in the following five Voting Trustees for the period of five years:—William Salomon, Abraham Wolff, J. Kennedy Tod, Louis Fitzgerald, and C. H. Coster, although the Voting Trustees in their discretion may deliver the stock at an earlier date as provided in the Trust Agreement. In the meanwhile the Voting Trustees are to deliver their certificates in the usual form.

As stated in the plan, holders of First and Second Preferred and Common Stock of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company may purchase from the Syndicate new preferred and common stock, by depositing their old stocks with the Mercantile Trust Company, or the London and Westminster Bank, Limited, its agency in London, on the following terms: as consideration for shares of the New Company depositors of B. & O. First Preferred Stock must pay 2 dols. per share deposited; depositors of B. & O. Second Preferred Stock must pay 20 dols. per share deposited; and depositors of B. & O. Common Stock must pay 20 dols. per share deposited. Such payments must be made by depositors in not less than three instalments, at least thirty days apart, when and as called for by advertisement published in each instance at least twice a week for two weeks in at least two daily newspapers in New York, Baltimore, and London respectively.

Deposited bonds must carry all coupons and claims for interest on registered bonds maturing on or after July 1, 1898 (except the First Mortgage Six Per Cent. Bonds of the Washington City and Point Lookout Railroad Company, which must also carry all matured and unpaid coupons). All matured and unpaid coupons and claims for interest on registered bonds (excepting the unpaid coupons on the First Mortgage Six Per Cent. Bonds of the Washington City and Point Lookout Railroad Company) may be deposited separate from the bonds, and the same will be paid in cash as soon as practicable after the plan is declared operative, with interest on such coupons and claims for interest at the rate of five per cent. per annum from the date of maturity up to the date when the same are finally paid. Interest will also be paid in cash upon the completion of the reorganization on all deposited bonds (excepting the First Mortgage Six per Cent. Bonds of the Washington City and Point Lookout Railroad Company) at the rate provided in the old Bonds up to July 1, 1898, from the coupon date last preceding.

The Syndicate will purchase such coupons and claims for interest on registered bonds matured prior to July 1, 1898, from holders who do not desire to deposit the same under the plan (provided and so soon as the bonds to which the coupons or claims for interest appertain have been deposited) at their face value with interest at the rate of five per cent. per annum from the respective dates of maturity of such coupons or claims for interest to date of purchase, provided such coupons and claims for interest shall be presented for sale to the Syndicate at the office of the Mercantile Trust Company in New York or at its London agency above mentioned on or before July 22, 1898.

The basis of exchange of existing bonds and of sale of new stock is shown in the following table :—

EXISTING BONDS AND STOCK TO BE DEPOSITED.	EACH 1,000 DOLS. OR £200 RECEIVES						ACTUAL PERCENTAGE FOR STERLING ISSUES FIGURED AT 4·8666 DOLS.
	*Cash.	New Prior Lien 3½% Bonds.	New First Mtge. 4% Bonds.	New Pfd. Stock Trust Certificates.	New Common Stock Trust Certificates.	New Prior Lien 3½% Bonds.	New First Mtge. 4% Bonds.	New Pfd. Stock Trust Certificates.
	Dols.	Dols.	Dols.	Dols.	Dols.	%	%	%
Baltimore & Ohio Loan of 1853, Extended	10·00	1,025	125	140	.....
" " Consolidated Mortgage, 5 per cent.	20·83	1,050	125	85	.....
" " Sterling Loan of 1872	19·47	1,020	120	40	.....	104·79	12·33	4·11
" " Sterling Loan of 1874	9·73	1,120	120	160	.....	115·07	12·33	16·44
" " Parkersburg Branch Bonds	15·00	1,050	125
Pittsburgh & Connellsville, 1st Extended 4s.	20·00	1,025	125	40
Pittsburgh & Connellsville, 1st 7s., not Extended	35·00	1,000	125
Baltimore & Ohio 5s., Loan of 1885	20·83	1,000	125	100
Pittsburgh & Connellsville Consolidated Mortgage 6 per cent. Bonds ...	29·20	1,025	120	200	.....	105·31	12·33	20·55
Chicago Division, 5 per cent.	4·06	100	1,070	100	.....	10·27	109·93	10·27
Philadelphia Division, 4½ per cent.	10·95	.....	1,000	265	.....	.....	102·74	27·22
Baltimore & Ohio 4½ per cent. Terminal Bonds of 1894	3·75	.....	1,000
Akron & Chicago Junction Bonds	8·33	.....	1,000	250
Akron & Chicago Junction, Preferred Stock...	.....	.....	.....	250	1,000
Washington City and Point Lookout Bonds	.....	.....	.....	500	1,000
Depositors of old 1st Preferred Stock may purchase from Syndicate, on payment of 2 dols. per share deposited	.....	.....	.....	525	750
Depositors of old 2nd Preferred Stock may purchase from Syndicate, on payment of 20 dols. per share deposited	.....	.....	.....	200	1,500
Depositors of old Common Stock may purchase from Syndicate, on payment of 20 dols. per share deposited	.....	.....	.....	200	1,000

* Interest at the rate provided in the old bonds, from the date of the last matured coupon next preceding July 1, 1898, up to the date when the new bonds begin to bear interest, namely, July 1, 1898 (exclusive of previously matured coupons otherwise provided for as stated below).

The Syndicate has agreed to purchase for cash, upon the plan being declared operative, all Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company One-Hundred-Year Five Per Cent. Consolidated Mortgage Bonds deposited under the plan, whose holders prefer to accept cash rather than to take the new securities, at the price (in New York) of 110 and interest accrued and unpaid since the maturity of the last-paid coupon, provided the depositors of such bonds shall signify their election to receive cash as above stated, by presenting their Certificates of Deposit at the office of the Mercantile Trust Company in New York or at its London agency above specified, within sixty days from the time the plan shall actually be issued, to be stamped as electing to accept such cash payment. Such depositors will thereupon be entitled to receive such cash payment so soon as the plan is declared operative, upon surrender of their Certificates of Deposit so stamped.

	Dols.
The fixed charges of the Company for the year ending June 30, 1897, as reported by the Receivers, were	7,771,111
The annual fixed charges, upon completion of the reorganization and retirement of existing bonds as proposed, it is estimated, will be	6,252,351
Decrease of annual fixed charges	1,518,760

The Company, as shown by Mr. Stephen Little's expert examination and report, dated July 11th, 1896, from September 30th, 1888, to November 30th, 1895, a period of seven years and two months, earned, net, including miscellaneous income, a yearly average of 7,234,000 dols., without deduction, however, of average taxes amounting to 437,000 dols.

		Dols.
The net earnings for the year ending June 30th, 1897, were including miscellaneous income ... ... (For the fiscal year ending June 30, 1897, equipment of the Company valued on its books at 1,155,829·95, dols. was put out of service and charged, not to operating expenses, but to "Profit and Loss," because it represented the depreciation of a number of years. As against this, however, extraordinary expenses—estimated at not less than 750,000 dols.—for the maintenance of the property generally, were incurred during the year, and charged to operation. For the year 1898, as stated in the annual report of last year, all equipment when put out of service, is replaced with equipment of equal value, as shown on the books of the Company, and the cost thereof charged to "Maintenance of Equipment.")		6,593,990
The net earnings from the property for the present fiscal year (April, May and June approximated) have (notwithstanding liberal charges for maintenance), as compared with the same period of the preceding fiscal year, increased ...	1,443,909
Miscellaneous income decreased	62,114
Net increase		1,381,796
Estimated net earnings for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1898, including miscellaneous income (Taxes not deducted, they being included in fixed charges)		7,975,78 from which, however, will have to be deducted the sum of about 251,000 dols., representing the decrease in the amount of miscellaneous income which will be occasioned by the proposed sale of securities in the treasury and the cancellation of sinking-fund investments under the reorganization. The fixed charges of the new Company will thus be well within the past net income of the property—even that of the last fiscal year of extreme depression. The new Company will be relieved from floating debt and the embarrassment of car and wheelage trust payments and will start, not only with a substantial working cash capital, but also with power to provide facilities for the increase of business. The bye-laws of the new Company will provide that its accounts shall be audited annually by accountants of established reputation.

A Syndicate has been formed to furnish the cash required to provide for unpaid interest, existing car trusts, receiver's certificates, floating debt, and other outstanding obligations, improvements, equipment, working capital, and other purposes of the new Company, and also to purchase new securities not taken by holders of certain of the existing bonds.

The Mercantile Trust Company of New York will act as Depositary under the plan, and the London and Westminster Bank, Limited, will act as its agent for the purpose of receiving deposits in London, England. All holders of bonds and stock affected by the plan may deposit their securities, on and after June 30, 1898, either with the Mercantile Trust Company, at its office, No. 120, Broadway, in the City of New York, or at its agency, the London and Westminster Bank, Limited, 41, Lothbury, London, England, and will receive reorganization certificates of deposit therefor. Application will be made in due course to list such certificates of deposit upon the New York and London Stock Exchanges.

Participation under the plan of reorganization in any respect whatsoever is dependent upon the deposit of securities as above within such time as may be fixed by the Managers, and the plan will embrace only securities so deposited. Copies of the agreement and plan of reorganization are now ready for distribution, and all security holders are invited to obtain them from the undersigned, or from the Depositary or its London agency, as all depositors are bound thereby, without regard to this circular; and the plan and agreement set forth in detail many features which it is impracticable to condense into this circular, but which are of much importance to security holders.

We believe that the prompt consummation of the plan will result to the best interests of all security holders, and will place the administration of this property on a sound and conservative basis. Any further information connected with the reorganization which may be desired by security holders will be furnished on application at the offices of any of the undersigned, or at the office of the Depositary or its London Agency.

Dated New York, June 22, 1898.

SPEYER & CO.,
30, Broad Street, New York.
KUHN, LOEB & CO.,
27, Pine Street, New York.
SPEYER BROTHERS,
7, Lothbury, London.
} Reorganization Managers.

SEWARD, GUTHRIE & STEELE,
EVARTS, CHOATE & BEAMAN,
FRESHFIELDS & WILLIAMS, London,
Counsel to Reorganization Managers.

To the Holders of Bonds or Stocks of the following-named Railroad Companies :—
Columbus and Cincinatti Midland Railroad Company.
Central Ohio Railroad Company.
Newark, Somerset and Straitsville Railroad Company.
Sandusky, Mansfield and Newark Railroad Company.
Schuylkill River, East Side Railroad Company.
Winchester and Potomac Railroad Company.
Winchester and Strasburg Railroad Company.

Referring to the plan and agreement for the reorganization of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company, dated June 22, 1898 holders of the securities of the above-named railroads are requested to communcate at once with the undersigned Advisory Committee, giving the amount of their holdings, and stating how the same are held.

In order to deal with the holders of these leased-line securities, it is deemed necessary to consider each case separately and upon its merits. After hearing from the holders of a large proportion of each class of securities, the matter of adjustment will be considered.

LOUIS FITZGERALD,
EDWARD R. BACON,
HENRY BIDGE,
WILLIAM A. READ,
} Advisory Committee.

WILLIAM C. GULLIVER,
Counsel to Advisory Commitee.
ALVIN W. KRECH, Secretary,
120, Broadway, New York.

HOME AND COLONIAL STORES, Limited.

Share Transfer and Dividend Office,
2 and 4, Paul Street, Finsbury,
London, 24th June, 1898.

Notice is hereby given that the Directors of the Home and Colonial Stores, Limited, have declared an Interim Dividend upon the Ordinary Shares of the Company for the quarter ending 25th June of Three Shillings per Share (less Income Tax), payable on and after 1st July at the Banking House of Messrs. Glyn Mills, Currie, & Co., 67, Lombard-street, London, where Coupon No. 4 attached to the Share Warrants to Bearer should be lodged three clear days in advance.

By order of the Board,
ALFRED PIGOTT,
Registrar.

THE STOCK EXCHANGE.

NOTICE.

No Member of the Stock Exchange is allowd to advertise for business purposes, or to issue circulars to persons other than his own principals.

Persons who advertise as Brokers or Share Dealers are not Members of the Stock Exchange, or under the control of the Committee.

A List of Members of the Stock Exchange who are Stock and Share Brokers may be seen at the Bartholomew-lane Entrance to the Bank of England, or obtained on application to

EDWARD SATTERTHWAITE,
Secretary to the Committee of the Stock Exchange.
Committee Room, The Stock Exchange, London, E.C.

The Subscription List will OPEN on Tuesday, the 28th June, 1898, and will be CLOSED on or before Thursday, the 30th June, 1898, for Town and Country.

KING & MORTIMER, Limited, South Kensington and Fulham-road, London. Incorporated under the Companies Acts, 1862 to 1893, whereby the liability of Shareholders is limited to the amount of their Shares.

AUTHORISED CAPITAL, £160,000, divided into 16,000 5½ per cent. Cumulative Preference Shares of £5 each, and 80,000 Ordinary Shares of £1 each, of which Ordinary Shares there will now be issued 50,000 to the Vendors fully paid up.

NOW OFFERED FOR PUBLIC SUBSCRIPTION—

14,000 Cumulative £5½ per cent. Preference Shares of £5 each ...	£70,000
£4½ per cent. Mortgage Debenture Stock	£40,000

There will be no Founders' or Management Shares.

The Preference Shares will be entitled to a fixed Cumulative Preferential Dividend at the rate of £5½ per cent. per annum, payable half-yearly, on the 1st April and the 1st October in each year, and will rank as regards both dividend and capital in priority to the Ordinary Shares. No Preference Shares to rank in priority to, or pari passu with, the 16,000 Preference Shares mentioned above, will be issued without the sanction of the Preference Shareholders as provided by the Articles of Association.

The Mortgage Debenture Stock will be issued in multiples of £10, and the interest payable half-yearly, on 1st January and 1st July. The Stock will be secured by a First Mortgage on the freehold and leasehold properties of the Company, and by a first floating charge on the undertaking and all the other assets, present and future (not including uncalled capital) of the Company. Redeemable at £105 per cent on 1st July, 1929. In case of voluntary liquidation the stock can only be redeemed at £105 per cent. No Mortgage Debenture Stock or Mortgage Debentures for more than £80,000 will be issued to rank pari passu with the present issue. No Debenture Stock beyond the £40,000 now offered will be issued until additional property is acquired by the Company, and no future issue will exceed two-thirds of the price of such additional property.

The Mortgage Debenture Stock and Preference Shares are to be paid for as follows—

DEBENTURE STOCK.—On Application, £1; on Allotment, £3; on 15th August, 1898, £3; and on 30th September, 1898, £3; total, £10.

PREFERENCE SHARES.—On Application, 10s.; on Allotment, £1 10s.; on 15th August, 1898, £1 10s.; and on 30th September, 1898, £1 10s.; total, £5.

Interest on the Debenture Stock and Dividends on the Preference Shares will accrue as from the date of payment of the instalments.

TRUSTEES FOR THE DEBENTURE STOCK-HOLDERS.—Thomas Lough, Esq., M.P., 29, Hyde Park Gate, London, W.; James Bailey, Esq., M.P., 102, Eaton-sq. S.W.

DIRECTORS.—Ernest Godfree, Esq. (E. Godfree, Felton & Co.), Charing Cross-chambers, Duke-street, Adelphi, W.C.; William Lough, Esq. (Director of Tower Tea, Ltd.), 71, Eastcheap, E.C.; William King, Esq., 31 and 32, Sussex-place, South Kensington, S.W., Managing Director; George Mortimer, Esq., Parson's Green-lane, Fulham, S.W.

BANKERS.—London & County Banking Company, Limited, Lombard-street, E.C.; Sussex-place, South Kensington; and other Branches; London & South-Western Bank, Limited, Fenchurch-street, E.C., and Branches.

SOLICITORS.—Messrs. Scott, Spalding & Bell, 15, Queen-street, Cheapside, E.C.

BROKERS.—Messrs. Holland & Balfour, 2, Cushion-court, Old Broad-street, E.C.

AUDITORS.—Messrs. G. N. Read, Son & Co., Chartered Accountants, 49, Queen Victoria-street, E.C.

SECRETARY AND OFFICES.—Mr. Franklin H. Hood, 136, Palmerston-buildings, Old Broad-street, E.C.

PROSPECTUS.

This Company has been formed to acquire high-class Businesses and Business Premises, either in London or the Provinces, as favourable opportunities occur, with a view to their greater development as large local central Stores. To commence with, the Directors have secured the old-established Businesses for many years carried on by Mr. Robert King, in South Kensington, and by Mr. George Mortimer, in Fulham-road, and at the undermentioned addresses:—

ROBERT KING.	GEORGE MORTIMER.
31 and 32, Sussex-place, South Kensington (Post and Telegraph Office).	Head Office and Warehouse: Parson's Green-lane, Fulham, S.W.
BRANCHES.	BRANCHES.
11, Roland-mansions, South Kensington, S.W.	301, Fulham-road, S. Kensington, S.W.
39, Thurloe-place, South Kensington, S.W.	779, Fulham-road, Fulham, S.W.
111, Gloucester-road, South Kensington, S.W.	807 and 809, Fulham-rd., Fulham, S.W.
5, Bishop's-road, Paddington, W.	2, Charleville-road, West Kensington.
	106, Richmond-rd., Earl's Court, S.W.
	161, Praed-street, Paddington, W.
	5 and 6, Duppas Hill-lane, Croydon.
	122, Old Town, Croydon.

A valuable plot of ground, 200 feet long and 80 feet deep, has been secured between the Wholesale Warehouse which was specially constructed a few years since for the purposes of the Business, and the Fulham-road, at a low Ground Rent on a 99 years' Lease, on which large Stores are about to be erected by the Company, in accordance with the Elevations which accompany this Prospectus, subject to any alterations which may hereafter be found desirable, at an estimated cost of £18,000. The upper portion of this building will consist of Self-contained Residential Flats, which are much in demand in the locality, and the Ground Floor of eight large Shops, with well-lighted Basements. There are valuable Off-Licences in connection with some of the Branch Stores, all of which will be transferred to the Company, together with the Leases, with a good term to run, at very moderate rents. Mr. William King, who has managed his father's business for the last fourteen years, has agreed to act as Manager during the next five years, and both he and Mr. George Mortimer will join the Board of Directors of the Company, so that continuity of management of these Businesses have been secured. The following certificate has been received from Messrs. G. N. Read, Son, & Co., Chartered Accountants:—

49, Queen Victoria-street, London, E.C., June 24th, 1898.

To the Directors of King & Mortimer, Limited.

Gentlemen,—In accordance with your request, we have examined the books of Mr. Robert King, of Sussex-place, South Kensington, and of Mr. George Mortimer, of Fulham-road. We certify that the total net profits of Mr. Robert King for the three years ending 31st July, 1897, were £9,231, being an average annual profit of £3,077, and that the profits of the last of these years were materially above this average. Mr. George Mortimer only acquired the Croydon branch of his business early in 1896, and as it forms a considerable part of his trade, we have not examined his books prior to the 1st February in that year. The net profits from that date to 30th September, 1897, a period of twenty months, were £6,044, being at the rate of £3,626 per annum. The total average annual profits of the two businesses are therefore £6,703. In arriving at the above profits, sufficient allowance has been made for the depreciation of fixtures and fittings, but no charge has been made for interest on capital or partners' remuneration. We have examined the books of each of the shops up to the 1st May, 1898, and we find that the average weekly takings have been well maintained. In addition to the above profits, the annual rentals of the properties now acquired by the Company, after deducting ground rents, rates, taxes, and all outgoings, amount to £1,374.

Yours faithfully, G. N. READ, SON, & CO.

PROFITS ON THE PRESENT BASIS.

Average Annual Profits and Rentals, as above		£8,077
Net Rentals of the new premises in Fulham-road, as per Mr. Rolfe's Certificate		1,600
		£9,677
Interest required on 40,000 4½ per cent. Debenture Stock ...	...£1,800
Dividend required on 70,000 5½ per cent. Cumulative Preference Shares	3,850
		£5,650
Leaving available for Reserve Fund, Redemption of the Debentures, Management, and Dividend on the Ordinary Shares		£4,027

In this available balance no addition is made for the extra profit to be obtained when the new Stores are opened, and the fresh Capital is fully employed, or for any savings accruing from the amalgamation of the Businesses, and it may fairly be anticipated that these will amount to a further sum of £3,000.

No Directors' fees will be paid in any year until all dividends due on the Preference Shares have been paid. The following valuation of the property has been received:—

7, Queen-street, Cheapside, E.C., 25th June, 1898.

To the Directors of King & Mortimer, Limited.

Gentlemen,—In accordance with your instructions, we have made a careful survey and valuation of the undermentioned long leasehold and freehold premises, land, &c., viz.:—

1. Roland Mansions, South Kensington, comprising two spacious leasehold shops, with suites of flats over,—one shop is occupied by and charged against the business at a low rental, and the remainder of the property is let. Term about 82 years unexpired, ground-rent, £36.

2. 31 and 32, Sussex-place, South Kensington, comprising extensive leasehold premises, with large dwelling-house over, the shop and basement of which are occupied by and charged against the business at a low rental. A portion of the upper part is let. These houses are held on leases for about 45 years unexpired, at ground-rents of £20 and £30.

3. The Large Wholesale Warehouse in Parson's Green-lane, Fulham, held on lease for about 90 years unexpired, at a ground-rent of £8 per annum.

4. The Shop and Premises, 301, Fulham-road, held on lease for nearly 76 years unexpired, at a ground-rent of £2 per annum.

5. Freehold Premises in Osten-mews, South Kensington.

6. Ten other Stores held on advantageous leases.

Portions of the above properties are under-let, and the aggregate gross rentals thereby derived amount to £1,825, of which £650 is charged against the business for premises occupied by it.

7. A Plot of Land in the Fulham-road, adjoining the Wholesale Warehouse, held on a 99 years' building lease from 29th September, 1897.

We have also valued the plant, machinery, furniture, fixtures, fittings, horses, and rolling-stock appertaining to the respective Stores.

For the purposes of the business as a going concern, we are of opinion the value of the foregoing is the sum of £42,000. This amount is exclusive of goodwill and stock-in-trade.

We are, Gentlemen, yours faithfully, BROAD & WILTSHIRE.

Mr. William Rolfe has furnished the Directors with the following estimate of the rentals to be derived from the new buildings in Fulham-road.

17A, Great George-street, Westminster, S.W., 25th June, 1898.

To the Directors of King & Mortimer, Limited.

Dear Sirs,—

RE FLATS AND SHOPS, FULHAM-ROAD, S.W.

Having had considerable experience in developing London property on similar lines to that which you have acquired in the Fulham-road, I am of opinion that the eight shops—each of which will have 24 feet frontage and a depth of 77 feet, well lighted in front and rear, and with a large central skylight and light basement of the same dimensions beneath—should readily let at an annual rental of £120 each. The residential flats provided over each shop, will each contain sitting-room, kitchen, three bedrooms, and a bathroom, with lifts for coal, &c., and separate private entrance—and should let at an average of £45 per flat. The total of these rentals in the eight buildings would be £2,040, and the net rentals about £1,600. I am of opinion that the cost of erecting the buildings will be about £18,000.

Yours faithfully, WILLIAM ROLFE, Rolfe & Matthews, Architects.

Out of the amount realised by the Debenture Stock and Preference Shares now offered for subscription, £18,000 will be applied in erecting and completing the shops and premises on the land in Fulham-road, and £32,000 will be used for the purchase of stock-in-trade, for working capital, and fresh developments; and as practically the whole of the business is done for cash or for weekly accounts it is considered that this amount will be ample for all present requirements.

PROPERTY NOW TO BE ACQUIRED.

The Property as certified above, and valued at	£42,000
New Stores to be Erected out of part of the Cash now to be provided	18,000
Capital now to be provided out of the present issue for stock-in-trade and additional working capital	32,000
Total Assets ...	£92,000

The businesses will be taken over as from the 25th May, 1898, the profits as from that date to the date of registration of this Company being apportioned to the Vendors, who will receive interest on the amount of the purchase moneys from the said date of registration to the time or times of completion at the rate of £5 per cent. per annum. The purchase price, including goodwill and all the foregoing properties and assets has been fixed by the Vendors, who are promoters, at a sum in cash equivalent to the amount paid or agreed to be paid by them to Messrs. King & Mortimer for their respective businesses and premises, the acquisition of the building site at Fulham, and actual payments made by the Vendors for improvements in connection with the working and with the acquisition and sale of the said businesses, and in connection with the flotation of the Company. The total cash purchase price (not including stock-in-trade, which is to be taken at a valuation, on terms which amply safeguard the Company's interests) will not exceed £60,000. In addition, the Vendors receive as part of the purchase consideration the above-mentioned Ordinary Shares of the Company, which represent the sole profit made by the Vendors, the value of which will depend upon the success of the Company's business. The Vendors receive no cash profit on the sale to the Company.

Application will at once be made for a quotation on the London Stock Exchange for the Preference Shares, and for the Debentures when a sufficient amount has been issued.

The following Contracts have been entered into, being the Contracts in connection with the acquisition of the business and property before mentioned, viz.:—

(1) An Agreement dated the 16th September, 1897, between George Mortimer and John Hedley Smith for sale of the said George Mortimer's business to John Hedley Smith. (2) An Assignment dated the 31st December, 1897, from Alfred Brickell to Frank Joseph Rogers and John Hedley Smith of benefit of Building Agreement relating to land in Fulham-road. (3) An Agreement dated the 21st May, 1898, between Robert King and Frank Joseph Rogers for sale of the said Robert King's business to Frank Joseph Rogers. (4) An Agreement dated the 24th May, 1898, made between Frank Joseph Rogers for and on behalf of the Company of the one part, and William King of the other part. (5) An Agreement dated the 24th June, 1898, and made between the said Frank Joseph Rogers, acting on behalf of himself and others therein named, of the one part and King & Mortimer, Limited, of the other part, for purchase by the Company of Mr. Robert King's business. (6) An Agreement dated the 24th June, 1898, and made between Albert Horatio Jones, the said Frank Joseph Rogers and John Hedley Smith of the one part, acting on behalf of themselves and others therein named, and King & Mortimer, Limited, of the other part, for purchase by the Company of the business of Mortimer's Stores.

The Businesses will be taken over subject to, and with the benefit of, all existing contracts. These are of the ordinary trade character, and necessary for the management and working of the Businesses, but it is impracticable to specify them. There are also contracts relating to the formation of the Company, subscriptions to the capital, and other contracts, to none of which the Company is a party, which may technically fall within Section 38 of the Companies Act, 1867. Subscribers for Shares shall be deemed to have had notice of all these contracts, and to have agreed with the Company as Trustee for the Directors to waive their right (if any) to particulars thereof, whether under the said Section 38 or otherwise, and applications for Shares will only be received and allotments made on this basis. Copies of the Memorandum and Articles of Association and of the above-mentioned Contracts, together with the Valuation and Accountants' Certificate, and a draft of the Debenture Trust Deed, may be seen at the Offices of the Solicitors of the Company, No. 15, Queen-street, Cheapside, E.C. Applications for Mortgage Debenture Stock and for Preference Shares should be made on the Forms accompanying the Prospectus, and forwarded to either of the Company's Bankers, or any of their Branches, together with the deposit payable on application. If no allotment be made the deposit will be returned in full, and where the amount allotted is less than that applied for, the balance will be applied towards the amount due on allotment, and any excess returned to the applicant. Prospectuses and Forms of Application can be obtained from the Company's Bankers and their Branches, and from the Solicitors, Auditors, and Brokers, and at the Offices of the Company.

June 27th, 1898.

GLENCAIRN MAIN REEF GOLD MINING CO.

LIMITED.

REPORT OF DIRECTORS

For the Year ending December 31, 1897.

Submitted at a Meeting of Shareholders, held in the Board-room, Colonnade Buildings, Johannesburg, on Wednesday, May 25, 1898, at Twelve o'clock noon.

GENTLEMEN,—Your Directors have pleasure in submitting to you their Report upon the affairs of the Company for the year ending December 31, 1897, together with Balance-sheet and Profit and Loss Account duly audited.

ACCOUNTS.—The statements annexed give full details of revenue and expenditure and details of working costs. It has again been necessary to divide up the Profit and Loss Account into two sections, one showing expenses while the new mill was being completed, and the other since crushing recommenced, i.e., from August to December. The cost of development up to August was charged to Excess Development Account. Since that time all tonnage developed has been charged to working expenses. The cost in the books of the Excess Development Account (£44,000) and Permanent Shaft Account (£20,000) amounts to £64,000. According to our Surveyor's certificate, ore in sight on December 31 was 293,000 tons, equal to 4s. 4d. per ton. The working costs during the five months crushing have been reduced from 21s. 0·137d. to 17s. 0·323d.—a very gratifying decrease, attributable to cheaper labour, stores, more effective crushing plant, and good management.

DEBENTURE ISSUE.—Since the close of the year your Directors have had under their consideration the question of providing for the indebtedness to the Consolidated Investment Company, and also making some provision for the moneys spent out of profits which had been used for capital expenditure. It has been decided to issue £140,000 in debentures, repayable by seven annual drawings, commencing January 1, 1901, bearing interest at 6 per cent., giving holders of the issue option for a period of two years from date of issue to convert into £1 Shares at a premium of 50s., or £3 10s. per share.

DEPRECIATION.—It has again been deemed advisable to write off a considerable amount (£70,876 10s. 5d.) on this account, principally on old crushing, hauling, and cyanide plants.

MINE.—The Manager's Report goes fully into details of work done both under and above ground.

GENERAL.—Only an average of 110 stamps could be kept going during the five months crushing, owing mainly to the scarcity of boys and a little to the illicit sale of liquor in the neighbourhood of our compounds. Under present circumstances, with 110 stamps, the profit averages £10,000 per month, but with full supply of labour could be increased 50 per cent. The coming difficulty may probably be scarcity of water. In consequence of the very dry summer we have had our resevoir is somewhat low for this time of year. All possible economy, however, is being adopted by the manager for preventing waste. This, with some late rains, may enable crushing to go on until spring sets in.

DIRECTORS.—Mr. J. Dale Lace retires in terms of Trust Deed, but being eligible, offers himself for re-election.

AUDITORS.—Messrs. Jno. Moon and J. P. O'Reilly retire in terms of Trust Deed, but offer themselves for re-election. You will also be asked to fix the remuneration for past audit

For JOHANNESBURG CONSOLIDATED INVESTMENT COMPANY, Limited, Secretaries,
Johannesburg, May 16th, 1898.

H. F. STRANGE, E. BRAYSHAW, Directors.
D. HENDERSON.

BALANCE-SHEET to DECEMBER 31, 1897.

LIABILITIES.

To Capital	£550,000 0 0
Less 50,000 Shares in reserve	50,000 0 0
		£500,000 0 0
Loan per Johannesburg Consolidated Investment Company		105,010 7 7
Sundry Creditors		10,112 19 2
Unclaimed Dividends...		382 18 8
Timber Suspense Account		8,000 0 0
Balance, Profit and Loss		96,209 8 3
		£719,715 13 8

ASSETS.

	At December, 31st, 1896.	Since added.	At Date, after Deducting Depreciation.
By Battery Plant	£63,681 8 3	£40,320 8 9	£94,000 0 0
Mine Buildings	36,652 13 7	3,224 18 5	35,890 0 0
Hauling Plant	23,936 15 6	13,393 18 9	31,084 0 0
Alterations to Headgear	1,525 1 1
Mine Plant	25,666 19 0	5,358 0 3	25,060 0 0
Assay Plant	32 19 0
Old Machinery absorbed	226 8 10
Water Service Plant ...	3,400 0 0	111 4 1	3,160 0 0
Tramway Plant	4,252 17 11	2,629 5 1	5,506 0 0
Electric Plant	5,473 17 7	6,454 11 2	10,736 0 0
Rock Drill Plant	27,211 6 6	12,532 17 10	31,796 0 0
Cyanide Plant	29,721 10 3	26,707 12 6	42,322 0 0
Mechanical Haulage ...	564 13 1	6,044 5 2	5,948 0 0
Permanent Shafts ...	21,430 5 10	4,033 9 4	20,000 0 0
Mine Furniture	722 18 3	—	650 0 0
Carts, Horses, &c. ...	1,000 0 0	3 15 0	500 0 0
Reservoirs and Dams ...	5,979 2 6	9,995 15 1	11,182 0 0
Excess Development ...	—	45,421 11 10	44,000 0 0
Machinery in transit ...	33,963 17 11	—	—
		£176,231 13 3
Deduct Machinery in transit, paid at December 31, 1896, and since apportioned ...		33,963 17 11
	£290,442 15 1	£142,267 15 4
		£432,710 10 5
Less Depreciation on Plant, Machinery, Buildings, Stocks, &c.		70,876 10 5
			£361,384 0 0
Property			326,494 11 2
Stores on hand			8,593 2 10
Cash in London...			3,671 8 6
Sundry Debtors...			946 17 10
Water Rent, paid in advance			365 13 4
Gold in Transit...			9,900 0 0
Machinery and Plant in suspense			8,000 0 0
			£719,715 13 8

H. F. STRANGE, E. BRAYSHAW, Directors.

JOHANNESBURG CONSOLIDATED INVESTMENT COMPANY, Limited, Secretaries.

We hereby certify that we have examined and compared books and vouchers of the Glencairn Main Reef Gold Mining Company, Limited, and that the above Balance sheet is a true and correct statement of the affairs of the Company as at December 31, 1897.

JOHN MOON, J. P. O'REILLY, Auditors.

PROFIT AND LOSS ACCOUNT for Twelve Months ended December 31, 1897.

To proportion of expenses during seven months' development and machinery erection from January 1st to July 31st 1897—
Office Expenses, Johannesburg and London	£1,318 9 8
Interest on loan	5,968 11 8
Directors' and C.E. Fees	658 11 4
Accident and Fire Assurance	686 4 8
Salaries	979 3 4
Sundry Subscriptions, Advertising, Printing, &c.	715 19 0
Licenses and Rents	53 19 0
Tree planting, &c.	813 13 2
Loss on Gold Stolen, &c.	2,759 17 4
	£13,954 9 2
By Balance carried down	£13,954 9 2
	£13,954 9 2

PROFIT AND LOSS ACCOUNT—No. 2.

Cost per Ton Crushed:
	To Proportion of Expenses whilst Battery worked from August 1 to December 31, 1897—
7·576s.	Mining expenses	£32,175 4 1
1·850s.	Development ditto	7,857 12 8
0·861s.	Hauling ditto	3,657 16 6
1·075s.	Tramming ditto	4,562 18 0
2·956s.	Milling ditto	12,554 2 1
2·038s.	Cyaniding ditto	8,655 16 1
			£69,463 9 5
6·967s.	General Charges, Offices Expenses, Salaries, Water Rent, &c.		4,108 19 8
	Balance, Profit on five months working		44,167 19 3
17·323s.	per ton on 84,938 tons crushed		£117,740 8 4
By Gold from Battery, 21,369·52 oz., at 74s. 9·6d.			£79,926 16 6
Do. Cyanide, 11,081·00 oz., at 67s. 3·6d.			37,293 15 7
Revenue from other sources			519 16 3
Average, 7·65 dwt., per ton crusied.
Cost per ton	17·323s.
Yield per ton	27·601s.
Profit	10·278s.
			£117,740 8 4

PROFIT AND LOSS ACCOUNT—No. 3.

To Balance brought down...	£13,954 9 2
Depreciation as shown in Balance-sheet...	70,876 10 5
Balance to next Account	96,209 8 3
	£181,040 7 10
By Balance from last year's Account	£136,872 8 7
Do. above	44,167 19 3
	£181,040 7 10

H. F. STRANGE, E. BRAYSHAW, Directors.

JOHANNESBURG CONSOLIDATED INVESTMENT COMPANY, LIMITED, Secretaries.

Examined and found correct,

JOHN MOON, J. P. O'REILLY Auditors.

NEW PRIMROSE GOLD MINING COMPANY,

LIMITED.

DIRECTORS' REPORT

For Twelve Months ending December 31, 1897.

Submitted to the General Meeting of Shareholders held in the Board Room, Colonnade Buildings, Johannesburg, on Wednesday, May 25, 1898, at Eleven o'clock a.m.

GENTLEMEN,—Your Directors have much pleasure in submitting to you their Report upon the affairs of the Company to December 31, 1897, together with Statement of Accounts, duly audited.

ACCOUNTS.—From the detailed accounts annexed you will gather the net profits from all sources amounted to £151,353 9s. 9d., exclusive of depreciation, £6,719 9s. 5d., a considerable increase on the previous statement. This extra profit has arisen from lower working costs and increased value of ore—the first having been reduced from 24s. 0·885d. to 18s. 0·811d., over 6s. per ton; and the yield from milling and cyaniding having risen from an average of 10·15 dwt. for 1896 to 10·29 dwt. for the past year on tonnage treated.

Capital expenditure for the past year has been materially reduced, being £20,183 18s. 10d., as against £59,039 11s. 2d. for the previous statement.

The expenditure made upon new dam, £550 14s. 2d., is part payment of a new reservoir. The dam site at present in use is only leased from the Simmer and Jack Company, who have given notice (twelve months) to terminate the lease. The Simmer and Jack Company, however, have to take over the dam at a valuation. This will repay a large portion of the cost of new dam.

DIVIDENDS.—During the year Dividends Nos. 14 (20 per cent.) and 15 (30 per cent.) have been declared, absorbing £150,000.

MINE.—Full detailed report from the manager is annexed. From this you will gather that between the No. 11 and No. 12 levels a serious fault occurs, which has given considerable trouble to the manager. This, however, is being overcome on the No. 13 level.

The ore reserves now stand at 307,500 tons—practically the same as last year. Representing this in the books as assets are: Permanent shafts and excess development, amounting to £45,000, or a fraction less than 3s. per ton, which can be considered a very reasonable figure.

GENERAL.—During the past year the difficulties which the management had chiefly to contend with were a shortage of boys and the prevailing worries of the illicit liquor traffickers. The anticipated improvement in the profits has been fully borne out, and every effort will be made to maintain them. The question of treating our slimes is still having the attention of the Board, as surface accommodation for storing in dams is becoming limited. The water question is also giving cause for anxiety (as with other companies in the east), but every care is being taken to prevent waste, and efforts will be made to get through the winter without shutting down.

MR. B. I. BARNATO.—During the year the Board and Shareholders generally have suffered an irreparable loss by the death of their esteemed colleague Mr. B. I. Barnato. During his connection with the mine, which was practically since the Company was floated, he had always taken the very greatest interest in its welfare, and to him was due the credit of bringing the Company to its present successful position.

DIRECTORS.—Messrs. S. B. Joel and E. Brayshaw retire in terms of the Trust Deed, but are eligible, and offer themselves for re-election.

AUDITORS.—Messrs. John Moon and F. W. Diamond retire also in terms of the Trust Deed, but offer themselves for re-election. You will also be asked to fix their remuneration for the past audit.

H. F. STRANGE, E. BRAYSHAW, Directors.

For the JOHANNESBURG CONSOLIDATED INVESTMENT COMPANY, LIMITED, Secretaries,
Johannesburg, May 16th, 1898.

D. HENDERSON.

BALANCE-SHEET at December 31, 1897.

LIABILITIES.

To Capital (fully issued) ...	£300,000 0 0
Sundry Creditors...	21,736 1 5
Dividend No. 15 ...	90,000 0 0
Balance (Profit and Loss) ...	192,381 19 5
	£604,118 0 10

ASSETS.

	At Dec. 31, 1896.	Since Added.	At Date, after Deducting Depreciation.
By Battery Plant ...	£84,406 7 3	£3,012 7 2	£72,139 0 0
Spare Machinery ...	2,755 0 0
Mine Buildings ...	27,397 9 4	3,124 16 0	25,218 0 0
Spare Machinery, &c. ...	1,000 0 0
Mine Plant ...	14,032 18 2	1,062 9 7	12,076 0 0
Hauling Plant ...	20,620 4 4	1,855 13 10	18,886 0 0
Crusher Plant ...	1,131 12 2
Tramway Plant ...	12,759 15 0	391 11 0	9,206 0 0
Cyanide Plant ...	27,031 18 1	1,844 3 7	20,214 0 0
Reservoirs and Dams ...	9,383 4 4	2,093 14 3	7,808 0 0
New Dam ...	—	550 14 2	550 14 2
Rock Drill Plant ...	10,995 19 6	2,612 16 8	10,887 0 0
Permanent Shafts ...	10,674 13 10	2,569 1 3	10,000 0 0
Live Stock, Carts, &c. ...	373 0 10	145 2 0	466 0 0
Excess Development ...	37,341 12 10	626 0 0	35,000 0 0
Electric Plant ...	536 18 0	175 14 8	640 0 0
Office Furniture (Mine) ...	95 5 0	119 14 8	193 0 0
	£260,535 17 10	£20,183 16 10	£223,343 14 2
		£280,719 16 8
Less Depreciation on Plant, Machinery, Buildings, Stock, &c. ...		57,376 2 6
By Cash in London ...		£38,560 14 3
Cash at Mine ...		1,126 4 1
Cash on Deposit ...		114,532 9 8
			154,219 8 0
Sundry Debtors...			1,536 17 8
Pumping machinery in reserve ...			3,750 0 0
Stores on hand ...			12,000 0 0
Property, 59 claims, 8 Bewaarplaatsen, and portion of Mijnpacht ...			208,430 0 0
Freehold ground ...			838 1 0
			£604,118 0 10

H. F. STRANGE, E. BRAYSHAW, } Directors.

JOHANNESBURG CONSOLIDATED INVESTMENT COMPANY, LIMITED, Secretaries.

We hereby certify that we have examined and compared the books and vouchers of the New Primrose Gold Mining Company, Limited, and that the above Balance-sheet is a true and correct statement of the Company's affairs as at December 31, 1897.

JOHN MOON, F. W. DIAMOND, } Auditors.

PROFIT AND LOSS ACCOUNT for Twelve Months ended December 31, 1897.

Cost per Ton Milled.
5·810s.	To Mining Expenses ...	£80,757 9 10
4·618s.	Development ...	64,287 1 8
1·801s.	Hauling and Pumping ...	25,041 9 5
1·398s.	Tramming ...	19,429 18 7
2·050s.	Milling ...	28,489 8 2
2·119s.	Cyaniding ...	29,457 11 4
			£247,462 19 0
1·015s.	General Charges, Law Expenses, Directors' and Auditors' Fees, Office Expenses, Salaries, Licenses, &c. ...		14,105 10 1
	Balance (profit on twelve months' working) ...		151,353 9 9
18·811s.	per ton on 278,015 tons milled		£412,921 18 10

By Gold from Tailings, 45,856·94 oz., 65/10·248 ...	£150,963 0 3
Gold from Battery, 70,399·89 oz., 73/5·76 ...	258,661 2 0
Revenue from other sources ...	3,297 16 7
8.36 dwt. per ton milled.
Yield per ton ... 29·471s.
Cost per ton ... 18·811s.
Profit per ton ... 10·660s.
	£412,921 18 10

PROFIT AND LOSS ACCOUNT No. 2.

To Loss on Realisation of Gold in Transit ...	£139 5 10
Depreciation in value of stores on hand, 31/12/96 ...	7,343 6 11
Depreciation as detailed in Balance-sheet ...	57,376 2 6
Dividend No. 14 ...	60,000 0 0
Dividend No. 15 ...	90,000 0 0
Balance to next Account ...	192,381 19 5
	£407,240 14 8

By Balance from last Account...	£255,887 4 11
Balance from above Account ...	151,353 9 9
	£407,240 14 8

H. F. STRANGE, E. BRAYSHAW, } Directors.

JOHANNESBURG CONSOLIDATED INVESTMENT COMPANY, LIMITED, Secretaries.

Examined and found correct,

JOHN MOON, F. W. DIAMOND, } Auditors.

GINSBERG GOLD MINING COMPANY, LTD.

DIRECTORS' REPORT,

Presented at the Fifth Annual General Meeting of Shareholders, held in the Board Room, Colonnade Buildings, Johannesburg, on Thursday, May 26, 1898, at Three o'clock p.m.

Your Directors have pleasure in submitting this, their Fifth Annual Report, as also the Balance-sheet and Profit and Loss Account for the year ended December 31, 1897, duly audited.

ACCOUNTS.—The amount standing to the credit of Profit and Loss Account, including £12,606 0s. 7d. brought forward from the previous year, is £77,494 2s. 8d. The cost of development stands at £7,198 10s. 6d., against which there were 76,945 tons of ore in sight on December 31 last. The average cost per ton being 1s. 10·45d.

DEPRECIATION.—A sum of £10,948 9s. 11d. has been written off machinery and plant at above date.

MINE AND MILL.—The Report of your General Manager, Mr. E. Fern, for the year under review, deals fully with the work done, and affords all the necessary information which bears out the anticipation of your Directors expressed at the last General Meeting.

DIVIDEND.—On December 14 last, your Directors declared a Dividend of 25 per cent. for the half-year ended December 31, 1897, absorbing £40,000, which was paid to Shareholders on February 11 last, leaving a balance to carry forward to next account of £37,494 2s. 8d.

DIRECTORS.—In terms of the Articles of Association your Directors retire, but are eligible, and offer themselves for re-election.

AUDITORS.—Shortly after your last general meeting, Mr. C. L. Redwood, one of the Auditors, resigned, and your Directors appointed Mr. D. Fraser in his place. You are asked to confirm their action. Messrs. Moon and D. Fraser retire, but offer themselves for re-election. You are requested to fix their remuneration for the past audit.

C. F. B. WOLLASTON, R. G. FRICKER, } Directors.

Johannesburg, April 13, 1898.

BALANCE-SHEET at December 31, 1897.

LIABILITIES.

To Capital—fully issued	£160,000 0 0
Sundry Creditors	5,431 11 7
Native Wages due at date	715 0 0
Dividend declared to December 31	40,000 0 0
Balance (Profit and Loss)	37,494 2 8
	£243,640 14 3

ASSETS

	At December 31, 1896.	Since Added.	At Date, after Deducting Depreciation.
By Buildings	£12,509 0 0	£1,122 17 8	£12,610 0 0
Battery Plant	19,925 0 0	418 0 0	18,300 0 0
Hauling Plant	8,425 10 0	208 6 8	7,985 0 0
Tramway Plant	1,506 0 0	12 17 6	1,405 0 0
Mine Plant	5,077 10 0	932 5 0	5,560 0 0
Rock Drill Plant	1,583 0 0	—	1,464 0 0
Electric Plant	658 6 7	3,016 0 0	3,400 0 0
Cyanide Plant	13,974 0 0	327 16 11	10,000 0 0
Permanent Shafts	8,179 10 0	3,462 7 11	10,000 0 0
Dams and Reservoirs	3,684 0 0	706 11 8	4,060 0 0
Excess Development	6,642 0 0	556 10 6	7,198 10 6
Office Furniture	25 10 0	—	23 0 0
Live Stock	17 0 0	—	16 0 0
	£82,206 6 7	£10,763 13 10
		£92,970 0 5
Less Depreciation on Plant, Machinery, Buildings, Stock, &c.		10,948 9 11
			£82,021 10 6
Property Account (39 Claims and Water Rights)			99,440 13 10
Stores on Hand			2,965 16 0
Gold in Transit			310 0 0
Sundry Debtors			159 9 0
Cash on Deposit in London			58,742 1 11
			£243,640 14 3

C. F. B. WOLLASTON, R. G. FRICKER, } Directors.

JOHANNESBURG CONSOLIDATED INVESTMENT COMPANY, LIMITED, Secretaries.

We hereby certify that we have examined and compared the books and vouchers of the Ginsberg Gold Mining Company, Limitel, and that the above Balance-sheet is a true and correct statement of the position of the Company at December 31, 1897.

JOHN MOON, D. FRASER, } Auditors.

Johannesburg, April 13th, 1898.

PROFIT AND LOSS ACCOUNT for the Year ending December 31, 1897.

Cost per Ton on Tons Milled.
7·327	To Mining Expenses	£22,484 1 2
3·124	Development	9,588 9 0
1·738	Hauling and Pumping	5,334 8 4
2·964	Milling	9,095 1 5
2·066	Cyaniding	6,339 13 10
1·092	Tramming	3,352 11 1
			£56,195 6 10
1·412	General Charges, Salaries, Office Expenses, Directors', Auditors', and Engineers' Fees, Licenses, &c.		4,333 15 8
	Balance (profit on year's working)		75,836 12 0
19·723 on 61,372 tons crushed.			£136,365 14 6

By Gold from Battery, 24,594·96 oz. at 74/11·856		£92,216 18 1
Gold from Cyanide, 12,148·69 oz. at 72/2·64		43,871 6 5
36,743·68 oz., equal to 11·94 dwt. per ton on 61,372 tons crushed.
Revenue from other sources		277 10 0
Yield per ton	S. 44·347
Cost per ton	S. 19·723
Profit per ton	S. 24·624
		£136,365 14 6

PROFIT AND LOSS ACCOUNT No. 2.

To Depreciation as shown in Balance-sheet	£10,949 9 11
Dividend No. 1 of 25 per cent. for six months to December 31st, 1896	40,000 0 0
Balance to next Account	37,494 2 8
	£88,442 12 7

By Balance from last account	£12,606 0 7
Balance from above account	75,836 12 0
	£88,422 12 7

C. F. B. WOLLASTON, R. G. FRICKER, } Directors.

JOHANNESBURG CONSOLIDATED INVESTMENT COMPANY, LIMITED, Secretaries,

Examined and found correct,

JOHN MOON, D. FRASER, } Auditors.

Johannesburg, April 13th, 1898.

BALTIMORE AND OHIO RAILROAD COMPANY.

SIX PER CENT. STERLING MORTGAGE BONDS, LOAN OF 1874.

LONDON AND NEW YORK, 22nd June, 1898.

To the Holders of Certificates issued under the Bondholders' Agreement dated 3rd May, 1898.

Referring to our Circular of 3rd May, 1898, in which the holders of the above described bonds were invited to deposit them, so that all necessary steps might be taken for the protection of their interests, we have now to state that a Plan has been issued for the reorganisation of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company.

This Plan, in our opinion, fully recognises the rights of the 6 per cent. Sterling Mortgage Bonds of 1874. The terms thereby secured for them are entirely satisfactory to us, and we feel that they should be to you, and that the bonds we represent should be deposited under said Plan.

Pursuant to the Bondholders' Agreement of 3rd May, 1898, under which your bonds are deposited, and especially to Articles Fourth and Fifth (subdivision 6 thereof), it is necessary before we take any further steps in the line indicated that we shall have the Assent of 60 per cent. in amount of the holders of the above-named certificates.

As you will see on examination of the Plan, the offer to the 6 per cent. Sterling Mortgage Bonds of 1874, is, for each £100 Bond—

$1,120 in new Prior Lien 3½ per cent. Gold bonds due 1925 (equal @ 4·8666 to $115·07 per cent.) bearing interest from 1st July, 1898.

$120 in new First Mortgage 4 per cent. Gold bonds due 1948 (equal @ 4·8666 to $12·33 per cent.) bearing interest from 1st July, 1898.

$160 in new 4 per cent. non-cumulative Preferred Stock Trust Certificates (equal at 4·8666 to $16·44 per cent.)

$9 73-100 in cash, on completion of the reorganisation, for interest to 1st July, 1898.

The Coupon on the present Bonds, due 1st May, 1898, namely £6 per Bond, with interest thereon at 5 per cent. per annum to be likewise paid in cash as soon as practicable after the Plan is declared operative; or, if the holder so desires, such Coupon will be purchased by a Syndicate for cash as soon as the Bond has been deposited, but not after 22nd July, 1898, at its face value, with interest at 5 per cent. per annum.

If you agree with the views herein expressed, and the offer made is satisfactory to you, will you please sign the "Assent" which may be obtained at the offices of Messrs. J. S. Morgan & Co., 22, Old Broad Street, London, E.C., and return it with the least possible delay to them.

J. S. MORGAN & CO.
J. P. MORGAN & CO.

BALTIMORE AND OHIO RAILROAD COMPANY.

FIVE PER CENT. BONDS DUE 1927, SECURED BY "CHICAGO DIVISION" MORTGAGE OF MAY 29TH, 1877.

LONDON AND NEW YORK, 22nd June, 1898.

To the Holders of Certificates issued under the Bondholders' Agreement dated July 17th, 1897.

Referring to our Circular of July 22nd, 1897, in which the holders of the above described bonds were invited to deposit them, so that all necessary steps might be taken for the protection of their interests, we have now to state that a Plan has been issued for the reorganisation of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company.

This Plan, in our opinion, fully recognises the rights of the Baltimore and Ohio "Chicago Division" Bonds. The terms thereby secured for them are entirely satisfactory to us, and we feel that they should be to you, and that the bonds we represent should be deposited under said Plan.

Pursuant to the Bondholders' Agreement of July 17th, 1897, under which your bonds are deposited, and especially to Articles Fourth and Fifth (subdivision 6 thereof), it is necessary before we take any further steps in the line indicated that we shall have the Assent of 60 per cent. in amount of the holders of the above-named certificates.

As you will see on examination of the Plan, the offer to the Baltimore and Ohio "Chicago Division" bondholders is, for each £200 Bond—

$100 in new Prior Lien 3½ per cent. Gold bonds due 1925 (equal @ 4·8666 to $10·27 per cent.) bearing interest from 1st July, 1898.

$1,070 in new First Mortgage 4 per cent. Gold bonds due 1948 (equal @ 4·8666 to $109·93 per cent.) bearing interest from 1st July, 1898.

$100 in new 4 per cent. non-cumulative Preferred Stock Certificates (equal @ 4·8666 to $10·27 per cent.)

$4 06-100 in cash, on completion of the reorganisation, for interest to 1st July, 1898.

The Coupons on the present Bonds, due 1st December, 1897, and 1st June, 1898, namely, £10 per Bond, with interest thereon at 5 per cent. per annum, to be likewise paid in cash as soon as practicable after the plan is declared operative; or, if the holder so desires, such Coupons will be purchased by a Syndicate for cash as soon as the Bond has been deposited, but not after 22nd July, 1898, at their face value, with interest at 5 per cent. per annum.

If you agree with the views herein expressed, and the offer made is satisfactory to you, will you please sign the "Assent" which may be obtained at the offices of Messrs. J. S. Morgan & Co., 22, Old Broad Street, London, E.C., and return it with the least possible delay to them.

J. S. MORGAN & CO.
J. P. MORGAN & CO.

BALTIMORE AND OHIO RAILROAD COMPANY.

FIVE PER CENT. CONSOLIDATED MORTGAGE BONDS,

Issued under Mortgage dated December 19th, 1887.
(Known as Bonds of 1988.)

NEW YORK, 22nd June, 1898.

To the Holders of Certificates issued under the Bondholders' Agreement dated 1st November, 1897.

Referring to our Circular of 1st November, 1897, in which we invited the holders of the above-described bonds to deposit them, so that we might take all necessary steps for the protection of their interests, we have now to state that a Plan has been issued for the reorganisation of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company.

This Plan, in our opinion, fully recognises the rights of the Consolidated Bonds. The terms thereby secured for them are entirely satisfactory to us, and we feel that they should be to you, and that the bonds we represent should be deposited under said Plan.

Pursuant to the Bondholders' Agreement of 1st November, 1897, under which your bonds are deposited, and especially to Articles Fourth and Fifth (subdivision 6 thereof), it is necessary before we take any further steps in the line indicated that we shall have the Assent of 75 per cent. in amount of the holders of the above-named certificates.

As you will see on examination of the Plan, the offer to the Consolidated Mortgage bondholders for each present bond of $1,000 with all unpaid coupons or interest is substantially—

$1,050 in new Prior Lien 3½ per cent. Gold bonds due 1925, bearing interest from 1st July, 1898.

$125 in new First Mortgage 4 per cent. Gold bonds due 1948, bearing interest from 1st July, 1898.

$85 in new 4 per cent. non-cumulative Preferred Stock Trust Certificates.

$20 83-100 in Cash, on completion of reorganisation, for interest to 1st July, 1898.

or, at the option of depositors (to be signified within 60 days after the Plan shall actually be issued),

$1,100 cash for principal, together with cash for all accrued interest to time of payment, such payment to be made upon the Plan being declared operative.

If you agree with the views herein expressed, and the offer made is satisfactory to you, will you please sign the "Assent" which may be obtained at the offices of Messrs. J. P. Morgan & Co., 23, Wall Street, New York, and return it with the least possible delay to them.

Holders of our certificates desiring to accept the cash offer for the principal of the bonds represented thereby, will please so signify at the foot of the Assent. In all other cases we shall understand that they elect to accept the new securities for the principal of the present bonds.

J. P. MORGAN & CO.
BROWN, BROTHERS & CO.
BARING, MAGOUN & CO.

LONDON, 22nd June, 1898.

Having jointly made an issue of the above-described bonds in this market, under date of 15th May, 1898, simultaneously with that made in New York by our respective representatives, who have signed the above Circular, we strongly recommend all holders of certificates for such bonds to Assent to the terms proposed for the bonds under the Plan of Reorganisation. Signed "Assents" may be sent to Messrs. J. S. Morgan & Co., 22, Old Broad Street, London, E.C.

J. S. MORGAN & CO.
BROWN, SHIPLEY & CO.
BARING BROTHERS & CO., Limited.

PITTSBURGH AND CONNELLSVILLE RAILROAD COMPANY.

SIX PER CENT. CONSOLIDATED MORTGAGE BONDS DUE 1926,

AND GUARANTEED BY

THE BALTIMORE AND OHIO RAILROAD COMPANY.

LONDON AND NEW YORK, 22nd June, 1898.

To the Holders of Certificates issued under the Bondholders' Agreement dated July 15th, 1897.

Referring to our circular of July 22nd, 1897, in which the holders of the above-described bonds were invited to deposit them so that all necessary steps might be taken for the protection of their interests, we have now to state that a Plan has been issued for the reorganisation of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company, including the railroad and property of the Pittsburgh and Connellsville Railroad Company.

This Plan, in our opinion, fully recognises the rights of the Pittsburgh and Connellsville Consolidated Bonds. The terms thereby secured for them are entirely satisfactory to us, and we feel that they should be to you, and that the bonds we represent should be deposited under said Plan.

Pursuant to the Bondholders' Agreement of July 22nd, 1897, under which your bonds are deposited, and especially to Articles Fourth and Fifth (subdivision 6 thereof), it is necessary before we take any further steps in the line indicated that we shall have the assent of 60 per cent. in amount of the holders of the above-named certificates.

As you will see on examination of the Plan, the offer to the Pittsburgh and Connellsville Consolidated Mortgage bondholders is, for each £200 bond:

$1,025 in new Prior Lien 3½ per cent. Gold bonds due 1925 (equal @ 4·8666 to $105·31 per cent.) bearing interest from 1st July, 1898.

$120 in new First Mortgage 4 per cent. Gold bonds due 1948 (equal @ 4·8666 to $12·33 per cent.) bearing interest from 1st July, 1898.

$200 in new 4 per cent. non-cumulative Preferred Stock Trust Certificates (equal @ 4·8666 to $20·55 per cent.)

$29 20-100 in cash, on completion of the reorganisation, for interest to 1st July, 1898.

The coupons on the present bonds, due 1st July, 1897, and 1st January, 1898, namely: £12 per bond, with interest thereon at 5 per cent. per annum to be likewise paid in cash as soon as practicable after the Plan is declared operative; or, if the holder so desires, such coupons will be purchased by a Syndicate for cash as soon as the bond has been deposited, but not after 22nd July, 1898, at their face value, with interest at 5 per cent. per annum.

If you agree with the views herein expressed, and the offer made is satisfactory to you, will you please sign the "Assent," which may be obtained at the offices of Messrs. J. S. Morgan & Co., 22, Old Broad Street, London, E.C., and return it with the least possible delay to them.

J. S. MORGAN & CO.
J. P. MORGAN & CO.

To Holders of Receipts issued by the undersigned for

BALTIMORE AND OHIO RAILROAD COMPANY'S

FIVE PER CENT. BONDS LOAN OF 1885.

Pursuant to the Bondholders' Agreement of April 10th, 1896, we the undersigned hereby give notice that a Plan and Agreement for the Reorganisation of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company, dated June 22nd, 1898, has been prepared, and has been adopted and approved by us, and we hereby recommend the same for the acceptance of the Bondholders. Copies of the said Plan and Agreement have been duly lodged at the offices of Speyer & Co., New York, and Speyer Brothers, London, for inspection by the holders of our receipts issued under said Bondholders' Agreement of April 10th, 1896.

The plan provides that each $1,000 of the above Bonds will, on the completion of the reorganisation, be entitled to receive:—

In New Prior Lien 3½ per cent. Bonds	$1,000
,, 1st Mortgage 4 per cent. Bonds	$125
,, Preferred Stock Trust Certificates	$100
In Cash (representing interest accrued from February 1st, 1898, to July 1st, 1898)	$20·83

The New Prior Lien and 1st Mortgage Bonds are to bear interest from July 1st, 1898.

Any receipt-holders who do not assent to such Plan and Agreement of Reorganisation may withdraw their bonds and coupons represented by our receipts at any time on or before July 21st, 1898, upon the surrender of such receipts, without expense. All receipt-holders who shall not withdraw their bonds and coupons on or before July 21st, 1898, above stated, shall be conclusively deemed to have assented to said Plan and Agreement of Reorganisation, and will be bound thereby, and the undersigned will thereupon deposit thereunder all of such bonds and coupons not so withdrawn, in exchange for Reorganisation Certificates of Deposit issued under said Plan and Agreement.

SPEYER & CO.,
SPEYER BROTHERS, } Depositaries.

Dated, June 22nd, 1898.

BALTIMORE AND OHIO RAILROAD

SIX PER CENT. BONDS OF 1872.

To the Holders of Certificates issued under the Bondholders' Agreement of 16th May, 1898.

A plan having been issued dated the 22nd June, 1898, for the reorganisation of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, by which satisfactory provision is, in our opinion, made for the rights of the above Bonds, we shall deposit under the said plan all Bonds deposited with us under the Bondholders' Agreement of the 16th ultimo, provided that such deposit is assented to, as provided in the said Agreement, by the holders of sixty per cent. in amount of our Certificates. Any holders of Certificates who wish to dissent must give us written notice within two weeks from the 4th of July next. Forms of assent, and copies of the plan, may be obtained from us by Holders of our Certificates.

BARING BROTHERS and CO., Limited

8, Bishopsgate Within, June 22nd, 1898.

FOUNDERS COURT, E.C.,
LONDON, 22nd June, 1898.

To the Holders of Our Certificates of Deposit for the

BALTIMORE AND OHIO RAILROAD COMPANY'S FIRST MORTGAGE FOUR AND A HALF PER CENT. STERLING BONDS OF 1883.

Issued under Bondholders' Agreement, dated 1st October, 1897.

A proposed Plan and Agreement for the Reorganisation of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company, dated 22nd June, 1898, has been most carefully considered by us, under which, each of the above bonds will receive $1,000 New First Mortgage 4 per cent. Gold Bonds, and $265 in New Preferred Stock in exchange for each £200 First Mortgage 4½ per cent. Sterling Bond, 1883. We recommend the same to you for your prompt acceptance.

Under your Bondholders' Agreement of 1st October, 1897, it is provided that if there shall be proposed to our satisfaction any Scheme of Reorganisation or Readjustment, we may, with the assent (to be manifested by express approval, or by a failure within two weeks to express dissent) of the holders of certificates of deposit representing sixty per cent. in amount of the deposited bonds, come in under such reorganisation.

The Plan and Agreement is deemed satisfactory by us. We request therefore your assent thereto in writing.

Unless, within two weeks from the date of mailing this notice to you and of the first advertisement of this notice in two London newspapers, you notify us of your dissent, we will presume, conclusively, that you have assented to our deposit of your bonds under said Plan and Agreement of Reorganisation.

Your bonds will accordingly be so deposited by us, if 60 per cent. of the bonds with us deposited, shall assent in writing to the deposit under said Plan and Agreement.

If notified by any depositor within two weeks from the date hereof, in writing of his dissent, we will return him the bonds deposited with us, upon surrender of our Certificates of Deposit, thus ending all future obligation to such dissenting bondholder.

If we are not notified of your dissent within the time named, upon receipt by us in exchange for your bonds, of certificates of deposit issued under said Plan and Agreement of Reorganisation, we will deliver the same to you, without further charge, upon surrender to us of our own certificates.

We solicit most earnestly a very prompt expression, in writing, of your assent or dissent. Unless notified to the contrary by you, we will deposit all coupons of assenting bonds maturing prior to 1st July, 1898, upon depositing such bonds under the Plan.

Having thus obtained for depositing bondholders the opportunity to secure terms of settlement deemed satisfactory by us, we notify you that after the expiration of two weeks from the mailing of this notice and first advertisement thereof, our only duty under the Bondholders' Agreement of 1st October, 1897, will be either to return their bonds to depositing holders who have theretofore signified their desire to withdraw the same, or to surrender to such depositing bondholders as, within that period, shall have assented either expressly or by a failure to dissent, the certificates of deposit which will be issued under said Plan and Agreement of Reorganisation, and if the coupons are ordered to be sold, to pay to them any cash received therefore.

In no event will any certificates be delivered by us, saving upon return to us of our own certificates of deposit.

Annexed hereto is a form of written assent to the proposed Plan and Agreement of Reorganisation.

It is our desire that all assenting bondholders will deliver at the earliest moment after the certificates have been received by us under the Plan and Agreement, their own certificates of deposit with us for exchange. We will be ready, after such exchange, to accept the certificates of deposit thus to you delivered, to be held, in case the Plan and Agreement shall be declared thereafter inoperative, upon the understanding that we will demand in lieu thereof your bonds deposited under said Plan and Agreement, and shall hold said bonds under the original Agreement of 1st October, 1897.

Yours faithfully,
BROWN, SHIPLEY & CO.

STERLING.

FORM OF ASSENT.

As the Owner of BROWN, SHIPLEY & COMPANY'S Certificate(s) of Deposit for 4½ per cent. First Mortgage Sterling Bonds of 1883 of the BALTIMORE AND OHIO RAILROAD COMPANY deposited under an Agreement endorsed thereon, No.(s) .....said Certificate being for £.....bond(s) assent is given to a deposit by BROWN, SHIPLEY & COMPANY, Committee of the said First Mortgage Sterling Bonds of 1883, covered by said Certificate, under a proposed Plan and Agreement for the Reorganisation of the BALTIMORE AND OHIO RAILROAD COMPANY, in accordance with the terms of said Plan and Agreement, of which a copy has been received (Signature).....

FOUNDERS COURT, E.C.,
LONDON, 22nd June, 1898.

To the Holders of our Certificates of Deposit for the

BALTIMORE AND OHIO RAILROAD COMPANY'S FIRST MORTGAGE FOUR AND A HALF PER CENT. GOLD TERMINAL BONDS OF 1894, Issued under Bondholders' Agreement, dated 30th September, 1897.

A proposed Plan and Agreement for the Reorganisation of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company, dated 22nd June, 1898, has been most carefully considered by us, under which, each of the above bonds will receive $1,000 in New First Mortgage four per cent. Gold Bonds of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company in exchange for each $1,000 four and a half per cent. Terminal Bonds. We recommend the same to you for your prompt acceptance.

Under your Bondholders' Agreement of September 30th, 1897, it is provided that if there shall be proposed to our satisfaction any Scheme of Reorganisation or Readjustment, we may, with the assent (to be manifested by express approval, or by a failure within two weeks to express dissent), of the holders of the certificates of deposit representing sixty per cent. in amount of the deposited bonds, come in under such reorganisation.

The Plan and Agreement is deemed satisfactory by us. We request therefore your assent thereto in writing.

Unless, within two weeks from the date of mailing this notice to you and of the first advertisement of this notice in two London newspapers, you notify us of your dissent, we will presume, conclusively, that you have assented to our deposit of your bonds under said Plan and Agreement of Reorganisation.

Your bonds will, accordingly, be so deposited by us, if 60 per cent. of the bonds with us deposited, shall assent in writing to the deposit under said Plan and Agreement.

If notified by any depositor within two weeks from the date hereof, in writing of his dissent, we will return him the bonds deposited with us, upon surrender of our Certificates of Deposit, thus ending all future obligation to such dissenting bondholder.

If we are not notified of your dissent within the time named, upon receipt by us in exchange for your bonds, of certificates of deposit issued under said Plan and Agreement of Reorganisation, we will deliver the same to you, without further charge, upon surrender to us of our own certificates.

We solicit most earnestly a very prompt expression, in writing, of your assent or dissent. Unless notified to the contrary by you, we will deposit all coupons of assenting bonds maturing prior to 1st July, 1898, upon depositing such bonds under the Plan.

Having thus obtained for depositing bondholders the opportunity to secure terms of settlement deemed satisfactory by us, we notify you that after the expiration of two weeks from the mailing of this notice and first advertisement thereof, our only duty under the Bondholders' Agreement of 30th September, 1897, will be either to return their bonds to depositing holders who have theretofore signified their desire to withdraw the same, or to surrender to such depositing bondholders as, within that period, shall have assented either expressly or by a failure to dissent, the certificates of deposit which will be issued under said Plan and Agreement of Reorganisation, and if the coupons are ordered to be sold, to pay to them any cash received therefor.

In no event will any certificates be delivered by us, saving upon return to us of our own certificates of deposit.

Annexed hereto is a form of written assent to the proposed Plan and Agreement of Reorganisation.

It is our desire that all assenting bondholders will deliver at the earliest moment after the certificates have been received by us under the Plan and Agreement, their own certificates of deposit with us for exchange. We will be ready, after such exchange, to accept the certificates of deposit thus to you delivered, to be held, in case the Plan and Agreement shall be declared thereafter inoperative, upon the understanding that we will demand in lieu thereof your bonds deposited under said Plan and Agreement, and shall hold said bonds under the original Agreement of 30th September, 1897.

Yours faithfully,
BROWN, SHIPLEY & CO.

TERMINAL.

FORM OF ASSENT.

As the Owner of BROWN, SHIPLEY & COMPANY'S Certificate(s) of Deposit for $.....4½ per cent. First Mortgage Terminal Gold Bonds of the BALTIMORE & OHIO RAILROAD COMPANY, deposited under an Agreement endorsed thereon. No.(s) .....
I/we assent to a deposit by BROWN, SHIPLEY & COMPANY, Committee, of the said First Mortgage Terminal Gold Bonds covered by said Certificate, under a proposed Plan and Agreement for the Reorganisation of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company, in accordance with the terms of said Plan and Agreement of which a copy has been received.

(Signature).....

BELT.

FOUNDERS COURT,
LONDON, E.C., 22nd June, 1898.

To the Holders of our Certificates of Deposit for the

FIRST MORTGAGE FIVE PER CENT. GOLD BONDS OF THE BALTIMORE BELT RAILROAD COMPANY,

Issued under our Bondholders' Agreement, dated 1st November, 1897.

The proposed Plan and Agreement for the Reorganisation of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company, dated 22nd June, 1898, has been most carefully considered by us. We recommend the same to you for your prompt acceptance.

Such Plan provides that the property of the Baltimore Belt Railroad Company is to be leased to the New Company to be formed at a rental sufficient to pay interest at the rate of Four per centum per annum upon the Baltimore Belt Line bonds. The arrangement is to date from July 1st, 1898, and the payment of interest at the rate of Four per centum after that date is to be in full of all interest due and payable upon such bonds thereafter. Interest at the rate of Five per centum per annum will be paid up to July 1st, 1898, with interest upon overdue coupons, upon the completion of the reorganisation.

The Plan further provides that in consideration of the agreement to pay such rental, the holders of said Baltimore Belt Line bonds shall agree that the new Company shall have the option for five years from July 1st, 1898, to purchase said Belt Line bonds at par and accrued interest, at any time upon sixty days' notice of their intention to do so, and that if this option be not exercised within the said period the new Company will assume the ultimate payment of the principal of said bonds when due. The form of the proposed lease and agreement with the new Company, covering the arrangement, will be subject to the approval of our Counsel. In order to make the arrangement effective, the holders of the Baltimore Belt Line bonds must present the same to be stamped, and the arrangement will not become operative until the holders of all such Baltimore Belt Line bonds outstanding, or such lessor amount as the Reorganisation Managers of the new Company shall approve, shall have consented thereto and presented their bonds or stamping accordingly.

Under your Bondholders' Agreement of November 1st, 1897, it is provided that if at any time there should arise an opportunity for arrangement or settlement considered favourable by us, we may, with the assent (to be manifested by express approval or by a failure within two weeks to express dissent) of the holders of our certificates of deposit representing sixty per cent. in amount of the deposited bonds, make such arrangement and settlement.

The Plan and Agreement present an opportunity for a settlement and arrangement of your claims which we deem favourable. We request, therefore, your assent thereto in writing. Unless within two weeks from the date of mailing this notice to you, and of the firs advertisement of this notice in two London newspapers, you notify us of your dissent, we shall persume conclusively that you have assented to the proposed arrangement and to the stamping of your bonds as assenting thereto, as provided by the proposed lease and agreement above mentioned.

Your bonds will accordingly be so presented by us for stamping if 60 per cent. of the bonds deposited with us shall assent in writing to the proposed arrangement, and the same shall become operative by the assent of the requisite amount of outstanding bonds as above stated

If notified by any depositor within two weeks from the date hereof in writing of his dissent, we shall return him the bond deposited with us upon surrender of our certificates of deposit, thus ending all future obligation to such dissenting bondholder.

We solicit most earnestly a very prompt expression of your assent or dissent.

Having thus obtained for depositing bondholders the opportunity to secure terms of settlement deemed satisfactory by us, we notify you that after the expiration of two weeks from the mailing of this notice and the first advertisement, our only duty under the Bondholders' Agreement of November 1st, 1897, will be either to return their bonds to depositing holders who have theretofore signified their desire to withdraw the same, or to surrender to such depositing bondholders as within that period shall have assented, either expressly or by failure to dissent, the deposited bonds duly stamped as assenting to the proposed arrangement. In no event will any securities be delivered by us save upon the return to us of our own certificates of depsit.

Annexed hereto is a form of written acceptance of the proposed arrangement.

In case the proposed lease and agreement should not become operative, the deposited bonds will not be stamped, and we shall hold the same under the original agreement of November 1st, 1897.

BROWN, SHIPLEY & CO.

BELT.

FORM OF ASSENT.

First Mortgage Five per cent. Gold Bonds of the Baltimore Belt Railroad Company, dated 16th September, 1890, Bondholders' Agreement, 1st November, 1897.

As the Owner(s) of Messrs. BROWN, SHIPLEY, & COMPANY'S Certificate(s) of Deposit for First Mortgage Five per cent. Gold Bonds of the BALTIMORE BELT RAILROAD COMPANY, deposited under an agreement endorsed thereon No.(s) ..... said Certificate(s) for $.....of bond, assent is given to the arrangement as communicated to me (or us) by Messrs. BROWN, SHIPLEY, & COMPANY proposed in regard to said bonds under the Plan and Agreement for the Reorganisation of the BALTIMORE AND OHIO RAILROAD; and Messrs. BROWN, SHIPLEY & COMPANY are authorised to present the First Mortgage Five per cent. Gold Bonds of the BALTIMORE BELT RAILROAD COMPANY covered by said Certificate(s) to be stamped in accordance therewith, and with said Plan and Agreement of Reorganisation, copy of which has been received.

(Signature).....

Date .....1898.

—to make delicious Custard with

BIRD'S CUSTARD POWDER

A DAILY LUXURY.

Numerous are the uses for BIRD'S Custard Powder :—Dainties in endless variety, the choicest Dishes, and the richest Custard.

NO EGGS! NO RISK! NO TROUBLE!

A MASTER KEY of this SIZE

Can be made to open any number of Locks. Many Ladies and Gentlemen have the whole of their locks so arranged that a MASTER KEY, so small as to be worn in a finger-ring or locket, will open every lock they possess—from their Dressing Bags, Trunks, Jewel Cases, Despatch Boxes, &c., to the Front Door, Wine Cellar, Park Gates, &c. Just think of the Convenience! The locks are made in suites, each suite with its own key, so that the ladies' maid or valet can open the luggage, the butler the wine cellar, and so on, but the suite keys are of no use for any but their own series.

BRAMAH JEWEL SAFES,

BURGLAR AND FIRE RESISTING, SPECIALLY ADAPTED FOR BED AND DRESSING ROOMS.

Specialities in fitted Suite Cases and Dressing Bags, Jewel Cases, Despatch and Deed Boxes, Bramah Street Door Latches, with small keys, Bramah Padlocks for Bicycles, with Leather-covered Chains, &c. &c.

New Illustrated Catalogues Post Free.

For Prices and Particulars apply to

NEEDS & CO. Late

Bramah & Co.

Sole Manufacturers of the real Bramah Locks.

100, NEW BOND STREET,
LONDON, W.

A Master Key
Signet Ring (Open).

A PUTTEE is a leg bandage, used instead of a gaiter or high boot. Puttees owe their origin to India, where they have been long used by the Natives and Europeans for Military and Sporting purposes; and Fox's Puttee has been adopted by the War Office and Colonial Authorities for the Infantry, Mounted Infantry, and Artillery.

MADE IN NAVY BLUE, KHAKEE, DARK BROWN, BLACK, AND MIXTURES.

FOX'S PATENT PUTTEE

PER 10/6 PAIR.

Sold by the Stores, Hosiers, and Outfitters. In case of difficulty apply to the Patentees and Manufacturers.

Fox's Patent Puttee is a Spat and Puttee combined, so that they form one continuous piece. This gives great superiority in finish and appearance over the plain Puttee, whilst for the first time it enables Puttees to be worn with shoes, a great boon to Cyclists. By an ingenious arrangement for fastening, the same pair of spats will fit Shoes or Shooting Boots.

SOME ADVANTAGES OF FOX'S PATENT PUTTEE.

1. Great support to the leg. 2. Cooler than leather or cloth. 3. Will fit any leg. 4. Are elastic, and consequently adapt themselves to the shape of the leg. 5. Are more easily dried or cleaned than any form of Gaiter. 6. Made of all Wool.

PATENTEES AND MANUFACTURERS:

FOX BROS. & CO., Ltd., Wellington, Somerset.

FORCING AHEAD!

Pattisons' WHISKY

SCOTLAND'S BEST. SOLD EVERYWHERE.

Sole Proprietors: PATTISONS LTD., Highland Distillers, Leith, Ballindalloch, London. Head Office—Constitution-street, Leith.

SINGER MODÈLE DE LUXE

(Registered Trade Mark)

SEND TO-DAY FOR SPECIAL CLEARANCE LISTS, FREE.

CYCLES

SINGER CYCLE CO. LTD. COVENTRY
LONDON: 17, HOLBORN VIADUCT.

OUR PUZZLES.

"TRUTH" PUZZLE No. 1,007.—ACROSTIC STANZAS ON LORD SALISBURY.

		£	s.	d.
KING HAL	(real name and address will be published in due course)	1	1	0
ORLANDO	(" " " " ")	1	1	0

CONDENSED RULES.

All answers to the current Puzzle must be sent in on or before the morning of the Monday week following the date of that Puzzle's publication, to the PUZZLE EDITOR, TRUTH Buildings, Carteret-street, Queen Anne's-gate, London, S.W. The answers must be signed by a nom de plume of not more than twelve letters, and must not be sent on post-cards, nor by telegraph, nor by hand; whilst in the case of new competitors the real name and address must be forwarded with the first reply sent.

"TRUTH" PUZZLE, No. 1,006.

As the competitors who tied for this prize are not unanimous in wishing to have a Special Competition, it has been decided to divide the available amount equally between them. I may add that all who share in this division are at once eligible to compete again for the TRUTH Puzzle Prizes.

"TRUTH" PUZZLE, No. 1,009.

The Prize in this competition has been awarded to CHESS VALE for the following "In Memoriam" Stanza on the late Mr. Gladstone:—

We mark the man who climbs Fame's envied hill,
And proudly stands upon its glorious height,
Admired by all beholding eyes until
Some other climber comes before our sight.
But he who climbs beyond the hill of fame
To that high mount, a nation's fervent love,
Shall never be forgotten, and his name
Shall be inscribed all other names above.

"TRUTH" PUZZLE, No. 1,010.

I will announce the result of this competition next week.

"TRUTH" PUZZLE, No. 1,014.

The usual Prize of Two Guineas is offered this week for

THE MOST HUMOROUS ESSAY, CONTAINING NOT MORE THAN A HUNDRED-AND-TWENTY WORDS, ON "THE DOMESTIC CAT."

All essays must reach me by the morning of Monday, July 11, at the latest.

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

 The real name, with the addres, of HARRIET MARCH, winner of a fifth part of Prize No. 1,008, is Mis. Creagh Coen, Hannington Rectory, Northampton.

 The real name, with the address of ERIN, winner of a fifth part of Prize No. 1,008 is Mrs. Mary Lees, Gahorn-gardens House, Roundhay-road, Leeds.

 The other names and addresses received will be published next week.

THE HEN.—The principal objection to your sentence is the use of the word "Xtian" for the letter X. You should remember, however, that the selected sentences include "Good and otherwise."

MALABY.—Thanks for your card.

J. CRABTREE.—I am much obliged to you for the Epitaph.

MONKEY BRAND.—The omission of your name was due to an oversight, which is regretted.

MEM SAHIB.—The necessary correction shall be made.

THE PUZZLE EDITOR.

"TRUTH" PUZZLE, No. 1,011.—ASSORTED SPECIMENS—GOOD AND OTHERWISE.

ORIGINAL ANECDOTES OF GOLF AND GOLFERS.

Playing to the second hole on the Worcestershire golf course, J. found his drive lying near the body of a sparrow, evidently some time defunct. Sequel in the club room. J. loquitur. Most extraordinary thing happened to me at the second to-day. I drove—pretty good ball—a bit high, perhaps. Suddenly it seemed to explode in the air! I said, "D'ye see that?" to my caddie. He said. "Hit a stone, I expect, sir." Fools these boys are. When we got up to it we found it lying close to a lark; must have hit it flying, both came down together. The lark was quite warm! Amid universal expressions of admiration this anecdote is solemnly entered in the record book.—Burgage.

Crawford is well known to most golfers. As a caddie and a sayer of smart things he is hard to beat. On one occasion he was controlling the crowd at an important professional match. Whenever one of the players was about to make a shot a very loud cough used to come from the assembly. Crawford stood this for some time, and human endurance lasting no longer, he turned round to the crowd and roared in withering tones: "There is a gentleman here who seems to have a very bad cough. Could any lady or gentleman oblige him with the loan of a jooJoob?"—Y. M. C. A.

A gentleman, whose temper was somewhat impulsive and ungovernable, returned one day from a round of golf having played unusually badly. Snatching from his caddie all the clubs which he had been using, he laid them on the ground crossways, one over the other. He then proceeded to stamp furiously upon them, until every shaft was broken in pieces. Then turning towards the astonished spectators and smiling blandly, he exclaimed, "Better to lose one's clubs than one's temper, isn't it?"—Nimrod.

The following incident is an illustration of good feeling not uncommon on the links. Smith, notorious for pulling and slicing, playing in a medal round at the Seashot Easter Meeting, with his drive off the tee for the fourth hole, sent a pulled ball with long carry towards the eleventh green, striking Jones on the cheek whilst he was in the act of negotiating a nine-inch put. The latter was startled, and sent his ball at least seven yards further off, taking three strokes to hole out. To Smith, who was extremely grieved, he said, "Never mind, old fellow; only next time let me have it on the other cheek." But for the loss of two strokes Jones would have been returned the winner.—Clinker.

A well-known player, coming to the short hole at Muirfield, remarked to his caddie, "Two should do for this hole, a drive and then the putter. Unfortunately he topped his drive, the ball rolling only a few yards from the tee. On coming up his caddie handed him the putter, remarking, "You've a deuce of a put for it, sir."—Gogar.

At the formal opening of Jedburgh golf course, a most remarkable incident occurred. It was opened by a landed proprietor in the district on a very wet day. Just as his lordship was about to drive off the ball, a lady, in her eagerness to see everything, stepped right in line with the tee; and the result was that the ball went clean through the umbrella she was holding up at the time. At sight of this an excited golfer cried out, much to the amusement of those around him: "Weel dune, sir, a grand stroke and holed in one."—Jedforest.

When golf made its appearance a few years ago in epidemic form, after smouldering endemically for centuries in the North of Scotland, the disease spread with frightful rapidity all over the world, one of the first countries which became infected—for all its magnificent quarantine defences—being Egypt. Before the President of the International Board at Alexandria could ring his bell, so to speak, links had been laid down (is that the right term?) at Ghezireh, and in the twinkling of a nibblick the British section of Cairene society fell a hopeless victim to the dire complaint. Even the most exalted personages took to putting and driving (or attempts thereat), and from morning to night nothing was to be heard among young and old, but especially old, save the mysterious lingo for which Saint Andy is mainly responsible. As everybody is aware, Ghizireh, besides being the general playground for Cairo, has also become the fashionable afternoon promenade à voiture vice Choubra capriciously abandoned. On a certain evening a Consul-General—one of the many—while enjoying his customary, and leisurely, ride beheld, to his extreme amazement, a fresh-complexioned gentleman dressed in a grey frock-coat, white hat, &c., who, devoid of all apparent reason, was frantically belabouring a clump of Halfa grass by the side of the road with a curiously-shaped stick. "Mais, Sair E——," exclaimed the magnifico, reining in his stud—"Qu'est-ce que c'est que vous faites la!" A simple enough question on paper, but in diplomacy tone is everything! "Non, non! mon cher," replied his Excellency, after a final, but, alas! fruitless attack on the pestilent little globe—"Je ne suis pas fou—j'apprends Le Golf."—Pyramid.

GOLF LINKS AT ETON.

Scene I.—Caddy to Gent: "O, sir, there's a party picnicking in that dell yonder, but you won't be driving so far as that." Gent drives hugely, and the ball goes smack into the dell. When gent and caddy arrive on the scene head of cockney picnic party fussily presents the ball: "That's it, sir; we thought as it was a butterfly a-coming over us." Scene II.—Picnic party are now far ahead. Says caddy: "You won't be driving into them now, sir." Gent again drives hugely; ball reaches party after first hop, and hits head of cockneys in calf of leg. When gent and caddy come up, head of cockney party again advances, seems proud at having been hit, and presents the ball as fussily as before. Thereafter says caddy to gent, "Law, sir, he wasn't a bit angry." Says gent to caddy: "I guess he just thought it was mother butterfly."—W. Nevermore.

Golfer, of medium age and skill, enters club-house, much excited: "Hurrah! At last I've done better than 100! Now I shall get a red coat!" Sympathetic friend: "Congratulate you. What was your score?" "Oh, I didn't keep it exactly: but it was about 99!"—Buzz.

N.B.—The above is a true story.

Scene. Yarmouth Golf Links: Having driven a ball some distance and not following its flight, a player turned to his caddie and asked where it had gone to. The caddie, evidently thinking of a "zereba" (where the penalty is loss of a stroke), quite innocently replied: "Well! sir, I reckon it's in the 'bereavement.'"—Dry Monopole.

A young lady, on her first introduction to the links, noticed the teeing ground, and on inquiry was informed, that it was the "first tee." She then pointed to the sand-boxes at the sides and said, "Then are those the tee-caddies?"—Spider.

A green man on a golf course on the South Coast was asked lately if he understood turf. "I should think I ought to, sir," was his reply, "seeing I was bred and born in it. His father had been a greenman.—Loddiswell.

I was once doing a round with two golfers, who were playing a match for a rather heavy stake. The links were anything but perfect, the ball occasionally finding its way into a partly refilled sand-pit, of which there were several. A Chinaman, apparently interested in the game, accompanied us, his comical expressions and attitudes proving very amusing to watch. Captain B——, one of the players, was preparing himself for a long drive, and John Chinaman went forward to watch the flight of the ball. Unfortunately for the Captain, the wind carried the ball into one of the sand-pits. Our Celestial friend, who saw the ball fall, suddenly rushed forward and, waving his arms wildly in the air, shouted, "Litee backee, litee backee." "Don't you," roared the Captain; "don't you touch it, you rope-scalped idiot." And it seemed for a moment that John was about to have a rough time of it. But the cause of his excitement was soon explained, for as we neared the pit we were treated to a most novel sight—that of seeing our rev. person attempting (as it appeared) to beat all records in gymnastics. He had evidently been very much "litee in backee," as John called it.—Done again.

Golfing lady without-golfing friend at Wisden's. Golfing lady: "Will you send me a dozen A1 golf balls?" "Yes, mum! Black ones?" Non-golfing lady: "Oh! no, no black ones. You will never be able to see them!"—Crosspatch.

Lady abroad to French caddie engaged by the week: "I am playing with that gentleman in a foursome this afternoon." "What, madame, the dam monsieur?" Lady: "The what monsieur?"

Caddie: "The dam monsieur. When he gets into a bunker he say one dam, two dam, tree dam."—Crosspatch.

A golfer once observed to me that golf was the one pastime to which the Religious Tract Society had never given any attention as they have to other sports. He said he could suggest a good name for a tract for distribution among golfers, "The Bottomless Bunker."—Foula.

Scene: A French watering-place on the Bay of Biscay. English golf enthusiast (who has a very slight knowledge of the French language): "Ameriez-vous, mademoiselle, jouer avec moi à golf?" French girl (who has never played golf): "A golfe, monsieur! Mon père ne me permet pas de baigner avec des hommes!" N.B.—French word Golfe = "gulf" or "bay."—Petruchio.

1. The following is a fact:—A friend and myself were disputing as to the accurate pronunciation of the word golf. He said it was pronounced as spelt; I maintained the word was goff. We decided to refer the question to a Scotch mutual friend who immediately on being asked the question replied "gowf."

2. It was noticed that a certain caddie always attached himself to a player who was notoriously the worst golfer on the links. On being asked for his reason, he replied: "Man! He's sic a beautifu' sweerer.—The Mac.

"Say, uncle," said my scapegrace nephew, down from the 'Varsity for the Easter vacation, "make a match? You and the parson, versus Dick and me. Dick was a stolid youth who had accompanied him, and professed not to know the business from the Bank holiday end of a golf club. "I'll put a fiver on, you know," he added, by way of an inducement, but where my profit came in I hardly saw, as he was certain to demand that sum, if not more before he returned to alma mater. Parson and I were old stagers, who rather fancied ourselves on the green, so the match was arranged, Parson insisting that we should have slight odds. Parson played steady, as usual, but I was off colour. I heard the rival caddie (an imported article) remark, "Silly old foozzler." This did not improve matters, but I mentally marked him. The stranger novice, when he got to work, proved himself a brilliant player. Then I knew my nephew had done me. The match went on evenly enough, however, to the 17th hole, when it stood 7 all and 1 to play. We had divided 3. "Any one's game," remarked the parson. "No it bean't," returned the foreign caddie. "We'll see," I said, severely. My nephew appeared anxious about his money, for his intention had been to beat us hollow. The last was a three-drive hole, and about half way was a nasty bunker, in the shape of an old rabbit warren. The parson had the honour and drove some ninety yards. Nephew followed suit. Then the novice played, landing the ball about fifty yards from the green. Now it was my turn, but I made a baff, and the ball dropped in the bunker. "We've got 'em," shouted the nephew. "Yah, I knowed it," said his caddie. But parson and I had a bit left yet. "Three, four, five," counted the rival caddie, as we made some ineffectual attempts to move the ball. "Give it up, uncle, it's no go; the match is ours," jeered my nephew. Parson still persisted, curiosity induced our opponents to come closer, and the rival caddie approached for a good look at the ball. "Twelve, thirteen," he counted. "They're only burying it," he said, turning toward our opponents. At that moment a deft shot by the parson caught him in the cushiony part of the back, and the ball dropped dead. "Ghorr!" he exclaimed. "Match," I replied, and striking one relighted my pipe. "Come, uncle, that's only a rub," said my nephew, but the parson and I were moving homewards. "Well, if ever I saw it played so low," said the novice. "Thought you knew nothing of golf," retorted the parson. My nephew has not paid up yet.—Scorpio.

Small boy, being catechised by the Free Kirk "mecnister" of the parish, "Are you aware of the nature of an oath, my boy?" "Faith, sir," replies the boy, "I hae na been yer caddie the last twa weeks for naethin'."—Esperance.

"TRUTH" PUZZLE, No. 1,009.—ASSORTED SPECIMENS—GOOD AND OTHERWISE.

"IN MEMORIAM" LINES ON THE LATE MR. GLADSTONE.

 As there is some available space, a further selection of the "In Memoriam" verses is published this week.—THE PUZZLE EDITOR.

Rest after strife, calm after cruel pain,
The happy warrior, in the Halls of Peace,
Smiles in the sunshine of the great release:
Vanquished and vanquisher—our loss his gain.

Mourned by a nation: great among her great;
Praised by the world with universal voice,
He passes to the kingdom of his choice—
Death but a friend who opens wide the gate.
Freak.

Dead he may be, if Justice dies
And Truth is but a transient quiver;
Death can but claim his mortal prize:
The soul of goodness lives for ever.

Let not Love in despair repine
While lingering by the sable portal;
The hand of Time ne'er carved a line
Of epitaph to an immortal.
Aidee.

We live to die, but he has died to live,
From Party passed and given to mankind;
Recall his gifts—of thought, of speech, of mind—
But not to these immortal homage give.

Acclaim the noble heart, the hands unstained,
The aim for truth behind the tongue and pen;
These are the glories that his life maintained,
This greatest of our modern Englishmen.
Ivanhoe.

Gladstone, like Aristides, giv'n in trust,
To teach that even Statesmen may be just;*
An orator like him of Attic fame—
Demosthenes, without his venal blame.†
In lit'rature unwearied in old age,
Who relaxation found in Homer's page;
His greatest honour through life's lengthen'd span;
No title ticketed "The Grand Old Man."‡
J. McGrigor Allan.

* "All ministers of kings and princes are, in my opinion, as great scoundrels as ever lived" (Lord Nelson "—Letters"). Yes; when the minister is the king's flunkey. No; when responsible to a free people. Gladstone was "The People's Will."

† After boasting that all Macedonia's gold could not tempt him, Demosthenes was bribed by a small gold cup from Harpalus.

‡ All independent minds must admire Gladstone's personal contempt for titles. Here he gave a practical lesson on the dignity of human nature. Most men long for conventional distinctions. Even authors, whom Johnson calls "the glory of a nation," do not rise above this vanity. And the clergy, who should teach humility by precept and example, not only cling to titles when inherited, but enjoy the monopoly of a supplementary list, invented solely to gratify their spiritual anti-Christian pride.

Toll! for our greatest statesman grave-ward wending,
'Neath the white pall—fit emblem of his life;
Who from first dawn to latest sunset's ending
In truth and purity waged noble strife.

Sleep sound, great heart, and then, refresh'd, awaking,
Hear from thy life-long Lord the words, "Well done!"
For thy good service tenfold* service taking:
Premier† in realms where sets nor moon nor sun.
William Jones.

* St. Luke xix., 17: "Well done, thou good servant, because thou hast been faithful in a very little, have thou authority over ten cities."

† Premier = Prime Minister = first servant.

The sun of Britain's splendour is now dim'd with thickening haze,
And proud Britannia mourns thee dead beneath her tearful gaze;
Her silent tears upon thy bier in burning torrents fall,
For ruthless death thy noble form hath clothed in sombre pall.

She seeks not to extol thy worth in monuments of art,
For well she knows thy name is written on thy Nation's heart.
She knows no tribute she can word would adequately tell
The virtues of thy blameless life lived humbly, nobly, well.
Pro Archia.

The Hero of Humanity is dead!
The voice is stilled that laid oppression low;
He blessed his country greatly, and her head
Is bowed in woe.

Not her's alone the loss: the whole world wept
Beside his bier on that Ascension Day.
Dead! But his life's work, and the Faith he kept,
Will live for aye.
Vox.

At length the organ's notes are mute,
The Choir's sweet voices die away;
Fame, with her solitary flute,
Steals out as fades the dying day.

Glad is she that her Statesman lies,
Amidst that silent starry band,
And brings to crown him from the skies
An Amaranth wreath within her hand.
Alastor.

Gladstone! A name most glorious bright,
Beacon from Britain's shore,
Shines from a reign of glorious might,
Never surpassed before,
To lift and guide the nation right,
Illumine lands afar,
With tender, never-dying light,
Gladstone, the Age's star.
Stella.

Great statesman rest! Thy life work nobly done,
With standard high, the nation's heart hast won,
And all deplore thy loss; e'en Princes weep.
Beside thy unwreathed bier, they vigils keep.
He is not dead, for on Ascension Day,
He rose to Heav'n, the spirit could not stay;
Exchanging earthly cross for Heaven's crown,
So may we follow precepts good laid down.
Effie.

Though Britain weeps, she holds the record sure,
The high ambition and untiring zeal,
The love of Sovereign and the common weal,
The magic influence, and the conduct pure.

The strifes of Party hush, all discords cease,
And high o'er Britain's widespread grief, above
Is heard the clarion note of heartfelt love.
For one who lived in honour and who sleeps in peace.
Dreyfoo.

E'en like the beauteous setting of the sun
His work is o'er—his noble task is done.
The great, grand soul has kissed the mortal clay,
His master calls—he hastens to obey.
Leaving his country all that earth can hold,
A holy pathway traced in steps of gold.
Deep in the annals of great England's fame,
In pride and reverence shall we write thy name.
Cuca.

Hushed is the strife that raged about thy name.
Here in the Hall, wherein thou liest in state,
Only one voice is heard breathing thy fame,
The voice of England, now left desolate,
Mourning her noblest son, whose powerful hand
Four times controlled the nation's course midst strife
Of politics. Thy name not writ in sand,
But blazoned in the book of everlasting life.
Zena.

A THIN PAPER EDITION OF
- TRUTH -
IS PUBLISHED WEEKLY,
AND CAN BE OBTAINED ON ORDER OF ALL NEWSAGENTS

FRANZ JOSEF
APERIENT WATER
Highly appreciated all over the World for Twenty Years past.
Is the Only Palatable Natural Aperient Water. SOLD EVERYWHERE. HEAD OFFICE: BUDAPEST.

Genuine Old Welch Dressers

(Inlaid and Carved Oak), from £6. 10s.

ILLUSTRATED PRICED CATALOGUES POST FREE.
ALL GOODS CARRIAGE PAID TO ANY STATION IN GREAT BRITAIN.

ESTATE DEPARTMENT.
Auctions and Private Sales, Valuations, Lettings, Surveys, Repairs, and Decorations.

HEWETSONS,
TOTTENHAM COURT ROAD, London, W.

ATKINSON'S EAU DE COLOGNE

Is absolutely the finest made.
More fragrant, more lasting, and very much more refreshing than all others.
USE ONLY ATKINSON'S:
ONCE USED, ALWAYS USED.
Single Bottle 2/3 post free,
Case of 1 Bottles 11s. Carriage Paid.
OF ALL DEALERS.
J. & E. ATKINSON, Limited, 24 Old Bond Street, London,
INVENTORS OF THE CELEBRATED
"WHITE ROSE" PERFUME.
"A Charming Scent."—H.RH. The Duchess of York.

Juno Road Racer, £11, 18/4 monthly; £12 12s., 21/- monthly.

JUNO CYCLES ARE THE VERY BEST
By JUNO Twelve Monthly Payments.
JUNO Lady's or Gent's Safety, £12 12s., 21/- monthly; £14 14s., 24/6 monthly. JUNOS from £10, 16/8 monthly. Write for New Season's List of JUNO Cycles & Accessories, sent pst free. Junos shipped to all parts of the world. Large discount.
METROPOLITAN MACHINISTS CO., LTD., 75, 7, Bishopsgate Without, E.C.; & at Piccadilly Circus, London, W.

£20 TOBACCONISTS COMMENCING. Illd. guide (259 pgs.), 3d., "How to open respectably 20 to £2,000." Tobacconists' Outfitting Co., Euston-rd., Ldn. Hirdressers fitted.—H. MYERS.

Enormous Demand.

There can be no surer sign of popularity than the enormous demand all over the country or

LIPTONS' DELICIOUS TEAS

They are appreciated everywhere for their delicate flavour and exquisite aroma, and undoubtedly have attained he pinnacle of fame.

LIPTONS' DELICIOUS TEAS. Millions drink then daily.

Millions of people are daily drinking and enjoying these delicious Teas, fresh from the sweet-scented island of Ceylon. Liptons own some of the most famous estates in Ceylon, which cover thousands of acres of the best tea-growing land, including such well-known gardens as Dambattenne, Laymastotte, Monerakande, Mahadambatenne, Mousakelle, Pooprassie, Hanagalla, Gigranella, Kaandagalla, Daminatenne, Oakfield, and Nahakettia, in connection with which several thousand natives are constantly employed.

LIPTONS CONTROL THE TEA MARKET.

LIPTONS' TEAS HAVE THE LARGEST SALE IN THE WORLD

ROYAL APPOINTMENT
LIPTON,
Tea Merchant by Special Appointment To Her Majesty The Queen.

BUY FROM THE GROWERS.
The Finest Tea the World can produce.
PER 1/7 LB.
NO HIGHER PRICE.
RICH, PURE, AND FRAGRANT.
PER 1/- AND 1/4 LB.

LIPTON LTD.,
TEA, COFFEE, AND COCOA PLANTERS, CEYLON, THE LARGEST TEA, COFFEE, AND PROVISION DEALERS IN THE WORLD.

Chief Offices: CITY ROAD, LONDON. Branches and Agencies throughout the World.
Ceylon Offices and Tea and Coffee Shipping Warehouses: PRINCE STREET, and MADDEMA MILLS, CINNAMON GARDENS, COLOMBO. Indian Offices and Shipping Warehouses: HARE STREET, CALCUTTA.

THE MUTUAL LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY OF NEW YORK.

RICHARD A. McCURDY, President.

Policy-holders in the "Mutual" enjoy the advantages of

SECURITY.—

Assets, 1897, exceed	£52,000,000
Surplus, 1897, exceeds	7,250,000

ADAPTABILITY.—

LIFE INSURANCE.
INVESTMENT.
INCOME.

PROMPTITUDE.—

Claims paid in London immediately on receipt of satisfactory proof.

LIBERALITY.—

Bonuses have, in many cases, trebled the original sum.
Surrender values of unique liberality paid.

Detailed information supplied on application.

Head Office for the United Kingdom:

17 & 18, CORNHILL, LONDON, E.C.

D. C. HALDEMAN, General Manager.

"WORTH A GUINEA A BOX."

BEECHAM'S PILLS.

FOR ALL

BILIOUS & NERVOUS DISORDERS,

SUCH AS

Sick Headache, Constipation, Weak Stomach, Impaired Digestion. Disordered Liver & Female Ailments.

SALE NOW OVER SIX MILLION BOXES YEARLY.

In boxes, 1/1½ and 2/9 each, with full directions.

Prepared only by the Proprietor.

THOMAS BEECHAM, St. Helens, Lancashire.

Sold by all Druggists and Patent Medicine Dealers everywhere.

FIRST SPECTACLES.—When these are required the advice of a very skilful optician should be taken, as, unless the spectacles used in the first instance are exactly suited to the eyes, mischief is soon done which cannot afterwards be remedied.

BROWNING'S SYSTEM OF SUITING THE SIGHT

IS ALWAYS SUCCESSFUL.

Mr. JOHN BROWNING, President of The British Optical Association, and Author of "Our Eyes," now in its 17th Edition, price 1s., 63, STRAND, LONDON, W.C. May be consulted personally free of charge.

THE MOST NUTRITIOUS COCOA.

EPPS'S

GRATEFUL—COMFORTING.

COCOA

FOR BREAKFAST AND SUPPER.

Elswick Cycles. Elswick Cycles.

Agents, THE STEREOSCOPIC Company, 106 & 108, REGENT-ST. W.

Agents, BENETFINK and Company, 17 & 108, CHEAPSIDE, E.C.

1898 ELSWICK.

Elswick Cycles. Elswick Cycles.

Agents, W. & F. THORN, 19, GT. PORTLAND-ST. W., and RANELAGH HOUSE, LOWER GROSVENOR PLACE, S.W.

FITTED WITH THE "PATTISSON" HYGIENIC SADDLE.

THE ELSWICK CYCLES COMPANY, Ltd., Newcastle-on-Tyne.

Export Agents, RALPH DOUSE & SONS, Billiter-buildings, Billiter-street, E.C.

Printed for the Proprietor by OVE & WYMAN, Limited, Great Queen-st. W.C. and published at 10, Bolt-ct. Fleet-st. E.C. in the Parish of St. Dunstan's-in-the-West, in the City of London. Cheques and Post Office Orders should be made payable to REGINALD E. BOOKER, "Truth" Buildings, Carteret-st. Queen Anne's-gate, S.W.

UNIVERSITY OF ILLINOIS-URBANA
3 0112 105518879